"To hold the ground for God, Christ, and the Church, through changes, adversities, opposing forces of the day, demands a strong, resolute, loyal soldier of our Lord. Such has your vicar been, devoted with his full strength to the work in this part of the parish; skillful to handle difficult questions, able to deal wisely with men and women often hard to keep in order; never unmindful of the higher interests of our great and complicated parochial system; and, I say it with a full heart and deliberately, never for an instant, so far as I have reason to know and believe, disloyal to me as his rector, the head of the parish, and his friend.

"Then, again, let this be said in his praise, that in every ministration, in the order of the services, in preaching, in instructing his charge, he has gone, simply and with absolute conscientiousness, on the line of the teaching of the Church and the catholic system of doctrine, discipline, and worship, of work and order, which holds us together still, as a Church, in the face of the restless modern spirit, and makes us what we are and what God grant we may continue to be: the exponent and defense of sound conservative principles in this much divided and distracted population, this American paradise of sects, heresies, and new religions.

"To all, let it be added that, by the junction of St. Luke's Church to Trinity Parish, and the taking it into the system of our down-town work, he has become, in fact, the vicar of two churches, with double responsibility, double care, and double need of prayer and the help and grace of God.

"My brother in Christ," continued Dr. Dix, turning to Mr. Brown, "you have, indeed, if I may quote the words of the Bishop of this diocese in his letter of congratulation to you, fulfilled a noble and useful ministry in St. John's Chapel. None knows this better than these people who surround you to-day in affectionate regard and veneration, and he, also, who now addresses you as representative of the congregation of the parish, and in his own regard as one who owes to you in many ways a great debt for help, strengthening brotherly consideration, and efficient aid in the execution of his own office among his brethren and in this place."

At the evening service the Rev. Mr. Brown delivered a sermon in which he reviewed his work during twenty-five years of the rector's charge.

THE REV. DR. PURVES ACCEPTS.

Will Become Pastor of the Fifth Avenue Presbyterian Church—Regret Expressed in Princeton.

The Rev. Dr. George T. Purves of Princeton has accepted the call to the pastorate of the Fifth Avenue Presbyterian Church. His letter of acceptance was read from the pulpit at the services yesterday morning. The Rev. Dr. John Dixon, Assistant Secretary of the Presbyterian Board of Home Missions, was the officiating clergyman.

After his sermon Dr. Dixon said: "I have an important communication to read, and I count myself most happy under the providence of God to be selected to do so." He then read the following:

"The majority of the Commissioners elected at the Congregational Meeting on Wednesday evening, Dec. 20, to prosecute the unanimous call to the pastorate of this church before the Rev. George T. Purves, D. D., LL. D., and also the Presbyteries, proceeded to Princeton on the afternoon of Dec. 28, and formally placed the call in his hands, expressing the hope that he would give it favorable consideration.

"They have received his formal reply, which reads as follows:

"'Princeton, N. J., Dec. 29, 1899.

"'To the Commissioners of the Fifth Avenue Presbyterian Church, New York:

"'Dear Brethren: This is to formally notify you that I accept the call of the Fifth Avenue Presbyterian Church, subject to the approval of my Presbytery. In taking this action I am trusting in God's guidance, and hope and believe that His blessing will be given, as the seal of His favor both to the Church and to its future pastor.

"'It is not easy to surrender the work in which for the past seven years I have been happily engaged, but I have been led to the conviction that it is God's will that I accept the pastorate to which your congregation has, with so much cordiality, invited me. I shall not be able, however, to begin preaching for you regularly until April, on account of my present engagements. Praying that grace, mercy, and peace may be upon us all, I am, sincerely yours,

"'GEORGE T. PURVES.'

"Dr. Purves has promised to occupy this pulpit on Jan. 14, and again in February."

PRINCETON, N. J., Dec. 31.—The Rev. Dr. George T. Purves preached this morning to a large congregation at the First Presbyterian Church. At the close of the services he told his people that he felt it to be his duty to accept the call which had been extended to him by the Fifth Avenue Church of New York. He expressed the sorrow which he felt at the thought of leaving the seminary and church here, but stated that it seemed to him that an opening for important work existed in New York which he felt it wrong not to enter.

Dr. William H. Green, President of the Theological Seminary, and Dr. James H. Wikoff, President of the Board of Trustees of the First Presbyterian Church, said that Dr. Purves's acceptance of the call would mean a serious loss to Princeton, especially to the seminary and church.

DR. HARSHA'S LETTER READ.

An unusually large congregation gathered in the Second Collegiate Reformed Church, One Hundred and Twenty-third Street and Lenox Avenue, yesterday morning to hear the reading of the farewell letter sent by the Rev. Justin Harsha, D. D., who recently resigned the pastorate, owing to illness caused by worry over debts incurred about eight years ago in the West, where Dr. Harsha was in business. Dr. Harsha's resignation was a great surprise to his congregation, and several rumors regarding him were circulated. All proved false, however.

The pulpit of the Second Collegiate Reformed Church was occupied yesterday morning by the Rev. J. Elmendorf, D. D., senior pastor of the church, who, after preaching his sermon, read the following letter.

Fort Sill, Oklahoma, Dec. 15, 1899.

To my beloved people of the Second Collegiate Reformed Church of Harlem, New York City:

Dear Friends and Brethren:

The necessity to leave home arose so suddenly and unexpectedly that I had no opportunity to bid many of you farewell. A month has passed and it has been made clear to me that for some months to come, if not for some years, I should remain in the West and Southwest. I have handed my resignation to the Consistory to take effect the 1st of January. And, much as I should like to see you all face to face once again, I shrink from the pain of a public parting. I therefore send you this letter of affectionate farewell.

During the seven and a half years of my pastorate my love for you has steadily grown in power and depth. You have sustained me by your prayers and sympathy. You have heard my expositions of God's Word with attention and appreciation. God has richly blessed us in manifestations of saving grace and the upbuilding ministries of His Holy Spirit. It has been a sacred and ever to be remembered privilege to be your pastor, your servant for Christ's sake. But I am persuaded that another can take up the work now and carry it on far better than I could. A new voice, new methods, fresh views of truth, a new personality, will, I trust, lead you to that commanding position of influence and spiritual power which God evidently desires the Church to occupy in the community and city. May God send you a pastor speedily! Give him the same loyal love and generous sympathy you have extended to me. Let no foolish remembrance of me detek you from your full duty of faithfulness to the church, the prayer meeting, and the Bible school. Thus you will best show that my preaching and teaching have not been in vain. And you may be sure that to my latest breath I shall not ceasc to make mention of you all in my prayers.

That it is best for me to surrender my pastoral charge over you is proved by the fact that God in His providence has set to my hands a task of great magnitude and promise among the churches of the great Southwest. My heart, as you have known all along, has been deeply concerned for the spiritual welfare of Christ's sheep, scattered abroad on the wide prairies of the great new West. In connection with our beloved Mr. Wright, God has now called me to gather and shepherd them. Doors are opened on every hand. Multitudes are crying out for the edifying truth of God's Word. We trust that we may reach thousands of the unsaved in the towns and cities of this marvelously growing region of our great country. For some months it will be my privilege and pleasure to assist Mr. Wright in this work. The pure air and abundant sunshine we enjoy here will, I am confident, contribute to my health and strength. And at the same time I shall have a part in the most important and pressing duty that can be presented to a minister of Jesus Christ.

And now I commend you to God and to the gospel of His grace. Your faces rise before me as I write, and my heart goes out to you in unutterable tenderness. May the Word I have spoken to you be blessed of God! May the sins I have committed be forgiven, the mistakes I made be overruled, the work I sincerely did be brought to fulfillment in Christ! On the day of the Lord may we all stand approved in His sight! Pray for me as I pray for you. And permit me once more to give you the Sabbath morning salutation:

"The Lord bless you and keep you,
The Lord make His face shine upon you and be gracious unto you,
The Lord lift up His countenance upon you and give you peace."

Your affectionate pastor,
WILLIAM JUSTIN HARSHA.

Dr. Harsha's resignation has been accepted by the official board of the church, and will be accepted by the Classis.

ST. STEPHEN'S GOLDEN JUBILEE

The golden jubilee of St. Stephen's Roman Catholic Church was celebrated yesterday at a pontifical mass, dignified by the attendance of Archbishop Martinelli, Apostolic Delegate; Archbishop Corrigan, Bishop Charles E. McDonnell of Brooklyn, Bishop Farley, and Mgr. Sbarretti, Bishop-elect of Havana, Cuba. The attendance of priests was so large that the altar would not hold all and rows of chairs were arranged in front of the altar rail for them.

The pontifical mass was chanted by Archbishop Martinelli. Promptly at 11 o'clock the pontifical procession came up the main aisle. Priests and acolytes led, and Archbishop Martinelli and Archbishop Corrigan, with their attendants, followed. On each side of the altar was a throne in white and gold for the Archbishops.

Archbishop Martinelli chanted the mass from the throne, except at the elevation and the Papal benediction, when he ascended the altar. The responses were sung by a choir of seventy-five voices. The Rev. Dr. Charles H. Colton, pastor of St. Stephen's, after requesting prayers for the deceased of the parish, briefly congratulated the congregation on its fiftieth anniversary and introduced Mgr. Mooney, Vicar General, as the preacher.

After the benediction the procession was re-formed and the clergy marched to St. Stephen's School, adjoining the church, where Father Colton entertained the distinguished guests at dinner.

In the golden jubilee souvenir which was distributed at the mass appeared a congratulatory letter from the Rev. Dr. Edward McGlynn, former rector of the church, who was unable to be present on account of illness.

The first church built to accommodate the parish of St. Stephen's was located on the block now occupied by Madison Square Garden. It was dedicated by Archbishop Hughes on Dec. 28, 1849. The Rev. Dr. J. W. Cummings, who organized the parish, was pastor until 1866, and was succeeded by Dr. McGlynn, who served for twenty years. Father Colton assumed charge of the parish in 1887.

DR. BURRELL'S RETROSPECT

Offers Hope for 1900 in Face of Discouraging Events.

The Rev. Dr. David James Burrell preached yesterday in the Marble Collegiate Church, at Fifth Avenue and Twenty-ninth Street, on the subject: "A Review of the Year," taking his text from several verses in Joel, ii., beginning with the words, "Fear not, O land; be glad and rejoice: for the Lord will do great things. And I will restore to you the years that the locust hath eaten, the cankerworm, and the caterpillar, and the palmerworm."

Dr. Burrell spoke freely of discouraging events that have occurred during the past year, at the same time pointing to the fact that God always brought order out of disorder and sent blessings to follow in the wake of disasters.

Restoration, Dr. Burrell said, was the law that governed all events. God was stronger than Satan and good was stronger than evil. There were three great factors, the speaker said, in human affairs. First came sin, which was ubiquitous, working upon man everywhere, in his thoughts and purposes, in the home, the market, politics, and trade. It was seen running all through the year. One of the daily journals, he said, offered a prize of $100 for a remedy to prevent vices. The only thing that would prevent vice was to get back to the commandments.

"The next factor is death," said the speaker. "It always follows sin. One event of this year was the great arbitration congress that was attended by the representatives of all the great powers. But while the dignitaries were in session, the powers which they represented were manufacturing guns, multiplying their armies, and building more men-of-war, and the council had hardly adjourned when war began."

Dr. Burrell made an attack upon the curse of drunkenness, which, he said, had destroyed ten times as many men as war had ever done.

"People will say that I am a fanatic," he continued, "but if you saw portrayed the ravages of strong drink you would be horrified, and would not charge prohibitionists with fanaticism. Undoubtedly the Church is in favor of arbitration for war, but how about the dramshops where reeling men are staggering down to the regions of eternal night? A thousand millions of dollars were spent for strong drink during the past year—spent to send the great procession staggering down to hell.

"Among those who died in the year there were conspicuous figures. Vice President Hobart, Vanderbilt, who demonstrated the millionaire and the Christian, and Col. Ingersoll. But many more are thinking of Moody. Though his mantle did not fall upon any living man, yet multitudes will be bettter because they came under its shadow.

"Sin and death are potent figures, but the Restorer is here also. In political life we see readjustment of power. For two centuries Great Britain has held the preeminence. France and Germany have been great powers; but there has been a universal feeling that the combination is to be broken. Japan must be reckoned with. The Russian bear has strong teeth. America is the centre of universal observation. The shipyards of Germany are preparing navies and Russia is making her way to seaports. All nations are on the qui vive. All are under arms.

"There is no use trying to solve the question by partitioning Africa and China, for you cannot restore the balance of power by seizing Naboth's vineyard. All powers may topple, but God's throne stands; the eternal power of Christ's kingdom will stand forever.

"In the industrial world labor and capital came to a closer grapple than ever during the past year, and the great question is, What will become of the combinations of capital? The great Restorer, Christ, will solve it.

Referring at the close of his sermon to the discovery and utilization of wireless telegraphy, Dr. Burrell said that in that invention there was a lesson for the Church. The world had hung wires for years; they were no longer needed; it had been found that another agency had intervened. The same spirit of progress should inspire the Church. It should have less faith, should place less dependence on the machinery of religion, and should lean upon and trust the divine power.

During the New Year's eve service last night in the Church of St. Paul the Apostle, Sixtieth Street and Columbus Avenue, Mrs. John Kane of 884 Tenth Avenue, was stricken with heart disease while sitting in her pew, and died before an ambulance from Roosevelt Hospital reached the church.

The body of the woman was taken to her late home.

NO BOOKS TO RECORD DEEDS.

County Clerk Sutphin Has Received No Supplies for a Long Time.

County Clerk Sutphin of Queens County has not officially recorded a deed since Nov. 22, and no mortgages have been recorded in three months. This is not because none has been filed, but for the reason that there are no books in which to record them.

Mr. Sutphin sent in an order to the city authorities for the books a long time before they were needed, but has not received any supplies. There is a big bundle of deeds ready to be copied as well as a large number of mortgages.

Incendiaries at Flemington, N. J.

FLEMINGTON, N. J., Dec. 31.—Incendiaries are believed to be working here now. Two buildings have been burned this week and it is believed the same gang which operated at Three Bridges a month ago set fire to them. The pottery plant was destroyed on Wednesday night, and last night the large barn belonging to Assessor Charles Alpaugh was burned with most of its contents, including a lot of poultry

The Financial Situation.

Extraordinary in every way is the financial record of 1899. Favorable prospects ruling at its start, grew more and more encouraging with rapidity, and in the passing of but a few months there was development of Wall Street activity unprecedented, of Wall Street buoyancy never before approached. New good times were in evidence unmistakably and on every hand—not one business interest nor any part of the country missing revolutionary improvement. What was promise at New Year's was realization by Easter. Hundreds of millions of dollars had been added to market values on the New York Stock Exchange alone—and never before was record like it.

As the year advanced good times proofs became more and more tangible. Yet Wall Street was only keeping pace with business expansion. Capital everywhere was busy and profiting, labor beyond all past years was finding satisfactory employment, few newspaper items being more frequent than those announcing increases in wages. The staple products of the country were in larger demand than supply, and producers found price lists raised, not by themselves, but by customers, and raised tremendously. Iron led the way—and Wall Street was forthwith enthusiastic over that axiom of Jay Gould, which, years ago, in the famous times of 1879, had illustration: "As iron goes, so must securities go." Pig iron within a few months rose to a price higher than finished steel rails had commanded in the year preceding. Iron's gains were not isolated. Practically every staple of the country—excepting agricultural commodities alone—rose largely and rose rapidly. And close accompanying such good times tests there developed—and not in Wall Street merely—a public sentiment effectively enthusiastic.

In this very enthusiasm was the germ of danger. Money was easy, profit-making easier, speculative disposition developing with rushes; and the industrial fever was high. Promoters crowded into Wall Street and madly rolled out gigantic capitalizations. The "era of consolidation" was on all sides proclaimed as present and full of blessings. Within a single week announcements were made of the projection of new trusts capitalized with a thousand millions of dollars of "securities." Some of the new combinations obtained listing on the New York Stock Exchange, others helped by pools and manipulation. Barney Barnato times at London were in live revival here. Wall Street veterans looked on askance; conservative observers not only wondered but worried. A financial debauch—so some characterized what was under way.

Much was heard of earnings vastly increased through the new combinations, of expenses reduced, of net income mounting to unprecedented percentages. And as almost uniformly the output of the new trusts was commanding steadily increasing market value, there seemed—to the average active Wall Street trader—slight reason for immediate disturbance. And till far into the Summer activity and buoyance continued for practically every Stock Exchange security.

When finally halting disposition showed it was on account of suggestions in banking circles that easy money market conditions were unlikely to continue—so extraordinary had been drains upon financial resources for the financing of these new industrials.

In the programme of promoters millions of capital were as nothing, and tens of millions only commonplace entries. That Wall Street did not earlier grasp what this must lead to may be accounted strange, but ample realization was withheld until finally facts came to be revealed like that which came out in testimony at Washington that one promoter in a single group of stocks had levied a fee of $10,000,000 of securities.

Some set-backs there had been, but none grave enough to check the trust capitalization craze. One especially sad shock Wall Street suffered in the sudden death of ex-Gov. Flower. He had been the good times leader, stalwart beyond others, with a following larger than most others combined; and not in the Stock Exchange district alone, nor in New York merely, but throughout the whole land investments had been made in volume by believers in the judgment and sterling character of this one plain-spoken man. Investors were confident because they had his leadership, and he was sure of better market values, "because," as he sententiously put it, "because I believe in our country." Thus to an extent never before known in Wall Street the market's quality had close association (was dominated) with the personality of this one leader; and when abrupt notice came of his taking off almost a panic was the quick effect.

Men of financial consequence hurried to the market's relief and recovery was brought about, but the old vigor had departed with the leadership that was over, and though experienced and skillful managers made much effort to reinvest the market with its old spirit success was scant. Quotations did not fall materially, but the exhibit was that they ceased to go up, though all the while public sentiment over expanding business activity and business profits grew continually more and more enthusiastic—and reasonably so. Prosperity seemed betokened in practically every business development; equal good times before never were—such was agreement found in every commercial and industrial quarter.

An influence that the security market was feeling—as can be best judged from later disclosures—was that certain alert financial interests came of a sudden to the conclusion that in Wall Street it is wise to let well enough alone, wise to have somebody else try to get final profits, try to make the last dollar; and such interests began to be quiet, continuous heavy sellers of almost the entire stock list. One exceptionally strong group of capitalists apparently engaged in this unannounced liquidation on a vast scale, while Wall Street relatives hitherto recognized as their oracles were loud in proclamations of the certainty of profits in further purchases. Such manoeuvring is not, however, so new to the Stock Exchange that great surprise can be involved in its discovery; it may even, indeed, be that suspicions now popular are unjust.

But certain it is that not all the rich men of Wall Street were willing to quit the buying side last midsummer. Some of those strong and prominent for years were indisputably still adding to their holdings. What they saw and what they confidently counted upon was precisely what the general public could see, and what the general public was counting upon—proofs absolute that not only were good times here, but that good times were growing better day by day, week by week—growing vastly better. And when money market stringency was forecast, even when bankers of reputation prophesied it in the early Autumn, there was slight disposition shown anywhere to give credence to admonitions. Money had been sent West and South in volume, and even in the banking world there was confident expectation that the return flow of funds so advanced would reach New York in time to head off hurtful stringency. Such calculations gave less than proper consideration to the fact that money sent West in the Spring and Summer, and which in ordinary times must have come back in the Fall, was in this extraordinary season still required in the West [illegible] prosperity upon which Wall Street's enthusiasm was so confidently based.

Thus effect was involved when tight money actually came—the loan rate reached 50 per cent. in September—when bank surpluses decreased and loans had to be called, and when, coincident with this stringency at home, the Bank of England lifted its rate suddenly from 3 1-2 to 5 per cent., when gold exports became common prophecy, and falling reserves were notable throughout the country. Treasury relief through anticipation of Government bond interest was ineffective. Under controlling conditions stock market reaction could hardly be regarded as strange or insignificant. Then broke out the Transvaal war, with London hurrying into liquidation.

Home dividends increased, as earnings amply warranted, in conspicuous corporate quarters; disclosure was made of extraordinary progress toward the unification of the most important railway interests of the country; and other good times developments were in sight.

But the market staggered under continuing tight money, under continuance of falling reserves, legal requirement limits being broken for the first time since 1893 under a scare disposition developed in every professional speculative quarter, not checked by the Treasury's unpredicted offer for $25,000,000 Government bonds. The last month of the year opened with the Bank of England discount rate at 6 per cent.—where since it has remained—higher than ever hitherto was recorded, except in times of actual panic. Multiplying adverse elements seemed suddenly to creep into the situation. The United States Supreme Court handed down a decision touching phases of industrial combinations, with findings which Wall Street in hasty judgment insisted upon regarding as a menace to all trust incorporations; and on top of this was President McKinley's curious allocutions on trust wickedness and trust dangers and the need for Congressional regulation or suppression thereof. Then, almost every other day, came cable dispatches announcing British war reverses, Boer victories, tendency toward panic at London, the throwing overboard by English investors of American securities, the start of gold exports hence, failures of banks at Boston and a trust company here, various centres financially demoralized—a single group of copper stocks at Boston showing a market shrinkage approximating $260,000,000. And money rose to 186 per cent., while Clearing House authorities showed perturbation in affording extraordinary relief, the United States Treasury being so impressed with the gravity of the situation that yet further measures of assistance were devised, revenue receipts being turned over to New York banks. Wall Street was in sore travail, indeed; it was hard to find in any quarter cheerfulness—or aught other than pronounced despondency. Losses were terrific, quotations fell far down; many market values had broken half in two. Wall Street, jammed with ugly innuendoes, an epidemic of sensational rumormongering broke out. The names of important financial institutions were freely quoted in scandalous ways, and few individuals of prominence had records clean enough or prestige enough to escape crowding suggestions that bankruptcy was impending. Imbecile calumny ran riot.

And Wall Street, not unnaturally, fell into panic. Some recovery there has been. Quotations have advanced and advanced substantially, but they who have been hurt are myriad. Not the little fellow merely suffers. The rich man has been the chief sacrifice.

And of the early future, what?

All depends upon what may immediately sway sentiment. Facts are secondary, conditions seem for Wall Street only something to be academically considered—so altogether superficial are influences at present influential.

But the business situation is quite all that it should be. In it is ample certification of that fact, which must finally dominate—the fact of good times. Prosperity is no fiction, and Prosperity should be no peril. Men of money find ample reward in every industrial and commercial quarter for their investments. Labor commands returns that have not hitherto been vailable. Vast international trade balances go to our country's credit; and as foreign war may continue so American profits must extend; for, though Wall Street works itself into hysteria over the ups and downs of conflict in the Transvaal, the one element there directly touching us is that the longer the war the greater must be foreign patronage of our markets. Meantime, we may be drawn upon for gold, (and we have millions of surplus to spare,) we may have to witness further liquidation of English investment holdings; there may be crazy manipulation in international financial relationships—but all trade tendencies point this way profitably.

In so far as the United States is concerned, the sole question is become whether Prosperity shall be choked by panic or panic be cast out by Prosperity. Not one thing artificial is in the new good times that have co[illegible]

Conditions of Trade Throughout the Land Better Than Ever Enjoyed by Any People in Any Age.

Written for The New York Times

By JAS. T. WOODWARD,

President New York Clearing House Association.

THE year 1899 will stand marked in our National history as a period of unprecedented commercial and financial prosperity. It opened auspiciously upon a nation bounding with life and industrial activity, with fresh confidence in the successful operation of all the established departments of trade, and with many new and promising enterprises springing into existence. Traffic on the railroads was increasing and showing greatly improved earnings, and our export trade, with its corresponding enormous balance in our favor, was the largest ever known. But great as was the country's prosperity at the beginning of the year, it was indeed small compared to the enormous expansion in all lines of business which has since taken place, and which has gone on uninterruptedly from month to month with gigantic strides, far exceeding the expectations of even the most sanguine and more than justifying the confidence in our country's future with which the year began. All trade reports show that our factories are taxed to their utmost capacity in filling their orders; the railroads are unable to cope with the traffic that is offered, not having sufficient equipment to haul the raw materials to the factories and mills or to carry the finished product to the wholesaler and jobber, and on every hand we hear of a record-breaking business, and at constantly increasing prices, while the wages of employes are also being increased, in many cases as much as 10 and 15 per cent., all adding to the general prosperity and contentment of the people. The year just closed has been remarkable for its freedom from business failures; in fact, considering the enormous volume of business transacted, the losses sustained this year from bad debts have been insignificant. The new bankruptcy law no doubt has had something to do with this, having restrained the more unprincipled of the small dealers from making questionable assignments. The clean credits, therefore, placed to account of profit and loss have been of a most satisfactory nature. Throughout the land we find a condition of trade better than ever enjoyed by any people in any age, causing the United States to be the envy of the world.

As an illustration of the great volume of business done during the year it will be sufficient to state that the total clearings from the Clearing Houses of the United States in 1899 amounted to $83,400,000,000, against $68,960,000,000 in 1898.

IRON AND STEEL TRADE.

In the iron and steel trade, which is always a fair gauge of the country's industrial prosperity, prices have increased over 100 per cent. since the first of the year, and the various plants will be busy for many months to come in filling orders already booked for home consumption, as well as keeping up with the ever increasing demands from abroad. It is a fact worthy of note that the exports of iron and steel have increased in ten years 400 per cent., while the imports of the same materials have fallen off almost 75 per cent., and this does not refer to quantities which would show a much larger percentage in one case and smaller in the other, as the prices for manufactured iron and steel were much higher in previous years than they are now. Our bridge and structural iron is more and more in demand abroad, while American-built locomotives are in constantly increasing use in England, on the European Continent, and in Russia, the recent extraordinary output of 104 locomotives in 26 working days by one of the large locomotive works attesting to the great demand for and our ability to produce the best railroad engines in the world.

REMARKABLE GROWTH OF TEXTILE MANUFACTURES.

The enormous growth of our textile manufactures is almost as remarkable as that in the iron and steel production, the greatest increase being shown in cotton goods. In addition to the increased demand for cottons for domestic use, our mills are taxed to supply the markets of China, Africa, the islands of the Pacific, and the South American countries. In South Carolina alone during the present year 26 cotton mills were chartered and commissioned, with a capital stock of $5,600,000, while the capital stock of 16 mills already in operation has been further increased by $9,079,000, and it is estimated that 5,000,000 spindles, representing an investment of $125,000,000, will be at work in the South in 1900, 1,000,000 spindles being added mostly for the increased trade with the East. The upper part of the State of South Carolina particularly is possessed of many superior natural advantages for the successful and economical operation of the cotton factory, such as mild climate, good soil, fine water power, a cheap and convenient coal supply, and a short haul of the raw material from the field to the mill.

Our miscellaneous manufactures, comprising manufactured goods of all descriptions, are finding markets in almost every civilized country, foreign buyers preferring the products of the United States, and when these are properly introduced they find a permanent foothold, so that with wise action on the part of our Government in securing an improvement in the Consular Service, our foreign trade is capable of practically unlimited development.

AGRICULTURE SHARES IN THE GENERAL PROSPERITY.

In all departments of agriculture a similar condition of prosperity prevails; the farmer, the miller, the stockman, and all classes engaged in like industries are reaping the benefits that flow from bounteous harvests and good prices. Mortgages are being rapidly cleared off, savings bank deposits are increasing, new and improved buildings and implements are being added, while comforts and even luxuries hitherto unknown are being enjoyed. The cotton planter also has had a liberal share of the "good times," the price of raw cotton having risen within the year 30 per cent., while the price of wool has almost doubled in the same period. And so we might go on, the same conditions meeting us on every hand, and all going to make up the grand total of National prosperity.

The enormous volume of our exports, greater even than in 1898, has reached, for the first time in our history, the two-billion-dollar mark, the falling off in the export of agricultural products, caused by the more plentiful harvests abroad, being more than offset by the great quantity of manufactured goods exported, no insignificant portion of which has gone to our newly acquired possessions. The present Anglo-Transvaal war will no doubt call for a large amount of our breadstuffs and other food products, which will further increase the total of our export trade.

The receipts from customs also are greater than in 1899, the highest point that had previously been reached in Government revenues. A large part of the increased imports was of raw materials for the manufacturer, and in foodstuffs and luxuries of the table which cannot be produced at home.

EXTRAORDINARY CONDITIONS IN THE SOUTH.

In no section of the country is the extraordinary expansion of business more marked than in the South, and no section has contributed more to the general prosperity of the Nation in proportion to its yet limited facilities. After a long period of depression, undeveloped resources and primitive conditions existing in many parts of the South, it has suddenly sprung into new life and activity. Already $1,000,000,000 is invested in manufacturing, giving an annual output of $1,500,000,000, giving employment to a vast army of operatives and distributing many millions of dollars in wages. In the production of iron and steel the South bids fair, at no far distant day, to rival the great iron and steel producing centres of Pennsylvania, being surrounded by unusually favorable conditions for profitable competition with the world. In the output of coal the South is also fast taking a place in the front rank, and with the prospect of greatly improved facilities for placing its product at the seaboard, in the way of the proposed water communication with the Gulf, it is not unreasonable to expect that it will ere long monopolize the trade in these commodities of Mexico and the South American countries, as well as our new Caribbean possessions. In lumber, grain, (not, of course, to speak of cotton,) and many other industries, the South is fast becoming a prominent factor in the commerce of the Nation. Every year sees the condition of the people improved, and with the adoption by the planter of better and more modern methods, together with a judicious change of crops, the South will soon rival many parts of the country in commercial prosperity.

HEALTHY CONDITION OF NATIONAL FINANCES.

It is pleasing to note that, while we are enjoying a period of the greatest mercantile prosperity in our history, our National finances are also in an extremely healthy condition. Instead of the deficit in the Government revenues that was anticipated earlier in the year, the last report of the Secretary of the Treasury indicates that a surplus of at least $40,000,000 will be shown, with a supply of gold in the Treasury exceeded only by the Imperial Bank of Russia and the Bank of France. From this great plethora of gold we can, without danger, meet any drafts that are likely to be made on us by reason of the present unsettled monetary conditions abroad, which have been brought about largely by the war in South Africa. The world's product of gold has increased about $50,000,000 within the year, of which the United States have received no inconsiderable part, so that no apprehension may be felt for a dearth of the precious metal even should the monthly output from the Transvaal be curtailed for a time. With the passage of the Currency bill, "defining and fixing the standard of value," as stated in Section 1 of the bill, all doubts as to the country being on an absolute gold basis will have been removed, and with the other imperfect features of the bill amended, the promise of President McKinley, made in December, 1898, that "our financial and revenue policies cannot be changed for at least [illegible] the [illegible] of our Government in securing [illegible] for [illegible] and [illegible] and [illegible] and

WHAT THE PAST YEAR HAS EVOLVED AND THE PROSPECTS FOR 1900 AS LONDON SEES THEM.

By A. J. WILSON.

Our London Financial Correspondent.

LONDON, Dec. 31.—The year 1899 has been one of industrial progress and development in all parts of the world. Every European nation of any importance has taken a step forward, and the increased competition between them has only served to develop their business. Germany continues to make strenuous efforts to conquer English markets in foreign countries, and is especially seeking to compete with her for a more important share in the carrying trade of the world. France likewise, although more feebly, struggles with determination at least to retain her old markets, and has this year made some small progress in enlarging her foreign trade. Her mercantile marine, however, stagnates, and, in spite of £400,000 per annum in subsidies from the State, can barely hold its own against the non-subsidized Nord Deutsche Lloyd, now the largest commercial shipping company in the world, let alone against England. Even Spain is waking up a little, and finds herself richer in the means for internal development now that the resources and workers are no longer drained away by her colonies. Italy, too, moves, and Russia, but Austria-Hungary and the principalities of the lower Danube have had the promising outlook of the earlier part of the year almost destroyed by the partial, in Roumania almost complete, failure of the harvest. Southern Russia is affected by the same scourge, which seems indeed to have injured mankind almost from Rangoon westward to Budapest, if not to Land's End. Our own trade has been increasingly expansive since the Spring, less so in bulk than in prices, but still expansive, in spite of famines, wars, and the set-back caused by successive years of drought in Australia as well as by the increase in local and United States competition in the Far East. Out of the Australian and other droughts, indeed, a certain compensation has arisen for us in the higher prices of wool and the increased business done by Argentine, so that the buying power of these countries has not been diminished.

GENESIS OF EXPANSION PERIODS.

Misfortunes often commence periods of expansion provided the losses are only partial. The poor crops of western Europe in 1897 started the present business revival in the United States, and from there it spread to Europe until it now combines every country influenced by and emulous of Teutonic and Anglo-Saxon industrial development. No better measure of the motives governing nations hitherto laggard can be had than that afforded by the remarkable prosperity of our textile machinery manufacturers. Japan appears at the present to have nearly completed her orders for such, but Russia, China, India, Turkey, Italy, and in a small way, Spain, are all active buyers. Even the United States is coming for some of the tools with which to furnish the new cotton mills of the South, and the fact is ominous of strenuous competition to come. In other machinery our trade is also good, and it may be noted as a fact interesting to you that our export sales of British-made sewing machines alone will this year exceed £1,250,000.

But in one important field the United States and the Continent are altogether beating England. She was the pioneer of railways worked by steam, she is last—and a long way last—in the adaptation of electricity as a motive power for any purpose. Electric lighting has come into use here slowly, but is as yet by no means well developed in many parts of the country, and the best of the machinery by means of which light is generated comes from the United States. It is the same with electric railway plant and appliances, and the use of these with us is yet in its infancy. On the Continent it is altogether different, and one chief cause of the financial tight place most European money markets find themselves in lies in the speed with which they have locked capital up in enterprises of every description designed to utilize electricity as a motive and light giving force.

Mention of money brings us to the darker side of the picture, but that will be best dealt with in an estimate of prospects for the coming year.

THE OUTLOOK FOR 1900 — IN MONEY.

All through the latter half of 1899 rates of interest have been mounting or stationary at an oppressively high level on European money markets, until the position of some of them has become dangerous. It is not that any one market appears poorer on the surface. They are in appearance all either stronger or very little weaker than they were a year ago. In the matter of gold the Bank of England is as well supplied now as at the end of 1898, and the Bank of France is nearly £3,000,000 richer. The banks of Austro-Hungary and Spain have also increased their stocks of this metal, and the Imperial Bank of Russia alone shows an important loss, officially accounted for by the larger quantity of coins in circulation [illegible] shown by the banks of Austria, France, and Spain, it may be approximately stated that the world's money market as a whole is poorer in gold by about £15,000,000 than it was a year ago. It is this in spite of the fact that new supplies considerably exceeding £50,000,000 have been furnished to it by the mines in the past twelve months, but this is merely the uhual consequence of enlarged commercial and industrial activity. Raw materials rise in price and in many places food and clothing, wages advance, and larger numbers earn them. Coin or its substitute, notes, therefore, pass more extensively into circulation, and the poverty of the money market becomes the riches of the industrial classes.

THE GOLD MOVEMENT IN INDIA.

There is consequently nothing to be alarmed about in this aspect of the money markets, taken by itself. Nor is the added fact that India is endeavoring to establish a State note circulation on a gold basis of much importance. Its Government can only go a little way in that business, because pulled up by two difficulties, the difficulty of borrowing and the impossibility of getting more than a certain amount of paper money into circulation. It has forced out 265,000,000 rupees now and holds 57,000,000 rupees in gold, 30,000,000 of it in London. Its disturbing power is, therefore, nearly over.

WHERE HAS THE GOLD GONE?

Yet all the world wants more gold by reason of excessive capital commitments in every market. These commitments strain credit, and should they also induce a breakdown at any point the demand for gold to fill the gap may be so intensified as to cause a check and prostration, perhaps, at many points. Nowadays, thanks to electricity, one market can come to another's assistance with a promptitude that has prevented dangerous panics on several occasions; but if all markets are nearly alike strained rapidity of intercommunication might aggravate instead of lessen the pressure upon all. The puzzle is, where has all the gold gone? In the five years ended with 1899 the world has received at least £275,000,000 of new gold, and of that less than £50,000,000 has been added to the visible stock upon which the world's credit operations rest. The Bank of England is nearly £20,000,000 poorer than in June, 1897. All the balance cannot have disappeared in the arts, nor half of it. Where, then, has it gone? Into circulation and into private hoards, whence no power known to man can draw it out again. Hence, the vital importance of the Transvaal supply, which had risen at the time the mines were stopped to fully one-fourth of the world's output. In a little time the value of this African gold would have been £2,000,000 a month had peace been maintained, for it latterly exceeded £1,000,000 per month, and all this has been temporarily lost. Increased output elsewhere is too slow to make good the deficiency thus caused, and therefore I look for distressed money markets and possibly collapse in places in the near future. Your market bears daily witness to the unpleasant effects of excessive capitalization, and ours is not a whit behind. We have launched out recklessly in all directions and speculated to excess so that our position is now most dangerous. Beyond question 1900 is going to be a year of financial stress and trouble on more than one great centre of banking credit.

Your excess of energy in new company production, in industrial expansion of all kinds, generally too liberally capitalized, was started by the splendid opportunity your abundant crops and Europe's scarcity gave you in 1897, ours by the money released through our sales to you of your securities heretofore held here, and by the progressive increase in our South African and Australian gold supplies. The harvest of excess in both countries may have to be reaped in 1900. But so much turns upon the course of the South African war that confident prediction is unusually difficult, and I rather fear serious trouble.

THE YEAR IN CEREALS.

The vanishing year can hardly be said to have been a bright one for the wheat trade, yet there have been worse years. Prices have never fallen to an exceptionally low point nor have they risen abnormally high. Lowness of foreign stocks at British ports at the close of 1898—about 3,700,000 bushels of 60 pounds, little over half the total of 1897 and hardly a third of that of 1896—raised hopes of a comfortable rise in prices. They did advance for a time, but foreign shipments continuing abundant the improvement was soon lost and there was little change until the outbreak of the South African war put it into the heads of British farmers that a period of high prices had certainly arrived. So they hoarded wheat, and for a short time there was a languid upward movement in markets. But this was soon lost and dullness with lower prices has characterised business ever since, though a slight touch of firmness has been [illegible] in British ports and with little hope of a great advance in quotations.

THE ADVENT OF ARGENTINA.

Perhaps the most remarkable fact of this wheat year is the influential position gained by Argentina in Europe for its production. Its last year's crop amounted to 96,000,000 bushels, out of which about 60,000,000 bushels have been delivered here and on the Continent, and the new crop now being harvested is estimated at 80,000,000 bushels, though this figure cannot be altogether depended upon. If, however, we may judge by the liberal offers already made of new crop wheats from Argentina the estimate given may prove not to be far out. In that case, and supposing the Winter sown crop, which is said to promise well, comes up to expectation, the Argentine wheat exports during 1900 will have to be carefully noted by United States exporters. In the year now closing the position of Argentina has been second only to that of the United States on this side.

MORE WHEAT REQUIRED BY EUROPE.

As regards the amount of outside wheat supplies that may be required by Europe in the new year my opinion is that it must certainly be larger than in 1899, though how much larger is a problem to guess over. Mr. Beerbohm, the leading English authority on the subject—one on which we have no official statistics—has somewhat modified his first estimate of the world's production. He now places it at 2,513,200,000 bushels, and this, as compared with 1898, gives a deficiency of 330,000,000 bushels, but the crops of that year were altogether abnormal. If we compare 1899 with the average of the five years previous to 1898 it will be seen that this output is about of normal dimensions, rather better than the average. The deficiency in this year's United Kingdom yield is about 8,000,000 bushels, and if, as is generally anticipated, the acreage of wheat sown here is further reduced the probability is that the shortage in 1900 may amount to nearly 15,000,000 bushels. France will be able to supply her own wants, with probably a little over. It seems unlikely that Russia can be nearly so large an exporter as in former years because of the famine spreading over large areas of the empire, and also, we may add, because of the increasing home demand consequent on the development of Russian manufacturing industries. India is at present exporting no wheat, and can hardly be counted on as a factor in the supplies of 1900. It is certain, however, that the Australian output will be greater than for some years past. Now it is estimated that the requirements of Europe, including our own, will amount to a total of about 360,000,000 bushels, of which between 170,000,000 and 180,000,000 bushels may probably be required from the United States, even if Argentina gives us of her abundance, say 40,000,000 bushels. In 1899 Great Britain took from the United States over 65,000,000 bushels of wheat, just about the quantity she herself produces. It seems probable that in 1900 England may be open to take 80,000,000 bushels from the same quarter.

THE OTHER CEREALS.

Of the other cereals, barley has unexpectedly been rather a short crop in the United Kingdom, the yield being roughly 67,715,608 bushels. This is not only below 1898, but less than the production of any year during the last ten, with the exception of 1897 and 1893. It is, however, probable that if the wheat area be further reduced the acreage sown in barley may be increased and with it the crop. But America has been steadily reducing her exports of this cereal to England during the last three years, until the figures for the eleven months of 1899—the only ones yet available—present a poor total of 3,318,428 bushels. Russia has sent us four times as much, and whatever her wheat crop may be, seems likely to hold the field in barley.

The oat crop in England is much below the average of recent years, though our deficiency as compared with last year is not 12,500,000 bushels, as has been stated, but only a little over 4,000,000 bushels. In this cereal the United States heads our foreign imports, though in 1899 there has been a slight falling off of about 4,000,000 bushels, which cannot be made up. Russia comes in an indifferent second, yet the increase in her oat crop is set down at 150,000,000 bushels as compared with 54,000,000 bushels for the United States. Notwithstanding there seems little doubt that America will retain the lead in oats. This is a cereal, however, that Great Britain does not, as a rule, require much of from foreign sources.

As for maize, that is a corn of which the United States may be said to have a practical monopoly, for this year just leaving us they have produced about 84 per cent. of the world's crop. Great Britain is almost entirely dependent upon you for her supplies. Some of the grain enters here as from Canada, but it is probably for the most part from your harvest fields. Argentina does send us some of the cereal, this year, for instance, giving us 6,000,000 hundredweight, (112 pounds,) as compared with about half as much in 1898. But the future, like the past, is with you.

THE DEVELOPMENT OF METALS.

The penultimate year of the nineteenth century will be memorable apart from political and financial events of far-reaching importance, for the great expansion which has taken place in nearly all the leading industries of the world. In many cases the consumption of raw materials has overtaken, or even outrun, production, with the result that [illegible] of the past [illegible] tions of the copper combine; but the larger increase in the genuine requirements of trade has been sufficient to raise values very materially in markets which are much too extensive for the manipulation of even the most powerful combinations. For instance, the price of Scotch pig iron on Dec. 1 was £3 9s. 7½d. per ton as compared with £2 9s. 4d. at the same date in 1898 and £2 5s. 2½d. in 1897; Cleveland bars were £8 15s. per ton, against £6 2s. 6d. in 1898 and £5 5s. in 1897. Steel rails were £7 per ton, against £4 12s. 6d. and £4 10s., and best coals were 20s. 6d. per ton, against 16s. 6d. in the two previous years. When we come to copper and tin the advances are still more remarkable, the former having risen from £48 per ton in 1897 to £56 16s. 3d. in 1898, and to £77 this year, while tin has been as high as £150 recently, compared with £82 5s. in December, 1898, and £62 13s. 9d. in December, 1897. These movements are, of course, due to exceptional causes into which it is unnecessary to enter, but it may be useful to remember that no commodity can be for long maintained much above its average value, and that no syndicate of capitalists, however powerful, can hope to succeed against the great army of the world's consumers. In this connection the following figures have a special significance. We may mention that the top price of pig iron was reached in November last, but we have to go back to the years 1888-9 for the high-water mark in copper and tin:

	Present Price.	Highest in Last 20 Years.	Lowest in Last 20 Years.	Average of Last 20 Years.
Pig iron..	£3 6 [illegible]	£3 10 0	£1 17 1	£2 [illegible]

CONSUMPTION OF LEADING MINERALS.

We must, however, leave that aspect of the subject to give a few figures about the actual production and consumption of the leading minerals. Taking coal first, we find that the total world's production in 1898 (the complete figures for which have just become available) was 654,805,000 tons. Great Britain's contribution amounted to 202,055,000 tons, against 202,130,000 tons in 1897, while the United States raised its output from 178,770,000 tons in 1897 to 196,466,000 tons in 1898. Germany comes next with an output of 128,000,000 tons, and France and Austria follow with about 32,000,000 tons apiece, and Belgium produced 22,000,000 tons. The Welsh colliers' strike last year materially reduced Great Britain's output, and at a moderate estimate the production this year should be about 215,000,000 tons. In 1898 the exports amounted to 48,000,000 tons, (including coal supplied to foreign-going steamers,) while this year the total will reach 55,000,000 tons, and the activity prevailing in the iron and steel trades should easily account for the balance of the estimated increase. It is not at all improbable, however, that the United States will reach, or even exceed, Great Britain's output, and certainly in 1900 the latter will have to take second place. It has already yielded the palm in the matter of iron production.

THE OUTPUT OF PIG IRON.

The world's output of pig iron in 1898 was about 35,780,000 tons, to which the United States contributed 11,744,000 tons, an increase of 2,155,000 tons over the 1897 figures. Great Britain's share was 8,610,000 tons, and Germany was a good third with 7,403,000 tons. The amount of iron ore smelted in Great Britain was 20,136,000 tons, of which 5,960,000 tons were imported, principally from Spain. The world's output of iron ore last year is estimated at 70,000,000 tons, on the basis of two tons of ore to one ton of pig, but this is probably a good deal below the mark, as in Great Britain the ratio is about 5 to 2. In any case the amount of ore required in the past year must have been at least 80,000,000 tons, and even if there is no further expansion in 1900 it is difficult to see where the additional supplies of suitable ore are to come from unless the United States can provide them. The total production of steel in 1898 was 24,110,000 tons, the United States being an easy first with 8,933,000 tons, or 37 per cent., to their credit. Germany comes next with 5,780,000 tons, or nearly 24 per cent. of the total, and Great Britain is a poor third with 4,666,000 tons, or less than 19½ per cent.

THE POSITION OF COPPER.

It is unnecessary to say much about the position of copper, as the facts are probably better known on your side of the Atlantic than in London. It is certain that last year's total output of 424,126 tons will be exceeded, but by how much no one is prepared to estimate. Up to the present the supplies to Europe from North America are over 20,000 tons less than in 1898, but there has been an increase of 15,000 tons from other sources. The deliveries are 8,300 tons lower, and the visible stocks in England and France are about 26,000 tons as compared with 27,000 tons last year, 33,000 tons in 1897, and 35,000 tons in 1896. Next year, however, many new sources of supply will probably be opened up, and the situation is not by any means entirely favorable to the "bulls."

With regard to tin the situation is not very clear. There is an admitted reduction in visible supplies of 4,500 tons, and invisible reserves have probably been depleted to the extent of 3,000 tons, as buyers have been running stocks to the lowest possible [illegible] prices [illegible]

THE STATE OF TEXTILES.

The marketing of textile materials has all been affected by short crops at a time when the demand has shown an exceptional increase. It is true that the last season's cotton crop of the United States amounted to 11,468,000 bales, which is considerably more than was generally estimated, but if the Agricultural Bureau at Washington is to be credited, next season's yield will be only 9,960,000 bales. It is not surprising, therefore, that the price for middling uplands is now 4 5-16d. against 3½d. last year, and 2½d. in 1897. But it must be pointed out that independent statisticians put the prospective crop very much higher than the bureau's estimates, and that there are good grounds for expecting a yield of from 10,500,000 to 11,000,000 bales. The bureau has rather shattered our faith in its predictions in the past, and the mistake of 2,736,000 acres, which it has admitted in its estimate of the area under cultivation, does not tend to increase its reputation for infallibility. Apart from America the only other important source of supplies is Egypt, which yielded 6,544,000 cantars in 1897-98, while the 1898-99 crop is only 5,589,000 cantars. The cantar is nearly 100 pounds. The East Indian crop for 1898-99 is 3,477,000 bales, against 3,100,000 bales in 1897-98, and 2,999,000 bales in 1896-7. Next year's product may be affected by the drought, of which more serious reports have come to hand recently, but the Indian deficiency will make little difference to total supplies, although the sentiment about it may help to keep prices up.

BRITISH IMPORTS OF WOOL.

The total imports of wool into Great Britain in 1898 were about 2,100,000 bales, of which 1,554,000 bales came from Australia and South Africa, while 445,500 bales were shipped direct from the colonies to the Continent and the United States. So far as can be traced, therefore, the total production would be between 2,500,000 and 2,600,000 bales, averaging 330 pounds each. The amount submitted to auction at the colonial wool sales in London was 1,155,000 bales, the smallest quantity offered in any year since 1884. During 1890, however, only 1,054,000 bales were catalogued, and the total imports will not exceed 2,000,000 bales. At the last auctions prices ruled 20 to 25 per cent. higher all around, and a strong market is anticipated in the new year, but it is likely that the Australian clip next season will be larger, as the long spell of drought appears to be breaking up.

The jute crop for the season ending July 31, 1899, was a very short one; the total exports from India being only 2,760,000 bales against 4,306,000 bales for the previous twelve months. India consumes about 2,600,000 bales, so that the total yield for the past year would be 5,360,000 bales. The 1897-98 crop, however, was a very heavy one, and although the estimates for the current season put the yield at 25 per cent. below the average, it does not necessarily follow that there will be any serious scarcity for European and American consumers.

But underestimates of stocks and crops are in fashion just now, and the flax market is also becoming excited as to where its supplies are to come from. Russia, which provides over three-fourths of the world's requirements of this commodity, exported 238,462 tons of flax and tow last season, (to Sept. 30, Old Style,) but the crop for the current year is generally estimated to be from 20 to 30 per cent smaller, while some authorities look for a still greater deficiency. Meantime the consumption has latterly been above the average, partly owing to heavy Government purchases of canvas for wagon covers, tents, and so forth, and the price has risen to £20 per ton, against £24 10s. in December, 1898. Everywhere one turns it is the same story, and we wonder how long people expect this sort of thing to last.

THE GENERAL PROSPECT.

As sum of the matter, it may be said that given normal conditions, the new year would have seen little abatement at any point in the energy of contending nations to develop their foreign business and as little in the domestic demands of all kinds, due to increased wealth. Had the stream of gold continued to flow with increasing volume, although we might have been nearing a time of set-back and stagnation, I hardly think it would have come till, perhaps, late in 1900. But all the prospect is marred by the conflict in South Africa and the famine in India. We can no longer reckon on expanding markets for our textiles, and it is a war demand alone that could maintain our iron trade or the world's iron trade at its present activity. While every nation with a seaboard is increasing its navy, and dock yards are everywhere busy to their utmost capacity, there will be no recoil in the demand for iron and steel, and probably no decline in prices. In food supplies, too, we may see a higher level of market values attained than prevails now, but the world's interchange of manufactured commodities, created entirely to supply its domestic and pacific wants, does not promise to be a growing one in 1900. Some compensation for the weakening of India's demands might have been found in China were other nations except the Russian making any sensible progress in building railways and opening up mines and trade routes in that empire. As it is the stage of wrangle has not yet been passed, and we fear progress of all kinds is destined to be delayed. It, however, is difficult to speak with an approach to certainty about a future where all rests so much on the hazards of war, and I can only repeat my old axiom, mine that the trader who [illegible]

LONDON, Dec. 23.—For the present the worst is over in the money market. The week just passed was extremely trying, but the worst fears about month-end requirements were not realized. Only slight failures have so far been declared on the Stock Exchange, but it is estimated that more than one hundred members have been helped, and the mass of half-digested rottenness remains great. Still open default has been generally avoided, and with money looking more favorable the probability is that the general recovery begun on Friday may continue well through next month.

Discount fell more than 1 per cent. in the last two days of the week just passed, and it looks like going below 5% per cent. this week. Nominally the rate yesterday was 5¾ per cent. for remitted bills up to three months; but several brokers were taking paper to arrive at below 5¾ per cent. Short loans continued in good demand, because the banks have been making up their half-yearly balance sheets; but all this will be over this week, and the only patent difficulty ahead in the market lies in the amount due by it to the Bank of England. I estimate this to be about £7,000,000, partly on bills and partly on short loans. A gradual return in scarcity of floating credits is therefore probable in January, the more so as the income tax and other direct taxes are due now. Generally, the effect of the payment of these is not felt in the market until February; but this season it is sure to be earlier, because the market is otherwise bare of supplies.

Against this, one must place the effect of the Government expenditure for the war. It borrowed £1,090,000 last week from the Bank of England, and issues a fresh £1,000,000 in Treasury bills this week over and above renewals, but that is only the beginning. My estimate of the cost of the war has been challenged, but I based it on the cost of the Crimean war, which was £100,000,000, with on the average less than half the number of troops now engaged and mobilized. Allow for the extra cost of land transport over long distances in South Africa, and the higher price of modern furniture of war, and my estimate of the minimum outlay as £2,000,000 a week will be found conservative. The volume of expenditure is, in fact, increasing daily, as more troops go out and larger numbers of transport animals and cavalry horses have to be bought, shipped, and foddered.

Therefore, the Government demands for money are sure now to increase rapidly, and possibly the first effects of the lavish exchequer disbursements will be to ease rates in the open market, because the bulk of the cash is disbursed at home. The after consequences, however, will be severe, and I do not see that an early reduction of the bank rate is possible.

What alone can be counted on is an amelioration of the present close strain during the next month or two. The same thing will probably be seen abroad. Already Germany acts as if the worst were over, and the discount rate in the open markets there is 1 per cent. under the Reichsbank rate, although that bank has been obliged to help the market to the extent of £12,000,000 more this year than last.

France also hopes to find the new year more free from scares than her recent experience, which has been bitter and demoralizing. I had a talk with an eminent French economist last week, and his opinion was that Paris is far too timid. The Bank of France, he said, might part with a few millions in gold without risk were the financiers less nervous. This, perhaps, is true enough, but nervousness is always more than half disease on the credit market, and I nowhere discern indications of a permanent decline in the price of floating capital, scares or none.

Already Continental Exchanges have begun to display weakness as a consequence of the fall in our market rates of discount. German exchange last week was the highest ever known, quite 10 pfennigs above the gold point in our favor, but is now going back.

It follows that if my inference about future markets is correct all kinds of private enterprises are going to be severely handicapped in 1900 for the means to go on. Said a French banker to me the other day, "It is all very well for the Germans to bribe the Sultan's entourage to grant a concession for the Mesopotamia Railway, but where is Germany going to find the money?" The inability to float new enterprises must react unfavorably on trade expansion, and I fear that Sir Christopher Furness, the eminent shipping authority, was right in saying that we had reached the crest of the wave here. In London the curtailment is already marked, calls for new capital next month being less by £2,000,000 when compared with the £70,000,000 called for in January last.

Naturally, the stock markets suffer in a like manner, and too much confidence must not be placed in the continuance of the favorable symptoms now developing. Probably we shall see consols again well above par, but while money costs in the neighborhood of 6 per cent., selling in the long run is bound to beat buying. Capital, moreover, must temporarily desert many other forms of investment on the old basis of interest rates, and I continue to hear growling among municipal bodies that no new money can be had save under ruinous conditions. Happily, our banks keep strong and appear to be taking prudent care to be ready for the next pinch when it comes.

I told you to expect that all the new arrivals of gold would disappear, nominally for internal circulation, and that has thus [illegible] The Bank of England is not [illegible]

[illegible] Year Opens Under Most Favorable Auspices.

[illegible] Year 1899 will be recorded as one of the most prosperous in the history of the country. Not only have the crops been abundant, but the prices obtained for the staple products of the soil have been remunerative to the producer, and the purchasing power of the farming community has increased in consequence. The same is true of the mining industry, which has been stimulated by the high prices ruling for the precious metals. Gold has been produced in greater quantities than ever before, and the output of silver has also been increased. Our manufacturing industries have been busy to their utmost capacity, and the volume of business transacted in the country has been enormous. Our foreign trade has been of unprecedented magnitude, and the year 1899 will be memorable for the achievement of the first billion dollar transaction—that is, the exchange of the same three millions into circulation, whether proof that the banks are hitting gold.

Years ago I began to urge bankers to keep private stocks, and some have started in to do so by locking up Bank of England notes. This was found to be a nuisance, because the bank sent to inquire what on earth they were about, keeping notes from coming back in the ordinary course, so the notes were exchanged for gold, and now gold alone is stocked. But this has gone only a very little way yet, and I fantasize the movement only to show that an element of ease is thus being created, capable of hastening definite changeness does the banker think they may safely let their excess of gold, or some of it, escape again.

Meantime we require another £10,000,000 of metal to meet all contingencies with equanimity, and it is very comforting to find Mr. Gage assuring us that you can spare large amounts. The only other source open to us, leaving out France, which parts with money sparingly, is Russia, and I should not be surprised to find the Russian Bank obliged to let metal go either to Germany or to us. Whatever relieves Berlin will lighten the strain on London. But of course Russia can only release gold by reverting to forced paper money in some degree, and both the Czar and his Finance Minister are extremely reluctant to take any such step.

Just as the year closes we are threatened with serious industrial disorganisation, and in London much inconvenience otherwise, because of the scarcity and dearness of coal. The price has gone up 30 to 40 per cent., and is still rising. A variety of causes are working to produce this result—the shortage of labor, the deficiency in railway goods wagons, and the extreme activity in heavy traffic for the Government account. Unless this is quickly remedied, factories of all descriptions will be obliged to shorten their output. Coke may then be dearer than coal, because of the large German demand for the product of our ovens.

I am astonished that your great anthracite combinations make no effort to open a market for their coal in this country. Should we have a colliers' strike—by no means an improbability—they have a splendid opportunity. A. J. W.

Financial Problems to Solve.

By MAURICE L. MUHLEMAN,
Cashier United States Sub-Treasury.

To present in full the economic history of our country for the year 1899, would require page after page of this journal; many columns of statistics would be necessary to give merely a bird's-eye view of the results of the tremendous activity which has been set in motion, and which is not likely to be seriously checked in the year upon which we are just entering unless there should be such a remarkable collapse as not even the greatest pessimist could foresee.

Beginning with the several bountiful harvests and good returns for the products of the soil by means of which our agriculturists secured the necessary surplus to recreate a demand for the products of the factories, the consuming power of the Nation has again been increased, and to a maximum never before reached.

Not only have we employed labor more steadily, produced more commodities than ever before, and obtained better prices for them, but we have also brought forth more gold, erected more structures of various kinds, expanded our territory and our trade, filled our Government's Treasury and purchased back our securities from investors abroad in large amounts.

We point to our foreign trade, now exceeding $2,000,000,000, but our domestic trade, judged by the tremendous volume of our Clearing House exchanges, must have been fortyfold that sum. It may be safely said that the world has never before seen the working of the economic forces of over 70,000,000 of energetic, free people, but great as are the results of that work in 1899, there is a still greater surprise for the world in our future, if we exercise the wisdom necessary to guide these forces in the right direction.

While considering the magnitude of the sums represented in this great interchange of the fruits of the Nation's labor—the thousands of millions of dollars involved—we are reminded that it is related of Lord Rothschild that he asked an American financier: "What is a dollar?" The far-reaching importance of this query cannot fail to be appreciated when we further consider that our dollars measure the values of our labors as a Nation; that while we are at work creating these values, we should not forget that we have not yet fully answered that query. True, we are well on the way to that answer; those who are making our laws have promised that the answer to all the world will be: The dollar is twenty-five and eight-tenths grains of gold, nine hundred-thousandths fine, and there is every reason to believe that the promise will be kept.

But let us not imagine that when we have thus settled the standard that our duty is done; a stable standard is unquestionably a necessity to a civilized monetary system; but we have another, and perhaps a greater, problem still before us—we must reform our paper-money system and provide machinery to facilitate the interchange of the products of the Nation's labor, which shall prove more adequate to the requirements of such a Nation as ours than the antiquated "plant" we now have, for assuredly a system under which the money rates may be 186 per cent. one day and 2 per cent. the next is ill-adapted to the needs of a highly civilized Nation.

What this improved mechanism shall be remains to be considered; but we need not go far into the world's economic history to find examples worthy of our careful study. We must educate ourselves to select that form which shall prove best adapted for the purpose; and as a first lesson to those who wish to pursue the subject the recently published report of Secretary Gage is one of the [illegible]

[illegible] Trade Prospects Good—Industrial Progress—Finances.

[illegible] Year 1899 has been a most favorable one for the Austro-Hungarian Empire. Trade and industry have developed in a most satisfactory manner, and the financial situation has improved. The following figures, taken from the Vienna Export Association, and from the Chambers of Commerce of Vienna, Reichenberg, Prague and Pilsen, show the increase in the foreign trade of Austria-Hungary during the first eleven months of 1899, as compared with the corresponding period of 1898:

Austria	1,000,000 florins	1,100,000 florins	100,000 florins
Hungary	1,000,000 florins	1,100,000 florins	100,000 florins
Total	2,000,000 florins	2,200,000 florins	200,000 florins

In Austria-Hungary the situation, so far as the State finances are concerned, is not unfavorable. In both parts of the empire the results of the State accounts have for several years shown considerable surplus. This has lately been further improved by the Finance Ministers withdrawing a quantity of investment outlays from the ordinary budget of the regular State disbursements, and substituting them by special investment loans, so that the interest and amortization of the latter will fall upon the current accounts.

The credit of both States—Austria and Hungary—is intact, and the State bonds have, in view of the stringency of the money market, suffered much less in price than those of other States. The establishment of the money standard under the laws of 1892 is progressing slowly but steadily. Soon all the State notes will have been taken out of circulation, and be substituted partly by coin and partly by fully covered bank-notes. With the new year 1900 the obligatory kronen standard will also go into effect—4.80 kronen equal £1. It will take, however, some time for the establishment of the standard, viz., the resumption of specie payments through the bank, on account of the large amount of Government indebtedness held abroad, and therefore great caution is necessary. The amount of Austrian and Hungarian securities abroad in State bonds, stocks, obligations, &c., is estimated at 3,500,000 gulden, about $1,400,000,000, and considerable realizations of these securities might, under certain circumstances, cause great embarrassment. This is also a reason why the equilibrium in the budget must under all circumstances be maintained, and in order to meet the constantly increasing needs of the State, new and really hard-pressing taxes had to be imposed during the past year.

In regard to the economic conditions, the situation cannot be designated as favorable. To begin with, the first half of this year suffered from the effects of the bad harvest of 1898, but in the second half there was some improvement. Austria had only an average crop. Hungary had a considerably better harvest than in the previous year, so that the importation of grain from America and Russia was discontinued.

Regarding industry and commerce, the internal national troubles in Austria, and still more the long-continued uncertainty over the outcome of the Ausgleich negotiations with Hungary, as well as the threatened danger of the establishment of a customs line between Austria and Hungary, have acted as a crippling burden upon enterprise, which at the same time receives no encouragement whatsoever from the State authorities, and also suffers from the increase of a reactionary current antagonistic to capital that prevails among the people and in representative bodies. Principally in Vienna the administration of the anti-Semitic party is leading toward very sad consequences. Industry in Austria must, with few exceptions, count 1899 as one of its worst years. Only of late have there been some signs of an improvement, which must be regarded partly as a reflex of the colossal industrial prosperity in Germany. Characteristic of such is the fact that a contract of a German firm of a large order for the delivery of wire to America which it was not able to carry out was transferred to an Austrian firm. In Hungary the Government has made the most strenuous efforts to promote the prosperity of industrial production, but as various natural conditions are l[illegible]ng here no real success can be attained.

Under such circumstances, it is a matter of course that the Boerse itself has not been able to record any good days. In the first part of the year hopes were entertained of prospective large combinations, because the Government had promised easy charter laws to facilitate the formation of stock companies. But when the laws were finally passed the stringency in the money market, which governs the market now, occurred, and the issue of new stocks has remained at zero.

RUSSIA.

No one here knows what the real situation is. Business is much depressed and there have been and still are numerous failures, but almost nothing is permitted to be published. Hence no one knows what the real situation is. Witte, the Finance Minister, says that Russia is in good condition, but others say that it is not; that he is about to issue 450,000,000 paper rubles, and that will drive the gold out of circulation. Others say that he is about to be removed for advancing 7,000,000 rubles to the President of the Moscow and Archangel Railroad, who, with several of his associates, is under arrest. He has stopped advancing to concerns having large Government contracts, causing these stocks to drop out of sight. The continued famine in certain provinces causes increased suffering each year.

The Empire is developing as rapidly as can be expected. The discontinuance of Siberia as a penal colony will aid in settling that vast domain. All industries in Russia are in their infancy, and it seems impossible to keep up with the demand for everything. No other market in the world offers such opportunities for trade from the United States as Russia. The best possible feeling exists toward the United States. American goods are preferred to those of any other country, but Germany enjoys the bulk of the trade, because she gives Russia long credits, has much capital invested in Russia, and a majority of the business men of Russia are Germans.

The Trans-Siberian Railroad cannot begin to take care of the business offered. Its rails and rolling stock are too light, and it will have to be re-equipped to come near meeting the requirements. Russia needs more railroads and better roads throughout the country to enable its products to reach markets. In fact, it needs almost everything and will continue to need for half a century.

American exporters should study the Russian market from both ends of the Siberian Road. The Russian Government is encouraging foreign capital to engage in manufacturing in Russia. The Westinghouse air-brake people have put in a large plant here and have contracts covering a period of years. It is due also to American enterprise that all new factories are equipped with the latest machinery and the best methods of manufacture are followed.

By WORTHINGTON C. FORD,

No very great assurance is needed to predict that the year 1900 will be one of very large imports of foreign products, and may easily surpass all previous records. Past experience proves that years of heavy exports are accompanied or followed by heavy imports, and the condition of our domestic markets is such as to encourage purchases from abroad. The phenomenally large balances due to us for the exports of the last few years cannot continue to be settled in gold or, in American securities, for the money centres of Europe have become too sensitive to respond to such large demands. The rising prices in almost every line of goods throughout the United States will make this a good market to sell in, and products and manufactures will make a better and cheaper remittance than gold. A financial crisis might check trade, and such a crisis is always within the range of possibility, but, that apart, nothing can interfere with the rising tide of imports.

In the eleven months ended with November of 1899 the value of imported merchandise was $732,401,721, and the returns for December will raise the total to more than $805,000,000. This figure has been exceeded only in the three years 1890, 1891, and 1892, when prosperity was again dominant and all conditions were favorable to active foreign commerce. Beginning with $823,400,000 in 1890, the value of imported merchandise rose to $846,931,000 in 1893, the highest figure ever reached. Taking the population in 1892 at 66,000,000, the average import per capita was $12.73. The population is now estimated to be 76,700,000, and the same rate of import would give upward of $967,480,000, which leaves a wide margin yet to be covered before the country has reached its maximum importing capacity, as measured by a year of activity. It is within the limits of possibility to estimate that the imports for 1900 will be near the nine-hundred-million-dollar-mark, and thus within measurable distance of $1,000,000,000. Even this would be only one-half the value of England's import of merchandise in a single year.

Such an estimate assumes that commercial and industrial conditions in the United States have merely developed since 1892 on old lines, and have not been essentially modified. In fact, a very notable change has occured, and is likely to become greater with each year. The progress of manufactures has influenced the import trade not only by decreasing the movement of manufactured goods, but, to a far greater extent, by increasing the import of raw materials used in industry. The details of the imports of ten months of 1899 are available, and a comparison with the returns for the like ten months of 1893 will develop this difference: In 1893 the total import of merchandise was $677,080,694, and in 1899 $857,895,449, a difference of less than $20,000,000, or ten days' trade at the current rate. In the earlier year 34 per cent. of the value was represented by food and live animals, 24 per cent. by raw materials of industry, 11.3 per cent. by partially manufactured articles, and 16.8 per cent. by manufactured articles ready for use or consumption. What remained—about 13.7 per cent.—consisted of articles of voluntary use or consumption, and the proportion of the total imports of 1899, represented by these articles, was nearly the same, 13.5 per cent. In other respects the returns for 1899 were very different. Food gave less than 30 per cent., partially manufactured articles only 9.1 per cent., wholly manufactured goods 15 per cent., and raw materials 32.5 per cent.

This change from food to raw materials as the most important class of imports, and the remarkable reduction in the proportion of manufactured products, deserves more full consideration, because they point out the trend of the import movement. The immense development of industries through natural causes, and the multiplication of industrial establishments almost beyond the ability of domestic supplies of material, is the great factor. An excessive tariff for protection is also an important influence, in some cases preventing any competition from abroad. Foreign manufactures are in less demand, and foreign raw materials are in greater demand—that, in substance, promises to be the drift of the import trade in 1900. Comparing the imports of these materials in the ten months of 1899 with those of the same period in 1893, the extent of development already accomplished becomes clear:

Fibres	17,909,154	17,514,902
Hides and skins	20,566,747	41,116,694
India rubber	13,665,232	27,986,145
Iron ore	868,370	771,588
Iron, pig	1,188,266	936,161
Silk, raw	14,370,660	32,055,064
Tin	7,711,325	15,050,545
Wool	13,320,290	8,977,794
Total	$90,036,841	$151,810,005

In this short list there is established an increase of more than 68 per cent., and in at least five items the increase has been 100 per cent. and over. Iron ore is rising in importance, and will figure more in the returns for 1900, and wool also promises to attain its former place among the leading imports. When it is remembered that the [illegible] of all these raw materials in the [illegible] was [illegible] cent., in a single year, the elasticity of this side of the import trade is at once recognised. A like increase for two years will give more than 100 per cent., as compared with the trade in raw materials in 1898. I consider such an increase quite probable.

Turning to the imports of manufactures the figures are quite as suggestive in their way, and the more so, as the tariff rates of duty did not materially differ in the two years, except for iron and steel. A comparative statement of rates will not be without interest, as it will remove any claim that the tariff exercised a disturbing influence on the import movement. The ad valorem duties collected were:

	1893. Per Cent.	1899. Per Cent.
Flax, &c., manufactures	36.83	40.00
Glass manufactures	60.40	60.70
Iron and steel manufactures	62.87	43.58
Leather	34.16	35.68
Silk	53.56	53.97
Wool	98.55	95.00

The import of manufactures of each class was:

	1893.	1899.
Glass	6,113,590	5,993,719
Iron and steel	25,320,000	11,538,780
Leather	5,591,756	4,645,962
Silk	31,978,890	23,123,606

There was a decrease of 26 per cent., and it is not very likely that this class of imports will increase to any great extent, except in wool where our manufacturers are placed at a disadvantage by the high duties on raw wools, and, to a less degree, in silk and flax, where natural advantages are possessed by the foreigner.

This modification in imports, passing from a trade in manufactures to one in raw material, is naturally reflected in the direction of our import trade. The older countries of Europe do not raise these materials, though they may deal in them. It is from the new continents, having sparsely settled territories or rich and favorably situated mineral deposits, that these supplies must be had. The change in the relative position of the continents in our import trade is therefore significant of coming developments, though not in any degree likely to fulfill the predictions of those who see the decadence of Europe in the near future. Comparing the figures for 1899 with those for 1893 the tendency becomes marked. Europe almost holds her own, giving 53 per cent. in the earlier year, and 50.7 per cent. in the later. North America loses more, falling from 21 per cent. to 16 per cent. South America remains almost unchanged, but Asia has risen from 10 per cent. to 15 per cent., and Africa from .7 per cent. to 1.5 per cent. WORTHINGTON C. FORD.

Secretary of Agriculture Wilson Points the Way to an Increase of Our Dairy Products.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 31.—"A wonderful year to look back upon, and a year full of promise ahead." These were the opening words of a talk with Secretary of Agriculture Wilson, in response to a request to give to the readers of The New York Times some comments and opinions on the departing and arriving years. "A great year ending, with every man who wants work employed at good wages, with plenty to eat and clothes better than ever before at the prices, the country getting around to a unanimous conviction on sound money, and even the timid philanthropists awakening to the fact that expansion will expand not only our physical limits but enlarge our appreciation of and ability to encounter new and greater responsibilities.

"The year has been one of prosperity to the agricultural population. Crops generally have been abundant, and if not as large as in some years, still abundant enough to enable us to sell to those who have much less than we. It is still too soon to make any sort of accurate predictions of the promise of next year, but such as have reached the department show that the farmers have rather increased the acreage for the crops of 1900, and will have more to sell next year than they had this, provided they are not overwhelmed by calamity, which the extent and variety of conditions of this Nation ought not to lead us to expect.

"The statistician of the department will soon give us figures to show just about what the amount and value of our crops have been. We know already that they have been satisfactory. But while the corn crop, enormous and enriching as it was, is a subject of rejoicing, it is also one that provokes thought and ought to point the way for us to greater advantage in the coming year.

"With our immense resources that might be developed for the prosperity of our farmers the United States ought to give more attention to dairy products. Look at Denmark. It is a little country, but it sells for good money $33,000,000 worth of dairy products each year, while we export only about $10,000,000 of butter and cheese. That ought not to be the case. The remedy is largely in our own hands. There is no secret art known to Denmark for the production of good butter, the quality of its [illegible] Atlantic ports and Canada, its Danish and Danish-like dairy sales, mainten[illegible] markets of it, and the cows that ought to be used here to nourish our own cattle, and make them good milk producers is sent to Denmark and serves the double purpose of increasing the milk supply and rewarding the part that is to be used for the growing of cattle.

"We should have some of that $33,000,000 of custom which Denmark gets in Great Britain. Further, we ought to look out and get some of the cheese business that we have been rather indifferent about cultivating. Canada is benefiting by our neglect, and we find it to our advantage to ship American cheese by way of Montreal in order that it may get the benefit of the company of cheese of good reputation from the neighboring country. Whatever you get now in business you must work for, if it is to be held on to. Observe the economy of the Danes. They not only buy our superior food for their cattle, but as they find that they produce an article of bacon that costs less than ours does, and sells for a better price in England, they import our butter and our bacon for their own use and send Danish butter and bacon to foreign markets to be sold at high prices. These statements suggest their cure for a state of things that can be changed if we will take the pains to change it. We must make better cheese and butter, stop making imitation cheese and butter for foreign buyers, and pay careful attention to the packing and shipment of good articles, so that American thoroughness may be compared with advantage with that of any other nation.

"It seems to me that there is no direction in which effort may be more beneficially directed by our farmers than that of recovering our lost cheese market. It was not many years ago that we were sending to England 150,000,000 pounds of cheese in a year. Absence of inspection, the short-sighted greed of men who exported great quantities of inferior, adulterated, and counterfeit cheese, destroyed our reputation. Canada put the manufacture of cheese under Government supervision, was able to guarantee the purity and standard quality of the product, and ran away with our business. It is for this reason that American cheese seeks outlet through Canada and in the company of Canadian cheese.

"There are many other ways in which the United States may learn to develop wealth. It is my conviction that we are purchasing many articles abroad that should be grown at home, and with the facilities provided we are trying to prove this to be so. Sugar beets we can raise, and when we have found the best and tried all methods of producing those richest in sugar, we shall be on the way to keeping at home money that now goes abroad for raw sugar. Tea has been produced in South Carolina, and the hope excited that it may yet be raised profitably in the Gulf States, offering new opportunities to farmers who may be seeking them. Inquiry has been set afoot to determine whether it may not be possible to raise rubber trees in the Philippines, to meet the increasing demand for rubber in the market.

"In its practical work, the Department of Agriculture has been expanding steadily. Great faith is placed in our reports, for the reason that they are trustworthy, not selected to affect a stock market, but to acquaint producers with the demand and the supply, as related to agricultural productions. We have now some forty thousand correspondents and reporters contributing to this work, scattered all over the country. No commercial agency or stock-dealing firm can boast truthfully of such a corps of correspondents. It is upon the supporting reports of these correspondents that we have issued our estimates of the cotton crop for the year just ended.

"As I began, so I will end. It has been a great year; but it is greater in its invitation than in its accomplished facts. We are bidden to come on—to maintain our struggle with nature with both eyes open, with both of them directed by educated minds, for these are not days in which the ignorant can hope to be in the front of the race. Of course, next year will be better. Every year is better than the last."

CROPS OF THE PAST YEAR.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 31.—Not until some time next month will John Hyde, in charge of the Division of Statistics of the Department of Agriculture, be prepared to give definite figures concerning the crops of the year, but already the leading facts have been collected by commercial bodies and afford, with such information as can be gleaned from the slower but surer Department of Agriculture, comforting assurance of the substantial benefit to the farmers and the whole country of the agricultural gains of 1898 and the indications of the prospect for 1900.

The crop of the year about which farmers have talked most is the corn crop. The corn crop of 1898 exceeded 1,900,000,000 bushels, but that of 1899 has gone well up toward 2,500,000,000 bushels, while the average price was about three cents more a bushel than it was last year. The average of yield was 25.2 per cent. bushels per acre, or a bushel above the mean yield for many years. Assuming that the crop of corn was as large as the figures given above, which the Statistical Division will not verify, the value of the corn crop to the producers of the country, at the price ruling at the close of November, when the information about the crop was being collected, was about $1,000,000,000. Most of this crop, however, is consumed at home, only 167,000,000 bushels of corn having been exported up to the close of October. The Department

The wheat crop of 1899 was smaller than that of 1898, but larger than that of 1897. While the surplus for exportation is reduced it will still be large, probably large enough to spend a large share of foreign indebtedness. The wheat crop as reported by the Division of Statistics is as follows:

Cotton, the Division of Statistics has shown, has been a very valuable crop during 1899. The preliminary estimates of the division, published from time to time, have been found to be too liberal. At last accounts, derived from the 40,000 observers of the division scattered all over the country, it was found that the average yield per acre was one of the smallest in recent years, the acreage being rather less than more than 23,500,000 acres. The estimation of the crop at 89,000,000 bales is now admitted to be excessive, and, notwithstanding these figures have been questioned, the Division of Statistics is convinced that its report will be justified.

Upon the assumption that the crop will be 9,000,000 bales, comparison shows this to be the smallest crop since 1896, and probably a smaller one than that of 1894, which was about 9,400,000 bales. The value of last year's crop of more than 11,000,000 bales was $305,000,000, and the value of the crop of 1899 will be slightly in excess of that amount, as the price of cotton has been 7 cents a good part of the year, and almost constantly since the new crop began to reach the market. With present prices likely to influence the planters next season, it is expected that there will, next Spring, be an increase of acreage in cotton, after a very general tendency during two years to interest the Southern planters in the experiment of greater diversification of crops.

The reports of the potato crop promise to be gratifying to the farmers. The acreage was as large, presumably, as it was in 1897 and 1898, and the average yield is 88.7 bushels per acre, as compared with 75.2 per acre in 1898, 64.6 in 1897, and 75.2, the average for the past ten years. The average per cent. of quality is also higher than in several years, and the price is higher than in either of the two preceding years. It is expected that the value of the crop will be considerably greater than the $79,574,772 at which the crop of 1898 was valued.

Although prices for breadstuffs are not so high as they have been, and farmers would be glad to see them higher, they are still far from unsatisfactory, and the prospect is rather up than down. Some of the leading produce prices are given as they are published in the reports of the Treasury Department Bureau of Statistics for some of the leading lines:

By FREDERICK HOBART,
Associate Editor Engineering and Mining Journal.

The mining of the precious metals and of the baser metals in the United States during 1899 has shown some important changes and an extraordinary degree of activity and prosperity. The output of the country has been very large, prices of all the industrial metals have been very high, and there has been a surplus for investment in the prosecution of mining enterprises which has led to much new development, the results of which were already felt in the latter part of the year, although their full effect will not be apparent until 1900.

In gold mining nearly all the producing regions showed a considerable improvement, and the result has been that our total production of the precious metal in 1899 has been between $79,000,000 and $80,000,000, or over $15,000,000 greater than in 1898. Many States have contributed to this result. The production in California last year was limited by the lack of water resulting from two years' drought; but the Winter of 1898-9 furnished rain and snow for the mountains, which filled up the reservoirs and enabled nearly all the mines to resume operations fully, and to increase very largely the gold production of the year. In Colorado the most notable gain has been in Cripple Creek, where nearly all the leading mines made substantial progress, and the work of the year has been most encouraging, not only in the actual returns, but also in proving that the ore deposits of that district increase rather than diminish in size and value with depth. This district was not alone, however, in adding to Colorado's production of the yellow metal, for at Leadville, Telluride, Aspen, and in the old mines of Gilpin County there was substantial progress, and all helped in maintaining the State as the leading gold producer of the country.

The Black Hills region of South Dakota has also made advances. The great mills of the Homestake Company, which were nearly doubled in capacity about the end of 1898, have been steadily employed, while the Golden Reward and other companies have also done well.

In Montana and Idaho also there has been some increase in production, although less marked than in the Southern Rockies. The chief new development in Montana has been a revival of placer and hydraulic mining, and in the saving of gold by dredging from the bottoms of the rivers, a comparatively new method for those regions which is meeting with great success.

In the State of Washington the Republic district, near the international boundary, has shown the development of two or three large mines, and of a number of claims which give good promise of being rich mines in the future.

In the Southwest there has been less progress, although Arizona will show an increase in production, and the opening of a number of prominent mines. In New Mexico there has been little change. In Utah much work has been done in developing the great mines of the Mercur district, and the treatment of the peculiar low-grade ores of that district by the cyanide process, which has proved very successful in saving their values at a small cost. At De La Mar's Mercur Mines the largest and most complete cyanide plant in the world—not omitting the great works in the Transvaal—is now in operation, and is considered a model plant by metallurgists. Some large mines of very similar character have been developed in Eastern Nevada not far from the Utah line.

No inconsiderable part of the increase in gold production comes from the Far North. In Alaska the great mills of the Alaska-Treadwell and other companies on Douglas Island have continued their steady production. The extraordinary discoveries on the coast at Cape Nome and vicinity have added at least $3,000,000 to the gold output this year, and promise to do much more during 1900. From the American Yukon fully $2,000,000 in gold have come in 1899. The promise is that Alaska will show a very large output of the yellow metal in 1900.

The silver production, which reached a total of 64,000,000 ounces in 1898, will not be over 60,000,000 ounces in 1899. A large part of this reduction is due to a falling off in the great copper-silver mines of Butte, Mon. The Idaho silver-lead mines have also produced rather less than in 1898 on account of the labor troubles there, although their activity was fully maintained during the closing months of the year. The silver refined from foreign bullion, chiefly from Mexico, has shown a considerable increase, and over 35,000,000 ounces have been turned out by our smelters and refiners in addition to the quantity given above, which is the production from ores mined in the United States only.

The copper production of 1899 has been the largest ever recorded. Our mines furnished during the year 261,500 long tons of fine copper, or fully two-thirds of the world's entire output of the metal, showing that the United States is not at all likely to lose the commanding position which it now occupies in the copper market. While the production thus increased by about 15,000 tons over 1898, there was a falling off of nearly 20,000 tons in our exports of this metal; but the consumption increased so largely owing to the general prosperity of manufacturing interests and the vast amount of electric work done during the year that there was no increase in the stocks carried, and producers even found difficulty in meeting the demand. Notwithstanding the falling off in exports, we sent abroad no less than 115,000 long tons of fine copper, which at the prices maintained during the greater part of the year made a most substantial addition to our exports.

The increase in copper came very largely from the great Arizona mines. The Lake Superior producers showed only a moderate gain, while, owing to financial and other reasons, there was a falling off in the Butte district in Montana, especially in the Anaconda Mines. Whether this will continue depends upon causes other than the actual value of the mines. If the Butte companies will cease litigation and improve their metallurgical methods, there is no doubt that their production and profits can be fully maintained.

The lead production of the year amounted to about 220,000 short tons, a slight reduction from the silver-lead mines of the Coeur d'Alene district in Idaho, being balanced by an increase from the soft lead mines of Southeastern Missouri. Of all the metals, with the exception of iron and copper, lead has shown the strongest demand, while of all the metals, without exception, it has shown the steadiest prices throughout the year.

The zinc production of the country in 1899 has been 112,000 short tons, or about the same as in 1898. The Eastern producers and those of Illinois and Wisconsin have gone on their way quietly with few changes. The Joplin region in Missouri and Kansas, which produces a very large share of our spelter, has been through a period of transition from the old system of small mines and leases to the new one of large companies. This has been accompanied by some friction, and by quarrels between the smelters and the miners, which have prevented any increase in the total output.

Among the metals of smaller importance may be mentioned the quicksilver, which comes entirely from the California mines, and of which about 32,000 flasks (of 76 pounds each) have been produced in 1899. Of aluminum, some 6,000,000 pounds were turned out from the works at Pittsburg and Niagara Falls. Others, such as antimony, nickel, platinum, iridium, and the minor metals have shown little change. Most of these are produced as by-products from our gold, silver, and copper mines.

Upon the whole, the metal miners of the United States have had a most prosperous year, with everything to indicate that 1900 will show a still further improvement. It may be added that substantial advances have been made in metallurgy during the year, and that we are now in a position to treat ores of almost all kinds more thoroughly and more economically than ever before.

Provision Trade of Chicago.

By WILLIAM J. QUINN, of Armour & Co., Chicago, Ill.

The receipts and shipments of live stock at Chicago during 1899, and the killing and packing at this point during the same period, indicate Chicago's continued supremacy in the provision trade.

The official figures of the Union Stock Yards and Transit Company show that the hog receipts for the first eleven months of 1899 were 7,431,454. The shipments were 1,599,774. The difference represents the number of hogs killed and packed at this point, or 5,831,680. Allowing the same average for the month of December, the volume of Chicago packing for the year will be approximately 6,361,833 hogs. This is less by nearly 1,000,000 hogs than the number packed during the phenomenal year of 1898, when the number was 7,320,000.

Cattle show an increase. The receipts for the first eleven months of 1899 were 2,306,671. Shipments for the same period were 759,098. The balance of 1,547,573 cattle represents the number killed and packed at this point for the first eleven months of the year. At the same average for December, the total volume of beef packing for the whole year will be 1,688,261. The figures for 1898 were 1,530,000, showing an increase during the last twelve months of more than 158,000.

There was also an increase in sheep. The total receipts for the first eleven months of 1899 were 3,366,567. Shipments were, during the same period, 377,152. The difference, or 2,989,415 animals, represents the sheep packing for the first eleven months of the year. With the same average for December, the volume for the year will approximate 3,261,180. The figures for 1898 were 3,100,000, an increase for the current year of more than 161,000.

Speaking generally, Chicago will show a volume in hog packing representing about one-fifth of the entire business of the country, the latter approximating 35,000,000. This indicates that Chicago's position as the centre of the provision trade is in no danger from the competition of interior points. It is true that the very rapid increase of the packing industry in Omaha and Kansas City has been maintained during the past year, and that the combined business at all the interior points, including the two cities mentioned, represents a greater volume than the business of Chicago alone. But there is no question as to the sentiment among packers concerning Chicago's continued status as the centre of the industry. During the past year the leading packers have spent enormous sums in rebuilding and extending their plants at the Union Stock Yards. They have introduced modern labor-saving machinery on a large scale, and have put up the highest class of buildings, which for permanency and convenience outstrip all former plants in the history of the industry. The same conditions apply to the preparations of the Union Stock Yards corporation for an increased trade. Vitrified brick has supplanted the old wooden pavements, and there have been many marked improvements in the facilities for handling animals.

Chicago is still the focal point for the corn-growing and hog-raising States, and besides the immediate tribute of Illinois, Iowa, and Indiana, draws heavily on the more outlying States. Nebraska and Texas are turning in some degree to Omaha and Kansas City, but the greater facilities of this point insure a proportion of their business. The great factor in the packing industry is nearness to supply, but there is also an unsurmountable advantage in the facilities of an established centre like Chicago, both for packing and marketing.

The greatest factor for prosperity during the past year was the high prices for better grades of cattle. For choice beef the price has gone as high as $8.25 on the hoof, an unexampled figure for a long period of years. The range of prices for many years past has been from $5.50 to $6.50. The higher prices were due this year to the scarcity of good cattle. It marks a new era of prosperity for cattle raisers. The latter are now reaping profits to which they have been unaccustomed for years. The volume of business is the factor of prosperity for the packing houses. In spite of higher prices for the cattle raisers, the prices to consumers have not materially increased. The competition of the business forbids that they should. And yet the packing business for the past year closes with moderate prosperity for the packers. It is probably true that for the first time in a long period they are now making a profit on raw material, as well as on by-products, which for some time have been the mainstay of the business.

Home consumption of meat products is rapidly increasing. New beef markets are being opened up in California and the South. The American people will probably lead the world as beef eaters at no distant date, if they do not do so now.

Foreign exports are also looking up. Meat exportations have already reached a volume of about one-eighth of the total value of exports. The indications are for an early understanding with Germany, in the form of a treaty that will remove the ban on American provisions. At present we ship beef only to England, but with the perfection of refrigerating plants the business is growing with great strides. It is a better and safer trade than the old custom of shipping on the hoof. Export beef is of the very highest grade, and wins its way readily with the best that Europe can produce. There is still competition in canned meats with the cheaper products of Argentina and Australasia. European Governments, however, like our own, supply only the best to their troops, and the American goods rule the markets. English handlers of American meat doubtless ship to other European countries and to the colonies in large volume, but for the present it is to our interest to deal directly with the English traders.

All signs point to a prosperous year in 1900 in the packing industry, which has been systematized to a point where the consumer and cattle raiser are reaping the major benefits, while the packers rely upon a large volume of business and close economies for a favorable showing.

Causes for the Expansion in the Iron Trade.

Outlook for the Future is Prosperous, with Only Trifling Dangers That Seem Threatening.

Written for The New York Times

By C. KIRCHHOFF,

Editor of The Iron Age.

In many respects the year 1899 has been the most extraordinary which has ever come to the American iron trade. The dominating factor has been an expansion in the demand at a time when the really well equipped, well located, and modern works in the country had been under full pressure for a considerable period. By offering higher and higher prices, consumers thus forced into line one by one furnaces and mills which had long been idle through inability to compete. We have witnessed the spectacle of resumption on the part of plants which had not been worked before because no one could be found to bid anything for the old machinery and the brick and mortar.

It is well, in order to understand some of the causes which have led to the enormous profits made in many lines, to go back to the previous year. Toward the close of 1898 a disagreement among the steel rail manufacturers—who had for years been enjoying a profitable armistice—led to a savage war of prices. Steel rails were sold, for 1899 delivery, down to $16 at mill, leading Eastern mills retaliating by invading the territory of the Western works, who had patched up a truce among themselves. The sentimental effect of this fight upon the whole industry was great, creating, as it did, the following situation. Usually toward the end of the year the ironmakers of the Central West contract for their supply of iron ore, for the next season, beginning in the Spring of the next year. The low price realized for the most important single product—as to tonnage—through the rail war induced the Lake Superior iron ore mining companies to make the contracts for the season of May, 1899, to May, 1900, at very moderate prices. The fact will be appreciated, therefore, that the lake ore mines have had practically no benefit from the enormous advance in prices, which has gone entirely to the manufacturers. The latter have, however, in most instances, compensated the mining companies for such advances to mine labor which were necessary to prevent a cessation of work, ruinous to the ironmaker. The result has been that the cost to the latter has risen but little, while the doubling in the price of metal has allowed many furnaces to more than repay the entire investment.

It is only fair to state that nearly all the active plants—and more particularly the largest—had heavy commitments for the domestic and foreign markets, so that monthly average returns per unit of product lagged far behind the market quotations. The latter really more and more represented the premiums which buyers found themselves bound to pay for such quantities as were required for prompt shipment.

The enormous rise has been due exclusively to the great expansion in the demand. It is only fair that this fact be emphasized, because the impression exists, sedulously fostered in some quarters, that the advances have been decreed by the new consolidations in the iron trade. There is no such organization in the pig iron industry, with its score of independent concerns, and yet the advance in price of pig was from $20 at Valley Furnace in January to $24 at the close of the year. The same is shown through the advance in foundry iron in Birmingham, Ala., from $8 early in January to $17.50 at the present time. On finished iron and steel the greatest advance has been in steel plates for shipbuilding, structural purposes, and boiler manufacture. In this department there is no understanding among the dozen mills actively engaged, yet the price rose from 1.20 cents per pound for tank plate at Pittsburg mill to 3 cents per pound, in October. In one brand, in which there is no "trust," but which was controlled during 1898 by an association, a conspicuously conservative course was pursued—and that is the structural steel industry. The prices of beams and angles were carried up to 2.25 cents at Pittsburg and were kept at that figure, when other rolling mill products, which can be more cheaply made, soared far above that figure. It is perhaps well to add that except in one line there was no danger of importations at even higher figures. It is not just, therefore to attribute the advance in prices to an effort on the part of the "trusts" to squeeze the consumer. It was the pressure of the demand.

Probably the best method of giving numerical expression to the expansion in the requirements of the country during 1899, as compared with 1898, is to present an estimate of the consumption of pig iron, which lies at the basis of the whole industry.

ESTIMATED CONSUMPTION OF PIG IRON.

Importation	25,137	40,000
Decrease in stocks	365,000	325,000
Total Supply	12,164,071	14,065,000
Deduct exports	253,057	235,000
Available for home consumption	11,911,014	13,830,000

This increase in the consumption, however, does not accurately measure its full development. The monthly blast furnace returns compiled by The Iron Age, based on reports of the production of the furnaces, with a few insignificant exceptions, show that on the 1st of December the consumption was proceeding at the rate of over 15,000,000 gross tons per annum.

Nor does even this fully measure its full significance, because we have no statistical data bearing upon the quantity of scrap and old material which is reconverted into merchantable forms. We know only in a general way that it is an important factor. During 1899 the country was scoured from ocean to ocean for old material, under the stimulus of an extraordinary advance in prices.

As a partial offset to this, however, we must take into account that a very large quantity of pig iron credited to home consumption was really used to manufacture goods for export.

The New Year finds us therefore still consuming at an unprecedented rate, at prices practically double those prevailing during 1898, and we are still face to face with the momentous question, "How long will it last?"

"We have had 'booms' before, but none of them has had the staying power of this one. Our usual experience with a whirling advance has been that it has been followed by a sharp partial decline, succeeded by a long period of intermediate values slowly crumbling away to unprecedentedly low prices.

The first impulse is to point to the economic axiom that high prices must curtail the consumption—and that prices are high when compared with cost of production [illegible] well-informed must admit. It may be claimed that the prices current do not apply to the iron now going into consumption, and that therefore their effect has not been fully brought out as yet.

Against that argument the fact may be cited as conclusive, that very large sales have been made at the present range of values. We know that all the principal producers of pig iron have sold their output for the first half of the coming year, and have contracts on their books for the third and even the fourth quarter. We know that a very large tonnage of steel rails has been entered for 1900 delivery. We know that leading car builders have their capacity fully engaged for the greater part of next year, that being particularly true of those who draw most heavily upon the steel trade for their requirements. We know that there is being planned in all our leading cities a vast amount of building, calling for structural material. We know that our shipbuilders are crowded with work and are still entering new orders for boats. We know that our machine shops are so busy that it is practically impossible to get promises of delivery of heavy machinery for six, twelve and fifteen months.

It will not be denied that such indications of future prosperity are highly encouraging, but it would be dangerous to conclude that they are final or conclusive. We have as yet no adequate evidence as to the effect of present prices upon that amount of business, very large in the aggregate, which originates at the farm. When the Spring trade opens, we will soon feel its effect. On the other hand, we may expect for a considerable time to come to secure business in volume, which comes from the fact that our entire laboring population and our mechanics have had an extraordinary year, both as to rates of wages and regularity of employment.

On the whole, therefore, the promise of a continuance of a heavy demand is very good, unless financial uncertainties, long continued, hold up or kill undertakings now in course of development.

On the side of the expansion of the supply, it may be noted that thus far nearly all the preparations come from the concerns long engaged in the industry. Some new enterprises have actually been started, as the result of the boom, but not one of them will enter as a factor until well toward the end of the year. Probably the most important additions to capacity, as cumulatively effective in the near future, are those which are taking place in every live concern, in the form of new labor-saving appliances, additional power, and the equalizing and rounding up of equipment. Then a number of the large concerns are putting up new plants, few of which, however, will add materially to 1900 output. Some old cripples are still limping into line, but they are not important either individually or in the aggregate, and will be snuffed out by the first breath of adversity.

The addition to the supply through importations of foreign material is unimportant. A number of orders have been placed abroad for special grades of pig iron, probably not more than 50,000 tons in all, and small lots of scrap and of finished products are coming in, but they do not cut any figure in the situation.

A more serious matter is the addition to the supply by the falling off of the export trade—serious from the point of view of an interruption of efforts to expand our markets. The export statistics do not as yet reveal this, because deliveries are still proceeding on orders taken long ago. The tonnage involved can not be stated because we have only returns of valuations in some very important lines. But for months our sales in the cruder forms have fallen off. Some large concerns have continued to take business. Thus we know that good orders have been booked for steel rails for Japan, for street rails for Great Britain, for wire rods for Canada, for structural material for many different countries, and for wire nails and barbed wire. In spite of this, the next six months will show a heavy decline in the exports of our heavier iron and steel, and the productive capacity thus made available will be engaged for our home markets.

A review of the whole field seems to indicate therefore that while it will require the continuance of a heavy demand to keep our plants from hunting for work anxiously, the outlook is fairly bright.

Earlier in the boom the whole trade was under a heavy nervous tension for fear that any day might bring a collapse before goods sold at good prices had been deliveres and paid for. That feeling has now disappeared because the fact is generally realized that increased costs will not allow ofo a sudden return to the level of 1898.

This increased cost is due to the fact that iron ore, coke, fuel, labor, transportation, and supplies have all advanced quite considerably. It should be recognized, however, that these advances, to the great concerns North and South, represent only relatively moderate sums, so that their margin of profit is very liberal indeed. In fact, if values hold, their returns for 1900 are likely to be even better than they were in 1899, with its large tonnage at low prices during the first half of the year.

A good many keen observers in the iron trade expect that the large consolidations will exert a steadying influence upon values, so that extensive declines will be averted. It is expected that these organizations will not only be willing, but will be able, to capture as large a share of the foreign markets as their tonnage requirements may dictate, even if sacrifices must be made. Every one of them is using a liberal share of the unexpected profits now accumulating to strengthen its position by outlays which will bring about ultimate lower costs and make it more formidable as a competitor in neutral markets.

On the other hand, it is prudent to recognize the fact that in many lines the consolidations overlap one another; that there are in their business many seeds of dissension aside from questions of antagonisms due to possible clashing personal ambitions between the leading spirits. These may lead to a recurrence of the fierce struggles for supremacy which are not unknown to the iron industry. In such times ordinary business considerations are apt to be thrown to the winds. C. KIRCHHOFF,

Editor of The Iron Age.

IN THE LAKE IRON REGION.

DULUTH, Minn., Dec. 31.—Never in the history of the American iron ore trade has there been such a year as that just passed. In every phase of development it has been unrivaled. It has surpassed all other years in that it has showed a mining total larger by 4,000,000 tons than the highest preceding year, and a total double that of any year up to 1894. It is a total, also, of more than the aggregate operation of the first twenty-seven years of the industry.

The control of mines and mining facilities and of ore transportation by lake under the steel making companies has become a commonplace.

Prices of ores have advanced 100 per cent. and wages of miners are higher than they have ever known since the industry became great. But in spite of the increased prices, mines have, as a rule, made little money during the year, having sold their ore at low figures before prosperity touched the industry.

With the increased demand for ore has come such a wave of interest in exploration and development as the business has never before known, and the stores of ore have been increased many millions of tons, while new fields in the lake region, in Canada, and in Wyoming have been examined for future development.

The year just closing has been phenomenal in the prosperity of the Lake Superior iron mining region. Not far from 17,000 men are now employed at the mines and explorations of the five ranges, a total nearly double that of five years ago, and owing to the newer and better facilities they are hoisting much more ore per man than ever in the past. Thousands of these men are not mining at all, but are merely drilling holes hundreds of feet deep, sinking pits, and running tunnels, in hopes of finding more ore. This search for ore is chiefly under the direction of the great steelmaking companies, who are using their present profits from manufacture to intrench themselves in the ore fields and to improve the physical condition of their works and their reserves of raw material. On the new Mesaba range there are now at work some fifty diamond drills, as well as a large number of crews using other methods of exploration, while on the Menominee are nearly as many, and from twenty to thirty are in use on both the Marquette and Vermillion ranges.

The close of 1899 sees a total of 152,000,000 gross tons (tons one-eighth larger than the ordinary ton of commerce) mined and shipped from the iron mines of Lake Superior. The year's total has been as close to 18,000,000 tons as it is possible to get in the absence of figures of shipment by railway.

The various ranges where the ore is mined have this year and to date from their original exploitation produced the following quantities, and their yearly averages are now exceeded by from two to four times.

Marquette	56,000,000	3,640,000
Menominee	31,000,000	3,150,000
Gogebic	28,300,000	2,750,000
Vermillion	13,500,000	1,760,000
Mesaba	22,600,000	6,600,000

The conditions for the coming year are the brightest that have ever dawned in the lake country. Prices have been fixed on a basis of $5.50 a ton for the ideal standard, against $2.00 a year ago. Even considering the advance in freights and wages this represents an added return to the mine of about $1.80. At this time there has been sold of the output for 1900 nearly as much ore as can be mined till well toward the close of the season, and there thus is assured a long and profitable season for mines and miners alike. That wages will remain at their present high level is assured also, and that they may go higher is very probable. It is likely that 20,000,000 tons of ore will be mined in the Lake Superior region the coming year.

The past year two mines in Minnesota surpassed all records that had ever been made in shipments—one with 1,070,000 tons and the other with 1,140,000. In 1892 three combined properties of the Gogebic range set the record at 1,086,000 tons, and this has been regarded as the record. Next year there will be five or six mines in Minnesota that will produce 1,000,000 or more tons each, and two or three in Michigan will do the same. A million tons of ore is the load of six big trains every day for the full shipping season, and to mine it, hoist it and ship it is an undertaking that would have been utterly impossible but for the most modern methods and machinery as well as the most thorough system and skill.

Railroads in the mining region are preparing for a larger traffic than ever before; those running to Minnesota mines alone are to be ready for an increased movement of about 3,000,000 tons, and it is likely that the output of the State will for the first time exceed that of Michigan. The year's output of the two States will be worth $70,000,000, delivered at docks in those States.

Review and Forecast of Iron Trade

By ARCHER BROWN,

of Rogers, Brown & Co., Iron, Cincinnati and New York.

We are completing the most prosperous and in all respects the most remarkable year in the history of the American iron trade. We are about to enter upon a year which will be quite as interesting, and, unless all signs fail, even more prosperous. The change we have passed through is little less than a revolution. Ten years ago the cost of American iron and steel was higher than in England and Germany. We did not even supply our own requirements, but were importing both raw and finished materials in substantial quantities. Mechanically we were superior to our competitors, but we had not conquered our own problems and were far from the leadership of the world. The Baring failure in 1890 started prices downward. The panic of 1893 did the rest. Then followed six years of as hard experience as a great industry ever passed through. Capital was wiped out by the millions. Furnaces and mills that were counted valuable properties became a liability rather than an asset.

But out of this period of storm and stress came the new era of American steel and iron making. Mechanically as well as commercially the whole industry underwent a revolution in those years. Necessity not only compelled economies, but aroused American energy and ingenuity, and forced better processes of manufacture. Those who still had capital to do with, and confidence in the future, replaced old plant with new, built everything stronger and heavier, and on most modern lines. Resources of raw materials were developed, and transportation problems worked out. At the end of the lean years, therefore, the American iron trade had been stripped of every element of weakness and was in splendid position to take advantage of the changed times that were to come. The terrible years of depression had been a blessing in disguise. It was demonstrated beyond a doubt that with our natural resources we could produce, when necessary, nearly every form of iron and steel in this country at a cost so low that we could lay the products down in England, Germany, and other Continental countries and undersell the home makers. The whole industry was thus put on a new and sure foundation.

The first signs of revival were noticed early in December, 1898. Bessemer pig was then selling at $9.75, Valley furnaces. Grey Forge, $9.25. Pittsburg and Birmingham, $8.50. Standard 2 foundry was worth $11 at Philadelphia and at Chicago. Lake Superior charcoal iron sold at $11.50 at Chicago. Steel billets brought $15.50 in Pittsburg. Steel rails, $17 at Eastern mills. Common bars sold at 95 cents at Youngstown. The rise began very slowly, and no one was more incredulous of the genuineness of the revival than the managers of the largest companies. As a consequence, contracts in great volume were taken in the early months of the current year at prices ranging from 10 to 25 per cent. advance on the average of 1898. At the close of the year not a few of the big concerns are dealing with remnants of these old contracts. Pig iron is being delivered in Pennsylvania to-day at $11 per ton, which costs the furnaces making it $13 to $15. Railroads are laying new rails at a cost of $17 or $18 and selling old scrap rails at $25. Stockholders in the various companies have wondered at the slow rise of the average net price of monthly shipments, and no little criticism is heard of the folly of those early low-priced contracts. Wisdom is easy after the fact.

The close of the year finds steel billets worth $33 at Pittsburg. Rails, $35 at Eastern mills. Common bars, $2.10 at Youngstown. Grey Forge, $16 at Birmingham and $21.25 at Pittsburg. Bessemer pig, $24.65 at Pittsburg.

Dec. 1, 1898, there were 195 furnaces in blast, with a weekly capacity of 235,000 tons. The year closes with a weekly production of 295,000 tons. The year began with a 12,000,000-ton pace, and ends at a 15,000,000-ton pace. The stocks at the furnaces and in warrant yards Jan. 1, 1899, were about 900,000 tons. The end of the year finds in furnaces and in warrant yards scarcely 110,000 tons. So rapid a shrinkage of stocks was never before witnessed in this or any other country. The year's production will prove to be close to 13,500,000 tons, a gain of about 17 per cent. over the previous year. This percentage of gain, it might be added, was almost exactly foretold in the early Spring by close observers of the conditions surrounding furnace production. As our exports of pig iron for the year scarcely exceeded 200,000 tons, and there was practically no importation, it is easy to arrive at our actual domestic consumption of pig, viz., 14,250,000 tons. Twenty years ago the Hon. Abram S. Hewitt in a public address predicted that in 1900 the United States would produce 15,000,000 tons of iron and the world's production would reach 35,000,000 tons. It seemed a prophecy as rash as its fulfillment now seems striking.

Before turning from the record of the closing year to the prospects for the new year, it will be interesting to see what has taken place in England and Germany, our great competitors on the other side of the ocean. Great Britain produced in 1898 8,631,151 tons. Latest statistics indicate that the current year's output will but slightly exceed this figure. At the beginning of the year the total of stocks in public stores in Great Britain was 686,000 tons; Dec. 1 it was 557,000 tons, a decrease of 123,000 tons. As stocks were going off, however, in December about 1,500 tons a day, it would indicate a total reduction for the year of something over 20 per cent., leaving the aggregate stocks the lowest Great Britain has seen for over a decade. Warrants at the close of 1898 were bringing 48s. 10d. for Scotch and 43s. 6d. for Middlesborough No. 3. The market reached 73s. in the former and 71s. in the latter early in the Summer, but is now ruling around 67s. and 65s., respectively. In Germany the production of 1898 was 7,232,988 tons. The increase of this year is estimated at about 1,000,000 tons. The percentage of the United States in the total world's product in 1898 was about 33 per cent. This year it will be over 36 per cent., and in 1900 will easily reach 40 per cent. Mr. Carnegie reminded the British metal trade in an interview published in London some months ago that they would find themselves handicapped before long for want of raw material. The ready response of the United States to the enlarged demand contrasts sharply with the slight increase in output in England under a rising market almost equal to our own.

Looking at the prospects for the new year, some things can be predicted with tolerable certainty. Other things that we would all like very much to know about are in doubt. It is pretty certain, for example, that there will be a very large increase of production of iron ores, coke, pig iron, steel billets, and rails, and in nearly all finished forms of iron and steel. Three things as it appears at the close of the year may operate to check this expansion: First, undue political agitation. Second, continuation of financial disturbance in Europe which has so disturbed our security markets in December. Third, anti-trust demonstrations in Congress. These clouds do not appear large or threatening at this writing, and unless they take more formidable shape the trade will be confronted with the fairest skies that have been before it for many a long year.

The question constantly asked from the head of Lake Superior to Alabama and Texas is whether current prices will last. Taking the whole trade together, they are easily 100 per cent. higher than a year ago. It is natural to distrust the permanency of so great an improvement. While the year will open with the country bare of stocks, (the entire available supply of pig iron being less than four days' requirements of the mills and foundries,) and while our furnaces are sold an average of six months ahead, there are still open questions. Will the high prices check building enterprises?

Will the increase of production overtake the actual consumptive demand? Will the powerful combinations have the effect to steady prices if weakness sets in? The answer to these questions, time only can give. However, it can be said on the first point that the testimony of a wide range of consumers is that there is no real sign of falling off in their business because of the high prices they must ask. At the same time it is admitted that a very large amount of engineering, structural, and other work is deferred because of high cost estimates.

On the second point, the increase of production in spite of strenuous effort in every department of the trade will be a less percentage than that of 1898. Nothing but a severe check to confidence is likely to hinder a proportionate increase in consumption. It must be borne in mind that it would take nearly 10 per cent increase in the output of pig iron to replace the 1,000,000 tons of stocks exhausted since 1897.

On the third point, we are dealing with conditions too new to base intelligent calculations upon. It is certain that a wholesale consolidation of small interests, which until this year have been in fierce competition with each other, will remove one of the worst evils that the iron business felt in the past. Strong companies free from debt and with ample working capital have taken the place of comparatively weak concerns. There is a disposition to harmony of action between the great interests, and it is fair to believe that the ordinary vicissitudes of the trade will be dealt with more ably, intelligently, and conservatively than in the past.

A word in reference to the rapid increase of cost. From the mine owner, through the vessel owner to the railroad handling the raw material, the labor at the mines and at the furnaces, the railroads handling the finished product—through the whole chain there is a demand for some of the profits that are supposed to be going. The latest and best estimate is that Bessemer pig, which was made on last year's prices of lake ore and Connellsville coke at under $10 per ton, will under new contracts cost at least $16 per ton. Foundry and forge iron in the districts supplied by lake ores and Pennsylvania coke will cost about as much. Coke has doubled in price and is hard to obtain at full figures. Lake ores are about 80 per cent. higher. Railroad rates have risen an average of perhaps 25 per cent. The rise of labor in mines and at furnaces will probably average 30 per cent. It is easy to see that no considerable decline could set in without putting manufacturers on the wrong side of the account.

A very significant question is what the bearing of all this will be on our export trade. It is clear that we shall not do much in exporting pig iron, but the writer has always maintained that pig iron is not a natural product for us to export. Our victories in the foreign countries will be won in the various finished forms of iron and steel in which American energy and ingenuity have achieved success. If the record of the year closing is taken as a guide, we shall maintain our export business. In October our iron and steel exports were $9,593,453, or at the rate of over $100,000,000 a year. This is largely in the form of agricultural machinery, locomotives, wire, bicycles, iron and wood working machinery, and many other highly finished products. Some of the largest machinery manufacturers in Chicago, Cincinnati, &c., report contracts for next year in excess of those of the past year, and at fairly satisfactory prices. English and German exports are increasing, but their cost has risen almost as much as our own. German coke, for instance, is contracted by the syndicates for 1900 at prices 60 per cent. higher than in 1899. Practically the whole German product of pig iron for 1900 is also contracted. England, as shown above, is using at home and in her colonies, more than she is making, and is taking freely from us. In Great Britain also the cost has risen sharply, both through higher labor and dearer coke. The belief in Glasgow is that with the ugly Boer war ended, a period of great activity would be seen in the English iron trade.

Looking at the whole field, there is surely a superb opportunity before the iron and steel makers of America in the opening year of the new century, and there are possibilities for the years to follow which the imagination can hardly deal with.

Revival of Iron Industry.

Written for THE NEW YORK TIMES

By E. J. BUFFINGTON,

President Illinois Steel Co., Chicago, Ill.

The year 1899 will show the largest tonnage of manufactured products in the history of the Illinois Steel Company. This means that in the twelve months we have turned out the largest tonnage in pig iron and also the largest tonnage in finished products that the company has ever done in a corresponding period. It will doubtless be found that the same conditions apply to other concerns in our line of business, and that the year 1899 is to be set down as marking a phenomenal revival in the iron and steel industry.

Prices have risen proportionately fast, and during the year just closed have been favorable to large profits for the manufacturers. The results show not merely how the iron and steel business has expanded from the depths of depression to the floodtide of prosperity, but in a broader degree how the general revival of prosperous conditions has proved a stimulus to general manufacturing industries and to railroad betterments and extensions.

Everything points to a continuance of these high values for pig iron and finished steel products. The volume of business already booked for 1900—which means actual sales—is so large as to guarantee that there will be no diminution in values for an indefinite period. These contracts for the year's delivery also guarantee the constant employment of our plants up to their full capacity. They indicate as great, if not greater, volume of consumption next year as during the present one, and therefore the employment of all plants to their extreme capacity. As a matter of fact, the estimated product for the coming year is practically sold out. This means that there is continuous employment of labor ahead in our special field of industry, and, moreover, profitable labor. Wages have been increased several times during the past year, and when compared with corresponding tonnage output in former years, are now at as high a figure as they ever were in the history of the industry. Specifically, wages all along the line are higher than they have been for many years, and the average workman has more continuous employment.

The export business in iron and steel was limited during 1899 on account of the enormous increase in home consumption. The same conditions will probably prevail during the coming year. In spite of this limitation of supply, the foreign demand continues good. Several foreign Governments are now in the American market seeking to place large orders for railroad supplies. They will probably have difficulty in placing them. The domestic trade is the most profitable, and is taken care of first. The indications for next year are that American railroad companies will spend more for construction and equipment than ever before in a similar period. This will be done in spite of higher prices, as the net earnings of the companies will permit large expenditures for betterments and extensions. The construction of steel cars for railroad companies will be a considerable item in the year's volume of business. The increasing adoption of steel cars on the principal railroads means a corresponding change to heavier construction generally—heavier bridges, and heavier locomotives, all making fresh demands on the iron and steel manufacturers.

As for supplies of raw material, we were embarrassed during the past year, in common with other companies, by the prevailing shortage of railroad cars. These conditions may continue to some extent this year, although the railroad companies are making strenuous efforts to remedy them. There is likewise an energetic preparation for a vessel-carrying capacity sufficient to move the raw material from the iron mines to our plants. New fleets of ore carriers are being constructed for the coming season, and the indications are that all demands will be met.

The capacity of plants cannot be largely increased within the year, as machine shops are busy to the limit in making betterments on existing plants. We might plan extensive additions, but have no guarantee when they could be made. Nevertheless the continuance of present trade prosperity will mean increased capacities when we are able to make them.

Every country on the globe is feeling the impetus of increased consumption. Business was at such a low ebb for several years prior to 1899 that it is rational to conclude it will take several years for the world's supply to reach a normal basis. As a matter of fact, the suddenness of revival in the iron and steel industry from extreme depression to unexampled prosperity, found all the manufacturers more or less unprepared to meet the changed conditions. They are now meeting the situation, and with characteristic American energy will be even better prepared in the future to care for all the business that comes.

E. J. BUFFINGTON.

Chicago, Ill., Dec. 29, 1899.

SWEDEN AND NORWAY.

Sweden and Norway, since the beginning of 1899, have been suffering from a shortage of money. The condition cannot be called a panic, for work is plenty, factories are going at full blast, and wages are as high as they have ever been, if not higher. The prices of all commodities are at least 10 to 15 per cent. higher than they were last year. It is hard to determine whether the dearth of money is altogether due to speculation or to other causes. Private bankers say that the Riksbank in Sweden and the Norwegian bank should not have advanced their discount rates so suddenly and to so high a rate as 7 per cent. without due notice to the trade. The bankers criticised regard their action as having prevented the continuation of wild speculation, and insist that it has kept gold in the countries. The rise in the discount rate has to some extent crippled trade, but, on the whole, was a good move, in the estimation of conservative men. Many large failures have taken place in Norway, particularly in the paper trade, and not a few in Sweden. At present the financial atmosphere seems to be clearing, and cheaper money is in sight.

Full reports from Sweden and Norway of the imports and exports have not yet been published. Those for Norway for the first half of the year—January to July—show that the imports for 1899 were $31,291,750, as compared with $24,210,000 for the corresponding period in 1898. The exports, which amounted to $36,537,825 in the first half of 1898, were $40,652,200 in the first half of 1899. The United States obtained a share of the improved business of Norway, for the exports to Sweden and Norway combined increased during the ten months ending Oct. 31 about $4,000,000, and the imports from those countries were greater by $200,000 than in the like ten months of 1898.

The importations into Norway of flour and grain have largely increased in consequence of poor harvests at home. Importations for the latter half of the year have not been so great, but the crops did not promise well, and importations may be increased again. Some of the increases in importations have been in machinery, rails, coal, pork products, and raw sugars, owing to the failure of the sugar-beet crops. Some of the increases noted in the first half of the year are given:

By WILLIAM F. KING,

President The Merchants' Association of New York.

The conditions that prevail during the current year remind me in many respects of the conditions attending the prosperous season that set in after the depression following the panic of 1873 to 1876 had worked itself out.

Prosperity has entered into every line of industry in the United States. The producer from the soil has had unusual prosperity, as have the workers in mines, mills, and workshops. The tendency of all lines of manufactured goods is upward.

The closing of the year with an erratic break in the stock market is in line with the conditions referred to above in the close of the decade of the seventies. In those years we had suffered from the overbuilding of railroads. The interest of the bonds of the roads had to be paid, largely, out of the hauling of the raw material with which to build the roads, and it took many years for the country to catch up with that overbuilding. To-day these same roads are worked to the utmost capacity. The water has been squeezed out and many roads which had not been productive in earnings have been organized on a sound and substantial basis. Wall Street is now experiencing a similar condition in another direction.

The formation of industrial corporations, many of which, I fear, are overcapitalized, coincident with the starting of many new trust companies, which seem to be beyond the current demand for such institutions, has created a spirit of unrest and uncertainty in many directions. This is apt to continue until such industrial corporations and the kind of trust companies I refer to have been weeded out, or until those corporations which have been overcapitalized have gone through a process of reorganization, as have the railroads, and are placed upon a sound financial basis. The old trust companies, which have been managed on a conservative basis, have a sound business foundation and have secured a large clientele among the healthy railroads and corporations in the country, and have the confidence of other financial institutions and the financial community. But some of the new companies which have been springing up recently, and which, in order to attract business, have adopted unbusinesslike methods, have taken speculative accounts and entered into wild schemes which have been ruinous to their promoters and their stockholders, must be reorganized and start anew under different conditions. These are about the only clouds in the horizon to-day.

1900 promises to be one of the most prosperous years the country has ever seen. It must not be forgotten that during the great depression extending from 1893 to the Fall of 1897 the country has been building a sound foundation. During this period the farmer has been economical to the extreme. But now, with the existing enormous demands for the products of the soil, it has become possible for him to relieve himself of his old debts, pay his mortgages, and begin to refurnish his home, reclothe his family, and replenish his barn, secure new wagons, new implements, and even indulge in some of the luxuries of life. The same is true of the workers in the mines, mills, and workshops. They had been working on one-half time or not at all, but now has come to them plenty of work at increased wages, and they can once more supply themselves with their needs and requirements. The storekeepers had been conservative in their purchases on account of the limited demand from farmers and others, preferring not to stock up with goods which could only be sold on long credit, with slight prospect of payment. Now the conditions are changed, and they must meet a most unusual demand for goods. They will now be able to reap the benefit of the advance in prices of all lines of manufactured goods. The mills to-day are rushed to their utmost capacity. Our system of protective tariff which has developed the manufacturing industries all over the country is now showing its effects in the prosperity of our people.

The demand for merchandise is healthy. There has been only a limited amount of speculation in commercial lines, and the country is absorbing the manufactured goods as fast as they are placed on the market. The only danger we face is the too great expansion of the mills through building and adding on, so that when the normal condition of trade returns we may suffer from overproduction. I do not look for anything of that kind during 1900. Then, again, the demand for America's manufactured goods from all parts of the world has so enormously increased during the past two years that there is little danger of a surplus in the near future.

The tendency of commercial money will be a 6 per cent. market, on account of the large amount needed for legitimate business purposes. There will be a tendency to speculate, owing to the general prosperity and the gradually advancing prices of all classes of merchandise, but thus far that tendency has been noticed only to a slight extent.

I am glad that the prospects are good for a bill passing both houses of Congress this Winter which will put our currency upon a sound basis. This will take this subject out of politics once and for all. The business community, as well as the banking and financial community, will express a great relief at this. The United States at large will know where it stands, and this currency question as a disturbing factor will cease. It ought never to have been in politics at all.

The present Congress will have many important subjects before it besides sound money and colonial expansion.

The first is a proper Consular Service. All our Consuls ought to be men of business rather than of political ability, to aid in finding markets for our manufactured goods all over the world.

Second—A Minister of Commerce for the Cabinet.

Third—The subsidization of an American merchant marine. The enormous amount of money paid annually in freight charges to foreign corporations is certainly against the prosperity and interest of the country.

Fourth—The commercial treatment of our new Territories. They should be placed on the same basis as were Florida, Louisiana, and California. They should have a Territorial Government and the free interchange of commerce on the same basis. This action should be taken immediately. We want the products of their soil in exchange for our manufactured goods. This is a very important question, and more far-reaching than may at first be realized by our members of Congress from the interior States. It must not be forgotten that every State in our Union is self-sustaining; that in each are found all those products necessary to maintain itself. Each State teems with manufacturing industries, and new ones are springing up in all directions. Each trade centre in the different sections is striving, all its might and main, not only to retain [illegible] through new and permanent outlets for goods via water from Atlantic and Pacific Coast cities, thus equalizing the conditions. With a continued good demand for the products of the mills and workshops, such an outlet would mean good prices for the products of the farm and prosperity for all, from the lowest to the highest, and for a larger period of time than though consumption were limited to home demand.

The question of expansion is one that will be settled definitely once and for all at the coming Presidential election in no uncertain way. With our new colonies, Puerto Rico, the Philippines, and, let us hope, Cuba; with new ports in the Orient and an open door in China, with an aggressive policy in America, unbounded prosperity may be looked forward to during our onward march, making us the foremost Nation of the world. Coal Trade Review and Outlook.

By FREDERICK E. SAWARD,

Editor of The Coal Trade Journal.

I do not remember many years in my connection, for a third of a century, with the business when trade in coal has been so active as it was during the past year. With the beginning of the year there was an unusual demand for fuel, owing in part to the fact that the Winter months of 1898-9 were of more than usual severity, and there was thus a vast increase in the tonnage required for domestic purposes in all parts of the country; so much was this the case that a profitable price was had even from the start—measured from the standpoint of former years.

The anthracite tonnage has grown to its greatest proportions, and the total shipments amount to 47,250,000 tons. We have made a new record of monthly production during July, August, and September, but with all the extraordinary business conditions which surrounded this trade, the tonnage for the fourth quarter of the year is not up to that of the record-making months in some years previous, proving that there is a limit to the carrying facilities.

Prices were very much better during 1899, and there was a nearer approach, by actual sales, to the prices current than in six years preceding. The peculiar features were the "bringing up" of chestnut to about the same price as stove, and the goodly rates secured for the smaller sizes of hard coal. The market was fully 50 cents a ton better at the close than at the opening of the year. The month of August was a most critical time for the trade in every branch, but after the middle of the month the situation improved, doubtless because of the better industrial outlook, then at its brightest. There was an accumulation on all side tracks, but the companies recognized that the time when it would be needed was not far distant, and at least some of them grew more firm in asking the list price. This courageous act brought about the September buying in unprecedented volume, which occurred in both the East and West. An advance in the list and actual price was made Sept. 1, which resulted in something better than the July list being obtained at once, and later on the full net amount of the September circular was obtained quite generally, with 25 cents additional for chestnut coal in many cases.

It is in the bituminous or soft-coal interest that there has been the most marked change; the output of the United States is now rapidly approaching 200,000,000 net tons per annum, and the completed figures for 1899 will doubtless show a tonnage within 5 per cent. of that tremendous amount. As a result of the great demand for fuel for industrial and other purposes, the price has risen 50 per cent. The contrast with the preceding year has been very marked, and it is pleasing to note that a continuance of the large tonnage and high prices during 1900 is practically assured. The changed conditions have been brought about entirely through the increased requirements of the usual consumers of soft coal, practically nothing having been gained in the way of export trade or by any displacement of anthracite. In fact, in a number of New England and Eastern places the small sizes of anthracite were cheaper during the Fall than bituminous, owing to the great demand for the latter, and if any change occurred in the fuel used it was through anthracite displacing bituminous.

One of the most important features of the year in soft-coal circles was the formation of the two great concerns organized to carry on the business of mining and selling the product of coal mines in the Pittsburg district—these being known as the Pittsburg Coal Company, for the rail business, and the Monongahela River Coal and Coke Company, for the river business. These two companies acquired by purchase the majority of the properties of the former operators, and thus eliminated that old and very troublesome element—undue competition for business. Since their formation these two companies have put the business of this district in such reputable shape as it had not been before; they have also been fortunate in having the boom in general business, for that has given them the opportunity of marking up values, and these are now 50 per cent. above the preceding year's result.

In Ohio the soft coal situation has been much simplified by the reorganization of the Hocking Valley Railroad lines and the Wheeling and Lake Erie. There is also the probability of the Ohio Central lines being brought in close affiliation with the Hocking Valley in the near future. The sale of the Cleveland, Canton and Southern to the Cleveland, Lorain and Wheeling, and the sale of the Cleveland, Akron and Columbus [illegible]

Coke has had its banner year in price and production. Prices have advanced 75 to 80 per cent. during the past year, and production is about 40 per cent. greater. It is reasonable to place the price of coke for all new contracts at $3.50 a ton for furnace coke and $5 to $5.25 a ton for foundry coke at the Connellsville ovens. Pittsburg reports place the price of foundry coke on scattered orders as high as $6.50 a ton.

There has been some little expansion in the export trade in soft coal, with our old customers of Mexico, the West Indies, and South America increasing their purchases. We have done something abroad, as values there have advanced even more than at home. There was a large increase in the receipts of provincial coal, not only at Boston, but at other ports, owing to the scarcity of American coal, and the high price ruling for the latter gave Nova Scotia the chance to do a profitable business even after paying duty on the coal.

The prospects for the coming year are of the brightest for all grades of coal, and the various companies transporting both anthracite and bituminous will reap the benefit therefrom greater than in many recent years. The history of 1899 shows that in times of prosperity there is a market for hard coal limited only by means of transportation, and that $4, free on board, at New York, is readily paid at such times. It has also been made clear that manufacturing is after all the governing factor of the coal trade. Cold weather counts for nothing if the factories are idle; throwing millions of tons of soft coal on the open market, making railroad business light, and leaving employes without the means of buying such fuel as they need. Under ordinary conditions the railroads and steamships use half of the bituminous product of the United States, and it is therefore evident that when freight and passenger traffic decreases an immense amount of coal is no longer required for locomotive use, and prices are forced down by the efforts of producers to market the same tonnage that they could formely dispose of under normal conditions. Now all adverse conditions are things of the past, and, save for the fear of overproduction, which as a reality is yet in the distance, there is nothing to disturb the dealers in coal. And we hope that expansion will so broaden our markets that our factories shall all continue busy and the coal man be allowed to continue in the sunshine of prosperity. FREDERICK E. SAWARD.

SOUTHERN COTTON INDUSTRY.

SAVANNAH, Ga., Dec. 30.—Judging from the information given out by the cotton men of the South, the progress of cotton-mill building in the Southern States during the past year has been marked, but it is anticipated that the coming year will eclipse the record made by that just closed. This is the view expressed by several of the men most prominent and best posted on the subject. Those mills now in operation are prosperous, and many towns that have no mill are arranging to have one or more erected. The States of Georgia, Alabama, and South Carolina are those in which the small factories are being pushed. In Georgia many small towns of from 3,000 to 6,000 inhabitants are either agitating the question of building a mill or are already at work.

Prominent among the cotton factory men of the South is G. Gunby Jordan, who is largely interested in some of the mills about Columbus, Ga., where the best-known mills of the South are located. Mr. Jordan thinks that the rapid strides now being made in this particular industry mean better times for Dixie. He cannot see that any harm can come from new mills, and, like hundreds of other Southerners, is impressed with the belief that the nearer the cotton mill is to the cotton field the better it will be for the farmer, the mill owner, and the consumer.

D. A. Tompkins of Charlotte, N. C., another gentleman who has done a great deal of work in developing small mills, not only in his own State, but throughout the entire Southland, says the mills are paying well, with hardly an exception; and sees no reason why more mills should not be erected.

Cuyler Smith of Atlanta, Ga., who has had as much experience as any young man in the South in working up new companies for the purpose of building mills and in seeing that they were started off properly, is an enthusiast on the subject. Mr. Smith is probably directly responsible for more mills in operation in Georgia than any other one man. In speaking of the situation, he had this to say:

"This is the beginning of the era of the South's greatest prosperity. Her people are awake to their great advantages and are taking up the question of transforming our section of the country from a dependent agricultural region into a free and wealthy manufacturing Commonwealth. The greatest activity is manifested in the building of cotton factories. During 1898 there were sixty-eight built in the Southern States, operating about 1,000,000 spindles. This year's total has not yet been compiled, but the maps in my office show that this record will be surpassed when we cast up the totals for the year. To-day Georgia has seventy-two cotton mills in operation, while eight are not running from one cause or the other. These mills operate 810,000 spindles and represent an investment of $12,327,200. They employ 19,007 persons and annually pay out millions in wages and salaries. The number of looms in operation is estimated at 21,650, though these figures are not exact. We have twenty knitting mills in operation, and as many more are either building or have companies organized to build them.

"A general view of the map of Georgia before me shows that there are 38 of the 137 counties which have cotton mills and 14 counties that have knitting mills. The mills in operation are nearly all in fine condition, being equipped with machinery of the latest and best pattern. Many of them have enlarged this year, using accrued profits saved up for this purpose. I know this to be true of the Monroe, Eagle & Phoenix, and Crown Mills. Their earnings are large, running from 12 per cent. to 60 per cent. I am not misinformed as to these figures, as my information comes from private sources and [illegible] well as the financial plans already involved.

[illegible] will be declared, and the Crown people of Dalton, Ga., gave their stockholders 10 per cent. in cash and 25 per cent. in stock, representing that amount in added improvements to the mill, paid for out of the earnings of the company, saved year by year. I just believe that there is a good mill in Georgia, rightly organized, whose stock is not worth par to-day, and many of them have not a dollar's worth of stock that is worth less than 150. I know of a man who desired to invest $60,000 in one mill and could not buy a share of stock at any price. There have been no failures of cotton mills in Georgia during the past year, though several—two, I think, in all—have sold out to investors at a small loss. These sales were the result of buying old machinery years ago and the desire of their stockholders to sell rather than put in new machinery. No mill has failed outright so far as I know.

"As to the new mills organized during the past year, I know of fifteen in this State alone, among them the new duck mill of the Hogansville Manufacturing Company, at Hogansville; the mill of the Pelham Manufacturing Company, at Pelham, and others in the Piedmont region, which seems especially favored for manufacturing. I have organized seven companies to build mills in this State, and this was done from the 1st of October to date. Their capital stock runs from $50,000, the Cordele Cotton Mills, at Cordele, to the $100,000 the Jasper Cotton Mills, at Monticello. A majority of the stocks in these corporations is owned in the towns and counties in which they are located. All classes of citizens are interested in the mills, from the farmers, who take one share and two years to pay for it, to the merchants and country bankers, who take ten to fifty and pay for them in cash. It is no 'boom' that has struck us, but a steady, lasting development. Our people are tired of foreign domination of the cotton market, and this is their way of breaking up the speculators in the great markets from wringing the crop from our hands and putting their prices on it.

"Look at my maps here in the office. Those pins mean the mills in operation, those building, those adding to their plants, locations where mill building has been agitated, and towns where a company has been formed to build a mill. You see from them that there are over ninety towns in Georgia in which there is either building, a company organized to build, or a definite effort being made to build a cotton factory. Of course, all of them will not build within a year, but they are coming on in due time.

"Our mills usually get Superintendents from the North and East, as well as their Secretaries and Treasurers. The pay of these men is good, away ahead of what they are now receiving in the North, and Southerners can afford it because they are earning from 12 per cent. to 60 per cent. on their mills, and they believe that the best men, well paid, is good economy.

"Another thing in regard to Southern mills is the power," continued Mr. Smith. "I have located several on water courses that will furnish all the power needed, and it is a great saving in the cost of steam to use the refuse of the large sawmills. This will be done in several South Georgia cotton mills. Labor is cheap and abundant, and no one ever saw a more docile lot of people than the Georgia operatives. They are not the kind of people that "strike"—they are the individual and not the mass; they adjust all their differences as individuals, and do not appeal to their fellows for aid. We want the world to know that the 'New South' that Henry Grady spoke of years ago is here, and the cotton mill is one of its greatest features."

Brewing Trade Is Troubled.

By A. E. J. TOVEY,

Editor of The Brewers' Journal.

For the fiscal year 1879, the aggregate sales of lager beer and ale amounted to 10,589,937 barrels; during the fiscal year ended June 30, 1899, the total sales were 36,581,114 barrels, an increase of 25,991,177 barrels, or nearly 200 per cent. during a period of twenty years.

In the face of this favorable showing a review of the year that has just closed, from the standpoint of the brewing trade, accentuates the existence of conditions that are of very serious significance to the future progress and welfare of this interest. For the third time in twenty years the sales of malt liquors show a decrease during the fiscal year ended June 30, as compared with the preceding twelve months, but with this important difference in regard to prevailing conditions. In previous years, the falling off was reasonably attributable to a temporarily depressed state of business generally, through which the principal industries of the United States severely suffered; the decrease of 912,192 barrels in the sales of malt liquors during the fiscal year ended June 30, 1899, can be ascribed to no such cause. The commercial and manufacturing interests of the Nation never enjoyed greater prosperity than during the year just completed, and the unfavorable conditions in the brewing trade must be attributed to the excessive taxation.

In Louisiana, for instance, the sales of malt liquors have decreased during the past fiscal year 51,973 barrels, or upward of 20 per cent. of the total output, which is due to the substitution for heavily taxed lager beer and ale as popular beverages, of untaxed domestic wines and cider, which contain a much larger percentage of alcohol, and are sold at a much lower price than malt liquors. At present there are strong indications that there will be a considerable increase in the sales of lager beer and ale during the year 1900, attributable to the phenomenal prosperity of the country, especially the manufacturing interests, mechanics and the laboring classes being the principal consumers. This increase would be greatly augmented by the repeal of the war tax.

The ruinous competition, which has steadily increased, and during the past year has reached a disastrous degree of intensity, is responsible, to a certain extent, for the unsatisfactory conditions prevailing throughout the country in the brewing business. Through the efforts of an army of unscrupulous schemers and option hunters to effect the consolidation, usually for speculative or Wall Street purposes, of the breweries in various sections of the country, the trade has also suffered serious disturbances during the past year. With very few exceptions—and those where combinations were desirable on economical grounds—their efforts have been futile, and the only results they have accomplished have been to unsettle trade conditions and encourage an exaggerated idea of property values and profits. The disastrous results of British investments in American brewery properties, now at the lowest ebb of value, should be a warning to those invited to invest in similar enterprises. A. E. J. TOVEY.

Franco-American Trade.

By ED. M. GREEN,
Secretary American Chamber of Commerce, Paris, France.

The year 1899 has been a remarkable one in the history of the foreign trade of France. The exports were the largest ever recorded, while the imports showed a great decrease as compared with 1898. The official returns for the whole year have not as yet been published, but for the eleven months ending Nov. 30 the figures are:

Decrease in 1899			232,091

Articles of food	606,537	592,407	14,130
Postal parcels	161,243	142,201	19,042
Increase in 1899			432,693

*Thousands. †Decrease.

Regarding the imports, the decrease in the value is but natural, as the grain crops of France are abundant, and more than are necessary for the consumption of the country. The increase in the imports of raw materials is due to the fact that the manufacturing industries of France are working to their full capacity, and in general are prosperous. The exports show the handsome increase of 432,693,000 francs ($84,000,000) as compared with the corresponding period of 1898, a gain of over 14 per cent. It will be noticed that the exports of manufactures amount to one-half of the value of the total exports of France, the figures showing a gain of over 16 per cent. on the exports of manufactures in eleven months of 1899. In this connection a careful scrutiny of the details discloses a fact which brings joy to the hearts of the French taxpayers, and that is the development of the trade with the French colonies, which have been a great burden on the finances of the country up to the present time.

France is undoubtedly very prosperous at the present time. Money is comparatively easy; the bank rate is 3½ per cent., while in London it is 6 per cent. and likely to go to 7 per cent. The shares of the leading banks are higher than one year ago, notably those of the Bank of France, now quoted at 4,000 francs, against 3,500 francs last year. The railroads show an increase of earnings of some 40,000,000 francs as compared with last year, and are so busy that they cannot handle the business offered, their rolling stock being inadequate despite recent large purchases of locomotives and cars.

The iron and steel industries have more orders on hand than they can fill, not only from private sources, but also for the Government.

The silk and wool manufactories are extremely busy with their orders for the Spring of 1900, and the cotton weavers are doing remarkably well, the shipments of cotton goods to Algeria, Tunis, Senegal, Madagascar, and Indo-China being enormous.

The wheat crop of 1899 amounted to 368,000,000 bushels, the largest ever harvested since 1874, when it gave 377,000,000 bushels. As the consumption of wheat in France amounts to only 340,000,000 bushels, and as the crop of 1898 gave an excess of some 25,000,000 bushels, there is at present a plethora of wheat, and prices are very low. The acreage for the next crop is estimated at the same as last year, and the conditions of the Winter wheat crop are all that could be desired.

The wine crop of 1899 was enormous, being 1,265,540,000 gallons, an increase of some 413,000,000 gallons over the crop of 1898. The value of the crop of 1899 is estimated at 1,249,385,000 francs, or, say, $243,000,000. Scarcity of bread and wine has often given trouble in France, but there is no danger to be feared on that score at present.

It is of interest to note what nations have participated in the foreign trade of France; they are classed in the following order, according to the volume of business:

Imports into France—England, United States, Argentine Republic, Germany, Belgium, Spain, Russia, Italy, Switzerland, Turkey, and Brazil.

At the end of 1898 the imports from the United States into France were larger than from any other country, while in 1899 England has taken the lead, and the United States occupies the second place. It is true that the enviable position occupied by the United States in 1898 was due to her enormous grain crops and to the large purchases which France was obliged to make of breadstuffs, but leaving aside exceptional cases, there is no reason whatever why the United States should not occupy the first place in the trade with France. Leaving out raw materials, the export trade of the United States to France is in its infancy. American goods are liked in France on account of their quality, and if the treaty of commerce is ratified by Congress the outlook for the exports of the United States to France could not be better. England, Germany, Belgium, and, in fact, nearly every country except the United States, have treaties of commerce with France, and thus pay on their goods the minimum tariff rates of duty, which are on an average from 25 to 30 per cent. lower than the maximum rates. In spite of this handicap of 25 per cent. the United States ship more machinery and machines to France than any other country. What would be the result if the United States enjoyed the same advantages as other nations? No answer is needed.

In 1898 France imported:

	Total. Francs.	From U.S. Francs.
Furniture and woodwork	9,400,000	1,376,000
Linen and jute fabrics	10,000,000	2,697
India rubber articles and gutta percha	13,100,000	359,000
Chemical products	4,581,000	540,000
Medicinal roots, herbs, &c.	14,249,000	320,000
Carriages, &c., not including bicycles	1,922,000	405,000
Clocks, watches, &c.	15,400,000	240,000
Jewelry, &c.	14,300,000	.....
Wines	309,000,000	.....
Coal	207,000,000	.....

In the above list the share of the United States is very small, and could be greatly increased. Especially in machinery and railway supplies is the field great and the prospects bright. At this moment the French railroads require to purchase over 200 locomotives. Neither Germany nor England will get the orders. The French shops are too busy and the orders will probably go to the United States.

In soliciting business in France it is of the utmost importance that American merchants should make out their prices in the money and weights of the country—i. e., use the metric system—otherwise the prices are not understood, the catalogues thrown away, and no business results.

There are two measures which will do more than anything else to increase the trade of the United States with France, a treaty of commerce and a parcel-post service. The advantages of the former are unquestionable, the latter has been tried in many countries—notably in Great Britain and France—and has been an important factor in the development of the export trade.

Industrial Aspect of Germany.

Written for THE NEW YORK TIMES
By JAMES C. MONAGHAN,
United States Consul at Chemnitz.

Germany has 54,000,000 people. Its population is increasing at the rate of 700,000 or 800,000 souls every twelve months. It is a country not nearly as large as Texas. Her importations of food products reach $250,000,000 annually. In no year do her farmers furnish anything like the necessary supply. Huge quantities of cereals go in from Russia, Roumania, and from this country. One of the best books written in recent years on this subject (I refer to Mr. Carl Simons's "The Export of Products of Agriculture and Agricultural Industries from the United States of America; Agriculture in Germany,") says that agricultural products from the United States compete severely with those of native growth. &c. Three times in five years, in the days of Prince Bismarck, duties were put on cereals imported into Germany. The purpose seemed to be as much political as it was economical. Its object was to aid the Agrarians in their efforts to compete with this country. This was not unnatural. No one found fault except a few grain men in the empire who sold German grain to England, replacing it in Germany with American. Most of the bakers and millers balked a bit, because the soft German grain gave results in no way comparable with those obtained from a mixture of German and United States grains. Germany's 1899 food crop is only an average one, hence we may look for another $250,000,000 to $300,000,000 worth from foreign parts. In the contest for foreign markets we shall win once we adopt the methods that make for so much in Germany's own efforts among other people. Experienced representatives, speaking German, should go to Hamburg, Berlin, and Leipsic. There is no reason why we should not sell Germany a very large part of the cereals needed to piece out her annual supply, not only for 1900, but for the years to come. Last year Russia led us by huge quantities.

Germany, all Europe, offers an enormous market, if properly worked, for American apples. The efforts to introduce them in 1896, or rather to give them a wider market than they had held hitherto, was crowned with too great a success. It aroused a rivalry that resorted to all kinds of concealed efforts to hinder their importation. The farmers found it impossible to put the native product on the market at old prices or at prices that made competition possible. Microscopic investigations were brought in to find a fault. The scale (San José louse) was found. An effort is being made by the Board of Trade, or by big dealers in Hamburg, to get over recent practically prohibitive legislation or regulations in regard to American apples. The regulations referred to require a thorough inspection of American apples. These regulations removed, German housewives will turn to our apples with pleasure. If we wish, however, to hold and to increase the output we must send our best keepers—i. e., Baldwins, greenings, Winter russets, &c. It will not do to send the soft and perishable kinds. Then, too, we must pack for export. Herein we sin. Our cotton bales offer an abominable exhibition of our packing. Compared with that of India and Egypt, it is wretched.

There was a good deal of untrustworthy talk concerning an effort to introduce American locomotives into certain parts of the German Empire, notably Saxony. Now, it is a notorious fact that Saxony sends locomotives to quite a large number of foreign States. The Saxon Machine Company of Chemnitz furnishes not only the home market, but parts as far away as Java and Sumatra. It was hardly possible to expect any one of Germany's Governments to put our locomotives on their roads. That they ask for bids indicates little as far as furnishing data for a belief that there is any real intention to give orders, even though our offers are far below others as to price and time of delivery. Papers in Saxony and all over the empire pooh-poohed the statement. In the face of this, so excellent an authority as the Philadelphia Museums furnishes the following: "The first order for twenty compound locomotives has just been placed by the Royal Saxonian State Railways (Königlich Sächsische Staats-Eisenbahnen) in the United States. Germany has followed the example set by Great Britain and France, and we are informed by good authority that other railways of the empire will soon be in the market for American locomotives." The following saving clause is added to anticipate a too ardent hope of making any very great headway in those parts: "The German locomotive works, seventeen in number, are crowded with domestic and foreign orders, and are absolutely unable to meet the urgent requirements for rolling stock in general." Hence, here is a good place to tell our locomotive builders to make hay while the sun shines. Nor must they neglect any and every opportunity to sell in all Continental countries. If we can sell in Saxony, in Europe, we should sell easily in South America, South Africa, Australia, and Asia. It will be our own fault if we don't.

Our pig iron exports to Germany in 1898 went 16 per cent. ahead of 1897; fine cast iron and wrought iron went up 28 per cent.; common iron ware 75 per cent.; bicycles, 106 per cent. Had we worked the bicycle business as it should have been worked, or, would we work it now we might win a 1,000 per cent. increase. The figures for the American articles mentioned above were, in 1897, $2,380,000; in 1898, $3,570,000. This rapid increase is causing alarm, and no wonder. The marvelous productive capacity of this country is causing talk of a European combination or coalition against us. German iron and steel manufacturers are asking Government to give them aids of all kinds to meet this rising tide of American products. The thing urged most is cheaper freight rates.

There are more than 1,000,000 persons employed in Germany's textile industries. In 1898, the country's raw cotton imports amounted to 1,000,000 tons; in 1897, the last year for which figures have been furnished, 931,771 tons; world-round numbers, 20,000,000. The number of spindles is constantly increasing. It went up from 4,594,248 in 1887, to 7,115,509 in 1898. Another million might easily be added to round out the present number. In 1840 Germany was at the head of Europe's wool-producing States. To-day she buys in Australia, the Cape Colony, and La Plata. Her success in making woolen goods, even though she had to go out for raw wool, was phenomenal. From 1,969,769 spindles spinning woolen yarns she has gone up to 4,004,630 in 1898. Up to quite recent years Germany was one of England's very best customers in textile machinery, buying, in 1892, for $3,490,000; in 1894, for $4,010,200; in 1895, for $4,130,000; in 1896, for $5,059,000; in 1897, the last year for which I was able to find figures, for $4,561,000. From Switzerland she took in 1897, textile machinery worth $540,000. Hence, in the empire we shall have to count on competition from the mills at home, the English, and the Swiss manufacturers. Any one familiar with the facts, easily found, in re textile machinery in Europe, will say we should, or shall, win our way once we work the field properly. It is a well-known fact that our machinery has an excellent reputation in Europe. Our agricultural machines, our tools, implements, &c., are known to be excellent and practical.

During the fiscal year 1899, our exports amounted to $1,227,208,068, of which Europe took $936,781,169. During the same 365 days, all South America took from us only $35,660,962 worth. Germany alone took $155,772,279, or more than Austria-Hungary, Belgium, Denmark, France, Switzerland, Russia, and Spain combined. Next to England, who took $511,000,000, Germany is our best customer. Her total was greater than the total—$139,000,000—put down for South America, Asia, Oceanica, and Africa combined. This is not intended to discourage any and every effort that can be made in South America, Russia, Asia, Oceanica, Africa, &c. For the first ten months of this year, (1899,) i. e., up to Nov. 1, 1899, Germany's imports amounted to 37,387,989 tons; for a like period in 1898 the amount was 35,331,046; for the first ten months of 1897, 33,184,172. Germany bought from us in 1897 agricultural machines and implements worth $710,818, in 1898 for $1,232,242, for the fiscal year 1899, for $1,646,712. Since 1870, Hamburg's business, built up principally by the splendid efforts of the Hamburg Packet Company, increased 1,200 per cent., Bremen's 500 per cent.

In electricity and electrical appliances, Germany leads Europe, if not the world. She has 711 miles of electric railroads, or more than all the rest of Europe combined. England has only 98 miles. All the large towns have electric roads, and by 1901 Berlin will not have anything else. New roads are being projected in almost every city. The movement back to the country, so characteristic of our own people, has reached Europe. The Pataky, well-known patent lawyers of Berlin, wrote recently as follows: "The outlook for American manufactures in Germany is perhaps brighter than in any other European country. Apart from the natural international tendency that, combined at the same time with a true patriotism, is peculiarly characteristic of the German folk, there is in Germany a widespread appreciation of the mechanical genius evinced in the manufactures of the West. The general mechanical correctness and smartness of American inventions has so impressed the German industrialist that he is always ready to examine American manufactures on their merits, and to purchase some in preference to the products of his own country if they are mechanically superior."

By wisely choosing suitable parties for representation, it is pretty certain that manufacturers of first-class standing, that have made a name in the United States, will find the German market a remunerative field of business. The sewing machines and typewriters are prominent evidences of this, &c. Consuls have confirmed all this and added other facts time after time. They never tire of telling our merchants and manufacturers that there is an enormous field for our products, not only in Germany and England, but in every part of Europe. An energetic, intelligently directed effort by the boot and shoe people of this Republic to put shoes made in our way of making, but in foreign "fits," into Europe will result in enormous sales. I have no hesitation in saying that 4,000,000 or 5,000,000 out of Germany's 54,000,000 will wear our shoes, once they are properly presented. "The German public," to quote from the Pataky article again, "are well convinced of the merit of the American system. Industry is now flourishing, and, if money is to be made in Germany by manufacturers of the West, now is the time to act."

GERMAN STATISTICS.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 31.—The latest reliable figures concerning the trade of Germany are those for 1898, the statements received from United States Consuls for 1899 being general and indefinite. According to a recent report, the exports of Germany for the year would show a remarkable increase, based upon the improvement in the export trade to the United States. It was not until August that the statement of the Imperial German Bureau of Statistics of the foreign trade for 1898 was available. That statement showed the imports to be $1,295,554,860, and the exports were $954,499,000. This trade was made up as follows:

To and From—	Imports.	Exports.
Russia	153,048,800	97,484,800
France	63,111,400	48,885,200
Belgium	47,960,400	44,577,400
Holland	43,815,800	66,053,800
Italy	40,581,400	.....
Switzerland	41,293,000	60,938,000
Sweden and Norway	31,116,000	40,515,500
British East Indies	32,598,000	.....
China	9,401,000	.....
Argentina	24,748,000	.....
Chile	10,754,000	.....

Germany has been making a determined effort to increase her exports. Much discussion has been devoted to the advanced methods employed by the United States to develop markets for American manufactures, and a little money has been appropriated by the Imperial Government with the same object in view for Germany. Our exports to Germany during the ten months ending Oct. 31 increased only $760,000 in the aggregate, while Germany's shipments to the United States increased from $61,783,885 to $75,412,354. This gain on the German side of $8,600,000 is all that the United States authorities can find to account for the extraordinary increase in German export trade for the calendar year. Among the items of increased importation from Germany during the ten months were: Books, maps, &c., $300,000; fur skins, $400,000; cotton, $900,000; manufactured iron, $300,000; hides and skins, $1,700,000; crude India rubber, $600,000; jewelry, $500,000; paper, $500,000; cheese, $100,000; silk, $600,000; spirits, $25,000; sugar, (not above No. 16,) $3,200,000; (above No. 16 declined $700,000, imports being only $32,000.) Toys declined $50,000 and wines increased $130,000. Our exports increased principally as follows: Corn, $1,300,000; wheat, $2,000,000; wheat flour, $700,000; clocks and watches, $20,000; copper ingots, bars, plates, &c., $2,400,000; earthen and stone ware, $300,000; fertilizers, $900,000; scientific instruments, $130,000; builders' hardware, $100,000; typewriters, $28,000; manufactures of leather, $250,000; boots and shoes, $25,000; turpentine, $200,000; refined mineral oil, $200,000; oleomargarine, $10,000; butter, $70,000; seeds, $200,000; manufactured tobacco, $1,800,000; timber, $200,000; lumber, $300,000. In the same period our exports of canned beef declined $90,000; salted beef, $50,000; tallow, $170,000; bacon, $900,000; hams, $530,000; pork, $160,000; lard, $1,000,000.

The most recent report on trade conditions in Germany was sent to Washington by Vice Consul General Hanauer, at Frankfort, in which he gave particular information concerning iron and coal, chemicals and paper and textiles. "Of late," he wrote, "a new phase in Germany's economic life has become apparent, which affects her labor market. Some branches of trade can work only with half power because they lack the raw materials. This refers especially to rolling mills, which suffer from a dearth of pig iron, and industries using steel, coal, and coke, though fully at work, are not making much profit on their output, as the advance in the cost of the raw materials is not compensated by the price obtainable for the finished products. Most of the iron—and some machinery—works have contracts that will keep them busy until the middle of next year. These are now working overtime, and refuse to take any more contracts at fixed time and price. The great boom in iron and coal is principally due to the large contracts given out by the Government for its railroad stations and rolling stock, and by municipal and private corporations for narrow-gauge railroads and electric tramways; also, to the many machine works that have sprung up during the last two years.

"The building trade in Germany, which has been booming for some time past, is also a large customer on account of the structural iron used; likewise the shipyards, which are busy executing orders for the home and other Governments, and for the merchant marine. The wages of workmen in these branches have increased so that first-class hands doing piecework in the iron and machine trade now earn from $1.75 to $2.25 per day; in some cases this scale is reached by the best stonecutters, sculptors, and masons, but these are employed only during the building season.

"When the Government contracts are filled, a period of reaction will set in, the demand for labor will lessen, and wage reductions will be in order.

"The great expansion of the iron and steel trade has favorably affected the mining of coal and production of coke; 80 per cent. of the German output of coke is consumed by the iron and steel industry. In 1898, the single mining district of Dortmund increased its coal product by 2,600,000 metric tons (of 2,204 pounds) over the previous year. The coal-mining districts of Saxony and Silesia present like returns.

"The condition of the Rhenish Westphalian coal mines is flourishing; the output of coal would have been still greater were it not confined by the action of the trusts.

"The wage scale of the coal miners, however, has not kept pace with the increased production and the high price of coal; they get to-day but 5 per cent. more than was paid last year. The best hands earn $1 to $1.20 per day, but the large majority are paid considerably less.

"The workmen employed in chemical factories make good wages. This branch of industry is still in good condition, although the efforts of foreign countries to make themselves independent of German chemical supplies are beginning to be felt. The United States especially is striving in this direction; so much so that several large German establishments were compelled to establish branch factories in America, in order to retain their business. Those making aniline colors have less to fear, as it will be some time before Americans learn the secrets of their manufacture. The export of aniline colors forms an important item in German foreign trade. It increased from 53,200,000 marks ($12,661,000) in value in 1894 to 72,000,000 marks ($17,136,000) in 1898. Of this amount the United States took 15,600,000 marks ($3,712,800) worth; England, 14,000,000 marks, ($3,174,800); Austria-Hungary, 7,000,000 marks, ($1,666,000); Italy, 4,700,000 marks, ($1,071,000,) and China, 5,400,000 marks, ($1,285,200.)

"Paper and textiles are in an unsatisfactory condition. German paper manufacturers complain that Americans sell printing paper at 1¾ pennigs (4.15 cents) per pound, at which rate German paper cannot be sold.

"Loud are the wailings of German manufacturers and exporters of textile fabrics on account of the depressed condition of that branch of trade, which they claim is caused by greatly curtailed sales to the United States and by the growing competition of American textiles in foreign markets. Being crowded out of foreign countries, the German manufacturers overload their home market, which cuts the prices and lessens the profits on domestic sales.

"Owing to the decline in the exports, the wage scale of textile operatives has of late suffered a reduction, though the cost of living is higher. Therefore it cannot be said that the standard of life of German laborers (excepting in a few isolated branches of industry) has been raised.

"Through the reports of the Chambers of Commerce and of the trade papers runs, like a red thread, the bitter complaint of the United States tariff, which Germans admit to have boomed American manufactures and fostered America's capacity to compete successfully in the world's markets with the industrial nations of Europe."

OLDEST house in the United States making a specialty of municipal bonds. During a career of more than a quarter of a century we have placed many millions of bonds issued in all parts of the United States for public purposes; including issues and parts of issues of cities, villages, counties, parishes, townships, schools, and sanitary districts. Our long experience and large clientele, home and abroad, enable us to render valuable services in dealing with this class of securities.

We have extended our business to dealings in all classes of sound investment securities, and we solicit your orders, and will give same careful attention.

We buy and sell whole issues and parts of issues of bonds, issued in the United States and Canadian Provinces; also buy and sell the bonds of the several States and Territories.

We act as financial agents of municipalities, make short time loans against tax levies, pay interest and principal, and buy in bonds for sinking fund.

We buy and sell bank stocks, stocks and bonds of industrial companies, street railway, electric light, gas and water companies, and all unlisted securities.

Reliable quotations at all times cheerfully furnished upon application, and securities appraised for individuals and estates without charge. Correspondence invited.

The Outlook for the Railways of the Country.

OPTIMISTIC VIEWS EXPRESSED BY REPRESENTATIVES OF GREAT TRANSPORTATION LINES.

No interests in the country have given stronger pledges of their faith in the genuineness and permanence of its prosperity than those represented in the New York Central Railroad system. By the lease of the Boston and Albany Railroad and by the issue of $15,600,000 of new stock to create a fund with which to provide facilities for handling larger traffic, the Directors of that corporation have given tangible evidence of their belief that the good times now prevailing are not ephemeral. These practical demonstrations of optimism added force and weight to the opinions of Samuel R. Callaway, the President of the company, when, in an interview on Saturday, he prophesied that the year 1900 would prove one of great things for the railroads and for all the business enterprises of the United States.

"The general outlook for the railroads of the United States for the year 1900 is cheerful," said President Callaway. "The business of the railroads for the last twelve months has been good, but there is every reason to believe that for the next twelve months it will be better; and, what is best of all, there are signs on every hand that the promise of continued prosperity is not limited to one year. The prospects for 1901, viewed at a year's distance, scarcely could be improved.

"The business of the roads for the coming year may almost be said to be guaranteed. We have had splendid crops, vast quantities of which are yet to be moved; building operations are in progress or contracted for which will require the moving of an immense volume of material; while prosperous times have created a demand for manufactured goods of all kinds that insures an abundance of paying freight. These conditions now are and have been taxing the carrying capacity of the roads. The problem is not how to get business, but how to handle it. This is the situation at the beginning of the new year, with every indication that it will be intensified in the coming twelve months, rather than that there will be any let-up in the demands upon the transportation facilities of the country.

"The New York Central Railroad is proceeding upon the belief that these high-pressure conditions are to be continued. That is the reason why its Directors determined upon a new issue of $15,000,000 of stock in order to increase its ability to perform its service as a carrier. It has found, as others have, that the manufacturers of the country are too busy to supply things just when they are wanted. The work of rearranging the Grand Central Station has been delayed because building materials could not be obtained. With respect to steel rails and bridge work, our experience has been the same. The conditions which convinced us of the necessity of increasing our equipment thus made us contributors to the pressure to get work done quickly in other lines.

"One of the most encouraging signs of the times, as far as the railroads are concerned, is that there is so little talk of new construction. There never was a period of good times before when there were so few schemes in evidence for the building of competing railroads. Indications are that there will be little railroad construction in the coming year, and that what there is will consist of feeders for existing lines, and these mostly in the West. People seem to have come to the wise conclusion that the country has railroads enough, so far as the main lines of travel are concerned, and that what is needed is the equipment which will enable the roads to carry a given quantity of freight or a given number of passengers at the least cost and in the least time.

"With respect to rates, as well as volume of business, the railroads have bright prospects for the coming year. The tendency of the conditions which prevail is to insure the maintenance of rates. An anomalous thing about the railroad business is that when there is little of it, rates go down, and when there is more than the roads can handle they go up. When there is not much to be done altogether, every road, of course, wants to do a little of it, and as a result we have secret rate cutting and open rate wars that come near ruining everybody concerned. The year 1900, it is safe to say, will not be marked by anything of that sort.

"The rate situation may be menaced by proposed legislation, but we always have that to contend against. Legislation is not everything, and the railroads have shown that they are able to get along sometimes under most burdensome laws. What would help most would be a pooling law, but that is not altogether essential if there is not too much interference with the arrangements that the railroads themselves make. Just now there is an effort to overthrow the new classification that we recently adopted. Nevertheless, as I have already said, the situation and prospects respecting rates are excellent. It is at least certain that they will be no lower during the coming year than they are at present, and that the published freight and passenger tariffs will be adhered to all around."

President Callaway analizes and acknowledges the close relation which exists between the commercial interests of the City of New York and the policy of the railroads which connect this port with the interior. Being asked to express his views regarding the efforts in various directions to divert trade from New York to other ports, and especially the recent movements to build up the commerce of New Orleans and Montreal at the expense of this city, he said:

"The fear that is expressed in some quarters that serious inroads are to be made in the commerce of New York is absolutely groundless, in my opinion. Other ports, to be sure, are getting some trade, but it must be remembered that the business of the country is constantly growing, and New York is getting her share of the growth. We have to reckon now with New Orleans, as we did formerly with Philadelphia and Boston, and more recently with Newport News and other ports to the south. There is no danger of losing any considerable trade to Montreal.

"It need not be imagined for a moment that the New York Central Railroad is losing sight of the competition of lines whose purpose is to divert commerce to other ports. We have to allow these lines certain differentials and keep track of the amount of business they are able to do under these arrangements. Nobody need fear that they will be able to take away the commerce of New York. One object of the improvements which the New York Central has determined to inaugurate is to overcome the effect of the differentials which favor other ports. We are going to spend this year three or four millions of dollars in new bridges, which will enable our locomotives to draw heavier loads than the existing bridges will bear.

"When this work is completed we can take 60 or 70 bushels of grain into New York on one train. This grain will be brought into Buffalo in our new boats, two of which are already in service, which have a capacity of 6,000 tons each. With our improved facilities now we will be able to put grain on board ship at the seaboard more cheaply than we can. The talk about the lighterage charge here being a burden on the grain shipper is made out of whole cloth. This charge is really a part of a through rate, which is deducted before the railroad lines over which the grain has passed divide the proceeds of the business, and it does not come out of the shipper at all.

"One thing in favor of New York, and which insures the commercial supremacy of this port, is that it is the great port of entry as well as the principal shipping point for the foreign trade. The ships bring their cargoes here and naturally prefer to take their return cargoes from here, since in visiting any other port they are only sure of a load one way. Shippers also prefer New York, as they can always find berth room for a consignment of any size, instead of being compelled to charter a whole ship, as at other ports. The advantages of New York are too many and too great to be overcome, and she may count confidently upon enjoying her full share of the commercial activity and growth which are promised for the year just opening."

E. B. Thomas, President of the Erie Railroad Company, said, when asked as to the promises for business in 1900: "I cannot, of course, foresee what 1900 may bring forth, but I see no reason why business should not be as good as it has been. It has been fair. It should be remembered however, that the railroads have not raised their rates. They are the same as they were before all this rise in prices by which merchants are making such handsome profits. We hope for better rates after Jan. 1, on some lines of merchandise. Ore rates may hold the same until next May." Asked as to discriminating rates against New York by Western roads, leading to a diversion of traffic to Southern ports, Mr. Thomas said: "Of that I know nothing. I know that we have had all the business that we could care for."

Commissioner James F. Goddard of the Trunk Line Association said: "I see no reason why the year 1900 should not be an exceptionally prosperous one for the railroads as the year 1899 has been. The conditions are good, and the volume of business should be large."

"How do you think Eastern business during the coming year will be affected by the action of the Illinois Central in seeking to divert trade to the Gulf?" Mr. Goddard was asked.

"It does not seem to me that Eastern railroads will be hurt by it," he replied. "There is no reason to believe that the proportion of business carried to the Port of New Orleans for shipment will be greater in 1900 than it has been this year. If I am not mistaken, it was greater in 1898 than it has been in 1899. The Illinois Central has its main line from Northern Illinois to the Gulf, and it is of course interested in carrying as much of the freight to be shipped abroad to the Port of New Orleans as possible. It is naturally unwilling to give the same rates by the mile on the short routes which cross it at various points and with which by traffic arrangement it connects with Eastern roads, as it allows for the long haul to New Orleans. You may call that discrimination, but it is certainly not an uncommon thing in railroad circles. I cannot see how by this means the Illinois Central is to divert next year from Eastern business any larger proportion of shipments than it has had this year."

J. Rogers Maxwell, President of the Central Railroad of New Jersey, discussing railroad conditions, says: "The year 1899 was a very prosperous one for the railroads of the country; yet, prosperous though it was, the indications now are that 1900 will be even more prosperous. Certainly the present outlook is full of great promise, with business of all kinds so active and generally so profitable. We ourselves have had our full share of the general prosperity. Indeed, I may say that the tonnage of our road in 1899 has been greater than in any year in our history, while for 1900 the indications are that it will be larger still. As for our earnings—well, they have been published from month to month and speak for themselves. Like all the other railroads we suffered from a shortage of cars for some time, but we have constantly increased our equipment. Only a few days ago we ordered 25 more freight engines and 1,500 more freight cars for delivery in May next."

Levi C. Weir, President of the Adams Express Company, says: "Business is in a very excellent condition, and the outlook for the future is promising. I can see no cloud on the horizon, except overspeculation. The railroads are all earning money, manufacturers and merchants are active, labor is profitably employed, and money for legitimate business interests can readily be obtained. I have no doubt that in every section of the country every merchant of standing is able to borrow at a fair and reasonable rate. In the express business, while our carrying does not show to any extent the condition in respect to the products of the earth and in large industries, such as iron and steel—which, from all reports, are unusually active—we see, nevertheless, many evidences of prosperity in other lines and among the general people. The Christmas business showed a great interchange of courtesy among the people—a sure sign of prosperity."

W. H. Truesdale, President of the Delaware, Lackawanna and Western, says regarding the outlook: "The results of the year 1899 have certainly been very satisfactory in every way. Business has been large and profitable, both in transportation and in the coal department. While in some cases the tariff rates have been low they have been maintained better than for some time, and as a result the net earnings of our road have been satisfactory.

"There has been a good demand for coal during the year, prices have been higher than for the past five or six years, and the amount of coal mined and sold has been larger than at any time during that period.

"The year 1900 promises equally well both in transportation and in the coal business. Everything is most encouraging from every standpoint. General business is excellent; in fact, it was never better, and I see no possibility that it will be otherwise for some time to come.

"One of the striking developments in railroad management which the past year has more and more impressed, is the policy of building up and developing local business interests and communities along the lines of the railroads of the country. While there has at all times been more or less of this local building up, there has been more of it lately than ever, and in the future it will probably be greater still."

CHICAGO, Ill., Dec. 30.—Paul Morton, Second Vice President of the Santa Fé system, said to-day: "There has been but little change of importance in railroad circles during the past week. Business has been generally good upon all the lines running into Chicago, although a few of them complain of a slight falling off in the amount of trade they have been handling. In talks that I have had with the officials of other lines, they report that the trade during holidays was generally satisfactory.

"There has been a noticeable large movement of California fruit from the coast to Chicago and the East, and the present prospect for a large crop is considered excellent from reports I have had from our agents in California. In fact it is better in prospect than it has ever been since the railroads have been distributing the product. Corn has not yet moved to any great extent, but there is plenty of it on hand, and we expect a large movement after Jan. 1.

"A great many cattle are now being fed in the West, and a large traffic in that product may be expected within a short time. The output of hogs is larger than usual, and the roads through the hog-raising districts are all profiting by the output.

"The outlook for general merchandise is fine. The country merchants are all buying extensively, and the goods are being delivered in large quantities. The trade in the West is excellent. The farmers and merchants there own more and owe less than ever before.

"There will be an important meeting in New York Jan. 9 of the chief executive officers of all the Eastern roads to consider the general situation. No special business is to come up, but the officials will talk over the general conditions and endeavor to make plans to improve them. It will be an adjourned session of the meeting called by some of the Western roads, which met in Washington, D. C., on Dec. 5. It will be largely attended, and is expected to result in a better understanding among them.

"The whole past year has been generally satisfactory, but the great increase in the cost of supplies makes it difficult to estimate the profits. The increase in the expenses has been so great that it will be necessary to increase the freight rates. In regard to the passenger rates, it will be difficult to change them. In general the situation is such that the Western roads have cause to be well satisfied."

RAILROADS IN THE NORTHWEST

MINNEAPOLIS, Dec. 30.—There is little doubt that the men who are at the head of the great lines of railroad in the Northwest are more than satisfied with the volume of business they are doing at present. More than that, the outlook for a continuation of the same conditions is most promising. The demands that have been made upon all the trunk lines for the past year have taxed their resources to the utmost, and it has required all the strategy of their managers at times to handle the business that has come to them. That the volume of business, both prospective and present, will lead them to construct new lines which shall serve as feeders to those already in operation, there is no possible doubt, though none of the men at the head of any of the systems is willing to make such an admission at the present time.

"We have had an unprecedentedly good year," said President Mellen of the Northern Pacific. "The business has been satisfactory, eminently so. Whether it will continue right along, neither I nor any one else can say. Last year's crop was a good one, and it has been keeping us busy to move it. We are still working on it. Our road is a wheat-carrying road. If the crops next year are as good as they were this, we shall have all the business we can handle. It is still three months to seeding time, so it is not possible to make any predictons for next year."

Third Vice President J. M. Hannaford of the Northern Pacific was in a most optimistic frame of mind over the outlook. "I have been connected with the Northern Pacific for the past twenty-seven years," said he, "and I regard its prospects to-day as the brightest they have ever been. There is a great flood of immigration all along our line, and any one can see that this means more business for our road. We have got to carry what they raise to the markets, and bring them the products of the factories. The more settlers, the more crops to export and the more products to import. That looks logical, and it seems to be a conclusion from which it is not easy to escape.

"To illustrate what I say, let me give you a single instance. Next Spring at least four thousand families will move into North Dakota alone and settle along our line. We know this because they have already been on the ground, have bought their lands, and, in some cases, have done a portion of their Spring's plowing, or built houses. They have gone back to their old homes to winter, but they will be on hand early in the Spring. The demand for land is steady and good. Sales are being made every day, not for speculative purposes, but for actual improvement.

"Our immigrants come mainly from Ohio, Kansas, Wisconsin, and Illinois, and they are a very superior class of people. For the most part they are American born, though probably a majority of them are of foreign extraction. They comprise men who settled in these older States at an early day and have acquired a competence. When they moved on the farms they now occupy, land was cheap. As the State has become settled up, their lands have appreciated in value sufficient to make them a small fortune, and they are now selling out and reinvesting in the hope of making another addition to their accumulations. The land on which they are living now is worth say $50 per acre. They are selling this and buying land at $5 per acre. The man who has a hundred acres in Iowa or Ohio can sell it and with the money purchase five times as much in North Dakota. This is what they are doing. None of those who will settle in that State next Spring has bought less than 160 acres and not a few have purchased a whole section. What I have said of North Dakota applies with equal force to Washington and, though in a less degree, to Idaho.

"These immigrants will raise wheat and flax. Three thousand new farms means a large increase in the acreage that will be given to both these grains, and it ought to follow that the number of bushels raised will be correspondingly augmented. Quite a large number of settlers are going down into the southwestern counties, where the land is not so well adapted for wheat raising, and these are going to devote themselves to raising stock and to diversified farming, for which both the soil and the climate are favorable. They will make money, too, and it will be but a few years before those who are prudent and good managers will be as well fixed as is necessary.

"A few weeks ago, the meeting of the National Flax Growers' Association was held in Fargo, and the reports of its doings, as given in the papers of that city, were a revelation as to what has already been accomplished in raising flax in that State. It was shown indubitably that the State now leads every other in the production of flax, yet there are thousands of acres of land admirably adapted to its culture that are still virgin soil. One elevator man told me to-day that he had already handled 150,000 bushels of flaxseed more than he did all of last year, and it is still coming in. Another man whom I know personally moved on his farm in the Spring, broke his land, sowed it to flax, harvested a crop of twenty bushels to the acre, and sold it for $1.17 per bushel, paying for his land with his first year's crop.

"The acreage of wheat next year will be considerably larger than this year, if I may judge by the preparations that have already been made. The farmers have not been slow to take advantage of the extraordinary weather this Fall, and if the Brazil has passed through a serious crisis within the last year. Coffee, its great staple export, declined below the cost of production, owing to an enormous overproduction. In addition, the revenues of Brazil did not increase in proportion to her expenditures. The Government tried to appreciate paper money by causing the destruction by fire of a certain percentage. While this was done, it was forced at the same time to issue certificates of indebtedness, which, while not a circulating medium, nevertheless more or less kept the Government debt on the same basis. With the low price of coffee and the general disturbance of the country, exchange has ruled at very low rates. Within the last two or three months, however, coffee has begun to advance, and there is reason to believe that it will go still higher. This will partially relieve the situation in Brazil, so far as the coffee districts are concerned.

Government finances, however, cannot be permanently and solidly adjusted until the revenues that now go to individual States go, in part at least, to the Central Government. At present the Government has only the import duties for its support. The States receive the export duties. Doubtless this matter will shortly be adjusted, and, with more stable Government finances and the advance in coffee, the prosperity of the country will return. The action of the health authorities with reference to Santos coffee vessels, which grew out of an outbreak of the plague in that port, will be a check to the export of coffee. This will further appreciate the prices in the consuming markets, but of course would depreciate them in the producing markets.

Brazil supplies its financial wants entirely from Europe. There is a movement on foot for the introduction of trolley lines in certain of the great cities of the republic. These are expected to be financed with American capital. No American banking facilities exist, but the European banks treat the American merchants as well as they treat European merchants. Nevertheless there is a disadvantage in dealing with financial institutions at a distance, which handicaps American trade.

The Amazon region is far more prosperous than the coffee region. Rubber has advanced enormously in price, and is eagerly purchased for consumption in manufacturing countries. As a result, the merchants of the Amazon districts are making large profits. Between the Amazon and the coffee districts is the sugar region, which extends along near the coast. This has been more prosperous of late, because of the check to its cultivation in Cuba.

ARGENTINA.

The Argentine Republic has made steady progress during the last year. The wheat crop which is now being harvested is one of the largest ever known. It is estimated that there will be 1,400,000 tons of wheat for export. The linseed crop is also very large, and the crop of maize is of great importance. Wool has advanced heavily in price, and as a result the republic will benefit greatly, as wool is one of its most important exports.

The Government has been dealing with the financial situation with wisdom, and is proposing to establish the gold standard on the basis of redeeming paper money at 235 for 100. At present the value of paper money with reference to gold, fluctuates between 225 and 240. The City of Buenos Ayres has now reached a population of 800,000 people, and is one of the finest modern cities, with electric railways, electric light, and all other modern conveniences. The climate is one of the finest in the world. It is that of Italy, but there is no malaria known. While there is occasional frost, there is never snow.

The export of cattle products is also very great, and high prices are realized. Hides have doubled in value within a year. The Government is in the hands of President Roca, a very able man, who has the confidence of all classes, and he is supported by a Cabinet of trained men.

Argentina is a competitor of the United States in the sale of maize and mules in South Africa. Since the rinderpest destroyed most of the cattle, the demand for mules in South Africa has been very great, and during the drought of the last year or two there has been a great demand for maize. This is sent from Buenos Ayres to Cape Town and other South African ports direct, although the telegraphic messages by which the transactions are made pass via London or New York.

URUGUAY.

This small republic contains perhaps the most desirable portion of South America for agriculture. It has always been prosperous in spite of revolutions, and has always maintained a gold standard. The Uruguayan gold dollar is worth 104 cents of our money. President Borda is a man of high ability, has the confidence of the commercial classes, and the country is peaceable and prosperous. The street railway system of Montevideo is being converted to the use of electricity. The harbor, which has been somewhat exposed, is in course of reconstruction at great expense. The commerce of Uruguay has felt the same benefits that accrue to Argentina in the steady advance in the value of its principal products.

PARAGUAY.

and population, and most of its business relations are through Buenos Ayres and other cities of Argentina.

CHILE.

Chile has been at peace during the last year and has moved forward considerably in the development of its resources. At the beginning of the year grave questions existed with reference to the boundary line between Chile and Argentina, and at one time it was feared that they could only be settled by war. It was finally determined to refer the matter to arbitration, and the Hon. W. I. Buchanan, the Minister to the Argentine Republic from the United States, was selected as the umpire. It is a remarkable fact that his decision was received with satisfaction and relief by both parties. As a result, the preparations for war ceased, and Government revenues, diverted from the preparation for hostilities, returned to the usual channels.

The attempt made by Chile some time ago to establish the gold standard on the basis of 36 cents gold for each paper dollar was unsuccessful, and exchange depreciated to such an extent as to put a considerable premium upon gold. Lately, however, paper money has once more appreciated, and it is to be hoped that it will not be long before the intentions of the Chilean Government will be fully carried out. Her main reliances for export are upon her mining products. These consist principally of silver and nitrate of soda. The latter is mined in great quantities on the Deserts of Atacama, and pays the Government a large revenue in export duty.

The agricultural progress of Chile is limited by the comparatively small area of the country. Nevertheless, the production of wheat, corn, &c., is important and growing.

BOLIVIA.

The Republic of Bolivia has no longer a frontage upon the ocean, but its imports and exports pass through Chilean ports under an arrangement between the two countries. The only exports via the Pacific are ores and precious metals, with some tin. East of the Andes Bolivia possesses very large areas where rubber is to be found, but this reaches its foreign destinations by way of the Amazon. On the upper reaches of the river it is carried in canoes, and later transferred to steamers. During the past year there has been a serious revolution resulting in the overthrow of the Government.

PERU.

Since Peru was shorn of its southern provinces as a result of its war with Chile, it has been progressing steadily, but slowly. At present the country is reasonably prosperous, and its affairs are well managed by the present head of the State. There is a large production of sugar in Northern Peru, and as the cane fields are irrigated they are able to continue the grinding of the cane about nine months in the year. This renders the production of sugar possible at a very low cost. Most of the plantations are owned by foreigners, principally Englishmen and Americans, and from them they derive a large revenue. Another production of Northern Peru is cotton of a very peculiar quality and fibre. It is especially adapted for mixing with woolen goods, and the United States imports it more or less for use in its woolen mills.

ECUADOR.

The country has been at peace during the year, and has made good progress. A contract has been let for the construction of a railroad to Quito, and it is believed that when this road is constructed the resources of the republic will be greatly developed. There are great regions from which valuable productions cannot be brought to the seaboard owing to the cost of transportation. The most important export of Ecuador is cacao, which is the berry or bean from which cocoa and chocolate are made. Ecuador also sends much rubber to market, and many hides are shipped out of the country. With a prolongation of the existing peace and good order, the country should advance steadily in prosperity.

UNITED STATES OF COLOMBIA.

There has been a serious revolution in Colombia during the past year, which is not yet completely at an end, although it seems likely that the Government's final triumph cannot be long postponed. This has considerable check on the commercial movement of the country. The French owners of what there is of the Panama Canal have been spending some money in continuing the work and in protecting the property. It is the general belief that the canal at that point can be finished for no greater expenditure than would be necessary for the Nicaragua Canal, and that it would have the great advantage that it would not be necessary to construct ports at both ends, as they already exist. The commission recently appointed will doubtless seriously consider the completion of the Panama Canal rather than the initiation of a different enterprise.

One of the principal products of Colombia is coffee of a very superior quality. This coffee has mainly been taken by Europe, although some of it comes to the United States under the name of Maracaibo, as it is shipped through that port of Venezuela. The prices of this coffee have advanced somewhat, but until they advance considerably more the coffee industry will be depressed.

VENEZUELA.

Gen. Castro recently put himself at the head of a revolution against the authorities of Venezuela, and succeeded in driving revolution against Gen. Castro, and seized the Port of Maracaibo. This counter-revolution seems to have been a failure, and now Gen. Castro seems to be firmly seated as the ruler of Venezuela. He has risen very rapidly, and not much is known of his abilities, except that he is a good soldier. Whether he will also prove to be a good statesman remains to be seen. If so, the country will undoubtedly prosper. It needs additional banking facilities and railways, which it is not likely to get until the Government is on some permanent basis. Maricaibo is an important point for the export of coffee, and it will presumably be opened at once, now that Gen. Castro has captured the city, and there will be no further check to that commercial movement.

The business with the Orinoco River Valley continues satisfactory. The main article of export is cattle products, as on the vast plains adjoining it great numbers of cattle are raised. The decision in the arbitration between Great Britain and Venezuela has rendered certain the control of the entire length of the Orinoco by Venezuela, as England is now shut away from it. It is an extraordinarily rich country in agriculture and in minerals; there are vast iron deposits near the mouth of the Orinoco, which are about to be utilized by American furnaces.

BRITISH GUIANA.

This colony has long suffered by reason of the low prices of sugar, but within the year sugar has sold at better prices than it did formerly, and the colony is reasonably prosperous. There has been much uncertainty as to whether many of the gold properties would be adjudged to be in British Guiana or Venezuela. This question has been settled by arbitration, and nearly all the exploited gold fields are now established as the territory of that British colony.

DUTCH GUIANA.

This colony continues to move on in a very phlegmatic way. Its principal production for export is gold. There is a great abundance of placer properties as well as many rich veins. The mining laws are good and properly enforced by the Government, but the climate makes it difficult to work the properties with white labor.

FRENCH GUIANA.

The progress of this French colony has been greatly stimulated by the rich gold discoveries. As a result certain territory lying on the boundary line between Brazil and French Guiana has been occupied by the French against the protest of the Brazilians. The question, however, as to where the boundary line is has been referred to arbitration, and it is not to be expected that there will be any serious difficulty.

CENTRAL AMERICA.

The Central American republics have not been particularly prosperous during the past year. In Guatemala there has been what was almost a commercial crisis, and, as coffee is their principal export, the low prices have unfavorably affected conditions.

The Nicaragua Canal concession by the Maritime Company expired last October. The so-called "Grace concession" has met with obstacles and difficulties, which may or may not be overcome. As yet that company has secured no concession from Costa Rica, without which it will be impossible to build a canal on the lines proposed. Doubtless the United States Government will take up the question, ignoring all former arrangements or commitments, and treating it on its merits.

MEXICO.

This country makes steady progress in the development of its resources, the extension of its railway lines, and the improvement of its harbors; the banking system of the republic has developed in an important manner, and to-day is thoroughly modernized. The financial administration of the Government is admirable. Mr. Limantour, the Finance Minister, is a man of the highest character and ability, and it is to be presumed that should anything happen to deprive the country of the services of President Diaz he will take the helm, thus continuing the policy which has so wonderfully advanced ...e material interests of the country. The Mexican foreign debt has been placed on a better basis than heretofore. The revenues are so large as to show a surplus. The relations between the United States and Mexico are constantly growing more intimate.

One of the greatest exports from that country is henequen; a fibre obtained from a kind of cactus. This is raised in Yucatan and is used in enormous quantities for the manufacture of cordage and for binders' twine. Owing to the closing of the Philippine ports, the price of Manila hemp greatly advanced, and it became so scarce that sisal hemp was substituted for it wherever possible. As a result the price of sisal has advanced greatly and the producers are exceedingly prosperous. The profits of its production are making Yucatan one of the wealthiest States in the Republic, as scarcely anything else could be grown upon the land where it is raised.

Mexico also sends abroad great quantities of dye wood, mahogany, cedar, &c. One of the most interesting products of Mexico is a gum called chicle. This is imported extensively into the United States, and is the basis of chewing gum. The best vanilla in the world also comes from Mexico. There is an immense development in her mining enterprises in late years, and American capitalists have built large smelters in various parts of the republic.

Mexico has been living for some time under a protective tariff. As a result of this, manufactures have been developing rapidly in the country. Cotton is raised in Mexico and woven into fabrics in that country, and our former export of cotton goods to Mexico has almost ceased. The mills not only consume all the Mexican cotton, but import Texan cotton in considerable quantities. Iron is also manufactured in Mexico at several points. It is of a good quality, and its production is likely to increase. Next to Canada, the United States has invested more money in Mexico than in any American country, and has had no occasion to regret it.

TRANSACTIONS BEYOND RECORD.

Business on the New York Stock Exchange during 1899 was far beyond anything ever known in the records of Wall Street. This was particularly true of the transactions in railroad and miscellaneous stocks, which were nearly 63,000,000 shares greater than those of 1898, and in only one month of 1899 did the dealings fall below those of the preceding year. In railroad bonds also there was a marked increase until late in the year, when comparison was made with the enormous totals of the final months of 1898, making the showing less favorable. In Government and State bonds there was also a falling off, due to the fact that in 1898 the new 3 per cent. Government issue was brought out and very heavily dealt in. The decrease in State bonds was accounted for by the lessened dealings in the Virginia funded bonds, which were a marked feature of the Summer months of 1898.

The following is a comparison by months of the business done during the past year, with that of 1898 in the various departments of the Stock Exchange:

TRADE STATISTICS FOR 1899.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 31.—High-water mark has been reached in the trade of the United States. The exports and imports for the calendar year amount to $2,046,000,000, with the business for the month of December estimated on the basis of the trade for the preceding month, the actual figures not being accessible in the Treasury until about the middle of the month following that of which they are published.

There are many interesting features in the statistics of trade for the calendar year. The increase in exports and imports over last year was $177,476,943. But the excess of imports over last year amounted to the very large sum of $158,541,771. About half of this increase in imports must be charged to the account of dutiable goods. In the matter of exports there has been a loss, as compared with last year, of about $3,000,000, while there was an increase in the exports of manufactured goods of $68,000,000 and a loss of agricultural exports of $65,000,000. The exportation of manufactured goods has increased so steadily and surely that the percentage is close to 30 per cent. of all our exportations.

The latest trustworthy figures showing in detail the gains and losses in exports and imports were given in the report for ten months ended Oct. 31 and the figures are useful in indicating the character of the trade for the entire twelve months. There was an increase in the exportation of agricultural implements of more than $4,000,000 during the period, France taking $500,000 more than the year before, all other Europe increasing orders about $1,100,000, the Argentine Republic increasing orders to the extent of $800,000, and an increase of $200,000 going to Africa. Although $900,000 worth of mules were exported, there was a loss of more than $2,000,000 in the year in the value of animals exported.

There was a substantial increase in the value of books and maps exported, amounting to $1,200,000 over last year. While the decrease in the exportations of breadstuffs was $32,000,000 in the ten months, during the same period we exported to about the same value as in 1898. Our mail went abroad to the extent of $100,000 more than in 1898. The bicycle trade fell off, and the sales of chemicals increased $3,000,000. To meet a foreign increased demand for coal there were exports of that product in excess of those of 1898 by about $1,700,000. There was also an increase in exports of copper ingots and plates of $4,000,000.

The reduction in the exports of cotton amounted to more than $14,000,000 in the year. In the same time we increased our shipments of raw cotton to France to the extent of $4,000,000. A notable gain was in the increase of exports of clothing to about $3,700,000, and an increase in the exportations of fertilizers by $3,000,000. American scientific appliances are in better demand, the increase in exportations of them being more than $2,000,000. Tin plate was exported to the amount of $11,586, being a gain of $8,822. Of structural iron there was an increased export of $600,000. The demand for castings ran the exports up to more than $4,500,000 over those of the year before. In builders' hardware there was an improved trade amounting to $1,900,000 over that of 1898. There were increased exports of electrical and metal-working machinery, and the increased sales abroad of typewriters amounted to $3,000,000 more than in the preceding year. The total increase in the exports of iron and steel for the period, which has been maintained in the closing months of the year, was $18,871,718.

While our exports of hides and skins dropped somewhat in the period, the increased sales abroad of buff, split, and other leathers was nearly $1,500,000. The increase in sales of boots and shoes was about $1,500,000. Of malt liquors we sold $1,000,000 more than in the preceding year. Of turpentine, which continues to be in steady demand, the exportations were $1,700,000 more than in the preceding ten months. The increase in the exports of refined mineral oils was about $9,000,000. Some of our meat products declined, as compared with 1898. Of canned beef there was an increased export amounting to $200,000 more than in 1898, but there was a loss in bacon of nearly $4,000,000, an increase in hams of $800,000, a loss of about $1,000,000 in lard, a gain of nearly $1,500,000 in fresh pork, and a gain of about $4,000,000 in fresh beef. There was a gain in exports of butter of the large sum of $2,400,000, and also an increase in oleomargarine exports of $1,200,000. While we lost about $700,000 of cheese exports to Great Britain, and about a like amount to British North America, we increased our exports of cheese in other directions so as to make an increase over 1898 of the paltry amount of $92,000. The increase of starch exports amounted to $1,000,000. Of unmanufactured tobacco we sent out $5,700,000 more than in 1898. The increased export of timber was $1,000,000, and of lumber it was $3,200,000.

As the tendency is to increase of trade, both with Europe, our best customer, and with the new possessions, which will naturally, with new trade advantages, patronize American products and manufactures, the expectation is that the calendar year 1900 will be a more interesting one in the light of statistics than that of 1899. A very considerable increase of trade is looked for with Cuba, Puerto Rico, and the Philippines. Just now it is arrested, and will continue to be depressed until a larger degree of liberality is permitted in conducting commerce between those possessions and the United States. With the restoration of Cuban commerce to what it was before the insurrection that resulted in its separation from the authority of Spain large figures will be added to the commercial reports of the Treasury. All of the trade enjoyed by Spain with those islands is regarded as legitimately within our reach, and to obtain and enjoy it at the same time that the people of the islands realize increased benefits will be regarded as a success at once political and commercial.

THE SHIPPING INDUSTRY.

Shipping conditions, as gleaned from interviews with representatives of the leading steamship companies and other shipping interests, may be summarized as follows: Transatlantic lines are booking large numbers of passengers for 1900, the unusual traffic being due to the Paris Exposition. Ocean freights for the transatlantic business have not increased, though the chartering by the British Government of many of the vessels ordinarily engaged in that trade has largely increased the cargoes of vessels remaining on the regular service. Rates for grain are unusually low, due to the falling off of European orders, attributed by some to Argentina competition, while others think that it is due to a holding back of grain in American storehouses. To some extent it is attributed also to an unusual movement of grain by way of Montreal during the Summer. Southern ports are said to be profiting by favorable railroad rates from the West at the expense of New York. Owing to the heavy traffic on the railroads, as a consequence of large domestic business, steamship men say that the roads have not catered for export trade.

Rates, however, are reported high for long voyages, while the scarcity of sailing ships, which have been so largely bought up by the Pacific Coast houses, for Pacific trade, has stiffened rates for sailing tonnage to an unusual degree for far Eastern trade, in which there has been an increased movement of manufactured products and case oil, while the Pacific Coast has been increasing its exports of breadstuffs and lumber to the same section.

The year's transatlantic business as a whole, so far as the regular companies are concerned, is said to reflect the prosperous conditions of the general trade of the country, the exports of general merchandise being large, while the volume of inward freight has been up to the normal.

An improvement is reported in export business with the west coast of South America through our ability to successfully compete with England and Germany, while we are for the first time importing sugar from Peru, which formerly went to England.

The West Indian merchant fleets have been increased by new and improved tonnage, but owners say that satisfactory trade waits upon more settled conditions. New lines from the Gulf to Cuba are taking some of the Western freight which formerly came to New York for trans-shipment. The coastwise trade is booming all along the line, and the prospects appear to be for a continuation of the heavy movement of freight.

The year of 1900 will be marked, as has the past year, by the addition of many vessels to both the transatlantic and coasting fleets, and these vessels all show the growing tendency of building larger craft.

Industrial and Financial Situation.

A review of trade conditions in Canada at present, accompanied by an attempt to forecast the immediate future, must turn upon the facts and prospects as regards the following chief items: 1—Agriculture; 2—Lumber; 3—Spruce, paper, and pulp; 4—Iron; 5—The precious metals; 6—Coal; 7—Fisheries; 8—Transportation; 9—Foreign trade; 10—Bank returns.

In almost every one of the above factors the condition is one of exceptional activity, prosperity, and progress, not of a meteoric order, except, perhaps, in the lumber business, but of a steady, solid kind. The outlook, therefore, is for continued, exceptional prosperity for a considerable time to come, and the trade returns show that a vast proportion of the increase in the business of Canada is going to the benefit of the United States.

1. Agriculture.—To begin with the agricultural interest of the Dominion, we have had two excellent harvests in 1898 and 1899, with good prices. Of course this is a wide country, and there are spots and crops where returns have been anything but good, but taking the matter by and large, the past two years have brought larger returns to our farmers and produce middlemen than probably any two years in the history of British North America. Through a liberal and far-sighted policy of successive Governments the consignments and transportation to and delivery in Britain of great staples like cattle, cheese, butter, and apples have been splendidly promoted, and a proportionate reward is coming in. For cheese alone Canada this year received over twenty million dollars from Great Britain. In general, the farm interest in the Dominion is flourishing more noticeably than for years past. As to the future, even though a poor harvest might chance in 1900, settlement on the Northwest prairies is at last becoming rapid and the Northwest wheat product increasing by leaps and bounds.

2. Lumber.—For some years past Canada's exports of forest produce have averaged from $25,000,000 to $30,000,000, besides, of course, a huge home consumption. Next to agriculture, lumber is perhaps our most important productive interest. The lumber trade has been very active during the past season, almost everything fit for shipment has been sold and moved out, and prices have advanced very considerably, especially for red pine and spruce lumber. It is just possible, however, that prices may have advanced too rapidly, and there may be a danger of a reaction. The quantity of logs to be taken out this Winter may be somewhat restricted, owing to the scarcity of and advance in the cost of labor. Nevertheless, with all old stock cleared out and the business on healthiest possible basis, and conditions elsewhere in the world tending to accentuate the value of the still almost limitless Canadian pine and spruce forests, lumber can be relied on as a factor of continuous high prosperity for some time to come.

3. Spruce, Paper, and Pulp.—While spruce comes properly under the head of lumber, the extraordinary demand which is arising for it to make pulp for paper promises to render this industry in particular one of the greatest assets of the Canadian future. No other wood or material, so far discoverable, serves the purpose as well—or if as well, not as economically. The Canadian supply of spruce is practically limitless. The spruce forest area is enormous, and, unlike pine, spruce reproduces itself rapidly. Twenty years will renew a spruce forest. In conjunction with the spruce in Canada are innumerable water powers for pulp mills, and with the demand this year for pulp and the certainty of early restriction of supply of spruce in the States, agents for American and English syndicates are cropping up numerously throughout this country looking for spruce limits and manufacturing advantages. The values of well-placed spruce limits have doubled this year. Two or three very large pulp mills which started this year are believed to be but the forerunners of dozens of others and of corresponding paper manufacture in the immediate future.

4. Iron.—The great advance in the price of iron in the States has caused an expansion of all the iron interests in Canada, the reopening of old mines and the erection of new blast furnaces. A good deal of this may be temporary, dependent entirely upon high prices in the States, and likely to disappear with the high prices, but in Cape Breton, the great iron and coal bed of Canada, the Whitney syndicate of Boston has put into effective shape the magnificent combination there of coal and iron and ocean shipping advantages, and the effect is bound to be permanent.

5. Coal.—Four million tons of coal annually is about the recent Canadian average mined, two-thirds of which have been in Cape Breton and the adjoining parts of Nova Scotia, the other third on the Pacific Coast. On both coasts the coal is practically inexhaustible and the output rapidly increasing. Besides, it has become certain within the past year that a great deposit of anthracite coal is available on the Crow's Nest branch of the Canadian Pacific Road, entering the Rocky Mountains from the prairies, and this will shortly be worked.

6. The Precious Metals.—The output of gold and silver ore in Canada increased 50 per cent. this year over last, while last year it was double any previous figure. This increase is owing chiefly to the Yukon placers as regards gold, but also considerably to the growth of quartz mining in Southern British Columbia. The total product of gold this year is estimated at $20,000,000, and of silver, copper, and nickel nearly half as much. The increasing product will continue. New fields of mineral value are constantly being opened up, and the works and machinery at existing ones being improved.

7. Fisheries.—The one industry in the Dominion which is not in a condition of exceptional prosperity is the fishing business. It seems to be averaging much as usual this year. As its returns depend a good deal on the caprice of the fish or the elements, it cannot be much argued about as a factor in the estimates of the commercial outlook. But, at all events, the industry is not depressed just now.

8. Foreign Trade.—Last fiscal year, ending June 30, was the year of by far the largest foreign trade in the history of Canada, but large as the figures were, those of the present year are distancing them. For the first five months of this fiscal year, ending Dec. 1, the foreign trade of Canada has been $18,000,000 greater than for the similar five months of last year. This is not due to purchases stimulated by mere hopes of big business at home. The increase in imports is $10,000,000, the increase in exports $8,000,000. Every indication at home is that the whole increase is healthy and the result of conditions which point to a continuance of the prosperous era for some time in the future. The total foreign trade for the five months ending Dec. 1 is $168,000,000.

9. Transportation.—The work of the immediate future, however

FACTORS THAT WERE PROMINENT IN CREATING THE MARKED FLUCTUATIONS OF THE PAST YEAR.

The early months of 1900 will long be remembered for the most active, exciting and buoyant speculation in Wall Street history. Nothing like it had been seen since the often-referred-to boom of 1892-93, and even that historical period was overshadowed by the phenomenal business that entered in the past year. During December, 1899, an active upward movement was well under way, but it did not develop its full force until January, when a most remarkable record of activity was created. Heretofore days on which a million shares were sold were a rarity, in fact, so few that they were easily remembered, but during January they became the rule and not the exception.

JANUARY'S GREAT BOOM.

On thirteen out of the twenty-one full business days in the month over 1,000,000 shares changed hands, and on two occasions the sales ran up to more than 1,500,000. Even in the two-hour session on Saturday, the business was on the same proportionately heavy scale. The figures for the month reached the phenomenal aggregate of 24,142,610 shares, equal to almost one-fourth of the entire business done in the previous twelve months, nearly 15,000,000 shares greater than the corresponding month in 1898, and more than double any month in that year. The bond market kept pace with the activity in stocks, the month's total approximating $144,780,000, in fact the business in both departments was on such a tremendous scale that the tickers were not able to cope with it, and at times prices on the tape were often several minutes behind the actual market.

PROSPERITY EVERYWHERE.

But it was not alone in the stock market that new records were made. Bank clearings reached never before heard-of totals, reflecting the great business activity of the country. New aggregates were created in the weekly bank exhibits. Our merchandise trade balance was far beyond all precedent. Railroad earnings were piling increases upon increases, with the result that companies out of the dividend list for years were resuming payments on their shares, and others making greater disbursements to their shareholders. New industries were springing up all over the country, and those longer established were enlarging their scope of activity; in fact, business conditions warranted confidence in the stability of the general prosperity at hand. The phenomenal ease of money was an inducement to speculation, vast sums being available at almost nominal rates. There was also a plethora of funds seeking investment in dividend-paying stocks and bonds, and this demand played an important part in the great upward movement.

A FEVER OF SPECULATION.

The bull fever had much to work on besides actualities. There were rumors of deals, mergers, and absorptions. Some of them of a most far-reaching character. Rumors that at times of less optimism would have been given scant attention found ready believers; a speculative fever had seized the country, and it was in a mood to look upon anything as possible. It was under the influence of these stories that the stock market reached its highest plane of activity and strength about the middle of January. It was announced that a great transcontinental system was being planned to reach from ocean to ocean, embracing the New York Central, Northwest, and Union Pacific. Official denials that any such deal was contemplated were without effect, and the Street was in a whirl of excitement.

PHENOMENAL MOVEMENTS.

On stories of a change in the status of the Pan Handle's relations with the Pennsylvania, and rumors that Canada Southern was to be made a special Vanderbilt favorite, these latter stocks had phenomenal and erratic movements. The former opened up one morning at 75, nearly 7 points above the previous closing price, and shortly touched 88, and almost as quickly fell back to 70. Canada Southern on the same day opened 2 points higher, at 61½, rose to 70, and receded in short order to 60. These two instances are cited as serving to illustrate the volatile nature of the speculation, and that the fever had developed into a craze.

SOME HESITATION SHOWN.

There was practically no hesitation in the advance until the beginning of February. There had been reactions, of course, but they were only temporary, and were followed by even a higher range of prices. The advance had been so rapid that conservative interests began to doubt its stability, but their withdrawal for the time being was only shown in the more quiet tone of the market. Its strength was well held in the face of some discouraging conditions. Disappointment was felt at the result of the meeting of the Burlington Directors to take action on a plan for refunding the company's debt which had been much discussed; foreign complications were suggested in a cable from Dewey asking that for political reasons the Oregon be sent to him at once, and more serious results from the rumored sinking of a German war vessel. Then, too, the great blizzard of Feb. 12, which blocked travel and tied up various lines temporarily, was naturally expected to show in decreased earnings. Political pressure against Manhattan Elevated for the removal of its structure from Battery Park caused anxiety among its shareholders, and there were other minor developments of an unsatisfactory character. The cold weather, however, remained the bullwarks ground and their backing sustained strength. The manipulation, per chance, of certain interests attracting attention Tobacco being particularly prominent, with a rapid advance of nearly 100 points in something more than a month. The movement was mysterious and attributed to manipulation. Later the absorption of the Union Tobacco Company and the declaration of a 100 per cent. stock dividend were looked upon as explanatory of the rise.

INDUSTRIALS IN FAVOR.

Many new industrial combinations were being brought out, and their shares presented an attractive field for speculation, as the gilt-edged stocks had gone beyond this stage. During the month of March the transactions were to a great extent confined to this class of properties. Some of the fluctuations in their shares were remarkable. American Sugar Refining, for instance, on stories that there was to be a settlement of the trade war, ran up from 136⅝ to 182; and advances of anywhere from 10 to 50 points were not rare. Brooklyn Rapid Transit also became a speculative favorite, rising to 136⅝ late in March, after selling earlier in the month at 89⅝. The advance in this latter stock was based on the fact of the company's securing control of the Nassau lines and the elevated roads in Brooklyn. There was also much talk of a combination embracing practically all the traction companies.

The active speculation in the industrial shares was in the face of tighter money conditions, rates at one time in March being as high as 12 per cent. This was due in a great measure to the withdrawal of funds for the launching of new industrial enterprises as well as payments connected with the Central Pacific debt settlement and the purchase of the Chicago and Alton.

FIRST QUARTER'S PRICES.

As the speculation during the first three months of the year was extraordinary in every way, and as it is impossible to go into a minute detail of the movement in every important stock, the following table has been prepared, giving the opening price of the year, the highest and lowest points touched, and the closing price of March 31 in forty leading properties:

The average advance from the opening of the year to the highest price was 25⅝ points, and to the end of the quarter over 21¼ points.

SHARP BREAK.

With the tighter money conditions prevailing at the end of March and the beginning of April, the banks began to use more caution in accepting industrials as collateral, in fact, began to really discriminate against them. The conservative brokerage houses also placed an embargo on transactions in this class of stocks by accepting orders in them only on the basis of 20 to 25 per cent. margin. Their advance had been so rapid, and so little was known of their actual worth, that there was no way of determining whether the higher range of values was other than purely speculative. Enforced liquidation came early in April as a result of this discrimination, and an advance in call money to 16 per cent. Many loans were called and much stock forced on the market, and the first serious break of the year occurred. It was not of long duration, however, as money conditions worked easier toward the end of April, and the much lower range of prices attracted those who had been out of the market expecting just such a decline.

The railroad shares at this time suffered in sympathy with the industrials, but not to such a marked extent, and for the first time since the beginning of January there appeared to be two sides to the market. The recovery from the decline early in April was almost as sharp as the latter had been, and confidence was to a great extent restored.

FORD FRANCHISE BILL.

Early in May came the passage of the Ford Franchise bill, seeking to tax franchises the same as real estate, and this had a most unsettling effect upon the general market, and the local traction stocks particularly. Under its influence Brooklyn Rapid Transit broke 10 points, and Metropolitan Street Railway shares were also severely depressed, the former selling from 81⅞ to 73 cents. Gas, the Brooklyn Union Company following with a reduction to 97 cents. The former company also changed its annual dividend basis from 8 to 6 per cent., this latter event taking place later in the month. The character of any favorable action at this time may be seen by a glance at the following table, giving the high point of the year; the low point in the early April break; the subsequent recovery, and the low points made early in May after the passage of the Ford bill:

DEATH OF EX-GOV. FLOWER.

While the market was still suffering from the effects of the passage of the Ford bill it received a most serious shock—as sudden as it was unexpected—the death of ex-Gov. Flower, which occurred on the afternoon of May 12. Leaving the Street in apparently good health for a visit to the Country Club on Long Island, of which he was a member, there was no intimation that the man who had become the most prominent figure in the Street would never return to the scene of his labors. It was late in the evening when the news of Mr. Flower's death reached the up-town clubs and hotels where brokers congregate. At first the report was doubted, but the sad confirmation soon came and expressions of grief and regret were heard on every side.

The great majority of investors, traders, speculators, and Wall Street men generally as well as the general public did not learn of Mr. Flower's death until they opened their morning newspapers. There was no time to remargin the accounts of out-of-town clients, nor, in fact, to reach many of the city customers of the brokerage houses. Mr. Flower's following was numbered by thousands; in him they placed implicit confidence—confidence that was justified because every promise made by him to the public was kept, and they had seen the properties with which his name was identified increase in value probably beyond that of any other group of stocks dealt in on the Exchange.

HOW PRICES SUFFERED.

His sudden death caused consternation and panic among them, and on the morning following there was a wild rush to sell. Weakly margined accounts were wiped out, stop-loss orders uncovered, pyramided profits toppled over, and for a time semi-panic reigned. In the two hours of business there were dealings in the record-breaking total of 745,000 shares. There was time for calm reflection on Sunday, and on Monday the market opened with much quieter conditions prevailing. No better proof of the faith in the soundness of basiiar conditions could be found than in the sharp recovery that followed the first onslaught on prices on Saturday. In almost every instance opening prices on that day were the lowest, and a few days later quotations were in many cases higher than they were before Mr. Flower's death. The break had shook out weak holders and brought renewed buying for both investment and speculative account.

THE RANGE OF QUOTATIONS.

JAN

DIVIDENDS IN FAVOR OF THIS COUNTRY'S TRADE BALANCE IMPORTS, THE PAYMENT OF THE FINAL INSTALLMENT OF THE INDEMNITY FUND TO CHINA, AND OTHER CONDITIONS IN THE MONEY MARKET, IN THE MONTH UNDER REVIEW.

Prices of money in the month under review, as to a great extent, of a preparatory character.

Business Activities. The great boom was seemingly over, and stock market fluctuations were governed from day to day by reports of shortage of crops, yellow fever scares, and the likelihood of gold exports. The latter became a certainty in June, and quite a heavy amount of the yellow metal was sent out, although the publication of the May Trade Statement by the Bureau of Statistics showed there was no seeming warrant for the outflow.

INDUSTRIALS LESS PROMINENT.

There continued to be sharp and violent movements in the industrial shares, but these latter began to find less favor with the speculators and the public generally. The weakness in them when market conditions were unfavorable made operators chary of them. The failure of the American Steel and Wire Directors to declare a much-talked-of and expected dividend on the common stock, and the serving of an injunction restraining the Federal Steel Company from paying dividends, gave them a still greater set-back.

In view of these conditions activity began to grow in the railroad list, and much attention was given to the splendid statements of earnings of the great lines of the South and West, as well as those nearer home. An increase in the semi-annual dividend rate on Atchison, Topeka and Santa Fé preferred stock evidenced the growing business of the railroads.

BOSTON AND ALBANY DEAL.

A new impetus, however, was given to speculation late in June in the announcement that the New York Central had secured control of the Boston and Albany, the most important railroad deal in years and far-reaching in its consequences. The effect on values was immediate, and from a drifting, listless speculation activity and strength were developed. Soon came the announcement that a new alliance had been formed by the Pennsylvania and New York Central, and there was intimations of still greater developments in the railroad world.

MIDSUMMER DULLNESS.

The midsummer months were, on the whole, dull ones, although there was now and then a spurt of activity in special groups. Conditions in the commercial, railroad, and business world generally were continuously improving. Iron and steel particularly were in unprecedented demand, and furnaces and plants that had been unused for years were pressed into service to meet the inquiries for the product. Old contracts expired, and many of the companies were making new ones on a much higher basis, yielding a great share of profit to the producer. Every line of trade and industry reported prosperity; in fact, every basilar condition was of the soundest.

Wall Street, however, during July gave much attention to the money market, the shrinking bank reserves causing much uneasiness. The strike on the Brooklyn Rapid Transit system about the middle of that month was accompanied by an effort to tie up the Metropolitan Street Railway, but both were practically failures. While the street railway shares were to some extent affected by the strike, there was no serious break in them. Transactions at the end of July were at the minimum of the year.

PROSPERITY OF THE RAILROADS.

The declaration of the first dividend on Chesapeake and Ohio and increases in rates paid on other prominent shares drew renewed attention to the prosperity of the railroads, and there was a sharp upward movement late in August which was to a great extent helped by easier money conditions. Then, too, the already referred to prosperity of the iron and steel industries made the shares of these companies attractive, Tennessee Coal and Iron particularly scoring a very sharp advance.

The financial sky was not unclouded, however, and the passage of the dividend on International Paper and a further reduction from a 6 to 4 per cent. in the annual dividend rate on Consolidated Gas were rather depressing events. The latter stock was not affected greatly, but the former declined quite heavily.

Coincident with the publication of the annual report of the Brooklyn Rapid Transit Company came a sharp attack on its shares that before its culmination wiped out the advance made earlier in the year. Other events of the late Summer that had more or less influence on stock speculation were a run on the Canadian banks and the announcement by Secretary Gage that he had decided to resume the issue of gold certificates suspended when the gold in the Treasury dropped below the one hundred million mark in 1893.

MONEY CONDITIONS PROMINENT.

Some new phases appeared in the situation in the early Fall, the most important being the premonition of trouble in the Transvaal, leading to depression in London, and the selling of American shares in that market. Advancing money rates, coupled with decreasing bank reserves, created a feeling of insecurity, and there was considerable liquidation, some of it forced through the calling of loans by the banks in an endeavor to ostrengthen their position. The failure of the St. Paul Directors to increase the dividend rate on the shares of the company, in view of its heavily increased earnings, was not looked upon with favor, although in conservative quarters their action met with approval. The local traction shares were the leaders in active selling movement at the end of September. Money at this time loaned as high as 40 per cent. on call, and there was a further increase of liquidation. The market was dull, however, being restricted by the dearness of money.

MARKET MOVEMENTS SHOWN.

The movement in important stocks during the Summer and early Fall is given in the following table, showing the low prices early in June, the best prices made in July, after the announcement of the Boston and Albany deal; the highest prices touched in the August upward movement, and the low prices reached at the beginning of October:

HELP FROM THE TREASURY.

Events with important bearing on the financial markets crowded on each other in the last months of the year, many of them of a depressing character. An advance in the Bank of England rate of discount from 3½ to 4½ per cent. and then to 5 per cent. in one week was in itself an indication of a serious situation in foreign affairs, and was all the more pronounced as the high money rates prevailing had just begun to attract gold shipments, and indications were that a considerable amount of the yellow metal would be imported. The sudden marking up of the Bank of England's discount rate put an end to any hopes of further relief to the money market from this source.

The heavy Treasury withdrawals from the banks as well as the outflow of money to move the crops was being naturally shown in the falling surplus reserve. Secretary Gage gave some relief by announcing early in October that interest due in November and July next would be prepaid at a slight rebate.

THE TRANSVAAL WAR.

The most important event, however, was the outbreak of the war in the Transvaal, and was followed by heavy liquidation for London account. The situation showed some improvement late in October, and there was a renewed demand for important railroad shares both from investment and speculative sources, and the market developed considerable buoyancy.

The Vanderbilt issues were important factors in the advance, and there was also a sharp upward movement in United States Leather, based on a prospective change in the status of the shares. The previously rumored consolidation of the Pullman Palace Car and Wagner Companies became a certainty, and was looked upon as a favorable indication of the trend of the times to economy for the benefit of stockholders.

TREASURY'S BOND OFFER.

The result of the elections was overshadowed by increasing tension in the money market, the banks falling below the legal limit of reserve for the first time since 1893. The declining quotations for foreign exchange due to the extremely high money rates were looked upon with satisfaction in the belief that gold imports would soon be made possible. Relief came from another direction in the announcement by the Treasury Department that it would purchase $25,000,000 Government bonds at current prices. This news was received with considerable pleasure by Wall Street, as showing a desire on the part of Secretary Gage to relieve the money market strain. It had a temporary effect in that direction and stronger prices were the result. The Baltimore and Ohio issues were particularly prominent, and the reason was found in the later announcement of a traffic alliance between that property, the Pennsylvania, and the New York Central.

SERIES OF DISTRESSING EVENTS.

Occurrences at the close of the year are of such recent date as to need but little comment. They were nearly all of a demoralizing character, and in December the stock market was under the greatest strain since the panic days of 1893. First of all came the advance in the Bank of England rate of discount from 5 to 6 per cent., the highest rate in nine years. Following that, the decision of the Court of Appeals in the Iron Pipe Trust case declaring it an illegal concern was looked upon as a serious blow to all existing industrial combinations, although the lines upon which it was formed were entirely different from those of the other prominent companies. The President's message to Congress containing a note of warning to that body in reference to the trusts was also construed in some quarters as detrimental to them.

DEMORALIZATION AND PANIC.

These latter [illegible] were seized upon by the [illegible] to depress [illegible] sternation and panic in London, and forcing liquidation, which spread to this market as well. Bank troubles in Boston intensified the situation, and the gloom was still further increased by engagements of gold for export and the prospect of a heavy outward movement. The failure of the Produce Exchange Trust Company, followed by that of a prominent Stock Exchange house, added to the panicky feeling, particularly as there were all sorts of rumors of impending disaster in other important directions. Money ran up to 186 per cent., and the stock market was in a complete state of demoralization. The offering of millions to loan at 6 per cent. by the Clearing House institutions brightened the situation and the scare subsided. The decision of the Treasury to deposit with qualified banks the daily receipts from internal revenue sources also made a favorable impression. During the intense weakness Brooklyn Rapid Transit was picked out as a special target for the bears, and many rumors unfavorable to the company were freely circulated. These were officially denied, and the matter was brought before the Grand Jury in an endeavor to punish the originators of the stories should they be discovered.

In the depression at the end of the year favorable incidents were entirely without effect and were passed almost unnoticed. So it happened that increases in dividends on Omaha, Northwest common, Chicago, Great Western preferred, Atchison preferred, and New York Central, while further evidencing the general prosperity of the country, were overshadowed by the surface conditions existing at the moment.

On the final days of the year the market rallied sharply, and there was evidence of good investment buying, particularly in the bond market. Shrewd speculators also appeared to be picking up bargains in the belief that with normal conditions prevailing in the money market, the great prosperity of the railroads and the business world generally must be reflected in vastly improved prices.

SEVERITY OF THE DECLINE.

The sharpness of the drop in prices in the last few weeks of the year, and the subsequent rally at its end, is shown in the following table, giving the highest in November and December, the lowest price in the latter month, and the closing price of year:

Stock Exchange Listings—1899.

The additions to the Stock Exchange lists during the past year, either of new companies or of increases to those already listed, present in the aggregate an unequaled record. This is taking into account the industrial corporations which were admitted to dealings in the unlisted department during that time.

The total amount of bonds listed shows a falling off of more than $170,000,000, as compared with 1898, but is more than a like amount greater than 1897. The stock additions to the regular list, however, were over $105,000,000 more than in 1898, and when the capital represented by the unlisted industrial shares is considered there is no comparison possible with any year in the history of the Stock Exchange. The total of all the securities placed on the lists during 1899 reached the phenomenal figures of $1,750,025,173. Deducting the $526,004,900 represented by the unlisted department stocks, the amount of new capital involved is not so stupendous.

The Baltimore and Ohio issues, for instance, stand for about $274,000,000, and merely replace the old securities wiped out in the reorganization of the company. So, too, the Brooklyn Union Elevated takes the place of the old Brooklyn Elevated, and the Illinois Division 3½s of the Chicago, Burlington and Quincy, the Chicago, Burlington and Northern, and other branch lines.

The Colorado Southern securities represent the reorganized Union Pacific, Denver and Gulf and Hocking Valley, the Columbus, Hocking Valley and Toledo, and the acquisition of the Toledo and Ohio Central. The heavy issue of Southern Pacific securities was for the purpose of acquiring the Central Pacific and the amounts of Union Pacific listed represent the securities of that road issued in exchange for Oregon Short Line and Oregon Railroad and Navigation stocks and bonds. The heavy increase in Great Northern stock is the same way was in exchange for St. Paul, Minneapolis and Manitoba. The New York Gas, Electric Light and Power bonds replace the Edison Electric Illuminating [illegible]

NOTES.—The high and low prices in this table, unless otherwise designated, are based on sales of 100-share lots. *Sales of less than 100 shares. All Stocks par $100 except Cleveland & Pittsburg preferred, Delaware, Lackawanna & Western, Evansville & Terre Haute common and preferred, Kingston & Pembroke, Long Island, Morris & Essex, Harlem, Pittsburg, McKeesport & Youghiogheny, Pittsburg & Western preferred, Reading common, first, and second preferred; American Tobacco common, Pennsylvania Coal, Philadelphia Company, Detroit City Gas, the par of each of which is $50. The par of American Coal is $25, and of New Central Coal $20. The net change for the year represents the difference between the opening and closing prices of the year. †In addition to the regular dividend payment on the date given, the following paid extra amounts: Burlington, Cedar Rapids & Northern, 3 per cent.; Commercial Cable, 1 per cent.; Maryland Coal preferred, 1 per cent.; Louisville & Nashville, 1 per cent.; Pacific Coast 2-3 on first preferred and 1-3 on second preferred, the two latter to correspond with change in dividend period from semi-anual to quarterly. ‡Dividend restrained by an injunction. §In preferred stock 1st par. Where no amount appears in the column of capital outstanding, with the exception of Wisconsin Central new securities, Pennsylvania, and New York Central rights, the Company's shares are as above. ||The new Wheeling & Lake Erie succeeds the Steubenville, Bridgeport & Wheeling Railway, the Kinshaning Valley & Ohio, the Columbus, Hocking Valley & Toledo; Cleveland, Cincinnati, Chicago & St. Louis, and the Cleveland & Pittsburg. ¶The new Wisconsin Central succeeds the Chicago, St. Paul, Minneapolis & Omaha, the Union Pacific, Denver & Gulf, and the St. Paul, Minneapolis & Manitoba. #1st & Pere Marquette in the process of consolidation with other roads into the Pere Marquette Company. The capital of Bay State Gas is given, as it is still quoted in per cents. Stock has been called from the Stock Exchange. A—Annual. S—Semi-annual. Q—Quarterly. M—Monthly. The Remarkable Activity in Outside Securities.

A YEAR WITHOUT PRECEDENT FOR THE NUMBER AND AMOUNT OF UNLISTED STOCKS DEALT IN.

Record of curb market transactions during the past year is in many ways a counterpart of the more important market on the Stock Exchange, where dealings were in unprecedented amount. The phenomenal number of new incorporations, whether representing new capital or reorganization of established concerns, led to a condition where promoters, and afterward holders of stocks, sought a convenient place of sale for the new securities. In the curb, which up to the Winter of the year before last was a relatively unimportant part of the general market, was found a most convenient medium, and it was most extensively used for the purpose of establishing prices for a large number of the industrial and other stocks launched late in 1898, and during the early part of last year. Transactions of the kind that up to that time had furnished by far the larger part of curb dealings continued, but the business supplied by newly incorporated undertakings far exceeded in amount the older form of transactions. Where before a small number of brokers were able to handle all the business that drifted into the unorganized market, the number of brokers which new conditions made necessary was very large. Besides those whose principal business consisted of outside dealings, many prominent Stock Exchange houses sent representatives to the curb and thus very materially increased the number of brokers who transacted business there.

During the year one or two efforts to give the curb market formal existence were made, but they led to nothing, and the vast business transacted during the early part of the year was carried on under no set of rules buf those of custom, and with practically no guarantee but personal honesty. It seems a fact worthy of note that notwithstanding the absence of anything like organization, business of such magnitude was carried on with very little, if any, misunderstanding, and without any serious difficulty.

INCREASED IMPORTANCE OF CURB.

The past year has very materially increased the importance of the curb, and seems to have given it a permanent place as a part of the regular machinery of the general market. The apparent looseness of the rules governing the trading seems to offer opportunity for efforts to impose upon the public, but with one or two exceptions dishonest flotations of stocks were prevented by the united efforts of the conservative elements in the curb market, who made it very difficult for such dishonest efforts to meet with any success.

Principal among the causes leading to the important position assumed by the curb market within the last twelve months was, as noted, the large number of new stocks offered to the public. New issues found a ready sale there, and promoters very generally used it for the first trading in the stocks which they presented to investors. Then, too, the desire for speculation, which was to a large degree responsible for the phenomenal activity last Spring, sought that market, and a very large part of curb business was supplied by the general public. A number of issues thus introduced to the curb remained there but a short time until arrangements were made to list them in one department or the other of the Stock Exchange. Dealings in the issues that were thus transferred reached a very large amount, but scarcely less important were the transactions in the stocks which at the end of the year were still included among the stocks regularly dealt in in the outside market. Some idea of the enormous increase in the source of curb market business may be had from the statement that the securities put on the curb during the past year, and which still remain there, represent a capitalization of upward of $800,000,000. Were the stocks that after the initial tradings were transferred to the Stock Exchange included, this amount would be greatly exceeded. From this it can be seen that the increase in business during the past year has been enormous.

As was the case on the Exchange, the period of greatest activity was in the first half of the year, probably the most active months being March and April. Daily averages of transactions at that time amounted to tens of thousands of shares, single stocks supplying as much as 15,000 or 20,000 shares. In the early Summer, when practically the first checks to the phenomenal advances seen early in the year were had, speculation became smaller, and the amount of transactions very considerably decreased. They continued to grow less and less, till, during the Fall, there were days when business on the curb practically at a standstill. Later it revived somewhat, and during the last two months of the year there were many days that showed considerable activity. The decrease in trading was due in large measure to the fact that relatively few new undertakings were launched during the latter part of the year, but a not less important factor in this connection was the very large falling off in speculative purchases. In the Spring speculation in the outside market ran wild, prices were advanced practically without regard to the intrinsic value of stocks, the future was discounted to a degree that inevitably led to the very sharp reactions that followed the first enthusiastic buying, and the natural result was the withdrawing from the market of many who were very active in it early in the year, and market dullness necessarily ensued.

Though the year's record in many of the issues that may properly be considered as in the speculative list is in many cases of a somewhat discouraging nature, the year's transactions in many stocks of a more substantial character led to results that can be viewed as very satisfactory. In many stocks the year's final figures show very substantial improvement over those of the close of 1898, and it would seem that the past twelve months have very much improved the market standing of many curb stocks. In view of the vast amount of new securities which found their way to this market, and of the great tax which these untried issues necessarily proved at times during the year on the strength of that market, the year's record may be considered as affording marked proof of the stability of the financial condition accompanying the vast increase in industry and in business of all kinds that has made the past year a notable one in the industrial and commercial history of the country. That entirely new securities, representing capitalizations of tens of millions should pass through the varying fortunes of a year's market, including periods of semi-panic, and yet show relative steadiness, is certainly a sign of financial strength. Among the causes that helped to strengthen the outside market and furnish it with support at moments of weakness, was the fact that most of the business in that market was transacted on a cash basis, and thus the difficulties and losses resulting from operations conducted on a margin basis were, to a very large extent, eliminated.

EARLY YEAR ACTIVITY.

Most noteworthy of the periods of the past year was that of the greatest activity, which reached its culmination in April. During this time, when daily transactions ran into the tens of thousands of shares, a very large proportion of the curb stocks reached their highest point for the year. Especially was this the case in the stocks which were most extensively speculated in, notable among which were many of the so-called electric stocks. In some issues highest prices for the year were recorded during the period of relative quiet which followed the new year activity, while in a few top prices were reached late in the year, when the list generally showed recovery from the lowest prices touched in the dull period of the early Fall.

During the Spring almost every week added some new security to the list of stocks actively traded in, and each of these in turn became a medium of speculation used by market traders, as well as by the general public. Many of these new issues were floated with all the promise of meeting with phenomenal success, the industrial activity of the country spoken of on every hand serving as an excellent argument for the use of those whose interests led them to induce public buying of the new securities. In the conditions prevailing during this period it was in almost every case found an easy matter to lead the public into any new stock that was offered with sufficient promise of great achievement. Manipulation was employed to make the securities market-wise attractive, and in some cases they were taken up by the public in such a way that prices for them were advanced probably far beyond any anticipation of those who were the first to recommend them. Only wild speculation could account for some of the prices recorded, for in many cases immediate intrinsic worth of stocks was practically ignored, and the most unfounded hopes were expressed in the prices paid for some issues that the early part of the year brought into existence.

SPECULATION IN ELECTRIC STOCKS.

It was probably in the electrical stocks that speculation was the broadest. As in every period of extensive speculation some particular class of securities is viewed as the one offering the greatest chances for fortunes of a day's making, stocks of companies engaged in the introduction of various electrical appliances seemed during the period of this activity most attractive to speculators. Stocks of this kind floated during the first half of the year, and which became active in the outside market, amounted to about $100,000,000, and this large amount of stock furnished ample medium for the expansion of speculative inclinations. Many of these securities, no doubt, were based on undertakings of real merit, which, properly developed, will likely lead to most satisfactory profits, but in the prices paid for them the future was to an entirely too great an extent discounted. Among these stocks were some that sold at premiums of between 200 and 300 per cent. over their paid-in value, and it was not surprising that these extraordinary figures should lead to very serious reactions. The record of the course of prices in two or three of these stocks will give an idea of the speculative tendency of that period. Electric Vehicle common, which in January showed below 20, advanced to 151, while the preferred stock went from 60 to about 140; New York Transportation, with a paid-in value of $10, sold up to about $70, while New England Transportation, with the same equal cash investment, went to about 35. In all of these stocks the last figures for the year showed a very considerable decline from the highest figures, some of them closing considerably below the prices at which the first sales of the year were made.

COPPER STOCKS.

Speculation was not less extensive in other classes of securities, but it was quieter, and the range of prices in the industrial stocks was less wide than that which marked the trading in Electric Vehicle and some of its subsidiary companies. Later in the year, with the advent in the market of Amalgamated Copper, some attention was given to copper stocks, and there was some speculation in these issues, but curb market trading in mining stocks was a relatively unimportant part of the year's business. With the single exception of Amalgamated Copper, securities of this class were traded in only to a limited extent, and the range of prices for them was relatively narrow. In this one issue transactions were on a very large scale, and at one time it promised to be the medium of very extensive and very free speculation. When the formation of the Amalgamated Copper Company was announced, many predicted for it the most phenomenal prices, and following the lead of Boston, some purchases of Amalgamated Copper before the stock was actively traded in in the outside market were made at figures which, compared with the opening sales in that market, represented a very considerable loss. First public sales of Amalgamated Copper were made in the neighborhood of 112, but from this figure the price declined quickly to the subscription price. It remained here for a considerable time fixed by the bids for unlimited amounts of the stock made by brokers representing inside interests. A very considerable proportion of all the stock issued was, it was calculated, bought back from the public by the insiders at the subscription price, and as long as these bids were kept in the market they continued to bring out large amounts of the stock. When this inside support was withdrawn the price of Amalgamated Copper went off very sharply, declining under 80. There followed a recovery that brought the stock back to near par, and from that time on Amalgamated Copper in the general way followed the rest of the market. After some fluctuation it became fairly steady, at about 80, and during the last month of the year ruled at about this figure, which showed a decline of about 30 points from the opening sale. But considered in itself the trading in Amalgamated Copper was a relatively unimportant part of the year's record in the outside market. Much more interest attaches to the course of the industrial stocks, because of their larger number, and of the fact that they represent in much larger degree the general condition prevailing in the market during the past year.

LISTED ON STOCK EXCHANGE.

Prominent among the active industrials during the early part of the year were several stocks that were subsequently transferred to the Stock Exchange. Some of these were Continental Tobacco, Glucose Sugar, American Smelting and Refining, American Steel and Wire, and several other industrial stocks, subsequently prominent in Stock Exchange dealings. In all of these issues transactions were very large, and in most of them the prices prevailing at the time they were transferred to the larger market showed very considerable advances over the figures representing the initial sales. Some of these stocks were put on the Exchange during the first quarter, but a larger number were transferred during the following three months. During the second half of the year relatively few stocks were taken from the curb market to the floor of the Exchange, though these transfers were made at long intervals during this period. Removals from the curb to the Stock Exchange lessened in number in proportion to the decrease in the number of the new flotations of stock, which became much less frequent after the first four or five months of the year were over.

TRADING IN INDUSTRIALS.

Much the same course was followed by nearly all the industrial stocks that were prominent in curb trading at one time or another during the year, and which remained in the outside market until its close. In many of these highest prices for the year were not reached until midsummer, and in some few cases closing figures for the year were quite near these highest prices. Practically none of them passed through the Fall dullness without very considerable declines from the best previously recorded prices, but later recoveries to a large extent repaired the unfavorable results of this period of relative inactivity, and brought these stocks to the beginning of the period of liquidation that began in December at a level of prices that compared not unfavorably with the best for the year. In December liquidation was very heavy and culminated in the third week in heavy declines throughout nearly the entire list. During this period some very low prices were recorded, for the reason that apprehension as to the course the market might follow in the next few weeks led to general sacrificing of stocks practically at the best figures they would bring. In some issues the selling that brought about these declines was not very heavy, and these furnished a good exemplification of the feeling existing during that particular period in that it showed that apprehension had become so general that few were willing to buy. Those who entered the market at a time when conditions approached panic naturally had no disposition to bid up for stocks, and it was only when buying of this kind was induced that the declines that began early in December were checked. Recovery from the very low prices recorded during the third week of December was sharp, and during the last ten days of trading prices showed great improvement, some of the stocks that suffered most in the panic regaining as much as 20 points of their loss. This was the case in both issues of Electric Vehicle and in Standard Oil, and relatively as large recoveries were had in many other issues. Persons who sold stock early in the month became buyers at its close, and seemingly as much confidence in the future of the market was felt when the year came to a close as apprehension had been expressed during the first part of this last month.

GAS STOCKS.

Owing to the bitter fight between the several local gas companies very much interest attached to the course of the gas stocks dealt in on the curb. The only one of these which was active throughout the year was New Amsterdam, the trading in which was during long periods exceptionally active, both when the prices were advancing early in the year and later, when all these issues suffered very serious losses. Highest prices were reached late in the Spring about the time when transactions in the outside market were largest. Compared with the first prices of the year, the figures recorded at that time showed in the common stock an advance of about 10 points, in the preferred stock of about 6 points, and a smaller increase in the price of the bonds. About this time the gas war was openly entered upon by the New Amsterdam and the other gas companies, and then followed a long period of irregularity, during which the New Amsterdam stocks fluctuated a good deal, but showed a continued downward tendency. Rumors of settlement were very often heard, but always met with more or less prompt denial and were proved entirely unfounded by subsequent developments. It was not until the end of the year that signs were had that at last some real progress had been made toward a settlement, and some assurance given that the stocks would not longer be submitted to the vicissitude of fierce competition. These intimations of improvements in the gas situation found the New Amsterdam issues at their lowest. The common stock had declined from about 45 to 19, the preferred stock from 75 to 40, and the bonds from 104 to 87. Recoveries of a number of points brought these issues to the close of the year with a net loss in the common stock of 12 points, in the preferred stock of 26½ points, and in the bonds of 8¼ points. It was not until quite late in the year that very serious declines offered in the bonds, which was due in part to the fact that they were not subjected to the determined bear attacks that were in no small part responsible for the earlier losses in the common and preferred stocks. It was generally admitted that at the prevailing rates of gas all the companies were doing business at a loss, and only the cessation of the gas war could give any hope of any substantial improvement in the New Amsterdam issues. That such improvement was at hand was more or less generally believed at the close of the year.

CLOSING YEAR CONDITIONS.

In the condition of the market on the final days of the year there seemed every indication that the beginning of the new year might be marked by favorable conditions in the outside market. Sweeping declines had, to a large extent, cut prices down from the unreasonably high level which they reached earlier in the year, and thus placed them on a more solid foundation. Moreover, the close of the year brought a number of the new industrial stocks to a point where the distribution of dividends might be expected soon to be extended to the common stocks and a chance thus given to the public to obtain practical indication of the relative merits of the many new issues that the past year brought upon the market.

The accompanying tables will give an idea of the net results attained in the various quarters of the market by the past year's trading. Among investment securities are many that show enormous net gains, giving proof of the demand which developed for issues offering safe channels of investment—an indication of the reality of the prosperity which the country has enjoyed as a result of industrial and commercial activity. In stocks belonging less strictly to the investments class the record is not in all cases as satisfactory, but there, too, is found evidence that good demand was had for securities representing sound undertakings and offering reasonably large profits. The ungoverned speculation of the early part of the year so often advanced prices beyond a reasonable limit that no other than the result which followed could be expected. In the declines which followed the first advances, practically all stocks suffered more or less as well those which to a large degree had been the medium of speculation as those which had not. One of the conditions that proved the greatest danger to the market was the general disposition to overcapitalize almost every undertaking. In this the future was discounted, and long before any returns on new issues could be expected, the prices of many stocks had advanced to figures which they might more reasonably be expected to attain only when dividends offering substantial proofs of the stocks' value had been begun.

Following are the closing prices in most of the prominent curb securities compared with the last prices of 1898, and the net changes in these securities resulting from the year's trading:

Industrial Incorporations of a Year.

IMMENSE AMOUNT OF CAPITAL INVOLVED IN THE MORE NOTABLE OF THESE ENTERPRISES.

The incorporations during the year just ended were more numerous than for any like period in the history of the country, and the capital involved is almost beyond comprehension. No better evidence of the prosperity of the country, in practically every line of trade and manufacture, could be found than that enterprises sprang up almost in every direction, many of them gigantic and far reaching in their proportions and others more limited in their field. When it is stated that in the first three months of last year the aggregate of the incorporations was equal to that of the full year of 1898, which was itself a record breaker in this direction, the increase in the number of the combinations of capital and industry can be more readily imagined. A rough estimate of just the important incorporations—those to which Wall Street gave attention—places the amount of their capitalization at more than $4,207,000,000, of which nearly $2,896,000,000 was common stock.

The appended list will give some idea of how this vast amount of capital is distributed. It makes no pretense of completeness, for such a record could only be obtained by searching the books of almost every State in the Union. But many of those herewith given became prominent in the dealings of the year, and are a part of its history. The compilation is also of consequence as showing the trend of the times toward combination in almost every line of industry.

AND ALL OTHER UNLISTED SECURITIES.

MONEY AND EXCHANGE.

Money was in bountiful supply during the first months of 1899, and rates were almost nominal, attracting speculation as well as increased activity in trade and commercial affairs. As a result of this demand the supply of available funds decreased rapidly, and toward the end of March rates hardened perceptibly, particularly as the April interest disbursements compelled the banks to call in much of their loans for that purpose. During April the money market was disturbed by the Central Pacific debt settlement, the payment of the Chicago and Alton purchase money, and the tying up of funds in connection with some of the great industrial enterprises that were being financed. Rates during that month and the next were at a high level. Easier conditions prevailed during June, but the July interest payments again caused the market to work closer.

The steady outflow of currency and the withdrawal of Treasury funds were being shown in the dwindling reserves of the banks, and the latter to strengthen their positions began to discriminate in the character of their loans, as well as to call in many of those that were outstanding. This resulted in a sharp advance in rates during October, and well into November. The releasing of funds by the Treasury for prepayment of interest and later the offer to purchase $25,000,000 Government bonds at market prices helped the money market considerably, and there was a sharp fall from the high rates early in the month, money being available late in November at 2 and 3 per cent. In the panic in December call loans reached their maximum, in fact, the highest quotations touched since 1873—186 per cent. The Clearing House institutions, however, came to the rescue, loaning millions at 6 per cent., and money at the close of the year could be had at fairly easy rates. It is worth noting that even when call loans were at their highest points time funds could be had at 6 per cent. on good collateral.

Foreign exchange rates were easy in the early months of the year, the first sharp advances taking place in April and May, in anticipation of gold being exported in connection with the indemnity payment to Spain. In June considerable gold was exported, although rates did not seem to warrant the outflow. The higher money rates at home caused a weaker tendency, but this was offset by the outbreak of the war in the Transvaal, the higher discount rates in the open market abroad, and the sharp advances made in its discount rate by the Bank of England. Toward the end of the year these influences predominated, and there were considerable shipments of gold.

HELPS EMPLOYES TO INSURE.

Chicago and Alton Railroad Will Pay Half the Premiums in Some Cases and Thirty Per Cent. in Others.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, Jan. 1.—The Chicago and Alton Railroad Company has inaugurated a new plan of assisting its thousands of employes to provide themselves with accident and life insurance. It has announced in a private circular that hereafter the company will pay a proportion of the premiums of certain classes of insurance distributed among its employes according to grade and risk.

The reason given by the company for this departure is that hitherto the rates demanded of railroad employes for both accident and life insurance have been nearly prohibitory. It has made a contract with one of the largest companies in the East, and will pay hereafter one-half the premiums on policies issued to conductors, baggagemen, brakemen, engineers, firemen bridge carpenters, and yard foremen, and switchmen. For all other employes, on account of the lower rates offered to them, the company will pay 30 per cent. of the premiums.

For those of the employes who may desire it, there will also be issued five-year policies insuring the employe against death from natural causes.

PENNSYLVANIA ROAD PENSIONS.

PHILADELPHIA, Jan. 1.—The system of pensioning old employes of the Pennsylvania Railroad Company on the lines east of Pittsburg was inaugurated to-day. About 950 men were retired on pensions that average nearly half the wages they received when at work.

It is understood that a sum approximating $300,000 a year is at present available for pensioning purposes, and that before the system can be extended to the lines west of Pittsburg a much larger appropriation will be necessary. Thus far no person holding a position of importance has been affected by the pension rule.

MR. CARNEGIE'S GIFT TO COOPER UNION

FOUNDER'S PLAN COMPLETE

Andrew Carnegie has given $300,000 to establish a Mechanics' Arts Day School in Cooper Union, the last department in the scheme of Peter Cooper. In his letter accompanying the trust deed, he said: "I desire to make this institution contribute in every way to aid the efforts of youth to acquire useful knowledge and to find and fill that place in the community where their capacity and talents can be usefully employed with the greatest possible advantage to themselves and to the community in which they live."

Of the various departments for whose establishment the trust deed provided specifically, this day school only has not been opened, and this has been due to the fact that the funds at the disposal of the Board of Trustees have not warranted the expenditure necessary for this purpose. The intention of the founder, however, has been borne constantly in mind by them, and they have only awaited favorable conditions to carry it into effect.

Some time ago, when the Board of Education decided that such a school ought to be opened, the Trustees of Cooper Union offered them the use of the building rent free. The Board of Education, however, failed to take advantage of the offer, preferring apparently to set up a school of this kind which would be wholly under their control and in a building owned by them. Nothing, however, was done to put the scheme into operation, and no such school has yet been started by the Department of Education.

MR. HEWITT'S INQUIRIES.

Recently ex-Mayor Abram S. Hewitt wrote to City Superintendent William H. Maxwell to inquire if such a school was in operation, and received a reply stating there was not, and expressing regret that there should not be, as the need of a school of that character was great. Further correspondence passed between Mr. Hewitt and Superintendent Maxwell on the subject.

Meanwhile Mr. Carnegie, between whom and Mr. Hewitt warm personal friendship exists, called upon the ex-Mayor and in the course of conversation this matter came up. Mr. Carnegie showed great interest in the subject, and asked Mr. Hewitt how much would be necessary to carry into effect this final part of Peter Cooper's philanthropic scheme. Mr. Hewitt replied that about $500,000 would be required. He added that ex-Mayor Edward Cooper and himself had already given a great deal from their own means to carry out the benevolent plans of the founder of the Union, but he believed that they would give $200,000 more if the other $300,000 was forthcoming. Thereupon, to Mr. Hewitt's surprise and delight, Mr. Carnegie said, "I shall give the $300,000." Mr. Hewitt told him that he did not think he could give $300,000 to any worthier cause.

ANDREW CARNEGIE'S OFFER.

As a result of this interview the following letter was written by Mr. Carnegie to Mr. Hewitt:

"New York, Dec. 20, 1899.

"My Dear Friend: I have just learned that $300,000 would enable the Trustees of the Cooper Union to establish the last department of the great founder's scheme, namely, a day school, similar to your highly successful night school, which gives practical instruction calculated to enable the young to become first-class workmen.

"Perhaps you will permit me to supply the sum needed.

"As a humble follower of Peter Cooper, among the first of our disciples of the true gospel of wealth, it would be a rare satisfaction indeed for me to be allowed to feel that I had contributed the last stone, as it were, to the cairn of his great benefaction.

"If I am thought worthy of being granted this privilege, I shall send you $300,000 good railroad 5 per cent. mortgage bonds, and thank you for the opportunity.

THE TRUSTEES' ACCEPTANCE.

In response to this the following letter of acceptance was mailed yesterday:

"Cooper Union,
"New York, Jan. 1, 1900.

"Dear Mr. Carnegie: The Trustees of the Cooper Union, having been placed in possession of your graceful letter, addressed to Mr. Hewitt personally, and which he has acknowledged, beg leave to express their grateful sense of the munificent endowment of $300,000 which you propose to make in order that the Mechanic Arts Day School, contemplated in the trust deed of Peter Cooper, may be immediately established, and thus complete the scheme of instruction for the working classes which he confided to us for execution.

"We accept your offer in the spirit in which it is made and we congratulate you on your good fortune in thus being able to identify your name and fame with that of the founder of the institution, whose great value to the public you do not overestimate. We think we may properly add that if Mr. Cooper were still alive he would welcome your co-operation, as coming from one whose constructive genius he recognized and whose career has justified his friendly predictions. You have shown how great wealth can be accumulated by organizing industry so as to promote the progress of civilization and at the same time afford a higher remuneration for labor. In the use of the wealth thus accumulated you have acted upon the same principle which governed Mr. Cooper—that the most effective compensation for the inequalities of life is to be found in the general diffusion of education among the masses of the people.

"We are sure that among your innumerable benefactions you have made none which will be more productive of good than this endowment toward the establishment in the Cooper Union of the Mechanics' Art Day School, indispensably necessary, in the opinion of the best authorities, to complete the public school system of this city, and to enable its graduates, and others who may be able to pass the requisite preliminary examination, to become familiar with the principles and practice of the mechanical pursuits which in the coming century will require the intelligent co-operation of capital and labor, and will bear witness to your achievements as the greatest organizer of industry in our time, and as an example to future generations of the beneficent use to which individual wealth can be applied.

"For more than forty years the Trustees have looked forward to the day when the entire building erected by Mr. Cooper might be devoted to educational uses. Your benefaction brings us near to the realization of this hope, and, although larger endowments will be necessary in the future, the Trustees are now in the position to complete the original plan of the institution, and this ability is due to your wise and welcome benefaction.

"Trusting that you may long remain to benefit the world by your enterprise and your liberality, we beg to subscribe ourselves, very truly and gratefully yours,

"EDWARD COOPER,
"R. FULTON CUTTING,
"JOHN E. PARSONS,
"ABRAM S. HEWITT,
"Trustees."

MR. HEWITT ON THE GIFT.

"The correspondence on this subject," said ex-Mayor Hewitt at his home last evening, "leaves little more to be said. Mr. Carnegie's timely and generous gift enables us after the expiration of forty years to put into execution the last of the objects which Mr. Cooper had in view. The school will provide for the instruction of 500 students. The income on the $500,000 will be $25,000, and this will be $50 a year for each of the 500 scholars. Plans will be laid out for the opening of the school next Autumn. We shall gradually convert all the apartments on the ground floor into rooms for the use of the students. This was Mr. Cooper's idea. These apartments were constructed so that they might be used as students' workrooms. On the first floor only two of the rooms are now rented. They are used by dentists, who have been there since the building was opened. They will doubtless find it hard to go. All the other rooms on that floor are now devoted to classwork.

"We shall not compel our ground floor tenants to leave all at the same time. The transformation will be gradual. We shall begin by using two or three of these stores as working rooms and as the necessity arises we shall occupy more and more until we are using all of them for class purposes. The building can easily accommodate 1,000 or more pupils. We hope to have that many in good time. While we will be able to open this school for 500 students with $500,000, the work really requires $1,000,000. However, this is an excellent beginning.

MR. COOPER'S GIFT OF MILLIONS.

"Doubtless Mr. Carnegie's example will lead other rich men to give freely to this great work. The newspapers can aid us, and they could not devote their efforts to a better cause. Including what Mr. Cooper himself gave, the Cooper family have given to the Union $2,000,000. Carnegie's is the largest donation we have ever received from outside sources. The next largest was by Mr. Wilson G. Hunt, who gave $30,000. Next in amount to that were three donations of $10,000 each from J. Pierpont Morgan, Mrs. Mary Stuart, and Mr. Morris K. Jesup. It is not our idea to teach a trade, but rather to teach the use of tools, so that those who leave our schools may enter upon employment that will pay them at the start from $10 to $15 a week. While we do not profess to make engineers, yet our scholars have become both mechanical and civil engineers.

"All that the Trustees say in their letter to Mr. Carnegie is heartfelt. He has done great good with his wealth. He has cheapened the price of one of his important products, steel, and he has kept on advancing the pay of his employes. His career is a complete refutation of the argument of the demagogue against the wealthy and against trusts. The accumulation of riches is part of a beneficent plan for the betterment of the condition of mankind.

"The greatest danger to the young of our great cities is their surroundings. It is almost impossible for children to grow up into good men and women under the conditions which prevail in so many of their lives. They cannot well become good citizens when they live where vice and sin flourish. The overcrowded tenements are a menace to our youth. One of the first and the best things I did when Mayor was to tear down the nest of low tenements at Mulberry Bend and convert it into a park. If Tammany Hall would properly use its great power it would create these breathing places in various parts of the city. The poor children of this city need sunlight, fresh air, decent surroundings. Here is the great opportunity for the wealthy people of New York.

CARNEGIE SCHOLARSHIPS.

"We hope to identify Mr. Carnegie with this part of Peter Cooper's plan by the establishment of scholarships and prizes which will be called by his name. I have watched and admired his career. It is a matter of regret that he was not one of the Cooper Union boys. He knows and appreciates the worth of such instruction as we give. One of the men in his employ came to him from a scientific school. He was paid at first $10 or $15 a week. He was a bright, hard-working, ambitious young man. He advanced rapidly until he reached one of the most responsible positions under Mr. Carnegie.

"Every person who donates $1,000 to Cooper Union will have the satisfaction of knowing that he is fitting one man for the battle of life. It is something to be proud of. Not only is the donor thus identified with the great work performed by Cooper Union, but he has the consciousness of helping in the betterment of our people. As we instruct and fit young men and women for the struggle of life we do our share to better their lot. In the new school the students will be taught telegraphy, stenography, typewriting, and Spanish. Spanish has now become an indispensible requirement."

HAWAII ASKS FOR A DELEGATE.

Island Possession Desires to be Represented in the Republican National Convention.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 1.—It is among the possibilities that the National Republican Convention which is to meet in Philadelphia in June may afford the unprecedented spectacle of a delegate from the islands of the Pacific participating in the selection of an American Presidential candidate.

Hawaii, which seventeen months ago was an independent republic, is anxious to have a delegate at the convention, and it has an agent here who is trying to get the Republican National Committee to agree to it. He has not yet succeeded, but he has met with no rebuffs. The agent is S. Hartwell. His claim is that Hawaii should have a representative as Alaska and the other Territories have.

He has laid his case before the committee, and it has been suggested to him that the Hawaiians elect a delegate, the question of his eligibility to be passed upon when the convention meets. This will probably be done.

CHICAGO ROAD TIED UP.

New Northwestern Elevated Not Allowed to Carry Passengers.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, Jan. 1.—The new Northwestern elevated road was tied up to-day so far as the public was concerned, by order of Commissioner of Public Works McGann. No more trains for the accommodation of passengers are to be run for the present. Commissioner McGann decreed that the structure is unsafe for general travel. In accordance with this finding notices have been sent to police stations along the line that the company has no authority to carry passengers because the structure has been pronounced unsafe and that they should be kept from entering the stations.

The cash bond of $100,000 held in escrow on behalf of the city may now be lost to the owners despite the herculean efforts to complete and operate the road within the time limit. Under a clause in the ordinance granting the franchise for the road's construction it was made the duty of the Commissioner of Public Works to certify the structure to be safe before the public should be carried. To determine whether such a certificate could be issued Mr. McGann appointed two experts to investigate. They reported to-day that owing to the lack of proper riveting in various sections the structure was not in a safe condition for traffic.

Mr. McGann said the final decision as to the disposition of the $100,000 would rest with the City Council.

SUTTON FLEET EARNS A PROFIT.

Coasting Schooners Pay a Dividend of $42,000.

Special to The New York Times.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Jan. 1.—James D. Dewell of this city, managing owner of the Sutton fleet of coasting schooners, most of which belong in this port, to-day made public the annual report of the business done by the schooners in the past twelve months.

The fleet includes the schooners James D. Dewell, Gen. S. E. Merwin, Charles F. Tuttle, W. Wallace Ward, George M. Grant, Lyman M. Law, Lucinda Sutton, Gen. E. S. Greeley, R. and T. Hargraves, and Julia Frances. All the vessels are now on a dividend-paying basis, except the Tuttle and the Dewell. The total dividend—$12,000—is largely in excess of last year, on account of higher rates.

The dividend equals 9 per cent, on the first cost. The gross earnings of the fleet for the twelve months ending Dec. 30 have been $202,758.

MR. CROKER BREAKS A LEG.

LONDON, Jan. 2.—A special dispatch from Wantage, Berkshire, says that Richard Croker, who has been staying at a country house near there, slipped while mounting a horse, owing to the animal swerving, and broke his leg.

Mr. Croker is being attended by Dr. Emerson, who has reduced the fracture. He is now resting easily.

The accident occurred Monday morning.

Nothing was heard at the Democratic Club last night beyond the reports printed in the newspapers of an accident said to have befallen Richard Croker near Wantage, England. John F. Carroll, Mr. Croker's deputy in the management of Tammany Hall, had received no message from Mr. Croker, and neither had Corporation Counsel Whalen.

WIVES IN DEMAND AT MANILA.

Lone Officers of Watson's Fleet Want the Privileges Accorded Men Whose Spouses Are on Shore.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 1.—A plaintive wail comes from the Asiatic squadron, caused by a recent order of Rear Admiral Watson. The order grants special privileges to officers whose wives are on the station, allowing them to go ashore two nights a week and to be excused from the quarters by the permission of the Captain of the ship. Private letters from bachelors and officers who did not have the forethought to bring their wives with them indicate that they are extremely unhappy over the situation. They have to go through a long roll of red tape when they want to go on shore, while their comrades go merrily ashore at their own sweet will.

"It is suspected," writes an officer who has no excuse for going ashore, "that Rear Admiral Watson feels that the presence of women on the scene would be an advantage, and that he has just issued this order to induce wives to join their liege lords. It is therefore suggested that the stay-at-home wives at once close their homes, place the children in schools, and hasten away to the Philippines to emancipate their husbands from the non-privileged and handicapped class of wifeless officers."

This officer points out that no one can go ashore after sunset without permission granted after formal application in writing, and that in consequence life at Manila "is far from a picnic." "In a tropical country," says he, "the only time to go ashore is after sunset, and with the regimental bands playing on the Luneta every evening and the pretty petticoat parade at that time there is much in Manila to break up the odious monotony of the life of the ship were the officers who may be off duty allowed to enjoy it."

DISAGREE WITH MR. GRIGGS.

Chicago Shippers Say That Evidence Touching Freight Rates Shows a Contract Between Railways.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, Jan. 1.—Chicago shippers allege that the evidence recently submitted to the Inter-State Commerce Commission bearing on the advance in freight rates from this city to the East, proves conclusively that the railroads running east from here are violating the anti-trust laws and ignoring entirely the decision of the United States Supreme Court in the joint traffic case.

The evidence given to the commission at its recent hearing on the protest against the advance in rates that was made public to-day shows clearly, assert the shippers, that all of the roads east of Chicago agreed in their official classification to make the same rates. This official classification is compiled by the Central Traffic Association. This is an organization or pool of the ten principal railroads running east from here. The meetings of the association have for their object the agreeing on joint rates and classifications.

Shippers further allege that the eastbound roads have been for years pooling their traffic and agreeing to rates in open defiance of all court and commerce commission decisions.

THE JOHN P. SQUIRE FAILURE.

Special to The New York Times.

BOSTON, Jan. 1.—Assignee H. W. Chaplin of the John P. Squire & Co. corporation and its score of allied concerns, is slowly succeeding in getting order out of chaos. In this task he is receiving the much appreciated co-operation of a large proportion of the creditors.

Mr. Chaplin said to-day that, in response to the circular sent out a few days ago to the creditors, he has received replies from several hundred, all but one of whom express their willingness to defer a meeting of creditors until such time as an intelligent statement of the situation can be prepared for them. It has been quite impossible to do this in the time that has elapsed since the assignment.

The single individual who insists upon an immediate meeting of the creditors is an attorney who represents a loan of $2,500 to one of the Squires and a claim of $20,000, which was invested by country girls. An investment in the Squire Company. The latter claim, Mr. Chaplin holds, is one that will be subject to litigation, in order to determine its exact status, and he does not feel that either this or the one for $2,500 should weigh very heavily against the rest of the claims, aggregating hundreds of thousands of dollars. Consequently, he will not at once call a meeting of creditors of all the concerns.

The assignee is hopeful that when the accountants complete their work he will find sufficient assets to meet the liabilities of all the concerns. He says the work, in view of its magnitude, is progressing well, and he expects to issue a complete statement of the financial condition of all the Squire concerns within three or four days.

THE HECTOR NOW A COAL SHIP.

She Was Formerly the Spanish Pedro, and Was Captured Near Havana.

Special to The New York Times.

BOSTON, Jan. 1.—The Metropolitan Coal Company begins the new year by placing in commission the steamship Hector, formerly the Spanish steamship Pedro, which was captured by the cruiser New York April 22, 1898, near Havana. She was purchased by the United States Navy Department for $200,000, in order that she might be converted into a naval transport, and on the cessation of hostilities was sold to the Metropolitan Coal Company. Alterations were begun on her Nov. 9 last, and today she was placed in commission. She has been entirely remodeled, and is provided with a powerful searchlight, steam steering apparatus, electric lights throughout, and all the most modern improvements.

The Hector has a capacity of 4,000 tons cargo and 700 tons bunkers. Capt. Stephen Keen will command her, with first and second officers and ten men. She will sail at once for Newport News, Va.

THE KAISER ON HIS NAVY

In Address to Officers He Reiterates His Desires.

IS DETERMINED TO SUCCEED

Declares that He Will Do for the Navy What His Grandfather Did for the Army.

BERLIN, Jan. 1.—Perhaps the most significant statements yet made by Emperor William concerning his plans for a new and powerful German Navy were made to-day in addressing the officers of the garrison on the occasion of the New Year's parade. The Kaiser referred to the strength of the new army organized and nurtured by his grandfather, and said that, in spite of all criticism and hindrance, he was determined to so establish the navy that it would take the same relative rank in the world as the army occupies to-day. In addressing the officers the Kaiser said:

"The first day of the new century sees our army, in other words, our people, in arms, gathered around their standards, kneeling before the Lord of Hosts, and, verily, if any one has especial reason this day for bowing down before God it is our army. A glance at our standards suffices as an explanation, for they are the embodiment of our history.

"In what condition did the past century, at its dawn, find our army? The glorious army of Frederick the Great had slept upon its laurels, fossilized amid all the petty detail of pipe clay, led by superannuated and inefficient Generals, with officers unaccustomed to useful work and lost in debauch, luxury, and foolish arrogance. Our army, in a word, was not equal to its mission, which, indeed, it had forgotten.

"Heavy was the chastisement of Heaven which overtook it and fell on our people. It was cast into the dust, the glory of Frederick was extinguished and our standards were broken. In many long years of bitter servitude God taught the people to look to itself, and, under the pressure of the foot of the proud conqueror, our people engendered in itself the most sublime thought that it is the highest honor to dedicate one's blood and purse to the Fatherland in her armed service. Form and life were given it by my great-grandfather, new laurels crowned the newly created army and its youthful banners, but universal military service only attained its true significance through our great departed Emperor. In his quiet way he evolved the reorganization of our army, in spite of opposition and ignorance.

"Glorious campaigns crowned his work in a way never expected. His spirit filled the ranks of our army, even as his own trust in God bore our troops to astonishing victories. With this, his own creation, he brought the German races together and gave us back long-desired German unity. It is to him that our thanks are due, that by the help of that army the German Empire, commanding respect, has again assumed the position assigned to it in the council of nations.

"It is for you, gentlemen, to preserve and employ in the new century the old qualities by which our forefathers made the army great—namely, simplicity and modesty in daily life, unconditional devotion to the royal service, the employment of one's whole strength of body and mind in the ceaseless work of training and developing our troops, and, even as my grandfather labored for his army, so will I, in like manner, unerringly carry on and carry through the work of reorganizing my navy, in order that it may be justified in standing by the side of my land forces, and that by it the German Empire may also be in a position to win the place which it has not yet attained. With the two united, I hope to be enabled, with a firm trust in the guidance of God, to prove the truth of the saying of Frederick William the First:

"'When one in this world wants to decide something with the pen he does not do it unless supported by the strength of the sword.'"

Emperor William has issued an order to the army announcing that, in accordance with the unanimous decision of the German Sovereigns, "a badge commemorative of the last century, and as a fresh pledge of the unity and indissolubility of the empire," has been established for the colors of the whole army.

The day broke dark, cold, and foggy, with a drizzling rain, but the great ceremony of awakening the city was nevertheless performed successfully by the military bands and drum and fife corps of the whole garrison, marching at the quickstep from the Castle to the Brandenburg Gate and back, rousing the population with deafening noise.

The Emperor and Empress, as usual, were early about. The significant act of re-educating the flags of the Prussian Army, which occurred in the forenoon, was a most solemn ceremony. His Majesty, with the four eldest Princes, walked briskly over from the Castle to Rhumes Halle, "Hall of Glories," in whose interior court, in the presence of Germany's Emperor and Princes, the act took place. The flags were piled up before an altar especially erected, where the Protestant and Catholic Army Chaplains performed the dedicatory rites. The Emperor spoke kindly to Field Marshal Blumenthal, eighty-six years old, who was present.

The Empress drove up in a coach-and-six with the two youngest Princes, Oscar and Joachim, and the little Princess, all of them witnessing the scene below from a window overlooking the court.

The sign and countersign given out by the Emperor was "Koenigsberg-Berlin," symbolically typifying Prussia's rise during the century.

The decree awarding each flag a new ornament clasp and ribbon went into effect forthwith this afternoon, each regiment marching to its flags thus decorated. A similar decree was published to-day by the Prince Regent of Munich and other German rulers.

It was noticed that during the re-dedication the Emperor addressed kindly words to Prince Frederick Leopold, who is here for a few days from his banishment in Cassel.

The Emperor's address, during the exercises, was considered another deeply significant expression of his Majesty's firm intention to maintain the empire in its integrity. The passage in which he said he would continue in spite of all hindrances to make the navy as powerful as the army made the deepest impression, and his remarks are this evening commented upon liberally in diplomatic circles. His Majesty delivered his address in a high-pitched, resonant, strident voice. Each syllable was pathetically emphasized.

During the afternoon hours the Emperor called upon the Ministers and Princes. The United States Ambassador, A. J. White, and Mrs. White, being out calling, the Emperor failed to meet them at their residence on Senne Strasse.

The American colony observed the day. Pastor Dickie held a reception and Consul General Mason and Mrs. Mason and Mrs. Robins did the same. The rest of the Americans, together with all Berlin, were out calling all day.

MRS. BREWER'S BODY FOUND.

Her Son Says a Clairvoyant Told Him It Was in a Swamp.

WINSTED, Conn., Jan. 1.—It was learned to-day that the body of Mrs. Fidelia Brewer, eighty years old, who mysteriously disappeared from her home in South Sandisfield, Mass., twelve weeks ago, was found yesterday in a swamp about two miles from her home.

The body was found by the woman's son Julius, who claims to have received a communication from a Chicago clairvoyant, telling him where to search.

The case has been one of considerable mystery, the woman having disappeared from her home in the night, and frequent searches by organized parties failing to find trace of her. There are rumors of foul play, and an examination will be made to learn the cause of death.

GOEBEL MEN IN A MAJORITY.

Will Control the Kentucky Legislature—Charge of Bribery Made by One of the Democratic Senators.

FRANKFORT, Ky., Jan. 1.—The Kentucky Legislature will assemble to-morrow. Already nearly every member of both houses is on the ground, and to-night caucuses were held by the Democrats and the Republicans.

All doubt as to the ability of the Goebel Democrats to organize both houses of the Legislature was dispelled by the attendance in the Democratic caucus to-night. Senator Goebel was nominated for President pro tem of the Senate, and the entire Goebel slate went through. In the House caucus all of the fifty-eight Democrats answered to roll call and participated. In the Senate four Democrats remained out. They were Senators Alexander, Hays, Gillespie, and Roberts. Senator Hill was sick and absent, but is not classed with the dissenters.

In the Senate caucus Senator Harold created a sensation by making an alleged exposé of the anti-Goebel leaders, declaring that he had been approached by J. H. Whallen of Louisville and paid $4,500 to remain out of the caucus. The money, he said, had been placed in a box with the Louisville Trust Company, the key to which he passed up to Senator Goebel, who was presiding over the caucus, ending his speech by declaring that he had entered into the deal for the purpose of exposing Whallen, and, further, that there was not money enough in the world to make him disloyal to his party and his State.

Attorneys for Goebel and other contesting Democratic candidates for State offices today served notices upon the Republican contestees to take depositions to be used as evidence in the pending contest cases and naming their witnesses. The list of witnesses includes a long array of prominent men in both the Republican and anti-Goebel Democratic parties, like Gov. Bradley, Senator Deboe, Gen. Basil W. Duke, John H. Whallen, and others.

The Republicans decided to-night to hold a conference to-morrow and nominate a straight Republican slate of candidates.

This action was taken when it became apparent that the Republican anti-Goebel coalition could not organize either house. The anti-Goebel leaders say the large attendance at the Democratic caucuses to-night does not indicate anything as to the Gubernatorial contest or the Senatorship as in the Senate the Goebel men and anti-Goebel men entered into a deal regarding division of the offices in that branch and that several others would be said out but for this agreement. They also claim that the anti-Goebel men were brought into the House caucus by a like trade, and that it extends no further than to-morrow's proceedings.

The prospects of Blackburn for the Senate are much better than Goebel's for the Governorship, and while a decided boom has been launched for Watson Parker by the Brown Democrats, it is not believed to have the necessary strength behind it, and is regarded as being done in the hope of causing a bolt in the Democratic caucus and a consequent deadlock in the contests.

While it is claimed that all the Republican members will vote for whoever is put forward by the Brown Democrats for Senator, this is doubted, and it may be safely predicted, as far as the Senatorship is concerned, that it will be Blackburn or no one, with the chances favoring Blackburn. There is little prospect of much legislation. The repeal of the Goebel law will be attempted by the Republicans, and will be as bitterly fought as the contests.

REFORM IN SOUTH NORWALK.

New Mayor Will Try to Prevent All Business on Sunday.

Special to The New York Times.

NORWALK, Conn., Jan. 1.—The municipal officers of Norwalk and South Norwalk took the oath of office at noon to-day. In South Norwalk Mayor C. G. Bohannon, free-silver Democrat, promises to inaugurate a reform administration which will close barbers' shops, cigar stores, and news-stands all day Sunday and give the ungodly citizen a taste of a Puritan or old New England Sabbath.

In Norwalk Mayor Glover, gold Democrat, favors a liberal policy and will not interfere with legitimate business. He is perfectly willing that South Norwalkers should do their Sunday shaving in Norwalk, as well as buy their cigars up town and smoke them in Mayor Bohannon's bailiwick. It is rumored, however, that South Norwalk's Mayor will endeavor to stop street car traffic if too many South Norwalkers do their Sunday business at Norwalk. Some interesting developments are awaited.

In anticipation of Mayor Bohannon's régime, the South Norwalk merchants and cigar dealers have secreted all nickel and penny slot machines, for the police have stated that all machines found after Jan. 1 would be confiscated and the dealer fined $25 and costs, the penalty prescribed by the State law.

CONDITION OF KANSAS BANKS.

Deposits and Sight Exchange Show an Increase Over Last Year.

Special to The New York Times.

TOPEKA, Kan., Jan. 1.—Bank Commissioner Breidenthal to-day compiled a statement showing the financial condition of all the State and private banks of Kansas as shown by their statements of Dec. 2.

The total loans and discounts are $21,641,792.54, the total deposits are $26,143,385.81, the cash and sight exchange and legal reserves are $10,744,485.81, the re-discounts are $262,249.58, and the bills payable are $147,029.46.

A comparison with the reports of Sept. 7 shows an increase of loans of $1,182,930; increase of deposits, $187,865; increase of re-discounts, $71,254, and an increase of bills payable of $33,120. The legal reserve shows a decrease of $1,329,737. The reserve Dec. 2 was 41 1-10 per cent., and Sept. 7 46 per cent. The reports also show an increase of investment in bonds and warrants of about $400,000.

The decrease of reserve is due to the large demand for loans from cattle feeders. In view of the large withdrawal of deposits by cattle feeders, the increase of deposits since September is remarkable. The banks now hold $5,500,000 available funds in excess of the legal requirement. Compared with the statement of Dec. 31, 1898, this report shows an increase of deposits of $3,250,000 and an increase of $800,000 in cash and sight exchange. The loans are greater by $1,000,000 than ever before in the history of the department.

Barge Sinks Near New Haven.

Special to The New York Times.

NEW HAVEN, Jan. 1.—The tug Joseph E. Stickney of Perth Amboy, N. J., arrived in port this morning and reported the loss of one of her barges which she had in tow during the storm this morning. The Stickney was three miles southeast of New Haven light, and was having a hard time of it. Just off the Brandford Beacon one of the barges loaded with 500 tons of coal began to sink.

Ohio General Assembly Meets.

COLUMBUS, O., Jan. 1.—The Seventy-fourth General Assembly met to-day, and elected the Republican caucus nominees by a strict party vote. An adjournment was then taken until to-morrow, when Gov. Bushnell's message will be read. Under the reorganization Judge A. G. Reynolds, of Lake County, is Speaker of the House, and Oscar Shepard, President pro tem. of the Senate. Lieut. Gov. Jones holds over until next Monday, when he will be succeeded by John A. Caldwell, of Cincinnati.

Democratic Caucus To-night.

ALBANY, Jan. 1.—The Democratic members of the Senate have received notice that there will be a caucus at the Hotel Ten Eyck to-morrow evening at 8 o'clock. The call is signed by Senator Donnelly, who is Chairman of the Caucus Committee, and it is supposed that it is for the purpose of discussing proposed legislation.

LOSS OF LIFE IN A FIRST AVENUE FIRE

Two Children Dead, Three Missing and Seven Persons Injured.

FLAMES BURST OUT SUDDENLY

Panic Among Flat Tenants at an Early Hour This Morning.

Two children lost their lives and seven persons were injured in a fire which was discovered at 12:45 o'clock this morning in a six-story flathouse at 754 First Avenue. Three other children are reported missing, and may have perished, and it is possible that there may have been an even greater number of fatalities, as gineers, Whose Losses Are Said to ave Been Heavy, Flee in Disorder —British Shell Their Retreat.

FRENCH WHIPS THE BOERS

Them at Colesberg and Routs Them Completely.

CONTITIES OF STORES TAKEN

LONDON, Jan. 2.—The Daily Mail has following dispatch, dated Jan. 1, from berg:

Yesterday afternoon a big force of cav- and infantry, with ten guns, under the nal command of Gen. French, mov- by detour, occupied some hills three from Colesberg, where the Boers in strength, confident in the natural afforded them by the hills around.

The enemy's position extended six miles ound the entire village. At daybreak our, rtillery opened the battle. The Boers were en by surprise, but replied vigorously. artillery duel was maintained for two ours. Then a Boer Hotchkiss collapsed and was abandoned. We captured it. A big gun was silenced; but this and other Boer guns were withdrawn to the rthward, whither we are harassing the retreat by a damaging shell fire.

Colesberg is in our hands, and the few aining loyalists are jubilant. We have ptured many wagons and a considerable antity of stores.

Our losses were quite slight, but the must have suffered heavily. They stop at Achtertang or cross the river ther at Norval's Pont, where the is still intact."

Another account says:

Gen. French continued to keep the Boers the move and pressed them closely Sat- and Sunday, giving them no time to a prolonged stand, and when day he was within striking distance of enemy. Last night all the cavalry, ar- , and infantry, the latter riding in gons to increase the general mobility, ted upon a night march with the object turning the Boers' right. The flank op- rations were successful. The infantry and ld batteries immediately made a feint at- ck upon the Boer front, and while this was proceeding the cavalry and light ar- llery got completely around the enemy's ght flank, as arranged. The programme rked without hitch. The Boers were ut- rly surprised, and, finding their retreat endangered, fled in disorder to the eastward, aving Colesberg in Gen. French's hands.

The success of Gen. French is commented on here as an example of sound tactics and as an illustration of what may be done when the right methods are employed with the Boers. The Government is urged to take this lesson to heart and to see that no stone is left unturned in the endeavor to get the greatest possible forces of cavalry and mounted infantry to the front.

Now that French has the Boers on the run the hope is expressed that he will give them no rest, but will harass them until they have found their way across the Orange River, which is twelve miles distant. The old wagon route to the Free State traverses Colesberg and crosses the river by a fine bridge, 1,240 feet long. It is believed that the Boers are treated toward Norval's Pont, further east; and the question is whether Gen. French will be able to secure these two bridges before the Boers destroy them.

One important effect of the success of Gen. French is that it will probably have a deterrent influence upon Dutch disaffection. It should be borne in mind that Gen. French has only 2,000 men, and, so far as the important points of the campaign are concerned, the situation is virtually unchanged.

Capt. Montmorency's sortie with a patrol of 120 men of the Twenty-first Lancers near Dordrecht, and his retreat, Dec. 30, were followed up the next day by a successful British engagement and the rescue of a small party which Capt. Montmorency apparently left behind him.

Under Capt. Goldsworthy, a force of 110 men, with four guns, accompanied by Capt. Montmorency's scouts, sallied out of Dordrecht during the morning of Dec. 31 to relieve Lieut. Turner and twenty-seven men left overnight at Labnschagnes Nek. The Boers were driven back and Lieut. Turner's party was rescued. Eight Boers and thirty horses are known to have been killed.

Capt. Montmorency's scouts were cutoff owing to their refusal to leave a wounded officer, Lieut. Warren of Brabant's Horse, and men, under Lieuts. Milford and Tenney of the Frontier Mounted Rifles, defended themselves most gallantly against repeated attacks of some eight hundred Boers. The enemy resorted to sniping during the night, but were repulsed with loss.

At 5:15 this morning Capt. Goldsworthy, with the Cape Mounted Rifles, arrived, and the enemy immediately fled to the hills. Turner's party, whose horses had nearly all been killed, were rescued. They displayed splendid pluck, and the brilliant manner in which Capt. Goldsworthy effected their relief on his own responsibility is deserving of the highest praise. Our loss was two men wounded. The Boers lost about thirty men, including eight men killed."

Another account says:

"The success of this little party will arrest the progress of the enemy's recruiting in that vicinity."

A dispatch from the Modder River says:

"Dec. 31 the naval guns planted a few excellent shells without reply. The enemy's position on the left is, apparently, considerably weakened."

PLOT TO SEIZE CAPE TOWN?

Rumors of a Dutch Plan to Capture the City and the Governor, Sir Alfred Milner.

CAPE TOWN, Dec. 30.—Ugly rumors are in circulation of a Dutch rising, with the object of seizing Cape Town and the docks and capturing the Governor of Cape Colony, Sir Alfred Milner. The centre of the movement is said to be Paarl, a village about thirty miles from Cape Town, where a meeting of the Afrikander Bund was held yesterday.

A similar meeting was held at Richmond on Dec. 28, and it is reported that the members of the Bund in these two towns are acting in concert.

The members of the Bund at Wellington, and the Dutch in Clanwilliam District are said to be armed with Mausers, and to be anxious to use them in behalf of the Boers.

Although the stories of a rising are discredited, the police and military are taking ample precautions.

GEN. BULLER FACES HEAVY ODDS.

Tremendous Difficulties Now Bar the Way to Ladysmith.

LONDON, Jan. 2.—The Standard's correspondent at Frere Camp, telegraphing on Jan. 1, says:

"Sir Charles Warren's division is now nearly complete. Its headquarters will be at Estcourt. It is rumored here that the guns which were captured from Gen. Buller at Colenso have been mounted in the hills commanding the drift over the Tugela River at Springfield. The Boers, it appears, captured 620 rounds of shrapnel when they took the guns.

"Gen. Buller's difficulties have been immeasurably increased by the enforced delay since the last engagement. He now has before him a series of walled and fortified hills, running sixteen miles along the line of the Tugela. These are swarming with the enemy, posted in positions of great strength, and bristling with guns; while the river in front is in full flood. The coming battle will certainly be the stiffest and probably the most momentous of the entire campaign."

The Boers appear to be modifying somewhat their line of defense. Gen. Buller's scouts have discovered a Boer camp established in the vicinity of Springfield, southwest of Colenso, by a Free State commando. A similar movement has been made at Modder River. A large force of Boers, it is reported, has formed a new laager about seven miles down the stream at Kameelfontein.

Telegraph reports from Ladysmith show that all was well on Dec. 31. The bombardment was being continued, but its intensity relaxed. An official dispatch from Ladysmith confirms the report, cabled yesterday, that several officers of the Devonshire Regiment were severely wounded by the explosion of a Boer shell in the mess tent.

PORTUGUESE KING SPEAKS TO-DAY.

His Address Expected to Express Exact Neutrality.

LONDON, Jan. 2.—The Lisbon correspondent of The Standard says:

"It is currently reported that the speech of King Carlos in the Cortes to-morrow (Tuesday) will refer at some length to the situation in South Africa, but it is doubtful whether anything will be said more friendly to England than to the Transvaal.

"The public is with the Boers, and the papers generally fear British designs upon Delagoa Bay. The Portuguese Government asserts that it has done everything to preserve neutrality."

CAREER OF MAJOR GEN. FRENCH.

Experience Gained in Fighting in Western Canada.

Major Gen. George Arthur French is probably the better able to cope with the peculiar tactics of the Boers on account of the fact that his experience of this kind of fighting has been more extensive than that of any other of the British Generals now in South Africa. He was Commissioner of the Northwest Mounted Police from 1873 to 1876, and was made a Companion of the Order of St. Michael and St. George for his part in a successful expedition from the Red River to the Rocky Mountains, which he commanded. He was born in Ireland in 1841, and the greater part of his military career has been passed in Canada.

SPIES AMONG BRITISH TROOPS.

Boer Emissaries Discovered in Different Regiments.

LONDON, Jan. 1.—Alleged Boer spies, it has been discovered, have enlisted in the Yeomanry. A representative of Lord Chesham, who is in command of the Yeomanry forces, says that the officials of this arm of the service are being pestered by agents of Dr. Leyds, the European Plenipotentiary of the South African Government. He adds that two of them were actually accepted, but that they were afterward discovered. He declares that the same thing occurred in Thorneycroft's Horse, seven spies being discovered in that body. Continuing, he says:

"We have given word to all our commissioned officers to keep a sharp lookout for traitors."

STEAMER BUNDESRATH GUARDED.

Seized German Vessel Now at the Wharf at Durban.

DURBAN, Jan. 1.—The imperial mail steamer Bundesrath of the German East African Line, which was seized by the British cruiser Magicienne, on the ground that she was carrying contraband of war, in Delagoa Bay, has been brought to wharf here.

She is now guarded by marines and bluejackets.

Boer Looting to be Prevented.

LONDON, Jan. 1.—A De Aar dispatch, dated Dec. 31, says a mounted patrol has gone from there and that other arrangements have been made to prevent looting in that neighborhood by small Boer forces.

Will Tighten the Censorship.

LONDON, Jan. 1.—A correspondent says: "In view of the fact that Dr. Leyds and other Boer agents seem able to cable freely to Pretoria, the British censorship will be even stricter henceforth."

Majestic Reaches Cape Town.

LONDON, Jan. 1.—The White Star Line steamship Majestic, which left Liverpool on Dec. 13, with 2,000 troops, arrived at Cape Town to-day.

John Churchill Will Go to War.

LONDON, Jan. 1.—It is said that John Churchill, younger brother of Winston Churchill, will accompany the Duke of Marlborough to the seat of war.

Lord Wolseley Defends the Artillery.

LONDON, Jan. 1.—Lord Wolseley, replying to a correspondent who had asked for information regarding the British artillery, wrote: "Our field artillery is at least as good as any field artillery in Europe."

Exchange of Prisoners Considered.

LONDON, Jan. 1.—A Cape Town dispatch says that an exchange of prisoners is under consideration.

Another Division to Sail Soon.

LONDON, Jan. 1.—The entire Seventh Division will have sailed from England by Jan. 11.

BRITISH OUTBID AMERICANS.

Secure Contract for a Bridge Over the Tugela River.

LONDON, Jan. 2.—A British firm, according to The Daily News, after keen competition with several American firms, has secured the Government contract for the new seven-span bridge over the Tugela River at Colenso.

The firm is working night and day to complete the order.

CHAPLAIN READY TO FIGHT.

The Rev. Mr. Johnson Quiets Men Who Disturbed Ferry Passengers.

Three young men left St. George on the ferryboat Northfield on the 6:50 o'clock trip to Whitehall Street. They took seats in the forward part of the saloon and began to annoy the other passengers, most of whom were men and women bound for the theatres, by their remarks. They were profane and used improper language.

Seated near them was the Rev. Mr. Johnson of Grace Church, Chaplain of the Fire Department, who had been spending the day with his father, Arch Deacon Johnson of New Brighton. Mr. Johnson went to the young men and requested them to stop. They then were quiet for a time and then changed their seats so as to be closer to Mr. Johnson. They appeared to be meditating trouble, but the appearance of a policeman caused them to keep quiet for the remainder of the trip.

When the boat neared the ferry slip on this side the men again became ugly, and while the policeman was attending to other duties they prepared to attack Mr. Johnson, but he responded with similar preparations, and asked another gentleman to stand by him to see fair play. This took the fight out of them and they departed.

FATHER MALONE'S FUNERAL.

The body of Father Malone was removed from the rectory of the Church of Sts. Peter and Paul, at 69 South Third Street, Brooklyn, at 5 P. M. yesterday, to the church, in Wythe Avenue, where it will remain in state until this morning, when the funeral services will be held. The body is robed in purple and reposes in a black casket. The Trustees and officers of the church, the societies attached to the parish, and the relatives of the dead priest accompanied the body to the church, where it was received by the parish priests, Father O'Brien, Father Burke, and Father Bennett. Thousands of people viewed the remains last night. Many handsome floral tributes from the societies connected with the church were beside the casket.

Last night a van laden with floral pieces and laurel wreaths reached the church, a gift of Mrs. Theodore Havemeyer. A guard was placed over the body for the night. It comprised delegations from the Holy Name Society and the other organizations attached to the church. It was long after midnight before the last of the mourners passed out of the church.

At 10 o'clock to-day the office for the dead will be chanted by the priests, and at 10:30 o'clock a requiem mass will be begun. The celebrant will be Vicar General William Byrne of Boston, Father Henry A. Gallagher of St. Michael's Church will act as deacon, and Father Hugh Ward of St. Malachi's Church as sub-deacon. Bishop McDonnell will give the last absolution to the dead priest.

The honorary pall bearers selected by the relatives of the dead priest are ex-President Benjamin Harrison, ex-Vice President Levi P. Morton, Edward M. Grout, Seth Low, David A. Boody, Charles A. Schieren, Theodore A. Havemeyer, Jr., State Regent William Watson, ex-Congressman Felix Campbell, Brig. Gen. J. A. McLeer, William H. Maxwell, John B. O'Donohue,, Moses May, Dr. John Byrne, and Lieut. Gov. Woodruff.

All have expressed their intention of attending the funeral service excepting ex-President Harrison, who sent word he could not. Gov. Roosevelt will be represented by his military secretary, Col. Treadwell. The vestments in which Father Malone is laid out were the gift of Mrs. Havemeyer a long time ago.

A cable message was received from Cardinal Satolli at Rome expressing grief at the news of Father Malone's death and stating that he had asked and received papal blessing and that he will pray for Father Malone.

WILSON WHISKEY.

That's All!

THE WILSON DISTILLING CO.
Baltimore, Md.

GOVERNOR NAMES JUDGES

He Appoints Three to the Court of Appeals Bench.

ONE IS JUSTICE E. M. CULLEN

The Other Two Selected Are Judson S. Landon of Schenectady and William E. Werner of Rochester.

ALBANY, Jan. 1.—Gov. Roosevelt has appointed Supreme Court Justices E. M. Cullen of Brooklyn, Judson S. Landon of Schenectady, and William E. Werner of Rochester as Associate Judges of the Court of Appeals.

The Governor originally intended to appoint Justices Patterson of New York City, Childs of Medina, Cullen of Brooklyn, and Landon of Schenectady, but the two first named declined to serve. This left but one more to select, the Court of Appeals having asked for but three Judges, and so Justice Werner was selected.

The Governor said his reasons for offering one of the Judgeships to Justice Cullen was that because, like other citizens of New York City, he had been able to watch his course at close range, and that he felt honored himself in being accorded the privilege of showing his appreciation of a Judge so upright and so able.

The Governor sent letters to the three Judges, in which he said:

To Judge Cullen:

"You represent the type of Judge, my dear Sir, that I feel it incumbent on me to show that I appreciate, and I feel that, although it may mean a personal sacrifice on your part, you would be doing a real service if you consented to serve on the Court of Appeals."

To Judge Landon:

"I sincerely hope that you will accept, for I feel that your appointment would commend itself to the whole people."

To Judge Werner:

"I do not have to say to you that in your new position as in your old position, all I have to ask is, what you would give anyhow, that is, the assurance by your every action that when you are on the bench you know neither Republicanism nor Democracy—nothing but law, justice, and the welfare of the people."

Justice Landon, in his letter of acceptance, said it was with his warmest thanks that he accepted the very great honor. Justice Cullen wrote the Governor that he accepted the designation with much satisfaction, highly appreciating the honor conferred, and Justice Werner wrote in a like vein.

The appointments announced to-day were made under the authority of the recent amendment to the Constitution, which provides that whenever a majority of the Judges of the Court of Appeals shall certify that the number of causes pending before them is greater than can be heard the Governor shall appoint new Associate Judges from among the Justices of the Supreme Court, not to exceed four in number. The Associate Judges may sit until the number of appeals pending is reduced to 200, when they shall return to the Supreme Court.

Justice Edgar M. Cullen was born in Brooklyn Dec. 4, 1843. He prepared for college at Kinderhook Academy and was graduated from Columbia College at seventeen years old. His first intention was to become a civil engineer, and to this end he entered the Rensselaer Polytechnic Institute at Troy soon after leaving college.

While still at Troy the civil war began. Young Cullen enlisted at the outset, receiving an appointment as Second Lieutenant in the First United States Infantry. He served with the Regulars until December, 1862, when Gov. Morgan made the Lieutenant, then only nineteen years old, Colonel of the Ninety-sixth Regiment, New York State Volunteers. Col. Cullen served with the Eighteenth Army Corps until near the close of the war, when a severe wound received before Richmond forced his retirement. He then completed his engineering studies, and after a year's practice in this profession decided to give up for law. He entered the law office of his uncle, Alexander McCue, in Brooklyn, and was admitted to the bar in 1867.

In his new profession Col. Cullen's rise was rapid. He also became active in politics as a Democrat, and Gov. Tilden made him a member of his staff in 1876, with the rank of Brigadier General. He had previously, in 1871, been made Assistant District Attorney of Kings County. In 1880 he was elected to the Supreme Bench of the Second Judicial District, and at the conclusion of his first term in 1894 was re-elected, his present term expiring Dec. 31, 1908.

Justice Judson Stuart Landon was born in Salisbury, Conn., Dec. 16, 1832. He was educated at the Amenia and New York Conference Seminaries, and became, in 1855, a teacher of mathematics and the classics in the Academy at Princetown, N. Y. He entered the Yale Law School in 1854, where he studied one year. He returned to Princetown Academy as its Principal in 1855, however, and received the degree of Master of Arts from Union College the same year.

He was admitted to the bar early in 1856, and elected the following Fall District Attorney of Schenectady County. His re-election as District Attorney came in 1859, and in February, 1865, he was appointed to fill a vacancy as County Judge. In the Fall of that year he was elected to that office for four years. He also served as a member of the State Constitutional Convention in 1867. He was counsel for Robert C. Dorn, Canal Commissioner, in his impeachment trial before the Court of Appeals and Senate in 1868. Mr. Dorn was acquitted after the examination of witnesses in his behalf by Judge Landon.

Judge Landon's election as Justice of the Supreme Court in the Fourth Judicial District came in 1873. It was unanimous, his Democratic opponent, Jesse Gay of Plattsburg, having withdrawn. He was re-elected in 1887, his present term expiring Dec. 31, 1901. Justice Landon lives in Schenectady. He is one of the Governors of Union University, a Trustee of Union College and of the Albany Law School, and is the author of "The Constitutional History and Government of the United States."

Justice William E. Werner was born in Buffalo Dec. 10, 1855. His education was received in the common schools of that city. He removed to Rochester in 1877, and began the study of law in the office of William H. Bowman. His admission to the bar came in October, 1880, and four years later he was elected Special County Judge, on the Republican ticket by the largest majority ever returned a candidate in Monroe County up to that time. Three years later he was re-elected without opposition, and in 1890, on the death of Judge John S. Morgan, he was advanced to the office of County Judge.

Judge Werner was nominated as Justice of the Supreme Court in the Seventh Judicial District in 1894 by both the Republican and Democratic Parties, his election following without opposition. His term expires Dec. 31, 1906. On the Supreme bench Justice Werner attracted considerable attention by his action in severely criticising a Grand Jury in Monroe County for its remissness in failing to indict flagrant violators of the Raines liquor tax law, and by his denunciation from the bench of the Grand Jury of Ontario County for not returning an indictment against the County Treasurer, who had been accused of defaulting.

Justice Werner has been assigned to service on the bench in this city on several occasions. He was designated by Gov. Roosevelt last November to preside over trials of the election law cases, returned by the Extraordinary Grand Jury in New York County. His home is in Rochester.

New Judge for Cattaraugus County.

ALBANY, Jan. 1.—Gov. Roosevelt to-day announced that he had appointed Winfield Scott Thrasher of Cattaraugus to succeed County Judge Krause, promoted.

Adjt. Gen. Hoffman Sworn In.

ALBANY, Jan. 1.—The first official act of the Governor for 1900 was the signing of Adjt. Gen. Edward M. Hoffman's commission, who subsequently took the oath of office before Secretary of State McDonough.

UNIVERSITY OF CHICAGO.

Result of J. D. Rockefeller's Offer to Duplicate Gifts Now $3,370,000.

CHICAGO, Jan. 1.—The University of Chicago has received a New Year's gift of $3,370,000. President Harper will make the announcement to-morrow at the quarterly convention of the university in Studebaker Hall.

The President hoped to announce that the university would be $4,000,000 richer, but he has not been able to raise the $315,000 which, duplicated by John D. Rockefeller, would make up that amount. However, Mr. Rockefeller has wired that he will extend the limit for three months, and in that time Dr. Harper thinks he is reasonably sure of getting the rest of the money, as he has several large donations in prospect.

Four years ago Mr. Rockefeller gave the university $1,000,000 and promised to duplicate every amount contributed before Jan. 1, 1900, up to $2,000,000. One year ago Dr. Harper had secured $1,135,000 from various sources. Since that time this amount has been raised by $550,000.

It is understood that much of the money has come from business men of this city.

SENATOR GALLINGER CLEARED.

No Indictment Against Him for Alleged Civil Service Violation.

CONCORD, N. H., Jan. 1.—The Grand Jury reported to Judge Aldrich this afternoon that no indictment was found against Senator Gallinger.

He was charged with violating the civil service laws in soliciting subscriptions for campaign purposes from Federal officeholders.

Senator Gallinger to-day issued the following statement:

"For the faithful and unselfish service I gave my party and its candidates as Chairman of the State Committee I have been calumniated by certain men, investigated by the United States Civil Service Commission, and presented to a Federal Grand Jury for indictment. The whole affair has been a discreditable personal, political prosecution. It has ended precisely as I knew it would end, and as almost every self-respecting citizen of the State expected it to end.

"The men who instigated and pushed the scheme can now take an account of stock with a view of determining whether it has resulted in gain or loss to them.

"I have never intentionally harmed any of the men who are engaged in this persecution, have no grievance with any one, and am content to leave the matter to the judgment, integrity, and good sense of the people of the State."

TREASURER $65,000 SHORT.

Report Says E. H. Hershey of Lancaster, Penn., Is a Defaulter.

LANCASTER, Penn., Jan. 1.—The continued absence of County Treasurer E. H. Hershey and the stories concerning his accounts which have been afloat for a week past prepared the public for the formal announcement to-day that he is a defaulter and absconder. Mr. Hershey's son was in charge of the office last week endeavoring to straighten out the books. He called County Auditor Marsh to his aid, and they have found a shortage of $65,000. There is on deposit in the banks of this city $61,840, while the books call for $126,840. There is due the State for tax on money at interest for 1899 the sum of $84,000, of which three-fourths comes back to this county, hence the net sum owing the State is $21,000.

Hershey is believed to have gone to Canada. His financial condition has been regarded with suspicion for a long time, but it is not believed that much if any of the county's cash went to help along his regular business. He had been dabbling in stock speculation for some time, and lately on a heavy scale, and it is claimed that in the slump of week before last he lost $20,000. He also became a heavy poker player and his losses in this line have been a matter of talk on the street. Stock speculation and poker are believed to have practically eaten up the entire amount of the shortage.

The office was turned over to the new Treasurer this morning, when the shortage was officially announced to be $65,042.41. Two of the bondsmen are brothers of Hershey, and one, with the Treasurer, composed the firm of Amos Hershey & Brother of Gordonville, against which execution for $39,000 was issued last week. These judgments were held by relatives and were confessed but a few days previous. They will no doubt be contested and it is expected will be set aside. The other bondsmen represented the different banks which held the county deposits and it is expected the shortage will be made good without litigation.

Gen. Edwin S. Osborne Dead.

Gen Edwin S. Osborne, a Representative from Pennsylvania in the Forty-ninth, Fiftieth, and Fifty-first Congresses, died in Washington last night from heart disease. He was a veteran of the civil war, and for six years was Brigadier General of the National Guard of Pennsylvania.

At the conclusion of the war Gen. Osborne was appointed Judge Advocate to investigate charges of cruelty to Federal prisoners brought against Capt. Wirtz, Confederate Superintendent of the Andersonville prison, the result of which was the hanging of Wirtz.

Gen. Osborne was elected to Congress as a Republican from the State of Pennsylvania at large twice, and once from the Wilkesbarre District. He will be buried at Arlington Thursday afternoon beside the remains of his son, Lieut. Osborne, who was killed in the Philippines. A widow and five children survive him.

Wedding at Colorado Springs.

COLORADO SPRINGS, Jan. 1.—The marriage of Miss Regina Lunt, daughter of Judge and Mrs. Horace G. Lunt of this city, and Clarence Phelps Dodge, youngest son of the Rev. Dr. D. Stuart Dodge of New York, was solemnized this evening at St. Stephen's Church. The ceremony was performed by Canon Knowles of New York. A large number of guests from the East were present, and the wedding was one of the events of the social season here. The newly married couple will sail for Europe next week.

"KID" M'COY THE VICTOR

He Defeats Peter Maher in Five Rounds at Coney Island.

The Smaller Man Avoids Dangerous Rushes and Finally Wins with an Overpowering Blow.

Norman Selby of Indiana, or "Kid" McCoy as he is known in fistiana, proved beyond all doubt yesterday afternoon at the Coney Island Athletic Club that he is one of the most skillful masters of boxing in the country. He proved also that he is the superior of Peter Maher of Ireland, one of the best of the heavyweights, and by his victory he earned the lion's share of the $16,000 taken in at the door of the arena. It took McCoy four full rounds and two minutes and twenty-two seconds of a fifth round to win his battle, and when he left the ring he showed scarcely a mark of the terrible punching he took from his antagonist in the fourth round. The fight was scheduled for twenty-five rounds.

McCoy won by scoring a clean knock-out. In physical appearance the men presented a strong contrast, unfavorable from all points of view for the victor. McCoy's boyish features and slight figure made him look insignificant by comparison with the massive physique of Maher. But behind McCoy's long, thin arms there lurked a set of driving muscles that generated force enough to work a pile-driver, and when it came to execution the stripling was master of the giant.

FLUCTUATIONS IN BETTING.

The battle was one that sporting men were anxious to see, and in spite of the cold about 8,000 of them found their way to the bleak beach at Coney Island. The big clubhouse, which looks like one of the Hudson River icehouses, resembled them in the temperature of its interior when the doors were thrown open, for the promised steam-heating arrangements had failed. Very few persons ventured into the clubhouse until after 3 o'clock, but they crowded the nearby restaurants and barrooms and occupied themselves in making bets on the result.

Maher was a decided favorite. His admirers were swarming in and out of the saloons offering odds of 10 to 6. They found many takers, and by the time they reached the ringside the betting had taken a decided turn. McCoy's stock advanced until at the ringside he was quoted as favorite at 10 to 9.

"Eddie" Burke, the bookmaker, laid $2,000 against $1,400 with George Considine, the latter taking the McCoy end of it, and "Jim" Corbett, a great admirer of McCoy, bet $1,500 even on McCoy with Dr. Creamer of Brooklyn. "Charley" Anderson bet $2,000 on McCoy, and all of the people from Muldoon's sanitarium, at White Plains, where McCoy was trained, pooled together and bet on him. Roger McMahon of Pittsburg, one of McCoy's admirers, bet $2,000 on the winner, getting 6 to 5 for most of his money, and "Sam" Harris, the manager of Terry McGovern, bet on Maher to the tune of $800. There were smaller bets in profusion at the ringside. Most of the small wagers on Maher came out of the $15,000 that "Pittsburg Phil," the turfman, had sent to place on him. "Lem" Wager got some of this money, as also did Louis Green, "Dick" Bernard, and "Jimmy" Wakely.

DISPUTES TO BE SETTLED.

The men were scheduled to meet in the ring at 3:30 P. M., but they were almost two hours late, for there were vexatious questions that had to be settled before they were ready to go on. First, there was a dispute as to who should be the referee. "Charley" White of the Broadway Athletic Club was finally accepted by both sides. Then the fighters asked that the purse of $20,000 be put up before they went into the ring. The crowd was not up to the expectations of the management and that sum had not been taken in at the door. The receipts were only $16,000, and the principals finally agreed to box for this sum.

The crowd began to stamp and groan when the men were half an hour late, but they cheered lustily when McCoy, followed by his seconds, made his appearance. There were present at the ringside by this time men of all sorts and stations in life. Big Wall Street operators and First Avenue prize-fighters touched elbows and wished each other "A happy new year." Among those present were Deputy County Clerk George Fahrbach, W. B. Fasig, Chamberlain Patrick Keenan, Jere Dunn, "Big Tim" Sullivan, "Pug" Dwyer, "Honest John" Kelly, G. B. Morris, Talbot J. Taylor, Alexander Taylor, John L. Sullivan, "Al" Johnson, "Joe" Vendig, "Al" Smith, Leopold Wormser, Fred Tarai, Commissioner of Corrections Francis J. Lantry, "Spike" Sullivan, "Billy" Edwards, "Snapper" Garrison, "Sam" Fitzpatrick, Fire Commissioner John J. Scannell, Senator Timothy D. Sullivan, and Assemblyman Timothy P. Sullivan.

There was another long wait because McCoy insisted on wearing a pair of gloves he had brought with him, but the referee ordered new gloves. McCoy rebelled, and would not consent to the change until Referee White threatened to give Maher the fight unless McCoy complied with his ruling. Then he donned the club's gloves, and was ready for the fray.

ADVANTAGE WITH McCOY.

The men finally got to the centre of the ring at 5:17 P. M., and at the sound of the gong both rushed forward. McCoy led with his left for Maher's body, but the blow fell short, and the former retreated, only to bound forward again. This time he landed a hard left hook on the point of Maher's jaw with force enough to send the Irishman reeling across the ring to the floor. The latter was on his feet again as quick as a flash, and succeeded in planting a hard left on his antagonist's head. Then he led with his right, but missed, and the impetus of his rush sent him clear across the stage and caused him to stumble. Recovering quickly, he made another rush. Then there was a clinch, in which Maher forced McCoy to the ropes, and in the breaking away he landed his right on the body. He tried with his left for the head, but missed, and in retreating he was obliged to accept a hard left in the stomach. This ended the round.

Maher, although evidently surprised by the cleverness dispayed by his opponent, was smiling, as was also McCoy, when they came to the centre to open the second round, and he tried in vain to land a vicious left swing. He tried again, making McCoy's heart his target, but missed this also, and then he came into close quarters, and for his pains received a hard left jolt on the body. McCoy landed a left swing on the jaw a second later, and when they came together again he measured his man carefully and planted a right hook on the same place. This blow sent the big Irishman to his hands and knees, but Maher was up and doing in another moment, and, once upon his feet, rushed madly at McCoy. The latter side-stepped cleverly, and as Maher passed him he sent in two hard left swings in rapid succession on the jaw. The second of these blows but for the sounding of the gong probably would have left Maher at the mercy of his opponent.

Maher, when he faced the smiling "Kid" in the next round, rushed unavailingly. The "Kid" kept jabbing at him viciously, and within a minute he had his right badly bruised about the face and body. Then Maher became cautious, but the "Kid" was unrelenting. He crowded Maher back with a couple of left hooks on the jaw, and then, as Maher came forward again, he welcomed him with a left swing on the jaw that forced the big fellow to clinch. Maher mixed it up, and at close quarters had a shade the advantage, for he forced McCoy back to the ropes just as the gong sounded.

Then the admirers of Maher broke forth in cheers that nerved him for his greatest effort in the next round. He went at McCoy with all the skill he could command, and at the end of the round he had him a trifle weary. At the beginning of the round Maher sent his right to the head and repeated with another to the same place, when McCoy clinched. Maher next sent his left to the face and followed this up by raining a succession of lefts and rights on the "Kid's" head. Maher kept growing more aggressive until the "Kid's" left landed heavily on his jaw, which took a little of the fire out of him. The round ended before McCoy could follow up his advantage.

TERRIFIC BLOW SETTLED IT.

The last round was a hard one for Maher while it lasted. McCoy resorted to every trick he knew to beat down his heavier antagonist. His first blow was a left swing that landed flush on the Irishman's jaw. Maher was back at him with a left to the face that landed only lightly, and then he tried for the wind, but failed. That failure settled the fight, for McCoy, quick as a flash, found an opening and immediately sent in his left to the head. He sent another after it to the same spot, and the next instant landed the final blow.

This was a blow that to some of the spectators seemed a comparatively light one, but to those near enough to the ring to perceive the amount of energy with which it was delivered its effectiveness could not be doubted. It was a double blow, starting with a left swing, and then, when the fist was within a foot of Maher's face, a deft twist of the wrist turned the blow to a hook which reached Maher's jaw with terrible force. It lifted him clear from the floor several inches and took all of the fight out of him before he dropped to the floor.

Maher was not unconscious when he went down, but he was helpless. He fell on his left arm and, although perfectly conscious, struggled unavailingly to rise. He could not budge, and was obliged to listen to the slow count of ten seconds by Referee White. Then his seconds rushed in and carried him to his corner, and McCoy was hailed on all sides by the throng. Old timers at the ringside said the knock-out blow was the hardest of its kind they ever saw delivered.

SPORTING FRATERNITY PLEASED.

Referee White Wants McCoy to Meet Fitzsimmons and Jeffries.

There was unanimity of opinion among the sporting men last night regarding at least one feature of the McCoy-Maher fight. This was that while it lasted it was one of the cleanest and best contests ever held in this city under the Marquis of Queensberry rules.

It developed last night that practically the entire New York sporting fraternity was on the McCoy side with its money, but some late afternoon rumors affecting his chances caused many to hedge to a great extent. "Tom" O'Rourke, for instance, might have won from $7,000 to $10,000, but hedged so vigorously just before the fight that he wound up only about $1,200 ahead.

The Pittsburg and Philadelphia delegations were the hardest hit in the betting, and took very little money back home with them. The majority of the New York sports of the first class were winners, and were correspondingly jolly last night.

"It was the cleanest, prettiest fight that I ever saw in this city," said "Charley" White, the referee. "It looked in the fourth round as if it might be any man's fight, but McCoy's wonderful generalship in the fifth easily decided it. I should like to see McCoy matched with Fitzsimmons and Jeffries for the heavy weight and middle weight championships. He is right in line to fight them."

Fitzsimmons to Meet McCormick.

Robert Fitzsimmons, the ex-champion heavyweight pugilist, is to appear in the ring again this month. He practically concluded arrangements yesterday with M. J. Connors and E. G. Barrow to meet "Jack" McCormick on Jan. 20 at Industrial Hall in Philadelphia in a six-round bout for points. The Arena Club, under whose management the fight will take place, will donate 75 per cent. of the gross receipts for a purse and the winner will take all. Articles will be signed to-day. Fitzsimmons appears in splendid health. He took a ten-mile run yesterday.

LOSSES BY FIRE.

PHILADELPHIA, Jan.

CITY'S GREETING TO 1900

FEASTS FOR RICH AND POOR

After that part of the New Year celebration which turns the hands of the clock back into the old and its festivities forward into the new year, as in the case of the chime-ringing and horn-blowing, or the more solemn observance of the churches in the midnight sacrifice of the mass—after that part of the celebration had brought itself to a conclusion yesterday morning the powers which preside over the weather made orthodox preparation for a suitable greeting to early risers. It snowed, as it was said to have snowed just 100 years before, New Year's Day, 1800.

It was the first snow of the season to assume sufficient body to robe the streets in white, and the covering hid many an evidence of the high times of the night before in the shape of battered tin horns, peanut shells, and odd bits of garments which had suffered from crowding in the bizarre performances of the crowds that had wended their way to Trinity to help ring out the old and ring in the new year.

The snow began to fall shortly before 6 o'clock yesterday morning, and continued with but one interruption until about 10 o'clock. The temperature fell also to 16 degrees. While not a heavy fall, the snowflakes were of that fine, crisp quality that lie and wear well.

This, only, was required to give that genuine Winter aspect which makes the weather seemly for New Year's, and while it gave proper tone to the outlook it also gave to home staying an additional feeling of luxury. Still the streets indexed the occasion not by holiday desertion, but by holiday animation, for the day was sufficiently pleasant after the snow had ceased to fall to entice large numbers out of doors, and the transit facilities had their powers duly utilized. There were many promenaders in the up-town thoroughfares, and nearly as many who found their way down town. There was said to be somewhat of a revival of the old-time custom of New Year's calling, and there were certainly evidences of it in the old Williamsburg section of Brooklyn and in Greenwich village here.

The story of this New Year's, as of many others, would seem to show that its most considerable celebration finds expression in the fields of charity. The giving of dinners to the unfortunate in institutions was one of the most important features of the day. There were New Year's dinners also, of course, in institutions not strictly charitable, and in the prisons.

Midnight mass was celebrated by priests in all the Catholic chapels on the islands in the East River where there are Charities and Correction Department buildings. A lecture was arranged for the 2,400 inmates of the almshouse with illustrations of Tissot's "Life of Christ."

The Outdoor Poor Department was closed, but those who required aid were attended to at Bellevue Hospital or the City Lodging House. There were not, however, many applicants.

The police courts held a half-day session, as is their custom on holidays and Sundays, and a special dinner was provided for the prisoners in the different prisons.

The City Lodging House attendance fell off New Year's Eve, due, it was thought, to the less intense cold weather of the early night. There were 257 lodgers in the building.

At St. Vincent's Hospital chicken, turkey, and mince pie were added to the bill of fare of such patients as were permitted by the doctors to partake of these kinds of food, while in the children's ward the little ones received presents of toys and knick-knacks from the Sisters.

The New York Hospital gave to its patients the same kind of good things at dinner as for the past twenty-two years—turkey, chicken, and delicacies suitable to their physical conditions. Many of the patients received visits from their friends, and the management said that in other ways the patients were made as happy as possible.

The Street Cleaning Department men said that there was more litter about the streets yesterday morning than in any morning in years. The snow, however, inconsiderable as an element in the department's work, made a good sawdust-like aid to the sweepers. The police said that the crowds of the night before were larger than in years, and noisier and more demonstrative.

The New York Athletic Club celebrated New Year's with a reception and repast from 2 o'clock to 4 in the afternoon. Louis M. Stradella and his staff of cooks had been preparing for the feast for six weeks and it was a marvelous thing when complete. Two thousand five hundred quail were used, 600 partridges, and several hundred grouse. The cost of the spread was about $2,000.

The chef's confection masterpieces included a statue of Gen. Thomas L. Watson, the club's President, and a Venetian temple rising out of the sea, with real water and goldfish. Then there also were a coral fountain, a hunting scene, and the figure of a hammer thrower. A piece called "Two Chicago Sports" consisted of two roast suckling pigs sitting at a table with tiny cigars and decanters of wine before them. The most ambitious pièce montée, however, represented the Dewey fleet before Manila, reproducing in sugar the city buildings and walls and surrounding hills, the bay and the land works at Cavite. The tables extended nearly the length of the large dining room, and about 2,000 members and guests partook of the feast.

HEARTS OF SKATERS GLAD.

Van Cortlandt Park Lake Dotted with a Whirling Crowd—Unselfish Youth's Reward.

A holiday, a big expanse of ice five inches thick, air that rendered standing still difficult and motion a delightful necessity, with plenty of sunshine, made Van Cortlandt Park the goal and ambition of skating folk yesterday. Although the big "copper," whose post includes the southern end of the lake, stood ready to let all comers enjoy the ice at 10 o'clock in the morning, the crowd did not appear until the afternoon. Then the local trains out of the One Hundred and Fifty-fifth Street station offered standing room only. By 3 o'clock the first day's skating had been taken advantage of by a crowd that dotted the entire stretch of the L-shaped lake.

The visitors first sought the lakeside barn that, since the destruction by fire of the old skating house last year, has offered temporary shelter to visitors. Here a portion of the crowd experienced its first disappointment. There were no skates on hire. Only those who had come from home prepared could hope with any certainty to enjoy the ice-echoing rhythm of "the poetry of motion." A good-looking young man and a pretty girl, who were evidently attached to each other by closer ties than the possession of a single pair of skates between them, tried vainly to rent, and then to buy, some of the skates from the feet of owners who stood shivering around the stove.

"Oh, I'm so sorry, George," she said, "let's go home."

George was sorry, too, but then she, at least, shouldn't miss the first day's skating. There was Frank over there, and he had skates. He could escort her around the lake.

Yes, George was very unselfish, and of course Frank wasn't George, but then he was right, after all. It would be a pity to lose the first day's skating. So off she went with Frank.

George, left alone, wandered uneasily around the skate house. Nobody seemed willing to part with even one skate for any consideration. Finally a ragged looking little boy came in from the ice. His skates were not fancy. They were just pot metal, and too small for him, but they seemed to hold out a hope to George, who slyly possessed himself of one as the boy took it off. Removing his other skate and holding it in his hand, the boy looked around for its mate. George grabbed the second skate, and at the youngster's cry stuffed a bill into his hand, which made the urchin say "Thank 'you'" very respectfully. Then George found his companion at the edge of the ice. George's skates covered only half of his foot, but he seemed happy. They went off up the lake together, he standing very straight and still in front, while her vigorous strokes propelled them both. Frank didn't go with them.

Once on the ice the skates became a very small part of a very pretty scene. The light covering of snow had not been swept from the ice, and the contrast of its whiteness brought into sharp definition the browns of the snowless hills; and, over both, the clear Winter sun shone. Off on the golf links to the east a young woman golfer seemed conscious of the effective background the browns made for her scarlet coat, but except for her the hills held no human interest. Here on the lake it was different. The sharp strokes of many skates had become one continuous musical note that sounded over all the ice. Of course, in the whirling crowd the younger element was dominant, but here and there pater familias had harnessed himself to his little son's sled, that the youngster who couldn't skate might enjoy the sounding ice. Merry parties of young people clinging together, tandem fashion, raced with similar rival tandems. One party from Yonkers took three straight races from a Manhattan group, and would have kept at it but for one of the Manhattan women who pleaded that they were becoming too conspicuous. People were beginning to give odds, and it wasn't nice, she said.

As the afternoon waned colder winds came, and the crowd thinned out. Numbers staid on, however, and these were reinforced after dark by ulster-clad ones, who darted among the shadows and lights thrown by the lamps on the lake shores, until a police edict closed the ice at 10 o'clock. Its condition is such, however, that barring unfortunate weather conditions it will serve for many days or until it is too much worn for safety.

ICE IN CENTRAL PARK.

Lakes May Be Ready for Skaters in Two Days.

Superintendent St. John of Central Park yesterday morning tested the condition of the ice on all the lakes of the Park to ascertain just how soon the public can be admitted for skating. The cold spell has frozen over all the lakes sufficiently to bear the weight of an occasional skater, but not to stand the great pressure of crowds.

Superintendent St. John found that the large lakes contained two inches of ice. The Harlem mere, the lake at One Hundred and Tenth Street and Fifth Avenue, which is more exposed than the larger lakes, had the same thickness of ice.

"Judging from the present condition of the ice," said Superintendent St. John, "I look for skating in the Park in a couple of days. Of course this outlook depends upon a continuance of the cold weather. The ice on all the lakes is forming nicely, and when the red ball goes up there will be good skating. There must be at least four inches of ice on the lakes to permit any crowds to gather. The first skating will be on the Fifty-ninth Street pond, which freezes over very quickly and the ice there is very good. This pond, however, is for the boys and girls."

HOTEL CHEFS' MARVELS.

Elaborate Displays of Their Art to Celebrate New Year's.

In some of the hotels yesterday special attention was paid to a commemoration of the advent of the new year. This was particularly the case at the Holland House, the Murray Hill, the Cadillac, the Gerard, and the Grand.

At the Murray Hill the ladies were so anxious to see the creations of the chef that the gentlemen about the place hesitated to patronize the bar. There were nineteen different pieces on exhibition, and among the more important were a modern Neptune, La Dame Blanche, Mephisto, and the Venus fountain.

There was a great crush at the Gerard, in West Forty-fourth Street, where Charles T. Schlesinger, Rufus Vassar, and Augustus Vassar acted as a reception committee. More than 2,000 invitations were issued, and recipients admired Chef R. H. Silberbrand's excellent reproductions in dainties of the fountain in Central Park and the Statue of Liberty on Bedloe's Island. In the former was a pool of water with goldfish. There were many other handsome pieces.

At the Cadillac there was a most elaborate display, and possibly the most interesting was a sort of bouquet made entirely of vegetables, designed by Chef A. Gora and presented to Mrs. Graves, the landlord's wife. There were flowers made from carrots, beets, turnips, celery, and cucumbers, and the whole was planted in a pot fashioned from a huge turnip. There was a pig's head representative of Aguinaldo, while a monument in Rome was reproduced in wax, sugar, meats, poultry, &c. A feature that attracted attention was a bisson of lobster surmounted by a bust of Admiral Dewey.

At the Holland were hams fashioned into handsome mandolins, hunting scenes, and in the centre of a mammoth table a reproduction of Neptune surrounded by mermaids and the rarest gems of the ocean.

At the Grand was a most elaborate display, in which pigs, pheasants, lobsters, and vegetables were made the foundation for remarkable creations.

BEER TRUST'S RIVAL.

Brooklyn Saloon Keepers' Plant to be Opened This Week.

The Consumers' Park Brewing Company, which was organized several months ago by more than two hundred saloon keepers of Brooklyn and vicinity, will open its new plant at Franklin Avenue, near Malbone Street, Brooklyn, this week.

This brewing corporation was organized to fight the trust, and will commence business on Saturday. The first beer made by the new brewery will be delivered on that date. The stockholders, who are saloon keepers, will substitute the new product for that which they are now using. A banquet under the direction of President Herman Raub will be given to celebrate the completion of the plant to-morrow, Thursday, and Friday evenings in the buildings of the brewery.

NEW YEAR IN WASHINGTON

Thousands Call to Pay Their Respects to the President.

GEN. MILES PRECEDES DEWEY

WASHINGTON, Jan. 1.—Over 2,000 citizens stood in line at the White House gates to-day waiting to pay their respects to the President of the United States, after the brilliant official reception which ushered in the new year and marked the opening of the social season in Washington.

There have been larger crowds in the past at the White House gatherings, but few functions of the sort have been more brilliant, and in none have the crowds been better handled, with less confusion or less of feminine heartaches and resentment for dainty toilets disarranged in the crush.

Promptly at 11 o'clock the bugles sounded the assembly, and the red-coated Marine Band struck up the strains of "Hail to the Chief." To this accompaniment the procession, headed by President and Mrs. McKinley, moved down the broad stairway and took their places in the Blue Parlor adjoining the Red Parlor. Mrs. McKinley wore an elaborate gown of brocaded white satin. Owing to her feeble health, she received seated. Next to her stood Mrs. Hay, wife of the Secretary of State; Mrs. Gage, wife of the Secretary of the Treasury; Mrs. Root, wife of the Secretary of War; Mrs. Griggs, wife of the Attorney General; Mrs. Smith, wife of the Postmaster General; Mrs. Long, wife of the Secretary of the Navy; Mrs. Hitchcock, wife of the Secretary of the Interior, and Miss Wilson, daughter of the Secretary of Agriculture, all brilliantly gowned.

Behind the line gathered the other young women of the Cabinet, the wives and daughters of Senators and Representatives, and other distinguished officials who had been invited to assist.

The list was as follows:

The Misses Hay, Miss Root, the Misses Griggs, the Misses Long, the Misses Hitchcock, Miss Grace McKinley, Miss Sarah Duncan, Mrs. John Addison Porter, Mrs. T. A. Bingham, Mrs. David J. Hill, Mrs. Fuller, Miss Fuller, Mrs. Harlan, the Misses Harlan, Mrs. Gray, Mrs. White, Miss Brewer, Mrs. Brown, the Misses Wood, Mrs. Shiras, Mrs. Peckham, Mrs. McKenna, the Misses McKenna, Mrs. Aubrey, Mrs. Pierce.

Mrs. William P. Frye, Mrs. M. A. Hanna, Mrs. J. C. Burrows, Mrs. Shelby M. Cullom, Mrs. Ridgely, Miss Ridgely, Miss Fisher, Mrs. John W. Daniel, Mrs. Cushman K. Davis, Mrs. Stephen B. Elkins, Mrs. Charles W. Fairbanks, Mrs. Henry Cabot Lodge, Mrs. James McMillan, Miss McMillan, the Misses Morgan, Mrs. O. H. Platt, Mrs. T. C. Platt, Mrs. Redfield Proctor, Miss Proctor, Mrs. Henry M. Teller, Mrs. Campbell, Miss Campbell, Mrs. Joseph B. Foraker, the Misses Foraker, Mrs. William B. Bate.

Mrs. D. B. Henderson, Miss Henderson, Mrs. John Dalzell, Miss Kitzmiller, Mrs. Charles H. Grosvenor, Mrs. George B. McClellan, Mrs. S. E. Payne, Mrs. George W. Steele, Mrs. Robert R. Hitt.

Mrs. Nelson A. Miles, Miss Miles, Mrs. John M. Wilson, Miss Waller, the Misses Bates, Mrs. Parsons.

Mrs. George Dewey, Mrs. Charles H. Allen, Miss Allen, Mrs. P. M. Rixey, Mrs. Rand.

Mrs. U. S. Grant, Mrs. James G. Blaine, Mrs. H. S. P. Beale, Mrs. Philip Sheridan, the Misses Sheridan, Mrs. Harriet Lane Johnston, Miss Kennedy, Mrs. Daniel Manning, Mrs. Charles G. Dawes, Mrs. M. B. Dawes, Miss Dawes, Mrs. Sartoris, the Misses Sartoris, Mrs. Stanley Brown, Mrs. Buckingham, Mrs. Fabyan, Miss Phelps, Miss Sargent, Mrs. A. H. Mathews.

As soon as all had taken their places the doors of the Red Parlor were thrown open, and the Ambassadors and Ministers of foreign Governments and their suites resplendent in their full Court dress, headed by Lord Pauncefote, the British Ambassador, the Dean of the Diplomatic Corps, moved into the Blue Parlor to pay their respects to the President and Mrs. McKinley and the receiving party. The scene in the Blue Parlor to-day has seldom been surpassed in brilliancy, as the diplomats passed through in their gorgeous uniforms, with their gold and silver Court swords dangling from their sides. Especially gorgeous were the Russian Ambassador and his suite. Stiff with gold braid, the German Ambassador and his attachés in their white and silver, and the Austrian Ambassador in his sable-trimmed cape of purple. Especial interest centred in the appearance of the Duke d'Arcos, the Spanish Minister, and his beautiful American wife. It was the first White House reception at which Spain has been represented since the close of hostilities, and the greetings accorded them were especially cordial.

Mr. C. N. E. Eliott, Second Secretary of the British Embassy, also received special attention, as his name appeared in the New Year's list of honors, conferred by Queen Victoria, of K. C. M. G. The Orientals, in their bright silks, the Chinese, in their green and purple, the Japanese in gold and black, and the diminutive Koreans, with their strange headgear, attracted much attention. Several of the wives and daughters of the foreign Ambassadors and Ministers were invited behind the line. Among those to whom this honor was accorded were Lady and the Misses Pauncefote, Mlle. Cassini, and Mme. Hengelmuller. After leaving the receiving parlor the diplomats passed on into the East Room, where they lingered until joined by the other distinguished callers.

Following the Diplomatic Corps came the Chief Justice and the Associate Justices of the Supreme Court and other members of the judiciary, former members of the Cabinet, including ex-Secretary John W. Foster and ex-Postmaster General Gary. At 11:25 the Senators, Representatives, and delegates of Congress, members of the district Government, and members of the District Judiciary appeared in the order named.

Following this flight of statesmen and civil officials came the officers of the army and navy in their full dress uniforms, massive golden epaulets and gold embroidered chapeaus. In accordance with custom the army had precedence. Major Gen. Miles, who headed the line, was accompanied by Adjt. Gen. Corbin. The latter, however, gave way as they approached the receiving line, and Gen. Miles first greeted the President and Mrs. McKinley. The line of naval officers which followed, headed by Admiral Dewey, was much longer than that of the army. The Admiral's small, well-knit figure was in striking contrast to the larger frame of the venerable Rear Admiral Melville, the famous arctic explorer. They were followed by Rear Admirals Hitchborn and Bradford and some of the fighting heroes, among whom were "Fighting Bob" Evans, Capt. Sigsbee, Lieut. Commander Wainwright, Lieut. Haeseler, and others.

The long line of naval officers was followed by Brig. Gen. Heywood, Commander of the Marine Corps, and all of the officers of the corps now on duty in and around Washington. Then came the officers of the District Militia and the Naval Reserves.

Prof. Alexander Graham Bell and Prof. Samuel P. Langley, of flying machine fame, led the Regents of the Smithsonian Institution, who were followed by the heads of the various departments, Assistant Secretaries, chiefs of bureaus, heads of bureaus, &c.

Following these came the veterans of the wars in which the country has engaged. Precedence was given to the few remaining veterans of the Mexican War. The veterans of the civil war included the G. A. R. Posts, Loyal Legion, Union Veteran Legion, and Union Veterans' Union. Then came the veterans of the Spanish-American War, about 200 in number. The Oldest Inhabitant Association of the District of Columbia was the last organization in line. The general public was then admitted, and for one hour and a half a constant stream of humanity flowed through the White House portals.

At 1:15 the last of the public passed through the parlors. In all, 3,354 persons attended the reception.

The Secretary of State and Mrs. Hay entertained the members of the Diplomatic Corps at breakfast at noon at their handsome residence, on Lafayette Square. It was a repetition of the brilliancy attending the presence of the diplomatic representatives at the White House. Mrs. Hay was assisted in receiving by her daughters, and later the home was open to general callers.

Most of the wives and near relatives of the several Cabinet officers received during the day, being assisted by the wives of these officials of high rank in the various departments. Mrs. Gage also had with her Miss Cassini, niece of the Russian Ambassador.

The Admiral of the navy and Mrs. Dewey received a large number of callers. Mrs. Miles, wife of the commanding General of the army, was assisted by the wives of a number of army officers. The Chief Justice and Mrs. Fuller, as well as most of the other Supreme Court Justices, received at their several residences.

GOV. ROOSEVELT'S RECEPTION.

ALBANY, Jan. 1.—Gov. Roosevelt's public reception, held in the Executive Chamber, between the hours of 12 and 1 o'clock, was a success. Citizens in all stations of life called to pay their respects to the Chief Executive and wish him a Happy New Year. Col. Tredwell, the Governor's military secretary, acted as master of ceremonies, presenting the callers to the Governor.

Adjt. Gen. Edward N. Hoffman of Elmira and the members of the Governor's staff, attired in full dress uniform, were the first military men to pay their respects to the Commander in Chief of the Guard.

The Capital City, a local Republican club, marched into the chamber preceded by a band, which tendered the Governor a brief serenade. Major Palmer, commanding the Tenth Battalion, with the staff and line officers of that organization, in uniform, followed, after which the public was admitted.

The social reception at the Executive Mansion was held from 3 to 5 o'clock.

HAVANA NEW YEAR PROCESSIONS

Vivas for "Cuba Libre," President McKinley, and Gov. Gen. Wood.

HAVANA, Jan. 1.—The New Year was ushered in with a torchlight procession, which, forming just before midnight and preceded by a band, left the Lower Prado and made the circuit of the principal streets. Almost the only tune played was the Cuban national hymn.

Everybody seemed to be awake and awaiting the advent of 1900. The strains of the popular hymn drew the people everywhere to windows and doorways, and the procession was greeted with the wildest enthusiasm. Innumerable small boys kept up a firecracker fusillade along the entire line of march. All the prominent Cuban Generals were cheered, although the vivas were chiefly for "Cuba Libre." President McKinley and Gov. Gen. Wood came in for a liberal share of popular applause.

The procession having returned to the Prado, and the band having once again played the Cuban national hymn, some Americans who were present called for "The Star-Spangled Banner." The band immediately complied, and the crowd cheered lustily.

May Have Died from Poisoned Whisky

CHARLESTON, S. C., Jan. 1.—During the last week eight young negroes have died suddenly at Lady's Island, in the vicinity of the Central Phosphate Works, Beaufort County, this State. There are reports that the whisky they used was either tampered with or not chemically pure. The eighth man, the mail carrier of the company, died to-day.

TO CALL A SCHOOL BOARD

Grand Jury in Queens Will Be Asked to Investigate.

Inquiry to Determine Whether Salary Funds Were Used for Other and Unnecessary Purposes.

The Queens County Grand Jury for January will begin its sittings to-day and District Attorney John B. Merrill, who took office yesterday, expects to lay before it the whole school muddle in Queens Borough. Mr. Merrill has been interested in school matters for many years, and prior to consolidation was a School Commissioner in the Woodhaven district. He has repeatedly said he would try and lay every phase of the school trouble before the Grand Jury. He said yesterday he did not care who was hit.

The matter will be taken up at first as an investigation into the acts and accounts of the Queens Borough School Board. Among the first things to be laid before the Grand Jury will be the record of the appropriation for running the schools for the year just brought to a close. This in their possession, the Grand Jurors will be asked to go over the records of the amounts paid out and asked to ascertain if any moneys were taken from funds specially appropriated to help out other funds.

The great question to be ascertained, Mr. Merrill says, is whether or not any of the money appropriated, for the payment of teachers' salaries was used for other purposes. During the year many schools have had what appeared to be a surplus of janitors. There have been as many as three in some schools, and it is claimed that in other schools where need called for but one there were two. Whether or not the office force and positions under the board not connected with the teaching force were needful, and if needful were kept within the limits of necessity, will be inquired into.

It has been claimed that the office positions were too numerous and too well paid and that money might have been saved from this source of outgo to pay the teachers. There has been much gossip, and the Grand Jury will be asked to say, once for all, whether there was basis for adverse criticism, and if the Grand Jurors think there was they will be asked to send the matter to a trial jury for final determination.

Justice Garrettson of the Supreme Court noticed the gossip and gave it importance a few days ago when speaking from the bench, he said:

"Some one is responsible for the condition existing. It is evident the teachers are not. They cannot be blamed."

When the Justice made this remark, Assistant Corporation Counsel Carr of Corporation Counsel Whalen's office, arose and said:

"No doubt that is true. There seems to be no doubt that the borough School Board has been negligent in paying out this money from month to month, knwing that at the end of this year the condition now existing would present itself."

This announcement and response from the city's officer was brought out through the attempt of the teachers recently to force the city to pay them what money remained in the teachers' fund. The Court was unable to give relief in that way.

The investigation will be carried back into 1897 in order to give the Grand Jury a thorough insight into the affairs from the days prior to consolidation down to the present time.

In 1898, four months before the close of the year, the Queens Borough School Board found it had to pay out for the remaining part of the year the sum of $196,000. It had on hand to pay this the sum of $235,000. At that time there was a general increase of salaries, so that the excess was divided up among the teachers and others.

The most recent act of the Queens Borough School Board will also come up for investigation. This is the reduction in teachers' salaries. Last week these were cut from 10 to 30 per cent. It is claimed that this action is a direct violation of the Ahearn law.

Mr. Merrill said after he took office yesterday that he was not in a position to make public his plans and intentions. He believed he would fail in his duty, however, if he did not take the matter up and present to the Grand Jury every fact obtainable.

FILIPINO UPRISING AVERTED.

Papers Found Sunday Showed That Trouble Was Planned in Manila—3,000 Troops in the City.

MANILA, Jan. 1.—Yesterday's capture of bombs involved the seizure of documents inculpating a thousand Filipinos who intended to rise against the Americans. Papers were also found showing a distribution of the city into districts and a careful assignment of leaders and followers.

The precautions taken by the Americans on Saturday, it is now evident, alone prevented an uprising.

The Provost Marshal has requested two more regiments to be detailed for the protection of Manila. Three thousand troops are now actually in the city.

AGUINALDO'S WIFE A PRISONER.

She, Her Sisters, and 21 Filipinos Surrender to Major March—Southern Advance Opens with Victory.

MANILA, Jan. 1.—Aguinaldo's wife, sisters, and twenty-one Filipinos, three of them officers, have surrendered to Major March's battalion of the Thirty-third Infantry at Bontoc, Province of that name. The Filipinos gave up two American and two Spanish prisoners.

It was announced from here Dec. 23 that Col. Wilder, some time previous to Dec. 15, or perhaps that day, had telegraphed to Vigan from Bayonbong that Aguinaldo had crossed the mountains, near Bayonbong, going southward, and that his wife had died in a village in that vicinity. It was added that she had been ill since the birth of their son, and that the hardships of their flight proved fatal.

The first movement of a general southern advance occurred this morning, when two battalions of the Thirty-ninth Infantry landed and occupied Cabuyao, on the south side of Laguna de Bay. Two Americans were killed and four were wounded. Twenty-four of the enemy's dead were found in one house. One hundred and fifty prisoners and four six-pound rapid-fire guns were captured.

The gunboat Laguna de Bay bombarded the town before the disembarkation of the troops from the cascoes, which was made under the enemy's shrapnel fire. The enemy evacuated the place before the charging Americans, retreating to Santa Rosa, to which town they were pursued. Heavy fighting occurred along the road to Santa Rosa, which was occupied by the insurgents retreating southward to Silang. The Americans burned the country between and around Cabuyao.

The gunboat returned to Calamba for reinforcements, and thence came to Manila to fetch ammunition. She recently captured two of the enemy's steam launches, one under the fire of artillery at Calamba, and also four cascoes loaded with rice.

Other regiments are mobilizing to-night at San Pedro, Macati, and Pasig, preparatory to continuing the southern advance.

State National Guard Association.

ALBANY, Jan. 1.—The annual convention of the State National Guard Association, scheduled for Jan. 24 at the State Armory here, has been postponed until Feb. 8. The postponement is due to the fact that the Inter-State National Guard Association convenes Jan. 23. Gov. Roosevelt has consented to read a paper before the State Association on educational topics.

CRANSTON'S HOTEL TO CLOSE.

Famous Hudson River Hostelry to be Turned Into a School for Girls.

Special to The New York Times.

WEST POINT, Jan. 1.—To-morrow at noon Cranston's Hotel will pass out of existence and the Sisters of St. Francis will take possession of the building. A boarding school for girls will be established by them.

For more than half a century Cranston's has been a favorite Summer resort for the families of army officers and other visitors. President Lincoln visited the hotel in 1861, and was the guest of Gen. Scott for a few hours. Later Grant, Sheridan, Sherman, and other famous Generals of the civil war made the hotel their headquarters when visiting the Point.

FIGHT OVER TRACK LAYING.

Union Railway Employes Arrested Three Times at Mamaroneck.

MAMARONECK, N. Y., Jan. 1.—There was a close approach to a pitched battle here to-day between the forces of the town of Mamaroneck and those of the Union Railway. The Union Railway some time ago obtained a franchise from the local authorities to lay tracks through the town to Larchmont. The tracks were to be all laid by to-day.

Not half of the rails had been laid, and the employes of the railroad attempted to continue the work this morning. There was a hurried meeting of the Board of Trustees, and the latter decided that the company had no right to lay tracks, as the franchise had become invalid. The Trustees ordered the men to stop work at noon, but no attention was paid to the order. The Trustees swore in special officers, who arrested about thirty of the employes of the railroad. They were taken before Justice McCabe and he required them to furnish $200 bonds each. The company gave the security, and immediately after the workmen were released they returned and continued work.

The fire patrol was then called out, and the authorities threatened to tear up the tracks with the tools of the firemen. The workmen were arrested again and marched before the Justice. He required them to furnish additional bonds, which they did, but they did not seem to mind being taken into custody, for they went to work again under the orders of the Union Railroad officials. Then the fire alarm was rung and the volunteers responded. The hosecart was placed conveniently close to a hydrant in order that water could be played on the workmen should orders be issued to that effect. The Trustees decided on arresting the men a third time, and the same performance of giving bonds was repeated.

The employes of the railroad did not return to work after that, for their tools had been seized and taken to the Town Hall. The special officers of the town are now guarding the road in order to prevent the workmen from resuming their labors.

KILLED WHILE CELEBRATING.

Passaic Woman Shot by a Man Who Thought His Revolver Was Empty.

PASSAIC, N. J., Jan. 1.—Ellen Labash, twenty-two years old, lost her life shortly after the incoming of the new year while she was celebrating the arrival of 1900 with the other boarders in the house at 157 Third Street. She was shot through the heart by Michael Schwartz, a boarder. The shooting was accidental. Schwartz was arrested and held in $1,000 bail.

Schwartz owns a revolver, and at midnight fired four shots from outside the house to welcome the birth of the New Year. After entering the house he pulled the trigger again, believing all the cartridges had been discharged. There was a loud report and Miss Labash fell to the floor and expired in a few minutes.

Hurt in Coaching Accident.

NEWARK, N. J., Jan. 1.—Seventeen members of the "Millionaires' Club," a social organization of clerks with rooms at 827 Broad Street, started out to make calls to-day in the "Jed Prouty," an old stage coach which was formerly used by the "Jed Prouty" show. At Market and Broad Streets one of the rear wheels collapsed and the stage turned over. Two members were injured, Harry Mayer and Frank Adams. Mayer's right arm and leg were sprained, and he received an ugly cut on the left cheek. Adams's leg was so badly wrenched that he had to be removed to his home in a cab. The other members got another stage and proceeded on their journey.

THE WHITE SALE.

More than a Million in White

THERE is just one plausible excuse for your buying white goods in January—that is, for buying beyond the everyday and present need. It is found in

The Real Economy of Wanamaker Prices

Years ago we found that we must have busier Januarys, or charge higher prices during the naturally busy months of the year.

We proceeded to make January busy, by diverting to that month such large lots of merchandise as we could induce manufacturers to make for us during slack times of the year—at less than regular rates.

Of course, January sales are held everywhere now—there are factories that exist just to supply goods for them; as there are shops where antiques of any required antiquity are made at a day's notice.

Our January Sales Are of Broadened Scope

The store is as odd as ever—it does not depend on the "things made to sell" and which are naturally not real bargains, because they are the regular products of somebody's regular business; but it plans ahead, and now the white month sees here sales of many sorts of goods—

Muslin Underwear — Bedding
Housekeeping Linens — Draperies and Laces
Sheets and Pillow Cases — Stationery

As we write, certain of our buyers are in Europe planning for goods to come here for next January. It is uphill work—prices are already fifteen to fifty per cent. higher. You will pay more next year, even for your bargains; but not all of the advance, for our January orders are "stop-gaps" to millmen—they make our goods in such slack times as are bound to come to even the most prosperous mills.

In the face of present market conditions, this month's prices are phenomenally low—as low as last January's as a rule.

During the month several stocks will be re-adjusted and, of course, things will be sold at a loss. But the back-bone of the January selling at Wanamaker's is its stock of fresh new goods. To-day, considerably above a million dollars' worth of white things are owned by us, to be shared by you. Ready!

Muslin Underwear

As nearly as we can count present receipts and estimate the quantities to come during the next two weeks to complete our orders, we have over a million garments. Their charm is in their daintiness, good taste, fair making, fullness of size, and the sanitary conditions under which we demand that the work shall be done.

The one reason why you should buy at least a half year's supply right now, is that you save considerable. Judge by the cambric corset covers at 8c—carefully finished, even to the real pearl buttons; judge by any garment that your trained eye will let you analyze. Plainer things are yours at about the cost of materials—often less. The daintier pieces you couldn't begin to make at home for the price, if you count your time as of any value. A seamstress, to do her best, would run your costs to double.

Housekeeping Linens

To-day's prices are fifteen to fifty per cent. dearer (in Europe). But what we bought for this January sale were obtained long ago. Cheaper than you've bought them since last January—cheaper, experts say, than we'll be likely to buy them again.

It seems to be an occasion to make the most of.

Sheets and Pillow Cases

It's a lucky grocery store that ever made a cent on sugar—competition settled sugar for the grocer. It has made nails the sugar of the hardware trade, and certain standard muslins the sugar of the dry-goods store. We buy and sell—and the dollars of profit are unseen. No single body's fault—it is the gradual outgrowth of mistaken notions. Might as well try to amend the law of supply and demand.

Well, muslins are ever so much dearer—so are ready-made sheets and pillow cases, but in spite of the rise we shall charge on these lines described (which we bought far enough back to skip the rise) and every other sheet and pillow case here is marked to-day at a shade less than the makers will charge us for those sent in next month.

If you can plan to buy a year's supply, lucky! At least, get some.

Lace Curtains and Bed Sets

First, about Irish Point Lace Curtains—the most effective for the least money. And there's less money required for them now—about a quarter less—than you would ordinarily expect. Prices a pair, on both white and ivory, reduced thus:

$3.50 to $2.50 pair — $6.50 to $5 pair
$4.25 to $3 pair — $11.50 to $8.75 pair
$5 to $3.25 pair — $12 to $9 pair

$4.50 to $3.25 — $5.75 to $4.35
$8.50 to $6.50

Full size, from $22 to $15 a pair
Sash size, from $16.50 to $11 a pair
Bed sets, from $25 to $17.50 a set

Other bed sets, tamboured muslin, at $3.75 instead of $5; at $6.75 instead of $9; $7.85, were $10.50.

$2 to $1.50 — $4.50 to $3.50
$3 to $2.25 — $6.60 to $4.50 Third floor

Blankets and Bedspreads

$3.75 a pair—Long staple wool, warp and filling; 70x82 in., 5 lbs.; value $4.25.

Dinner Dishes and Fancy China—Reduced

Fine news from the china store. The things we tell of have been selling at the higher prices until this morning. Why reduced? Because the china chief found so many new things in Europe that to get some of all of them will leave him no room to replenish these lines. This doesn't mean that china fashions change much, but there is progress in decorative work. New patterns cost most for awhile, because it takes hundreds of dollars expenditure to bring out a new dinner set, for instance. But here is the list—

DINNER SETS
And 9-dollar sets for $6, 15-dollar sets for $8.50; English porcelain.

FANCY CHINA
French—Dinner Plates, $6 doz.; were $8.50. Breakfast Plates, $5 doz.; were $7.50. Tea Plates, $4 doz.; were $6.50.
Austrian—Bread-and-butter Plates, $3 doz; were $5. Tea Plates, $4 doz.; were $6.50. Celery Trays, 75c each; were $1.25. Salad Bowls, 75c each; were $1.25.

CUPS AND SAUCERS
French—Tea Cups and Saucers, $4 doz.; were $6. Bouillon Cups and Saucers, $15 doz.; were $24.
Austrian—Tea Cups and Saucers, 75c each; were $1.25. Coffee Cups and Saucers, $1 each; were $1.50. After-dinner Coffee Cups and Saucers, 60c each; were $1.

Basement.

Now please read us aright. Not everything in the store is reduced—a million dollars' worth is offered away under value. Take the Little French Store—we show you the newest, prettiest things just here from Paris. Not reduced—but fairly priced. January sales with us are stern facts, important occasions—not humbug or sham. Isn't it worth while to get the biggest possible share of the special values we've gathered. It pays to skimp in other directions to spend at Wanamaker's, in January.

Silks—Some Fine Bargains

Just simple good fortune! Wrong man owned some right silks. We bought them at a price that satisfied him and saved you a third or such a matter.

Ample space to sell them to-day—on Fifth Floor—

Blue-and-white striped Taffetas—the blue a fine navy shade. For waists, linings, petticoats—40c instead of 65c a yard.

Sixteen styles and colorings of rich Lace-Stripe Taffetas—spring colorings—the lace is a loom trick that appliques tiny stripes of lace on the fabric—if you call a thing "appliqued" that is really part of the fabric. 60c instead of 85c a yard.

Eight kinds of rich Fancy Taffetas—for waists and trimmings—ciel, lilac, nile, corn, turquoise, pink, lavender and cerise-satin stripes on white, the stripes bordered with overshot stripes of black. 75c instead of $1 a yard.

Still good picking among the remnants we told of the other day.

Club Vellum Writing Paper, 10c a Pound

It is the finest bit of storekeeping you've had to thank us for in months—this bringing you this favorite correspondence paper at the old, little price. But the mills shipped too slowly—Friday morning we had over fourteen hundred unfilled orders. One man, who had to wait, wrote that he didn't believe we ever had 75 tons of the paper—which shows that confidence is a plant of slow growth. All back orders are filled, or will be, and we've further shipments here. We cannot get a speck over our seventy-five tons at the price, but the cases are coming from the mills as filled.

The light azure is a delightful shade and will take a monogram in white, silver, gold or color (you know our engraving and stamping facilities are adequate to all demands for really fashionable work).

The white is pleasantly toned. Envelopes, 15c a hundred. Paper in three sizes—

"Helen," for oblong envelope, 102 sheets to the pound. "Octavo," for square envelope, 96 sheets to the pound.

Ample selling space—Fifth floor.

CAR WRECKS AN AMBULANCE.

Hudson Street Hospital Doctor and Driver Are Hurt and the Vehicle Is Ruined.

One of the ambulances of Hudson Street Hospital was run down by a north-bound electric car of the Madison Avenue line at Centre and Duane Streets early last evening and totally wrecked. Both the surgeon, Dr. A. S. Sherrill, and the driver, Richard Wilkinson, were thrown out and hurt. The former lay unconscious in the street for a time, and both had to be removed to the hospital in another ambulance, where the doctor will be confined to his bed for several days. It is expected that the driver will be able to be about to-day.

The ambulance was tossed several feet into the air by the collision, and fell upon its side before the car, hanging partly over a deep excavation alongside the track. Dr. Sherrill was thrown at least ten feet from his position on the rear of the vehicle, and fell on his back on some large iron pipes, and, rebounding from these, fell to the bottom of the trench. Wilkinson was found pinned between the horse and the ambulance. The car was well filled, and there was great excitement among the passengers, who thought both men had been killed, so great was the force of the collision. Several women on the car became hysterical.

Harry Palmer, the motorman, said that he saw the ambulance coming 100 yards away, and at first thought it would clear the track ahead of him, but when he saw that there was danger, he tried to stop while there was, as he supposed, plenty of time, but the rails were slippery from the light snowfall, and the car ran on with hardly a reduction of speed. He was arrested, and at the Elizabeth Street Police Station told Sergt. McNamara that he was twenty-four years old and lived at 116 East One Hundred and Second Street. He was allowed to go after the Sergeant had telephoned to the hospital and learned from Superintendent H. A. Knoll that he did not wish to have him held on any criminal charge.

The ambulance had been called to 9 Bell Street, where an elderly, homeless woman had been found lying in a cellarway. She was dead when it arrived, and the ambulance turned back. At Duane Street Wilkinson turned out of Park Row, and he says that from that time until the crash he kept his gong constantly ringing. The car struck the ambulance as the rear wheels of the latter came squarely on the track. The rear axle, top and sides, wheels, and shafts were smashed.

Several citizens, with Policemen Charles Kensler, Smith, and Baxter, all of the Elizabeth Street Station, helped to lift Dr. Sherrill out of the pit and carry him into a saloon at 31 Park Street, where he soon came to his senses. A call was turned in for another ambulance, but there was a delay because the reserve driver had gone out. Clerk Robert P. Hurst of the hospital, however, volunteered to take his place, and drove Dr. Smith to the scene of the accident, and both Dr. Sherrill and Wilkinson were brought in on the same trip. Dr. Sherrill was suffering from severe contusions of the back and head and right knee, and it was said at the hospital last night that there was fear that he had sustained other injuries not yet apparent. Driver Wilkinson has contusions of both knees, and both his wrists were sprained. Wilkinson has held his present position for about five years, and this is his first mishap.

What was left of the ambulance was dragged to the hospital behind a police patrol wagon, and Superintendent Knoll said it was beyond repair. The horse escaped with slight scratches. Mr. Knoll said that he would to-day report the matter to the authorities of the New York Hospital, of which the Hudson Street institution is a branch, and they would decide what action should be taken. Wilkinson said his ambulance was nearly run down at the same place Sunday night, and he only averted an accident by pulling his horse down on his haunches and letting the car go by. Usually a flagman is stationed at this crossing, but both the doctor and the driver declare that there was none there last night.

GHASTLY MURDER IN ALABAMA.

Burned and Mutilated Remains of Mrs. Jennie Jones Found in a Ditch.

Special to The New York Times.

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., Jan. 1.—The mutilated remains of Mrs. Jennie Jones were found in a ditch near Rosser, Sumter County, this morning. Death had been inflicted by a blow on the head with an axe. The arms and legs were sawn from the trunk, and the head was severed with a knife. All portions of the body had been partially burned, and it was with difficulty that the identity of the dead woman was established.

The smoldering ashes of a fire in a near-by thicket showed that after the woman had been murdered her body had been cut to pieces and heaped upon a pile of brushwood, which was then lighted, but the fire failed to accomplish its work. The remains were then cast into the ditch and sparsely covered with leaves.

Suspicion pointed to an old negro woman who had formerly worked for Mrs. Jones, and she was arrested. The Coroner is also working on the theory that a neighboring woman's jealousy was the cause of the deed.

RIOT IN THE BOSTON COUNCIL.

Two Presiding Officers Will Lead to a Legal Contest.

BOSTON, Jan. 1.—The attempt of the Common Council to-day to organize resulted in a disorderly session, in which Daniel J. Kiley, a Democrat, and last year's Chairman, declared himself elected after the temporary presiding officer had announced an adjournment.

Alfred F. Kinney, Republican, senior member of the Common Council, called the body to order. Immediately there was a motion to adjourn, and after putting the question the presiding officer declared it carried. The announcement raised a storm, but Mr. Kinney and some of the members left the chamber.

At that instant Mr. Kiley jumped to the platform, and, calling the Council to order, directed the Clerk to call the roll. He then declared a quorum present, and a motion that the Council proceed to elect a President was put and declared carried. In the midst of a tumult the roll was called, and Mr. Kiley announced that he had been elected President by twenty-nine votes, and a motion to adjourn was carried.

The legality of the proceedings will be tested.

ASSAULTED GIRL HALF FROZEN.

Policeman John Seager carried a young woman into the West Twentieth Street Station shortly after 11 o'clock last night. The policeman had taken off his coat and had wrapped it about the almost frozen form of Jennie Wells, twenty years old, who lives in Brooklyn.

Seager explained that he had found the girl lying on the sidewalk at Tenth Avenue and Twenty-fifth Street. Her clothing, which had been wringing wet, was almost like a solid cake of ice. On the top of the girl's head was a large cut, and she was nearly unconscious. Seager, taking off his coat, wrapped it around her and then carried his charge to the station house, which was several blocks away. The policeman showed the effects of the raw wind by the time he reached the police station.

The girl remained conscious long enough to say that she had left her home to visit relatives at Tenth Avenue and Twenty-sixth Street, but when she reached Tenth Avenue and Twenty-fifth Street she had been assaulted by a well-dressed young man. When she was about to tell how her clothing had become wet, the girl became unconscious. She was removed to New York Hospital. The police are investigating the case.

Knocked Down by Electric Light Pole.

A supply wagon, connected with the Fire Department, while responding to a fire alarm last night, struck an electric light pole at Eighth Avenue and Fourteenth Street and knocked it to one side. In its descent the pole struck a man and woman who were passing at the time and knocked them to the sidewalk. They escaped with slight injuries and went to their homes, on West Fifteenth Street.

MENACING WALLS RAZED.

Explosives at the Campbell Ruins Break Near-by Windows.

The large menacing wall at the Campbell wall paper factory ruins, on the East Twenty-fifth Street side, nearly six stories high, was pulled down by ropes yesterday. It fell with a tremendous thud that shook the buildings in the vicinity. The men, who were directed by John A. Dobner, Superintendent of Buildings, afterward blew down the partition wall on the west side. The explosion made a tremendous roar. The interior walls were then pulled down.

The concussion caused by the falling walls and the subsequent explosion broke many of the windows in the Female Training School for Nurses and in many tenement houses in Twenty-fifth Street. The tenants ran out alarmed, thinking an earthquake or a tremendous explosion had occurred, but the police of the East Twenty-second Street Station allayed all apprehension.

The firemen poured water on the smoldering ruins all day yesterday.

JEWELS WORTH $10,000 LOST.

Benjamin Crooks Offers $1,000 Reward for Recovery of the Gems.

Benjamin Crooks, a dealer in jewelry and the proprietor of a small restaurant at 126½ Canal Street, lost a leather pocketbook containing diamonds and rubies worth, he says, $10,000, while on his way to his home, at 1,150 Third Avenue, Brooklyn, Sunday night. Mr. Crooks boarded a Third Avenue surface car at Canal Street and rode to the bridge, and from there went on the Brooklyn trolley. He arrived home at 3 o'clock in the morning.

The pocketbook, which was made especially for the purpose of carrying gems, was in his pocket, and Mr. Crooks said it must have slipped out while he was on the cars. A reward of $1,000 has been offered for the return of the jewels to 126½ Canal Street. No questions will be asked.

STARVED IN A TENEMENT.

Aged Mother Watched Deserted Daughter Pass Away Without Care.

While many happy families in a large tenement at 306 East Twenty-fifth Street were setting their tables and filling their punch bowls Sunday night to usher in the new year, down in the basement of the house sat an aged widowed mother holding the hand of her only daughter, who was dying of consumption and want. She died with the old year, but the mother sat on through the long night. She notified the police at 5 o'clock, and they carried the body of her daughter to the Morgue to be buried by the city.

The mother gave her name as Annie Wright, and she told the police that she and her daughter had been without food and fuel for over a week. For some time, she said, they had lived on assistance from a few friends and the De Milt Dispensary, in Twenty-third Street. A Mr. Rickard, living in the neighborhood, when he heard of the mother's condition, sent her a breakfast and said he would take care of her for the day. She claims that her husband once kept a hotel on the Boston Post Road, and that she raised her daughter and educated her upon the money he left her. A few years ago, she said, her daughter married a man named Byren, who robbed her and deserted her daughter three days after the wedding. Since then they had had a hard time, she says, to get along, and lately were left without anything. The mother is eighty-one years of age.

Burglars Rob and Set Fire to House.

WHITINSVILLE, Mass., Jan. 1.—Thieves broke into the house of George Nelson at Castle Hill this morning, and stole a small safe containing $2,200, after which they set fire to the dwelling to cover the crime. Mr. Nelson got up early to go to a barn, a short distance from the house. On his return he found his desk ransacked and the house on fire. There is no clew to the perpetrators of the burglary.

Murder Near Asbury Park.

ASBURY PARK, Jan. 1.—Dominick Boston was shot and cut to death to-day by Gennaro Gemmelino, in the settlement west of this city known as "Little Italy." The murder took place after a quarrel over Boston's alleged attentions to Mrs. Gemmelino. The murderer escaped, but was captured to-night at Farmingdale by Constable Ackerman, who placed him in the county jail at Freehold.

NEW YEAR'S APPOINTMENTS

Mayor Continues Old Officials and Names a Few New Ones.

THE SCHOOL BOARD VACANCIES

Three New Members Are Announced and Many Places Remain to be Filled.

President of the Board of Health—Michael C. Murphy, reappointed; term, six years; salary, $7,500.

Dock Commissioner—Charles F. Murphy, reappointed; term, six years; salary, $5,000.

Police Commissioner John B. Sexton, reappointed. term, four years; salary, $5,000.

Commissioner of Taxes and Assessments—Ferdinand Levy; term, four years; salary, $7,000.

Park Commissioner, Borough of the Bronx—August Moebus, reappointed; term, six years; salary, $5,000.

Building Commissioner, Boroughs of Queens and Richmond—Daniel Campbell, reappointed; term, six years; salary, $5,000.

Commissioner of Public Charities, Borough of Richmond—James Feeny, reappointed; term, six years; salary, $3,500.

Examining Plumber—James E. McGovern, reappointed; term, three years; fees.

Justice of Court of Special Sessions, Second Division (Kings, Queens, and Richmond Counties)—Howard J. Forker, reappointed; term, ten years; salary, $6,000.

City Magistrate, Second Division, (Borough of Brooklyn)—Albert Van Brunt Voorhees, Jr.; term, ten years; salary, $6,000.

Member Municipal Statistical Commission—J. Edward Jetter; term, six years; no salary.

Member Change of Grade Damage Commission—Oscar S. Bailey; salary, $10 per day.

Of these appointees, Ferdinand Levy, as Commissioner of Taxes and Assessments; Albert Van Brunt Voorhees, Jr., as City Magistrate; J. Edward Jetter, as Statistical Commissioner, and Oscar S. Bailey, as Change of Grade Damage Commissioner, are the only new ones.

Mr. Levy succeeds William F. Grell, who assumed office as Sheriff yesterday. He has served one term as Register of New York County and before that Coroner. For several years he has not held public office. He is a member of Tammany Hall.

Mr. Jetter is a carpet cleaner and is a member of the Tammany organization of the Twenty-second Assembly District. He was recommended by Corrections Commissioner Lantry, the leader of the district.

Mr. Bailey was for a short time a member of the late Board of Aldermen from the Twenty-ninth Manhattan District, to which he was elected by the board as successor to Homer Folks, (Rep.,) who had resigned to take a nomination for the Assembly. He is a livery stable keeper and a member of the Tammany Hall organization of his district.

Albert V. B. Voorhees, Jr., who succeeds J. Lotz Nostrand as City Magistrate in the Coney Island Police Court, is twenty-nine years of age and has a law office in Wall Street. He resides in Bath Beach, where he was born, and comes from a family which settled there very early. He is a member of the Holland Society, and is connected with the Cowenhoven family and the family of the late Daniel W. Voorhees of Indiana. He took his seat yesterday, and received a walnut gavel inlaid with mother of pearl from his friends at Bath Beach.

In congratulation of Police Commissioner John B. Sexton on his reappointment, the Tammany Hall General Committee of the Nineteenth Assembly District, of which he is the leader, sent a huge basket filled with roses, orchids, violets, and other flowers to his office at Police Headquarters.

The Mayor had eight vacancies to fill in the School Board for Manhattan and the Bronx. Five of these vacancies were caused by the expiration of the terms of office of President Joseph J. Little and Commissioners Richard H. Adams, Abraham Stern, John M. Linck, and John E. Eustis, and three by the resignations within the last few months of Commissioners William Greenough, John G. Agar, and Henry W. Taft. The terms of Messrs. Greenough and Agar would have expired on the last day of 1899. Mr. Taft's term would not have expired until 1901. President Little and Commissioners Adams, Stern, and Linck were reappointed. Two new Commissioners were appointed—John G. O'Keeffe and Patrick F. McGowan. The other two vacancies were not filled. Each appointment is for three years. The selection of Messrs. McGowan and O'Keeffe by the Mayor created considerable surprise, as neither, so far as could be learned yesterday, has been identified in any way with school affairs.

Patrick F. McGowan lives at 224 East Twelfth Street, and is in the underwear business. He has never held public office before and has not been prominent in politics. John G. O'Keeffe lives at 10 West One Hundred and Twenty-third Street and is a member of the firm of H. L. Horton & Co., stock brokers, 66 Broadway. He was formerly a member of the Harlem Club and is at present a member of the Sagamore Club. Mr. O'Keeffe is also a prominent member of the Catholic Club, and was Chairman of the committee that received the Duke of Veragua and the Princess Eulalie. Mr. O'Keeffe is said to be a warm personal friend of Richard Croker, ex-Mayor Gilroy, and Recorder Goff.

The School Board, with yesterday's appointments, has nineteen members, seventeen of whom are friendly to the present administration and two of whom, Charles C. Burlingham and James P. Lee, are appointees of Mayor Strong and have each another year to serve. The School Board for 1900 will elect officers on Feb. 14. Feb. 19 is the date set for the organization of the Central Board for 1900.

The terms of the following School Commissioners of Brooklyn expired on Dec. 31: James F. Bendernagel, Homer E. Dresser, Carl A. Evertz, George H. Fisher, George D. Hamlin, John McNamee, Henry W. Maxwell, George W. Schaedle, Samuel R. Scottron, J. Edward Swanstrom, Charles C. Wise, George H. Woodworth, James Wright, and Richard Young. Mayor Van Wyck yesterday appointed Michael J. Shevlin School Commissioner of Brooklyn to succeed Robert H. Roy, who resigned to take a place in the District Attorney's office.

In Queens Borough the terms of the following Commissioners have expired: Theodore Chapman of Jamaica, Frederick G. Pauly of College Point, and F. De Haas Simonson of Elmhurst, President of the board. In Richmond Borough the terms of the following Commissioners have expired: Samuel Bottger of Port Richmond, Samuel Anderson of Stapleton, and John T. Burke of New Brighton, President of the board.

THE NEW BOARD OF ALDERMEN.

Mr. Woods Re-elected as President—Decorations of the City Hall and the Chamber.

The City Hall was gay with flags and bunting yesterday in honor of the second anniversary of the birth of Greater New York. From the flag staffs on the roofs depended long lines of signal flags, which did duty during the Dewey celebration, and all over the façade were festoons of red, white, and blue bunting, caught up by shields. On the inside the display was even more gorgeous, bunting in the National colors being twined about the main stairway and the balcony in the rotunda.

The Aldermanic Chamber outdid the rest of the structure in the brilliance of its decorations, which consisted of bunting and silken banners. It was the flowers which had been sent by admiring constituents to the new members and some of the old ones, however, that made the Aldermanic Chamber a veritable bower of beauty. These flowers, in most cases, were gathered into the form of horseshoes, no less than twenty-one of these emblems ornamenting the desks of members. On the toe of each horseshoe was a motto, that of "Our Alderman" predominating, with "Success" and "Good Luck" close seconds. Alderman Bernard Schmitt of Brooklyn appeared to be the most favored individual in respect to wealth of floral tributes, three handsome horseshoes, each denominating him as "Our Alderman," occupying all the space on his desk and infringing on that of one of his neighbors. The Tammany organization of the Eighth Assembly District sent an enormous tribute to Alderman Porges, and another large one stood on the desk of Armitage Mathews, the new Republican member from Col. Abraham Gruber's bailiwick, the Twenty-first District. John T. McCall, the Tammany leader in the board, was remembered by his constituents with a horseshoe, which was too big for his desk, and therefore had to be placed in the aisle. President Woods and Clerk Blake each received large and handsome baskets of roses.

Sousa's Band, which was stationed in the rotunda, played a programme of popular music, beginning at 11 o'clock, when the corridors were full of city officials and politicians, who had come to take their oaths of office or to greet the Mayor. During the rest of the morning the Mayor's office was thronged, but up in the chambers of the Municipal Assembly, where there was business to do, there were only a few of the local lawmakers and even a smaller number of visitors. About noon, however, the Aldermanic Chamber began to fill up with the constituents and relatives of the new members, and at 12:15 o'clock, when Clerk Blake called the new board to order, to the strains of "I'd Leave My Happy Home for You—Oo-oo-oo-oo," the room was overcrowded.

After the result of the canvass of the votes cast at the last election had been read, nominations for President were called for. Alderman McCall (Tam.) named Alderman Thomas F. Woods of the Twentieth District as the majority candidate, and Mr. Wentz (Rep., Brooklyn,) named Alderman James H. McInnes of Brooklyn as the choice of the Republicans. Clerk Blake then began calling the roll, which progressed in a quiet manner until the name of Alderman Dowling of the Ninth New York District was called, when a dual reply, "Woods-McInnes," was heard. The Republicans felt sure that Mr. Dowling, who is a follower of John C. Sheehan, was bolting his party nominee, and the Democrats had no idea what the trouble was, when Mr. Blake explained:

"The names of Aldermen Dowling of New York and Downing of Brooklyn came together on the roll. There seems to be some misunderstanding. To avoid confusion, I'll call both over again. How does Alderman Dowling of New York vote?"

"For Alderman Woods," Mr. Dowley replied.

"How does Alderman Downing of Brooklyn vote?" inquired Mr. Blake.

"For Alderman McInnes," was the answer.

Mr. Woods received thirty-eight, and Mr. McInnes fifteen votes, whereupon Mr. Woods was declared elected and Mr. Blake appointed a committee consisting of one member from each borough "to harpoon the President and fetch him to the chair."

Aldermen McCall (Dem.) and Oatman (Rep.) were nominted for Vice President, the former being elected by a vote of thirty-nine to sixteen. Thomas Coakley and John Maguire were re-elected Sergeant-at-Arms and Assistant Sergeant-at-Arms respectively. The organization was thus completed, and then President Woods appointed a committee to call on the Mayor and the Council and notify them that the Board of Aldermen was ready to receive any communications which they might wish to make. The committee, on returning from its call on the Mayor, reported that the latter had said that if he had anything to say he would notify the board later.

Alderman McInnes started a small discussion by offering a resolution requiring the appointment of two minority members on each committee of seven, and that in all committees the several boroughs have equitable representation. Mr. McInnes called the attention of the board to the fact that the minority had sixteen members now, and said it would have considerable to say about legislation during the next two years.

Alderman McCall resented this attempt to curtail the power of the President in naming his committees, and suggested that the resolution be referred to the President. This was done, and then the board adjourned to meet one week from to-day.

After the Aldermen had adjourned Mr. McInnes, who had been selected as the minority leader, took the Republican members to call upon Mayor Van Wyck. The Mayor greeted the party warmly, and then, turning to Mr. McInnes, asked pleasantly: "Did you introduce these gentlemen as the minority members?"

"Yes, Your Honor," Mr. McInnes replied. "There's no such thing as majority and minority when the best interests of the city are at stake," said the Mayor, with a laugh.

"That depends on the point of view," Alderman Goodman observed, but the Mayor dissented again, and said: "Oh; we are all right."

The Council was in session only long enough to communicate that fact to the Aldermen and then adjourned.

SHERIFF GRELL IN OFFICE.

He Celebrates the Commencement of His Term by Liberating a Civil Prisoner.

Thomas J. Dunn arrived at the Sheriff's office in company with his successor, William F. Grell, a few minutes before noon yesterday. They entered a private office, where they attended to some preliminary matters. The oath of office was then administered to the subordinates of the new Sheriff by Deputy County Clerk George H. Fahrbach. Tax Commissioner Feitner was among the spectators.

The following attaches were sworn in: Sheriff's secretary, salary $1,500, Richard T. Knabe, as successor to Charles J. McKeon, who retired with Mr. Dunn; Under Sheriff, Henry P. Mulvany; counsel, Philip J. Britt; auctioneer, James T. Slo; Deputy Sheriffs, Frank J. Burnes, James Carraher, Louis Leavitt, Alexander J. Ahearn, Thomas J. O'Donnell, Thomas Halligan, Thomas Radley, Frank G. Rinn, Andrew Roberts, Silas Strauss, John J. Murray, and Frank J. Walgering; Assistant Deputy Sheriffs, John F. Purcell, James A. Hayes, Andrew J. McGivney, Max Altman, Thomas F. Connolly, John Zahn, Nathan Metzger, George B. Gifford, William H. O'Brien, John J. Hussett, John C. Mayforth, and Daniel G. Terry; entry clerk, Henry McLaughlin; auditor, Edward H. Warker; cashier, William C. Blaney; arrest clerk, George A. Weaver. These are all reappointments except in the case of Knabe.

After the employes were sworn in they gave new bonds, which were certified as correct by Deputy County Clerk Fahrbach. Sheriff Grell, who had received from the Hardier Club a large floral tree, on one of whose branches was a key bearing the letters "H. C.," in violets, was then congratulated upon his entry into office by Mr. Dunn, who said he hoped the new Sheriff would have as good a time in office as he himself had had.

Sheriff Grell replied that if he managed the affairs of the office as well as Mr. Dunn had done, his administration would be a success. Next the new Sheriff shook hands with all the attachés of the office, and wished them a happy new year. The outgoing and incoming Sheriffs, having again exchanged congratulations, and admired large floral horseshoes presented by the Plattdeutsche Verein and the German Democracy, the proceedings were ended.

The first official act of Sheriff Grell was to visit and take possession of Ludlow Street Jail. He was accompanied there by Mr. Dunn, Sheriff's Counsel Philip J. Britt, Under-Sheriff Henry P. Mulvany, and ex-Alderman Philip Benjamin. When the new Sheriff arrived at the jail he was welcomed by the Warden, Patrick H. Pickett, who ushered him into the Warden's private office. Then an inventory of all the property in the jail was handed to Sheriff Grell, who signed a receipt which he handed to Mr. Dunn. Warden Pickett thereupon formally turned over the keys of the jail to Mr. Dunn, who gave them to Sheriff Grell, wishing him as good fortune in conducting the affairs of the jail as he himself had enjoyed. Mr. Dunn said that it was due to orderly management and faithful discharge of duties by his men, chief of whom was Warden Pickett, that there had been no escapes from the jail during his term of office.

In receiving the keys, Sheriff Grell announced that he would retain the old employes, and said he hoped he would be served as well by them as Mr. Dunn had been. He added that he trusted they would one and all regard him in the same light as they regarded the outgoing Sheriff.

After Warden Picket had handed Sheriff Grell his bond papers the party was taken up stairs. The prisoners were then brought into the rotunda and placed in line. There were seventeen of them—ten civil prisoners and seven United States prisoners. They all answered to their names, and then Sheriff Grell gave Mr. Dunn a receipt for them.

One of the civil prisoners in line was a young Italian, named Antonio Caladino. He had failed to make payment on some goods purchased on the installment plan and was locked up on an execution.

"How much does he owe?" asked Sheriff Grell.

"Nineteen dollars and fifty cents," replied Warden Pickett.

"Well, I'll pay it," said Sheriff Grell, handing the amount to Warden Pickett.

"I guess I'll send a cord to celebrate my advent into office in this manner."

Caladino wept when he heard he was to be a free man again. Had the money not been paid he would have had to remain in jail for six months.

As the party entered the Warden's private dining room Mr. Dunn asked, "Isn't this the room 'Boss' Tweed occupied?"

"It is," replied the Warden.

"Well," said Mr. Dunn, "do you see the flagstones out there in the jailyard? Years ago, when 'Boss' Tweed was a prisoner, with a dress suit on, in this very room, I was out there, a stone paver in overalls, laying flags."

Heakins were drunk, and the Sheriff and his party then drove to the City Hall.

We wish to express gratitude to our patrons. Our New Year's resolution is to satisfy you better than ever. The remnant sale is on. Trousers to order, $4.00—formerly $5.00 to $10.00. Suits $14.00—formerly $16.00 to $30.00. Full dress or tuxedo, silk lined throughout, $30.00. Overcoat, popular gray cheviot, $18.00. Clothes to suit, or money back!

ARNHEIM,

OUR ONLY STORE,

BROADWAY & 9TH STREET.

Thence they adjourned to a café, where an elaborate luncheon awaited them and a host of friends of the new Sheriff.

ROW OVER COURT CLERKSHIP.

Municipal Judge William P. Lynch yesterday, in the Third District Court, at Clymer Street and Lee Avenue, Brooklyn, repudiated the appointment as Chief Clerk of ex-State Senator Julius P. Wieman, and announced that John W. Carpenter was his Chief Clerk. Judge Lynch arrived at the Court House at 10:30 o'clock. He was met in an anteroom by his predecessor, ex-Judge William Schnitzpan, who introduced Wieman to him as the Chief Clerk of the court. Beside Wieman stood his attorney, Joseph A. Burr. Judge Lynch turned to Wieman and said:

"But I am the Chief Clerk, and stand ready to take any orders from you," said Wieman.

"My Chief Clerk," retorted the Judge, "is John W. Carpenter."

"Very well," replied Wieman, "but I am coming here every day to do my duties."

No reply to this was made by the Judge, who stepped out to the courtroom.

Either Wieman or Carpenter will be compelled to institute injunction proceedings in the Supreme Court in order to determine who is the Chief Clerk. Wieman said that he would leave it to Carpenter to start the proceedings, and that he would report at the court every day as Chief Clerk, while Carpenter declared he would leave the matter of proceedings to Wieman. The latter was appointed last Wednesday for a term of six years.

Changes in the Fire Department.

At their own request, three members of the Fire Department were retired on pensions yesterday. They were Lieut. Charles Margison of Engine Company No. 2, Engineer John R. Day of Engine Company No. 60, and Fireman Thomas Loughery of Engine Company No. 40. All three had served more than twenty years as firemen. The semi-annual transfers in the department also took effect yesterday. Capt. M. E. Graham of Hook and Ladder Company No. 9 was sent to command Engine Company No. 12 in place of Capt. O'Brien, recently retired. Capt. Foley of Engine Company No. 39 was placed in command of Engine Company No. 67, and Capt. Louis Siegman of Engine Company No. 67 was transferred to Engine Company No. 59.

SENT TO RULE JERSEY CITY.

Mayor Hoos of Jersey City received calls at the City Hall yesterday for two hours. The doors had scarcely been opened when in stalked a big colored man. He was fairly well dressed. Greeting no one, he crossed the room leisurely, took off his overcoat, sat down at the Mayor's desk, and began opening the Mayor's letters.

"Here; stop that!" shouted Peter Golden, one of the Mayor's clerks. "Don't you know those are the Mayor's letters?"

"Well," said the intruder, coolly. "I am the Mayor. I was sent here by Heaven to take charge of Jersey City for one year."

"Well, you'll have to do it from the outside," said Golden. Then he called the janitor, and the man was ejected.

He at once began making an address to the Goddess of Victory surmounting the Soldiers and Sailors' Monument, in front of the City Hall. He continued his harangue until a policeman took him to the Gregory Street Police Station. There he was identified as Rufus Cannon. Some years ago he was in business and accumulated about $15,000. Then he went to speculating in stocks and lost everything, but a small house in which he and his wife live. He was discharged.

Died from Morphine Poisoning.

Isaac Lawrence, fifty-seven years old, of 169 West Eighty-first Street, who was taken to Bellevue Hospital Dec. 15, suffering from morphine poisoning, died there early yesterday morning. He claimed to be a descendant of the famous naval commander Lawrence. He was a physical wreck when he was taken to the hospital. He leaves a wife and three children. Lawrence had a large amount of money one time, but it was lost.

The Fourth

Annual White Fair

Begins This Morning.

It's the greatest event of its kind New York will know of this year—just as the previous three sales eclipsed all other contemporaneous showings.

We published full details in the Sunday papers, but should you not have noticed them—come anyhow.

There will be values in dainty Undermuslins, housekeeping Cottons and Linens, as well as in gentlemen's Shirts, Collars, Cuffs and Night Robes, of sufficient import to make it well worth your while to visit the store to-day.

The Annual Sale of Canned Goods---

150,000 Cases of Them---

also begins this morning in our great pure-food mart on the 4th floor.

You must certainly attend this remarkable sale, for the world's very choicest canned products, embracing every variety and kind of eatables, are now offered at prices that at any other time or place would be simply impossible.

NOT THE RIGHT REMEDY.

Attorney General MONNETT of Ohio is a tireless hunter of the trust demon. He is one of the demon's most formidable enemies, too, for he has used the powers of his office with such zeal and persistence in his attempts to expose the flagitious nature of combinations of capital that the men of the trusts have become very tired of him. This is particularly true of the Standard Oil capitalists, to whom he has put a large number of inconvenient questions.

In the opinion of Mr. MONNETT, the railroad power is about the most dangerous of all the demons that are now plotting the enslavement of the American people. He sees that it is a very great power. It commands not only a vast capital, but has enlisted in its service some of the ablest men in this country. Unlimited money and first-class brains form a combination that it is hard to beat. The railroad power baffles the Attorney General of Ohio. His experience of it makes him apprehensive about the future. He observes with alarm that the State Legislatures make no greater headway against it than he has made. The great railroad capitalists somehow seem to get control of the Legislatures or at least exert a powerful influence over them. After the Legislatures the courts are the only remaining bulwark, and Mr. MONNETT appears to have his doubts about the bench, even.

His conclusion is that the railroads may become so strong and insolent that the people will be obliged to defend themselves by State ownership. The roads will be taken out of the hands of private capitalists. The State will own and operate them.

All the roads the trust hunters follow seem to lead straight to Socialism. The great remedy for every evil is to suppress private activities and get everything done by the community in association by the State. Mr. MONNETT instances the railroads, but of course if State ownership proved to be an effective remedy for the abuses of which railroad capitalists are guilty, there would be a loud outcry for further experiments, and it would be hard to stop anywhere short of the point where the State would own everything. If under the régime of complete communism evils should still crop out, and some men prove to be better off than others, which in the view of Socialists is a crime, then there would be no further remedies, and the community would have to destroy itself to get an end to them.

Mr. MONNETT'S thinking is evidently not profound. He is alarmed because the Legislatures are controlled or influenced by the railroads, yet he proposes to put all the railroads into the control of the Legislatures, or of Congress, which is the National Legislature. Having proved unsafe in their rule over a few things he would make them rulers over many.

What State ownership and operation of railroads would bring us to with the grade of legislative intelligence that we now employ is beyond conjecture, but no sensible man who tries to picture forth the results of the experiment is likely to become an enthusiastic advocate of the transfer of ownership.

If the Government should attempt to operate the railroads it would have to create a department to attend to that branch of its business. It would be the greatest business department of the Government, the greatest in opportunity for corruption, the richest in patronage, the biggest for looting. The men of first-rate capacity who now manage the railroads would leave them to seek other fields, for of course Congress or the State Legislatures would never authorize the payment of the great salaries that such brains command. Inefficient service would be one fruit of the change. A riot of corruption and spoils seeking would be another. The responsibility would rest with the lawmakers. Mr. MONNETT says they are not competent to deal with the railroads now. They would not be more competent if the roads were all put into their hands.

It may be pure theorizing to say it, but if the evil of undue influence over Legislatures exists the obvious remedy is to send better men to the Legislatures. The lawmakers can bring the railroads to terms if they choose. The power to tax is the power to destroy, and Legislatures have the power to lay taxes. But the first step is to choose as legislators only honest and capable men.

THE RIGHT OF SEARCH.

The excitement which the seizure of the Bundesrath has occasioned in Berlin is not very readily explicable. Most probably it proceeds from the fact that the new naval ambitions of Germany are not attended with the knowledge of the maritime aspects of international law which prevails in England or in this country, just as we have seen that the want of a naval tradition has induced German naval officers seriously to compromise their country and to endanger the peace.

Seeing that we have once gone to war on account of what we regarded as an abuse of the right of search, it is not in our precedents that we should expect any but the strictest construction of that right. But we have never denied, in fact, we have always expressly admitted, the right of search as a belligerent right. And it has been held by our courts that the right of search is only an incident of the right of seizure. In the case of the Anna Maria the Supreme Court of the United States laid it down that:

> The right of search is not a right wantonly to vex and harass neutral commerce, or to indulge in the idle and mischievous curiosity of looking into neutral trade or the assumption of a right to control it. It is a right growing out, and ancillary to, the right of capture, and can never exist except as a means to that end.

Our State Department has defined the purposes for which search may be made. A belligerent nation may visit neutral vessels "for the purpose of seizing merchandise, either belonging to her enemy or considered as contraband destined for her enemy, and soldiers or other combatants in the service of her enemy." If these things or persons are found on board the seizure is justified. If not, it is unjustified and the nation to which the seized ship belongs is entitled to appropriate redress.

These facts do not seem to be understood in the newspaper offices of Berlin. If they were the seizure of the Bundesrath would not be discussed as if it were to be decided by appeals to temper. They would not describe the exercise of a belligerent right as "an instance of gross insolence" and a piece of "overbearance." But if, by reason of the novelty of the German Navy and the want of any naval tradition, German publicists do not understand the elementary principles of naval international law applicable to such a seizure, there is by no means an equal ignorance on the part of British or of English-speaking naval officers. That the steamer seized in this case was an "imperial mail steamer" seems to be considered by the publicists of the Berlin press as exempting her from search or seizure. There is nothing at all in that. "On the contrary" our Supreme Court has held the master of a merchant vessel "having a Government mail in his charge is bound by that circumstance to strict performance of neutral duties and to special respect for belligerent rights."

The presumption that the naval officer who seized the Bundesrath was within his rights is altogether too strong to be shaken by any information which has thus far been made public, either in Berlin or elsewhere. Moreover, in the special circumstances of this war, and in the present situation of Europe, it may be assumed that every British naval officer on duty on the east coast of Africa has been specially instructed to exercise the rights of his country so as to give no just offense to neutrals, and particularly to the most touchy of all the neutrals. The presumption that the officer who seized the Bundesrath did not exceed his rights is not weakened by any evidence yet accessible. The irrelevant and excessive emotion displayed by the writers for the German press can be accounted for only by supposing that they have taken counsel of their patriotic sentiments rather than of their text books of international law.

AFTER THE MANNER OF THEIR KIND.

A correspondent inquires if THE TIMES does not think that the Boston City Council ought to be censured for adopting resolutions of sympathy for the Boers. No doubt it does deserve censure; and it would have deserved an equally severe reproof if the resolutions had expressed sympathy with the British. It is not the direction of the sympathy that makes its expression offensive, but the fact that the City Council of Boston in adopting resolutions of this nature is guilty of an act of impertinent meddling in matters with which it has no concern. The foreign relations of the United States are the exclusive charge of the President and his executive officers, with such aid and advice as he may receive from the Senate. No American legislative body whatever save Congress has the remotest concern with the Boer war, and when State Legislatures or City Councils adopt such resolutions as were adopted in Boston they show to the world that they are largely made up of ignorant men and demagogues.

We get an illuminating idea of the quality of the Boston City Council from the valedictory message of Mayor JOSIAH QUINCY. He has been Mayor of Boston four years and may be supposed to know what he is talking about when he says:

> The logical course of our future municipal development should be not to restore any of the powers which have been taken from the City Council, but to further restrict its powers, so far as it appears that these are used not for the protection of the public treasury or of the general interests of the citizens, but as a means of harassing an administration, extorting petty favors which ought not to be granted, or securing employment for constituents which cannot now be given, except in rare cases, without violation or evasion of the civil service laws. I believe that the existing organization of the executive work of the city as outlined is nearly as perfect as can be devised at the present time.

Notwithstanding our system of free public schools, the ceaseless exhortations of the press and the pulpit, and the labors of an unselfish saving remnant in both parties, the voters of our cities continue to send men of a very low order of intelligence and in many cases of equally low character to represent them in municipal legislative bodies. There is always a numerous sprinkling of cheap demagogues, and it is usually to them that the world owes such antics as the adoption of the pro-Boer resolutions by the Boston City Council. They are only acting after the manner of their kind when they do these things.

Serious and sincere students of municipal problems almost without exception agree with Mayor QUINCY in recommending the restriction within very narrow bounds of the powers of Aldermen and City Councilmen.

DINNERS.

During last Winter an experiment in giving dinners was tried in this city which may prove suggestive for resolutions appropriate to the season. It involved some considerations of morals as well as of hygiene and taste that might with advantage be studied, even to the verge of fasting and prayer, by thousands of the prosperous dwellers of our big town.

Five women, mothers of families, and wives of husbands with ample means, though not of the multi-millionaire class, and not exactly in what the Bishop of Albany calls the queer agglomeration of society with a big "S," but fond of social intercourse and fitted to enjoy it, arranged a little competition among themselves. Each was to give two dinners in the course of the season, and at each dinner the hostess was to report in detail the cost of its preparation and as nearly as possible the amount of time devoted to it. Notes were to be taken and at the close of the season a vote was to be taken—in which the husbands as well as the wives shared—as to which dinner had been the best at the lowest cost of money and time. We have not been privileged to know the minutiae of the accounts, or the exact basis of computation, but we are informed that the award went to a hostess whose dinner, including wine, in the matter of money, cost a little less than two dollars a plate.

The significant thing about this experiment, with the gastronomic as well as the social results of which the women and the men alike are said to have been extremely content, is that it was an effort to substitute the expenditure of intelligence and taste for that of mere money in the entertaining of company. It was also a very practical illustration of the value of real hospitality as compared with what is commonly called "lavish" or "elegant" hospitality. It was an instance of the employment of something like true perspective in the cost of and the returns from social effort. And especially it was noteworthy as an example of people of considerable means systematically seeking to spend in entertainment less rather than more than they could "afford." If the same principle could be applied with a reasonable degree of completeness in all classes of society it is plain that some very desirable results would be attained.

In the first place, the area of social choice would be appreciably extended. It is fairly well known that social charm, whether of character, disposition, manners, or intellect, is not always in the ratio of worldly possessions. There are melancholy and numerous instances in which the ratio is inverse, or even inversely as the square. We do not mean to assert that the charm always goes with relative poverty, but it often does, and when it is also associated with self-respect, those who possess it are shut out from contributing to entertainments that they cannot return in kind. That is not a desirable condition in a society where genuine social attraction of the higher order is none too plentiful.

In the next place, if the principle illustrated by the experiment described were at all generally applied, a lot of people, fairly well-intentioned, but a little flabby in their moral fibre, would be saved from the temptation to live beyond their means. As this temptation comes to them from their simian tendency to imitate those in what they regard as a "superior" station, the same not very admirable tendency would lead them to imitate economy and simplicity. Many heartaches and some ugly lapses in financial honesty would thus be avoided. It was one of the favorite notions of the late Col. INGERSOLL that the world would be greatly improved if health and not disease were made infectious. Hardly less would be the advantage if the Goddess of Fashion could set her seal on economy instead of on extravagance.

We do not, of course, expect that the moral of the little social experiment to which we have alluded will have much effect on the minds of those that really need it, it being one of the interesting attributes of morals that they appeal most to the moralizer. That is perhaps the secret of their persistence in this perverse and stiff-necked world. But it can do no harm to express the opinion that if the human family really evolves by the survival of the fittest, fewer dinners will be given to satisfy the social ambition of the givers and the cupidity of the caterer, and more will be given to satisfy a healthy appetite and to be jolly over. The reign of enlightened "contentment" will replace that of the "stalled ox."

A CORNER IN POETS.

A distressed poet makes to us an appeal upon behalf of his class which must appeal to every humane heart. It seems that one of our esteemed contemporaries last Summer opened a prize competition for poems, on a subject dictated by itself, which aroused a peculiar interest in poetical circles. This interest it owed to the unusual liberality of the prizes offered. According to our information there were to be three prizes, of which the first was of $400, for a poem of moderate length. Also expert judgment was promised, and the judges were named in the "programme" of the competition. It will be observed that this is one of the "model competitions" which so allure architects before they are decided and which they view with such unmitigated disgust afterward and write to the papers about. In this case it was to be expected that all the unemployed poets would tumble over each other in their anxiety to capture the first prize. "Jobs" of that magnitude are by no means so frequent in poetical as they are in architectural circles.

All the competitive poems had to be in before the 15th of October. Our esteemed contemporary admitted receiving "more than a thousand," but this must have been a modest understatement. We should say that at least five thousand bards, major and minor and all, must have been attracted by such a chance. And now they are beginning to express suspicion and disgust and to impart it to us. No wonder. They are a suspicious as well as an irritable race. The accusations of "favoritism" and "jury fixing" with which we are so familiar from architects in like cases will not begin to break openly forth until the decision is announced. Every competitor as yet believes that the transcendent merit of his own poem will prevail over the machinations of envious rivals. This is just like the architects. But still the poets need the money. A good many of them, with whom poetry is an avocation, had already spent it, in their minds, on Christmas presents, and doubtless not a few had actually discounted their expectations with the more trustful jewelers and furriers of their acquaintance. It is not wonderful that the more irritated of the irritable competitors, conscious that, if justice were done, the amount of the first prize would be in their pockets, should be driven to injurious hypotheses to account for the delay.

One of these hypotheses is not without a malicious ingenuity. It is that, so long as the uncertainty lasts, the esteemed contemporary in question will retain a forced circulation of all the poets and of all the poets' creditors. Not one of the poets can miss it for a day, since that might be the very long awaited day when what may be called the "drawing" will take place. Some accuse the procrastinating promiser of prizes of prolonging the delay in order to maintain a corner in poets, as some other journals maintain a poets' corner. We mention this hypothesis only to scout it. But still the delay is cruel and unusual, and in the interest of humanity the delaying journal ought to end it and to substitute for the chronic agonies of hope deferred the acute pang of a definitive disappointment.

TOPICS OF THE TIMES.

—In the concluding, and far from least important, paragraph of his annual report to the Governor Major Gen. ROE earnestly calls attention to the "absolute necessity" for action by Congress, fixing beyond any possibility of misunderstanding the status of the National Guard in relation to both State and Federal authority. The General is entirely right in saying that much uncertainty now exists as to the amount of responsibility assumed by a man who joins the National Guard, and the consequences of this uncertainty were so embarrassing at the outbreak of the war with Spain that it is easy to imagine graver contingencies in which the safety and even the existence of the country would be endangered while the upholders of the wider and the narrower allegiances were settling their differences. In Gen. ROE'S opinion, the National Guard is, "first and foremost, a State guard; secondly, under certain contingencies, a reserve force for the National Government, subject to the orders of the President of the United States, and when required by the United States it should not be asked to volunteer, but ordered into the United States service as it stands and is organized under State laws." This view of the case will be regarded by some, perhaps, as a statement rather of what ought to be than of what is; but it may be taken for granted that Gen. ROE wrote after a careful study of the law and that his interpretation of it is defensible. The correct theory, however, should be a matter of inevitable and universal comprehension, and enlistments in the National Guard should be made, not with suppositions, but with knowledge, as to whether service is to be confined to State limits or not. The fact that guardsmen, last year, were asked to volunteer for duty in Cuba evidenced a doubt on the part of the Government as to the extent of its authority over them. That doubt should be dispelled, one way or the other, and at once.

—We would have spoken with less enthusiasm of Mr. ROBERT B. ROOSEVELT'S controversial powers had we anticipated that, in reply to our criticism of his slightly veiled charge that the Government was acting in bad faith toward the Cubans, he would write a long letter devoted to a denial of our right to call President KRUEGER "an uncommonly adroit and sordid old reprobate." The justice of our description is of course open to argument, and we are far—at present—from questioning the value of Mr. ROOSEVELT'S opinion on that or any other question. But what on earth have the two things to do with each other, and why did our esteemed correspondent so carefully ignore the issue which we had raised and which he avowedly set out to meet? In the communication upon which we previously commented Mr. ROOSEVELT made the statement that the United States would leave Cuba about the same time that England left Egypt, meaning, as he practically admits, never. In other words, he asserted that the solemn promise of Congress, the repeated declarations of the President and his Secretaries, and the multiplied announcements of all the responsible American officers in Cuba were made simply for the purpose of keeping the Cubans quiet until plans for the annexation of the island could be formed and executed. It struck us that here was a theory which an enemy of this country might naturally entertain and freely express, but that it ill became a patriotic American citizen, and that its formulation by a man claiming to be such not only indicated something worse than distrust of his countrymen, but to some extent decreased the possibility of keeping our promises. Not a word on these points does Mr. ROOSEVELT say—a great pity, it seems to us, for really the matter is an important one and its discussion might well have preceded debate on the morals of Oom PAUL.

—Among the many interesting statements made by Admiral MONTOJO before the court-martial in Madrid was one to the effect that when he took his ships to Subig, before the arrival of Admiral DEWEY, it was not with the intention of defending that place, but in the hope that its fortifications would defend him. He found no cannon mounted there, however, and after a consultation with his Captains, he went back to Cavite, prepared to engage in a conflict which he perfectly well knew was hopeless. "The squadron did not abandon Subig," said the Admiral, "but Subig abandoned the squadron. When an army goes to take refuge in a stronghold after being persecuted by superior forces, and upon arriving at such stronghold finds that the place has not one cannon, and that the walls of the stronghold would only serve as a cage and a trap, what would it do? They would get out of that stronghold as quickly as possible. This is what the squadron did." MONTOJO was especially annoyed by the report that DEWEY took him by surprise. "This statement," he declared," "I do not hesitate to brand as a lie. The cannon of Punta Sangley was the first to fire against the enemy, even before he could come within reach, and the same was done at Manila, and our squadron was the first to attack the enemy. None of us ever expected to see sunset again. We were wide awake, top wide awake. Would that we could have shut our eyes to the terrible fate in store for us. Each one of us resigned himself to die for the good of the country." MONTOJO spoke with a curious contempt for the "businesslike" way in which the Americans waged war, and yet he was severe enough in condemning his own Government for its impracticability. His defense, in short, was a claim that he did what he could and was willing to die.

—Some charitable person in England has suggested, as an explanation of the remarkable conduct of our late representative in Pretoria, that he found living expenses in time of war too high to be met out of the salary allowed to an American Consul. There may be something in this theory, but at best it does not throw much light on the mystery of Mr. MACRUM'S flight from the post where he could have made himself extremely useful if he had chosen to do so. The gentleman had some credit, it may be presumed, and any necessary expenditure he might have incurred would have been met later by a grateful Congress. We have tried hard to suspend judgment in this case, and, fortunately, the suspense is almost over. He is somewhere on the sea bound for home, and when he gets here he can tell his own story. He has had time enough to make up a good one, and for his own sake and for the sake of the country it is to be hoped that he will prove that his course was founded on the honest desire of an intelligent patriot to do his duty. If he has nothing better to present than the high price of provisions in the Transvaal capital, Mr. MACRUM might better drop himself overboard some dark night before his steamer reaches port.

—So prominent a part of the New Year's celebration has the blowing of tin horns come to be that it is legitimate to ask whether it would not be well to abandon for a while all attempts to mark the anniversary. Of noxious noises, the sound of the instrument so popular with American youth is the most abominable. It is as hostile to solemn thought as it is to church chimes, and there is no reason why night should be made horrible under the pretense of welcoming a new year.

END OF WAR OF 1812.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Permit me to call your attention to what I believe is a misstatement in your excellent article in yesterday's issue entitled "The Nineteenth Century." In discussing our relations with England at the time of the "war of 1812" you make the following statement: "In that contest we had some triumphs on the sea and only misfortunes on the land until Jackson's victory at New Orleans made both parties ready to end a war for which neither had much relish."

The above statement is contrary to the generally accepted belief that the great victory of Jackson was won after the treaty of peace had been signed. Prof. John Fiske in his "History of United States," (page 289,) says: "But on Christmas eve, 1814, a treaty of peace was signed at Ghent between the British and American Commissioners, who had been discussing matters ever since August. These were not the days of telegraphs, and the last victories on land and sea were won without knowing that peace had already been made." (The victory at New Orleans was not won till Jan. 8, 1815, and therefore had no effect upon the cessation of hostilities.) Prof. McMaster (page 239) confirms the above chronological order.

Your newspaper has so few inaccuracies that I believe that most of your readers have come to hold, like myself, the firmest faith in the strength of all statements which appear in your editorial columns. I therefore take the liberty of correcting the above statement in your ocmprehensive historical review. EDW. W. STITT.

Single Tax and War Revenues.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

As THE TIMES is very actue in pointing out the tendency toward freer expansion of American trade, I presume it will accept my congratulations for Secretary of State Hay in securing the consent of nations to the open-door policy in China, provided that means freedom for foreign goods to come into this country free also. Knowing that the United States exports a surplus balance of trade of merchandise, silver, and gold, I ask the Secretary how we can prosper without imports. And I offer for his consideration the single tax upon land values, as a more just revenue than the war-provoking tariffs. It certainly is more sensible than to give away the "balance of trade."

NEW YEAR'S RESOLUTIONS.

From The Somerville (Mass.) Journal.

Resolved: That after January 1
I'll conquer every evil habit,
And if one shows its ugly head,
Directly through the heart I'll stab it.

Resolved: That lying is a vice—
All moralists alike decry it—
Henceforth I will not tell a lie
Unless I can make something by it.

Resolved: That gossiping's a crime
To be condemned with censure icy.
Hereafter I will tell no tales
Unless they're singularly spicy.

Resolved: That robbery is sin,
And so I will not rob my neighbor
In any way that might involve
A term in prison at hard labor.

Resolved: That I will go to church,
(Unless some other occupation Seems more attractive at the time,)
And so enhance my reputation.

Resolved: In short, that I will be
A moral man, as some men view it,
And when the path of virtue lures,
That I will zealously pursue it!

STATE CONVENTION PLANS.

Republican Leaders Talk of an Early Spring Date—May Indorse Mr. Woodruff's Candidacy.

Republican leaders have begun to think of the State Convention to be held in the Spring to select the four delegates-at-large to represent this State in the Republican National Convention next June. No date has yet been selected for the holding of the State Convention, but many of Senator Platt's friends have expressed the opinion that the convention should be held during the last week in March. Others say that it will be well to wait until the date of the final adjournment of the Legislature shall be fixed, holding the State convention during the week following adjournment. It is the present intention of the Republican organization to have the Legislature complete its work before April 1.

It is expected that Senator Platt will again head the New York delegation to the National Convention. It is reported that his associates as delegates-at-large will be Gov. Roosevelt, Senator Depew, and Chairman Odell of the Republican State Committee.

The friends of Lieut. Gov. Woodruff are talking of making an attempt to have the State Convention indorse his candidacy for the Vice Presidential nomination and pledge New York's vote to him. What will be done in this matter is one of the questions yet to be settled.

Resorts where Republican politicians congregate were deserted yesterday. Senator Platt was the only prominent leader who was in evidence during the day, and he remained in the corridor of the Fifth Avenue Hotel only long enough to obtain his mail and then retired to his apartments.

Chairman Odell spent New Year's Day at his home in Newburg. He expects to go to Albany to-day. Immediately after the adjournment of the Legislature Mr. Odell will come to this city and spend a few days at Republican State headquarters.

APPEAL FOR CAMPAIGN FUNDS.

Connecticut Democratic League Asks "Producing Masses" to Contribute Monthly Payments.

Special to The New York Times.

GREENWICH, Conn., Jan. 1.—The Connecticut Democratic League has started out early to raise funds for the State campaign of 1900. The movement was inaugurated today by the issuing of a circular addressed to every Town Committee Chairman in the State. In the course of its appeal the League says:

> As you are well aware, the great need of the Democratic Party to-day, both in the State and in the Nation, is a sufficient fund upon which to draw for the legitimate expenses of a political campaign. The election of 1896 went against us practically by default. The party organization was financially bankrupt and powerless when money was most needed. The Democratic Party, representing as it does the great producing masses of the country, cannot hope nor should it desire to receive the tribute of aggregated wealth, or to have its campaign expenses paid by corporations which, in return, expect, through the granting of special privileges, to realize upon the investment.
> Representing the people and the rights of the individual, we must make our appeal directly to the people. The campaign funds for 1900 must be gathered in small amounts, paid by those who are willing to make some personal sacrifice that the principles they hold dear may triumph. Connecticut should do her part, and the Connecticut Democratic League has taken up the question of raising, in this State, campaign funds for 1900. Every cent received will be used for the benefit of the regular Democratic Party, and the funds will be disbursed in accordance with the directions of the officers and committee.
> New methods for raising funds have been suggested, but after much thoughtful consideration the following plan was adopted: It has been agreed that in every town, in every county in the State, upon the same date, a meeting shall be called of those who are faithful and loyal Democrats. At these meetings a collector shall be appointed and as many persons as possible induced to sign subscription blanks promising to pay to the Treasurer of the League, through the local collector, one dollar per month from now until next November.
>
> The Chairman of each town committee is asked to arrange for the first meeting on Jan. 8, when the dollar monthly subscriptions and larger amounts will be received.

Banquet in Newburg to Mayor Odell.

NEWBURG, N. Y., Jan. 1.—A testimonial banquet was given to-night by 125 leading citizens of Newburg to Benjamin B. Odell, who is closing his sixth term as Mayor of Newburg. He has served as Mayor for a longer period than any other Mayor in the State, with one exception. Mayor Odell is the father of B. B. Odell, Jr., Chairman of the Republican State Committee. Speeches were made by Justive Hirschberg of the Supreme Court, Shipping Commissioner Dickey, Col. G. A. Cantine, the Rev. Dr. F. C. Iglehart, and others. A silver cup was given to Mayor Odell, the presentation speech being made by R. C. Coleman.

TO UNITE MEDICAL MISSIONS.

Formation of the International Order of the Double Cross.

The International Order of the Double Cross, which claims as its object the extension of the "cause of Christ by the combination of religious effort and medical services," was formed yesterday at a meeting held at the headquarters of the International Medical Missionary Society, at 121 East Forty-fifth Street. Dr. G. D. Dowkontt, Medical Director of the latter society, presided. There were present representatives from Great Britain, Canada, India, China, Africa, Japan, Korea, the West Indies, and from all parts of the United States. Ten nations are represented by the twenty founders of the order. Of these ten are physicians, six medical students, and four trained nurses.

One of the primary objects of the order is the uniting of all medical missions and missionaries throughout the world. The need for such a movement was discussed, and then constitutions and by-laws were drawn up and adopted. The membership is open to physicians, medical students, and nurses of both sexes, the active membership to be divided into four guilds—physicians, students, nurses, and helpers, and all medical missionaries are to be considered as honorary members.

The regulations of the order provide for an International Council of forty members and an Executive Council of seven members. The following officers for the ensuing year were elected at the meeting: President—Dr. G. D. Dowkontt; Secretary—Cyril H. Haas; Treasurer—the Rev. W. W. Smith, M. D.; Registrar—the Rev. Theodore F. Hahn. These four officials, together with Dr. William Steward, Dr. John B. Busteel, and Dr. H. Zeckhausen, three members, form the Executive Council for 1900.

The emblem of the order, from which it gets its name, consists of a double cross formed by the crosses of St. George and St. Andrew.

INSURANCE COMPANY ADMITTED.

The Prussian National May Now Do Business in This State.

ALBANY, Jan. 1.—State Superintendent of Insurance Payn has admitted the Prussian National Insurance Company to carry on a fire insurance business in this State.

This is the last of the Prussian companies which applied for readmittance to the State.

The Prussian National Insurance Company of Stettin, Germany, was organized in 1875 and first entered this country in 1891. It is doing business in twenty-seven States of the Union and the District of Columbia, but was excluded from this State in 1896 because of the troubles of the American life insurance companies in Prussia. The United States trustees of the Prussian National are John C. Black, P. D. Armour, and George H. Webster, all of Chicago.

BELL TELEPHONE LOSES A CASE.

Judge Goff Decides They Have No Rights in Richmond Streets.

RICHMOND, Va., Jan. 1.—United States Circuit Judge Nathan Goff has rendered an opinion in which he takes the ground that if the Southern Bell Telephone and Telegraph Compay, as decided by the United States Supreme Court, has no right upon the streets of Richmond, under an act of Congress, passed in 1866 regarding telegraph lines, it has no right under the laws of Virginia or the ordinances of the City of Richmond to use such streets.

He therefore will at a later date issue a decree dismissing the bill of the complainant company and dissolving the injunction restraining the city from removing the poles and wires of the Bell company from the streets of Richmond.

PULPIT ATTACK ON TRUSTS

Money Power, Father Ducey Says, Has Become Tyranny.

Attempts, the Priest Declares, to Control Educational Institutions in America and the Church Itself.

The Rev. Father Thomas J. Ducey, pastor of St. Leo's Roman Catholic Church, delivered a sermon after the special midnight mass to commemorate the coming in of the holy year of 1900, which, though brief, caused considerable surprise in the congregation, for the discourse was a fierce attack on the trusts. It was in line with the clergyman's attitude toward the great moneyed interests of the country, which has caused the church to lose some of its wealthiest and most prominent members, and to these he devoted his closing words, saying: "Some of our people do not like the way I have spoken about these things, and they have left us, and I am glad they have gone."

The sermon was, in part, as follows:

"My dearest brethren, this crowded church, filled with men and women evidently influenced by the spirit of thought and conviction in this midnight solitude, is solemn beyond measure. I shall say a very few words to you. You know that for nineteen years as pastor of this church I have taken up all questions bearing upon the justice of God and the rights which the God of Justice gives to all his children.

"I have presented to you from time to time the great demands of humanity in the closing quarter of the nineteenth century, and have dealt with all the social and economical questions, enunciated by our common brother, Jesus Christ, in the interest and for the happiness of humanity.

"Prophets and reformers are always despised factors in the social economy of this world, but always recognized factors in the economy of Jesus Christ. Every question which I have enunciated from the altar in the past nineteen years has been affirmed by the utterances and encyclicals of that marvelous pontiff now reigning, Leo XIII.

"For the past twenty years the tyranny of the money power has been growing in this Republic, and I believe there is permittee more freedom of speech to-day in Great Britain, in its House of Parliament and its House of Lords, than we are allowed to exercise in this country. The monarchy of Great Britain is less tyrannical than the money and trust power in these United States, in my judgment. In the past few years this power has attempted to control the educational institutions of this country and its just financial interests.

"It has used its powers to drive from the larger universities unselfish and self-sacrificing professors. It has throttled the liberty of speech, and in the great centres of the Middle States the press, with rare exceptions, has been silent.

"But a few years ago a man who was President of a university presumed to express convictions upon certain public questions and was ousted, and a great money power, which is attempting to control the Government of this country, the judiciary, and even the very centres of non-Catholic thought in its pulpits, is dictating to men how they must think and how they must speak, that they must not think or speak as God wishes them to speak or their own consciences direct them, but as these psalm-singing, Bible-reading hypocrites want them to speak. They pervert the truths of Holy Scripture and, like the devil, quote Scripture to suit their own purpose.

"This is the great question for solution in the nineteenth century, according to Leo XIII., for which, as he says in his famous encyclical, 'a remedy must be found, and found quickly, or the good people will be driven into rebellion and violence.'

"This closing year of the nineteenth century must find teachers of Christianity keenly alive to the demands of the people and to their rights. I believe firmly that a great crusade of moral evolution and development will manifest itself in the coming decade of the twentieth century and will be prefaced in preparation by the just and fearless utterances of men in public life and the pulpits of God demanding justice for the people.

"The men who are now attempting to control the industrial and mental forces will be forced to the wall, and the rights of the people will be asserted and that which God has given them will be grasped from the hands of their oppressors as successfully as Moses grasped justice for the Hebrew people from the tyrannies and oppressions of the Pharaohs.

"I hope that every member of this congregation will protest against the covetousness and luxury of unjust and tyrannical oppression by the corrupt, corporate powers of the times in which we live."

THE NEWFOUNDLAND FISHERIES

It Is Said the Modus Vivendi with France Will Be Renewed.

LONDON, Jan. 1.—The Times publishes a dispatch from St. John's, N. F., dated Dec. 31, saying:

"All the political parties agree that a renewal of the modus vivendi for another year is a measure which will pass unanimously, both Houses about April 15. All the colonists are united in a desire to assist the empire by every possible means."

The fear that Newfoundland would refuse to renew the modus vivendi has been a bugbear of the imperial Government, many of the authorities declaring that it constituted the gravest possibility of complications with France. Thus, the news that the modus vivendi will be renewed has been received with the greatest relief.

Other dispatches from St. John's say that the Colonial Cabinet is holding out for a modified agreement relieving colonial fishermen from the jurisdiction of naval officers, who, it is asserted, rule the coast like autocrats.

Kaiser Confers Titles.

BERLIN, Jan. 1.—Emperor William has conferred the title of Prince on Count von Eulenburg, the German Ambassador at Vienna. Prince von Hatzfeldt-Trachenberg, Governor of Silesia, has been created a Duke and hereditary nobility has been conferred on Herr Thielen, the Minister of Public Works.

Lions Kill a Vienna Animal Keeper.

VIENNA, Jan. 1.—One of the animal keepers at the Vienna Zoological Gardens entered the cage of lions to-day in a spirit of bravado, and six lions rushed upon him and tore him to pieces.

The attendants sought in vain, with flaming torches and streams of water, to drive the wild beasts from their victim.

Austria's New Currency Law in Force.

VIENNA, Jan. 1.—Under the new currency law, which went into force to-day throughout Austria-Hungary, the florin and kreuzer disappear. The new unit is the krone, equaling half a florin. After the introduction of the gold standard the krone will be worth 1 franc 5 centimes.

Chilean Claims Commission Revived.

VALPARAISO, Jan. 1.—The Chilean Congress having approved the renewal of the Chilean Claims Commission, or the Washington tribunal, according to the convention with the United States, Executive action today made the revival an accomplished fact.

SENATOR FORD A LIEUTENANT.

Elected by Company C, Ninth Regiment, to Succeed C. W. Seward.

Company C, Ninth Regiment, has elected Senator John Ford Second Lieutenant, to succeed Lieut. Charles W. Seward, who died of camp fever in the Spanish war. The company has also elected Color Sergt. U. S. G. Croft as First Lieutenant to succeed Emott Seward, Jr., who also died of camp fever, like his brother, during the Spanish war.

Senator Ford joined the Ninth Regiment shortly after its muster out of the volunteer service, and has carried a gun as a private.

The company will dine its newly elected officers next Thursday night. The newly elected Captain, Charles A. Meyer, Jr., has just received his commission, and will be among the guests of the company.

Her One-Hundredth Birthday.

Mrs. Sarah Allen of 523 Van Vorst Place, Union Hill, N. J., celebrated yesterday the 100th anniversary of her birth. She spent the day quietly and received the congratulations of her friends and relatives. Mrs. Allen was born on New Year's Day, 1800, in Ireland. She has lived in this country for fifty years. She is in fair possession of her faculties and does not appear more than eighty.

DRAMATIC AND MUSICAL

A New Musical Burletta at the Victoria Theatre.

"CARMEN" AGAIN WITH CALVE

"Chris and the Wonderful Lamp" Is a Pleasing Show—Operetta at the American—Gossip of the Stage.

"Chris and the Wonderful Lamp" was received with acclaim by the crowded audience at Hammerstein's Victoria last night. It is tuneful and showy, and is likely to run very well. The author of the piece, Glen Macdonough, hit upon a happy idea, and has worked it out fairly well. The magic lamp of Aladdin appears once more in burletta, and the Genius or Genie of the magical utensil is found to be still a potent personage.

This Genie modernized and brought closely up to date, (he was found last night to be not a day behind the age,) is the very life and soul of the new piece. In the person of Jerome Sykes, who is as well-fitted in this rôle as he was in that of estimable Foxy Quiller, he is always amusing and at times amazing. In his comings and goings from the heart of New York to the fabled island of Etheria he is accompanied by that brisk and comely little body, Edna Wallace Hopper, in the guise of Chris, a modern and extremely sophisticated youth, who gets possession of the wonderful lamp in an exceedingly strange way and makes use of it in the manner of one who never misses a chance.

The quality of the entertainment ranges from variety farce of the very latest brand to fairy ballet spectacle of the old pattern. The music, however, is good enough for operetta. Much of the action passes in fairyland, where the creatures of ancient myth are discovered in the enjoyment of the good health and spirits belonging to perpetual youth.

There are three acts and seven scenes, and one of the most striking pictures is a panoramic view of an ocean voyage. There is an electrical dance on a darkened stage in which the use of incandescent lights in the costume of dancing women is carried further than ever before. This is a startling and beautiful divertissement. There is an acrobatic song and dance by John Page and Nellie Lynch, which is not of a new sort, but is particularly good of its old sort.

John Philip Sousa's music has much of the dash and spirit expected of his compositions. March movements abound. The principal songs are taking. Mr. Sykes sings in half a dozen of them. His topical song, "He couldn't do a thing without me," reveals the fact that Aladdin's lamp has been in use more recently and nearer at home than we have hitherto known. At the close of Act II. one of Sousa's characteristic patriotic finales, with a brass band to supplement the orchestra, and a crowded stage, set last night's audience cheering. The reception of the British flag indicated that few Boer sympathizers were present.

After this episode a garden full of flowers was passed over the footlights to Edna Wallace Hopper and Mr. Sykes was compelled to make a speech.

Musically, the company is not very strong, but the ensembles go well enough. Miss Stewart's calliope-like high notes are associated with tones in the middle register of a rather feeble quality. But she had many admirers in the audience.

"CARMEN" AT THE OPERA.

Mme. Calve Repeats Her Famous Impersonation Before Many People.

The Spanish gypsy was in a mild mood last night. She threw away the chair when her soldier lover permitted himself to hear bugles in spite of her allurements, as if she really did not intend to be angry. And when the lover produced the flower from his bosom and said pretty things to her about it, she backed into his arms in a mild manner, not as one who desired to be smothered with kisses then and there. Yet she was the same Carmen as of old. There was difference in the conception of the character on the part of Mme. Calvé, yet no doubt there were in the Metropolitan Opera House some persons who thought they were seeing a new version of the part. The truth is that on occasion Mme. Calvé, as the actors say, "walks through the part." But as she must even then sing the music, she does not alter her reading of the rôle. Her changes are of degree, and not of kind.

But no matter in what mood the artist may be, her Carmen is fascinating, and last night's audience was moved by its charm as much as any of its predecessors. M. Salignac was the Don José. The original allotment for last night cast M. Saleza for the hero, but he was still unable to appear, and so the ever ready M. Salignac had to take his place. Don José is thoroughly suitable to the temperament and method of this young tenor, but in the heavy scenes of the third and fourth acts the lightness of his voice militates against him. He is a tenore di grazia, and these scenes call for all the tonal vigor of a tenor robusto. Taking these facts into consideration M. Salignac must be praised for an earnest and creditable performance.

M. Plancon was again the Escamillo. He was not in the best of voice, but he presented the same distinguished front as before, and received the unfailing encore for the toreador song. The minor parts were in the same hands as heretofore, and the performance in general moved with smoothness. To-morrow evening "Aida" will be given for the first time this season, and Mme. Eames will make her initial appearance in the title rôle.

THE CASTLE SQUARE COMPANY.

All lovers of good operetta are fond of Johann Strauss's "Die Fledermaus." In this work the Waltz King was particularly happy in his libretto, which is one of the best ever written for this class of play. It is an excellent comedy and would act well even if it were without the aid of the fascinating music of Strauss. With the assistance of this music, full of the most bewitching waltz and polka melodies ever conceived by the prolific fancy of the composer, it becomes an entertainment which appeals to all. The attractiveness of the famous "Du und Du" waltz, which figures in it, has not yet faded.

At the American Theatre yesterday afternoon the Castle Square Opera Company revived this delightful operetta to the evident pleasure of a large audience. There were many children in the house, and, though the point of the comedy was no doubt lost to them, they manifested the liveliest satisfaction in the pretty music. The performance was distinguished by much spirit. It would not have been difficult to improve upon it in subtlety, but there was a fine swing to it, and in the ballroom scene especially the air of gaiety was refreshing. Mr. Stewart was very happy in his impersonation of the prison keeper, and Reginald Roberts was agreeable in the rôle of Eisenstein, the victim of Dr. Falke's cheerful jest. Rhys Thomas acted and sang the music of Alfred well.

Miss Morgan was a pleasing Rosalind, though she was hardly equal to the demands of the music. Belle D'Arcy acted Prince Orolski excellently, but she did not sing the music adequately. As Adele, Gertrude Quinlan displayed the comedy talents which have been previously noticed in this place, but her work would be much improved if it were a little less boisterous. The chorus sang with vigor, and the orchestra was better than usual.

At the Murray Hill Theatre.

With a cast including Henry V. Donnelly, who plays the part of Theodore Bender, Esq., the Donnelly Stock Company is giving this week at the Murray Hill Theatre "All the Comforts of Home," one of the funniest plays it has yet presented. Two big audiences yesterday applauded it. Ralph Stuart was Alfred Hastings, Walter Allen Tom McDow, Mrs. Thomas Barry played the rôle of Josephine Bender and Hannah May Ingham was the daughter, Miss Evangeline Bender. Thomas L. Coleman as Egbert Pettibone, Grace Huntington as Rosabelle Pettibone, William Redmond as Christopher Dabney, Miss Dorothy Donnelly as Fifi Oritanki, and others supported well. Next week's attraction will be David Belasco's and Henry De Mille's play, "The Wife."

Theatres and Music Halls.

EDEN MUSEE.—Till's Marionettes will remain at the Musée during the week, presenting their pantomime. Cinderella and her slipper, as shown by the cinematograph in six tableaus and other pictures, will continue.

GRAND OPERA HOUSE.—William Gillette's "Because She Loved Him So," from the French of Bisson and Leclerq, which already this season enjoyed a long engagement at another theatre, is the New Year attraction at this house.

THEATRE COMIQUE.—"Miss New York, Jr," was the burlesque offered for this week's attraction. Specialties were presented by the O'Learys, the Oriental Cosmopolitan Trio, Cunningham and Smith, Gilson and Perry, and others.

PROCTOR'S THEATRE.—The forty instrumentalists of Niklass Schilzonyic's Hungarian Boys' Band received a cordial welcome. Others who pleased Mr. Proctor's patrons were Seymour and Dupree, William Cahill Davis, Ellsworth and Burt, Flora, Kalatechnescope, and Mr. and Mrs. Boque.

HUBER'S MUSEUM.—A big feature in the programme yesterday was the Arabian acrobats. Others in the curio hall were Sidney Hinman, the life saver; the Lutz brothers, armless freaks; Wilson, who breaks chains; Hans Dolan, the strong man, and Allen's Punch and Judy show.

KEITH'S UNION SQUARE THEATRE.—As an attraction this week, the management offers "Houdini," an individual who performs the feat of freeing himself when bound in irons. The remaining part of the bill contains Henri French, the bicyclist; Fleurette and Frank Gardiner, the Florenz Troupe, the Three Rosebuds, and many more.

PROCTOR'S PALACE.—Marshall P. Wilder was the leading feature at Mr. Proctor's up-town theatre, and at both his appearances afternoon and evening he kept his audiences in the best of humor with his new monologue work. His associates in the bill were Bertha Welby and company. "Jop" O'Hare, Herbert and Willing, Anna Teresa Berger, and others.

DEWEY THEATRE.—The two performances given yesterday by the American Burlesquers were witnessed by large audiences. The company is headed by W. B. Watson and Jeanette Dupre, assisted by Sherman and Ralston, the Spencer Brothers, Marie Bartlett, Lizzie Van, Daisy Randall, and others. The two burlesques presented were "The Benjamin Picnic" and "A Tough Night."

HARLEM OPERA HOUSE.—A large and appreciative audience greeted Miss Viola Allen on her return to this city with "The Christian." Since the company was last seen here several changes in the cast have taken place, but in no case has it been for the worse. Miss Allen repeats her vivid impersonation of Glory Quale. John Drouet gives a very consistent portrayel of the eccentric character John Storm.

KOSTER & BIAL'S MUSIC HALL.—The patrons of this house were entertained yesterday with a straight vaudeville bill. It was headed by Baroness Von Zieber, a contralto, who sang several popular selections. Miss Gertrude Haynes and her choir Celestial, John W. Ransone, and Helen Marvin are retained for another week. The Hollaway trio made their reappearance, presenting their acrobatic specialty.

HURTIG & SEAMON'S MUSIC HALL.—An interesting bill was given last night. James O. Barrow and his company were seen in a clever little comedy. Lafayette gave his impersonations and Gus Williams, with his funny stories, was cordially received. Others on the programme were Collins and Hardt, Vitoria Sisters, Foreman and West, Adele Purvis Onrl, and the Empire Comedy Four.

For Parnell Monument Fund.

The management of Koster & Bial's Music Hall will contribute the proceeds of the two performances which will take place in their theatre to-morrow to the Parnell Monument Fund. The programme for the matinée and evening performances will include Charles Wayne and Anna Caldwell, Marie Jansen, Vashti Earle and Lulu Sheppard, Helen Marvin, Gertrude Haynes, William Hayden, Madge Fox, Imogene Comer, and others.

Frank Sheppard Dead in London.

LONDON, Jan. 1.—Frank Sheppard, an American comedian, and one of the variety team of Wood and Sheppard, died Sunday night from pneumonia. He had been preparing to return to the United States after a two-years' visit to Europe.

BIG FIRE IN ELIZABETH.

United States Express, Bank, Masons, Lawyers, and Merchants Suffer—The Loss Heavy.

ELIZABETH, N. J., Jan. 1.—Fire did damage to the extent of about $75,000 to-night in the Isham Building in this city. For a time it looked as if the flames would extend to the Clark Hotel, a big five-story building adjoining, but, although the south side of the hotel was badly damaged, the firemen saved the building. The Isham Building is a total wreck.

The fire started in the cellar of 215 Broad Street, beneath the store of Max Werner, a clothier. It is reported that the fire when first discovered was issuing from a box of clothing. It spread rapidly, and soon the whole building was in flames. The lower floor of the Isham Building was occupied by five stores. Above this on the next two floors were offices of lawyers and others. Above was a big lodge room. The stores were occupied by the United States Express Company, the Elizabeth Novelty Company, Max Werner, clothier, and the Elizabeth City Bank. The lodge room was leased from the owner of the building by the Royal Arcanum, and was sublet by that organization to the Orient Lodge and Washington Lodge, F. and A. M.; St. John's Commandery, the Masonic Chapter, Courts Columbus and Scott, I. O. O. F.; the Trainmen's Association, and various other organizations. The Masons only recently moved into the lodge rooms from the Kane Building. The Masonic fraternity loses about $4,000 by the fire. The Foresters lose about $1,000, and the others about $2,000 combined.

In the law office of Judge Gilhooley a library which it took a lifetime to collect was destroyed. The loss on this is about $3,000. Among the lawyers who lost their libraries and legal papers and everything belonging to their offices were W. Wolfskeil, F. C. Marsh, Samuel Schleimer, Hague, and others.

The United States Express Company succeeded in removing all the express packages from its office. Its safe is still in the ruins, but it is thought the valuable packages and money it contained are safe. The Elizabeth Novelty Company loses about $2,000 on stock. Werner's loss is about $3,500. The City Bank loses about $3,000. The valuables are in a fire-proof vault, and are not thought to have been injured.

While the fire was burning there was a panic in the Clark Hotel. The rooms and corridors were filled with smoke and the flames were licking the side of the building. The guests and employes packed up quickly and removed their effects.

The burned building extended 150 feet in Broad Street. It was of brick and was erected a year ago by H. H. Isham. The loss on the building is estimated at $40,000. Mr. Isham is at present in California. The amount of insurance upon the building could not be ascertained to-night. The tenants were all partly insured, but in no case will the loss be fully covered.

Several firemen were slightly hurt during the fire, but the only serious accident was to John Robinson, who fell down a flight of steps and broke one of his legs.

CUT BULLET OUT OF HIS LEG.

Man Wounded by Stray Shot While Walking in Broadway.

William Schuler, a clerk, twenty-five years old, of 705 Amsterdam Avenue, walked into Roosevelt Hospital before dawn yesterday morning, and laid a 32-calibre bullet on the clerk's desk.

"I dug that out of my left leg," he exclaimed. He then showed the wound. Schuler said he was walking in Broadway, near Canal Street, an hour previously, when he felt a sharp pain in his leg. He made an examination, found the wound, and cut the bullet out with his pocket knife. He then boarded a cable car and went to the hospital.

He was cared for in the hospital.

Holy Name Services at St. Patrick's.

Over 5,000 members of the sixty-five branches of the Holy Name Society of the Archdiocese of New York attended solemn high mass at St. Patrick's Cathedral yesterday morning for the annual service of the society. The society was in charge of its spiritual director, the Rev. Father Daly. The celebrant of the mass was Father Laveille, rector of St. Patrick's. Archbishop Corrigan entered the church at the end of the service and gave the blessing. After the service he held a reception to the visiting clergy, including a dinner, in the Archiepiscopal residence.

HEARD ABOUT TOWN.

Among her associates at the Metropolitan Opera House Calvé, the inimitable Carmen, has come to be known as "Crazy Jane," as she is a "faddist" of the most impressionable sort. Her latest fad is Esoteric Buddhism, and all her spare time is now devoted to studies of the subject and to reading everything she can find that has been published on this Oriental religion. Spiritualism of the materializing sort, with the more spooks the better, has been a fancy of hers for many years, and she is a steady source of income to the mediums with a good assortment of materialized spirits on tap. Séances at her apartments are hobbies which she specially affects, and quite recently she induced the baritone Campanari to attend one of these in order to prove to him that materializing Spiritualism was all that she claimed for it. The good-natured singer made the visit as she wished, and during the course of the séance the medium astonished him by announcing that there was present the spirit of his dead daughter with a communication for her father. This astonished Campanari beyond measure, as he had no idea that any one in this country knew that he had lost a daughter, a number of years ago. It was a coup for the prima donna, and she was triumphant over the startling revelation of the medium, for she assured Campanari that she did not know that he had had a daughter. Campanari was much puzzled, and is now trying to find out who it was of the members of the company who told the medium of the death in his family circle, for he personally has no belief that he received a communication from the spirit world.

"In some way or other the fact leaked out on the European Continent that I was about to build a railroad from Santa Clara to Santiago de Cuba," said Gen. A. G. Greenwood, in chatting about cranks at the Imperial Hotel the other day. "Now, a Parisian engineer has taken the trouble to send me two big packages of plans for the construction of the proposed road, about 400 miles long, and he says that I must build an elevated structure, so that the snow will not bother its operation in Winter. Considering the fact that they never have any snow there this is about the limit in the way of suggestion."

"If you have any more luck than I wish you for the New Year you won't be able to stand it," was the very clever way in which one of the young men about town replied to the wishes for a Happy New Year that were poured in upon him by his friends.

Dwellers in hotels are always running across the unexpected in their rather confined life. Now, there is one of them who lives at a Broadway hotel who especially prides himself on keeping his room neat and clean. He has an eye for the ease and comforts of others as well as his own, and so had thought that this sort of thing would be especially gratifying to the chambermaids whom he has been in the habit of looking upon as an overworked lot, with many hardships and few comforts. Judge of his surprise then the other day when he happened to overhear a couple of the maids chatting about their work:

"Now, it's this way with me, Kate," remarked one to the other, "I likes to clean rooms when they're dirty, but I truly hates to clean 'em when they're clean."

Last week's cold snap has raised the mischief with bottlers of beer, milk, mineral waters, and other drinks that are sold in siphon. There are hosts of dwellers in apartments and flats who either shut off their supply of ice with the coming of the Winter season, or, having no iceboxes in their apartments, use the window ledges as a storage place for the bottles of certain of family drinkables that must be kept cold. Trouble began for those people on Tuesday morning last, when, after the cold snap of the previous night, they went to the windows to find that the contents of siphons, beer bottles, and milk bottles had frozen solid, and in very many instances had either burst or cracked the bottles. Grocers' boys went back to the stores after their daily rounds with baskets filled with the broken bottles, and a lot of the profit for the dealers was thus wiped out at a snuff. There was the same sort of an experience for the grocers throughout the week, and in several complaint because the number of broken bottles returned greatly exceeded those that came back whole, while hundreds of the bottles sent out never came back in any shape, but found their way to the garbage barrels, and thence to the dumps. Financially the bottlers who use siphons were the heaviest losers, for the costly bottles of this sort, though made of much heavier glass than the ordinary bottle, seemed to have suffered most from the cold snap.

While Theodore Thomas was here the other day on a flying visit to some of his old-time friends, a couple of them who had been through the trials of musical management took a stroll with him through Union Square, the while chatting about the changes in that vicinity. "There have been changes all about," remarked the great conductor to one of his friends, "but there are none that are much greater than in our own position after all. Do you ever recall the days when we used to sneak out on Union Square in the wee small hours of the morning and scatter broadcast the handbills containing the programme for the concert I was to conduct the following evening? We may have our troubles still, but we are at least released from the necessity of being our own bill posters and advertisers any longer."

After-the-theatre strollers on one of the evenings at the fag end of last week saw an unusual sight on Fifth Avenue that created a lot of gossip at one of the near-by clubs. Walking hurriedly up the street was a quietly gowned woman with every appearance of being refined and ladylike. But instead of the "creation" of some fashionable milliner, she wore on her head a tall silk hat such as a gentleman wears when he is out on dress parade. Naturally such an unusual sight created a lot of comment and a vast amount of speculation. Was the woman making a trip up the avenue as the result of a lost wager? That was hardly reasonable, as the weather was a trifle too severe for that. Finally, it was decided by the wise men at one of the clubs that the woman had been to the theatre with an escort, and had there lost her hat in a shuffle resulting from leaving it at the cloakroom. Her escort was either impecunious, or had left his wallet at home, and was so unable to hire a cab. So the fair female had to make the best of the situation, and, accepting the proffered loan of her escort's headgear, had undertaken the trip home on foot and alone. A fair sort of story to build out of a simple incident of one cold Winter evening.

"The floor walkers of your large department stores must leave their tempers behind them when they cross the threshold in the morning," remarked the Western buyer after a few hours' experience at Christmas shopping. "I heard a score of ridiculous questions daily, but the prince of them all came from a pompous and overdressed woman who hurriedly joined a group of shoppers patiently waiting for the elevator. There were three elevators evidently in motion somewhere, but none in sight just at that moment. Turning to the mild-faced floor walker the grande dame exclaimed, 'Can you tell me which elevator goes up?'

"'They all go up at intervals, madam,' was the smooth reply, as the floor walker moved quietly away without appearing to notice the broad smiles on the faces in the group."

An incident illustrative of the vagaries of woman when she enters a lunch room whose prices are unknown to her was the source of much amusement to a party in a Twenty-third Street restaurant near Sixth Avenue the other day. The polite waiter had escorted a woman burdened with the usual number of packages to a seat at a small table, and stood by long and patiently, while the bill of fare was studied with more than the usual attention. Finally she looked up, as though surprised at seeing the slick waiter near her, and said, languidly:

"I will not order just at present. I am waiting for a friend who will be in in just a few moments."

The waiter retired to fill another order, but no sooner was he out of sight than the woman gathered her bundles together and hustled out of the place. The waiter, on his return, viewed the suddenly vacated seat with mingled surprise and amusement. He smiled and, in reply to an inquiry, said: "Oh, I've seen that before. They expect to find a 50 cent lunch for 15 cents. Sometimes they compromise on a sandwich and coffee, but when a woman doesn't want to do that, trust her to make an excuse to retire gracefully."

WHAT IS DOING IN SOCIETY.

New Year's Day, even so notable a New Year's Day as that of yesterday, which ushered in the last year of a century, like its predecessors of the past fifteen years, was a very dull one socially in New York Society, or at least a large portion of it, was in the country, where it betook itself on Saturday evening last to spend the double holiday and to enjoy the Winter sports of coasting, sleighing, and skating, which the intense cold of the past few days and yesterday morning's slight snowstorm brought. The cold was severe enough, however, to keep many people who had postponed their departure for the various country clubs or house parties until this morning, from carrying out their intention, and the clubs were consequently fairly well filled throughout the day, while there were numerous luncheon parties at the popular restaurants. The return tide set in at late afternoon, and the dinner hour saw many well-known people dining at Sherry's, Delmonico's, and the Waldorf, and the opera was fairly well attended.

At Tuxedo the day was celebrated with more stir than usual. The opening of the new racquet and tennis courts on Saturday brought the lovers of those sports out in force, and many of them remained over for the hockey and tennis games yesterday. Among the cottagers at Tuxedo, those who entertained yesterday were Mr. and Mrs. George Griswold, Mr. and Mrs. T. Suffern Tailer, Mr. and Mrs. P. Lorillard, Jr., Mr. and Mrs. Richard Mortimer, Mr. and Mrs. Walter G. Ladd, Mr. and Mrs. William R. Garrison, Mr. and Mrs. R. Fulton Cutting, Mr. and Mrs. Walker Breese Smith, Mr. and Mrs. James Brown Lord, Mr. and Mrs. Herbert C. Pell, Mr. and Mrs. Louis B. McCagg, Mr. and Mrs. George Gordon King, Mr. and Mrs. George H. Hull, Mr. and Mrs. Christopher Wolfe, Mr. and Mrs. Frederick A. Snow, Mr. and Mrs. Frederick F. Carey, Mr. and Mrs. J. Frederic Tams, Mr. and Mrs. George Grenville Merrill, Mr. and Mrs. Paul Tuckerman, the Misses Preston, and Miss Breese.

Many large dinners were served in the Tuxedo cottages on Saturday night. Mr. and Mrs. James Brown Lord entertained fifteen guests. Mr. and Mrs. T. Suffern Tailer, Mr. and Mrs. L. B. McCagg, the Misses Preston, and Mr. and Mrs. Paul Tuckerman also entertained a number of guests. After dinner all assembled at the clubhouse, where dancing was enjoyed. Yesterday was full of amusement. The weather being so fine, although cold, many New Yorkers went out to enjoy the sports. Many could not get rooms at the clubhouse, all having been engaged in advance. The skating on Newwah Lake drew a large crowd and was greatly enjoyed, this being the first skating of the season. A match game of hockey was played between the Columbia College team and the New York Naval Reserve. The game, described in another column, was a good one, and was witnessed by a large number of spectators. The toboggan slide, recently built near the clubhouse to the large lake, could not be used, as the ice was hardly strong enough on the lake.

Mrs. Pierre Lorillard, Jr., gave at Keewaydin, her Tuxedo residence, yesterday afternoon a musicale to 200 invited guests. After the musicale tea was served. Many guests then returned to the city, not being able to procure rooms to remain over for the ball at the clubhouse. The music at Mrs. Lorillard's was furnished by the Hamreuther Quartet of New York. Mr. and Mrs. Archibald Mackay opened their cottage, the Hoffman House, for the holiday season and the Tuxedo ball. Miss E. C. Whitney has arrived at the Nicholl cottage, which she has taken for the season. George L. Ronalds opened his cottage, on Westlake Road, for the holidays and entertained a number of guests. Mr. and Mrs. James Brown Lord have opened their cottage, having rented the Nicholl cottage to Miss Whitney.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry W. Munroe, who occupy the Vogel cottage at Tuxedo, entertained a number of guests yesterday. Mr. Munroe has just returned from abroad. Mr. and Mrs. Charles B. Alexander, who have taken rooms at the club, entertained at dinner a number of friends Friday and Saturday, to meet Miss Crocker, who was their guest. The Rev. Grenville Merrill and Mrs. Merrill entertained at the rectory Mr. W. A. Gill of Yorkshire, England. On Christmas morning all the village people were surprised by receiving as a present a large turkey, presented by Mrs. Herbert C. Pell. Over two hundred were given out. On Thursday afternoon the children were made happy by a Christmas tree in the town hall, presented by Mrs. William Kent. Many presents were given. Mr. William Rhinelander Stewart is at the club also, the Rev. Dr. George William Douglas of Grace Church, New York, Mrs. Pierre Lorillard, Miss Lilly Frelinghuysen, Mrs. Spencer Ledyard, the Crocker family, and Mr. J. C. Ladd of California, Howard, Nott Potter, Mrs. Newbold Le Roy Edgar, Charles L. Hyde and family, Mrs. Jefferson Coddington, Miss Coddington, Mr. Frederick Kernochan, Mr. R. W. G. Willing, and many others.

The University Club has issued invitations for a large reception for ladies in its new and beautiful clubhouse at Fifty-fourth Street and Fifth Avenue for the afternoon of Thursday next, Jan. 4, and for a reception for men on the evening of the same day. These receptions will virtually be a housewarming for the new building, which has never before been opened for the general admission of guests. The cards for these two receptions will be greatly in demand.

Baltusrol was perhaps, after Tuxedo, Cedarhurst, and Westchester, the out of town resort most favored yesterday. Notwithstanding the cold, a number of devoted golfers took part in a tournament, for which handsome prizes were given for the lowest gross score and the lowest handicap score. The majority of those who went out from the city found the links too cold for comfort and remained indoors in the cozy little clubhouse, where they gathered around the wood fires. Several luncheon parties were held, and New Year's, as usual, kept up its reputation as one of the pleasantest days of the year at the club. The many house parties on the Upper Hudson and on Long Island and Staten Island and at Lenox spent the day in the enjoyment of Winter sports and the evening in dining and dancing. Mr. and Mrs. Ogden Mills had a large party at Staatsburgh, and Mr. and Mrs. Anson P. Stokes and Mr. and Mrs. John Sloane and Mr. and Mrs. Henry Barclay, who have opened their Lenox houses, had them filled with guests. There was a dance scheduled at Bonnie Brae, the Barclay residence at Lenox, for last evening, but there was some doubt yesterday afternoon whether this would take place, as Mrs. Barclay, it was said, was indisposed.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry O. Havemeyer of 24 Madison Avenue gave last night a dinner and theatre party for their daughter, Miss Adaline Havemeyer, and some of her young friends. Among the guests were the Misses Lulu Peters, Helen W. Stevens, Molly Lefferts, Eloise Hatch, Annie R. Tinker, Margaret Smallwood, Augusta Munn, Nathalie Knowlton, and Ethel Rockefeller; the Messrs. Anson Hard, David and Alfred Wagstaff, Oscar E. Stevens, Harry Alexandre, Seymour Johnson, Alexander Pratt, Franklin B. Lord, Jr., and Richard Williams, Jr. The party attended the Knickerbocker Theatre and saw "The Cowboy and the Lady."

Another dinner and theatre party for young people will be given this week by Mr. and Mrs. W. B. Boulton of 13 East Thirty-fourth Street. Two boxes for "Sherlock Holmes" have been taken for the party, which will consist of the Misses Molly Lefferts, Nelly Hard, Helen W. Stevens, Josephine Atterbury, Anita Boulton, and the Messrs. Russell Auchincloss, S. C. Osborne Wheeler, Alexander Craighead, Harry Dillard of Philadelphia, and William Boulton, Jr.

To-day brings a number of luncheons and dinners, and this evening the second Junior Cotillion will be danced at Sherry's. Mrs. Alexander Van Nest and Mrs. Osborn will assist Mrs. Anson Phelps Stokes and Mrs. Arthur M. Dodge in receiving the guests. Mr. Phoenix Ingraham will lead the cotillion, dancing with Miss Crocker. The third fortnightly dance, which it has been announced would take place to-night, will not occur until the evening of Tuesday, Jan. 9.

***

The most notable of yesterday's entertainments for young people was the cotillion given last evening by Dr. Octavius A. White and Mrs. White for their grandchildren; Miss Helen White Stevens and Mr. Oscar Egerton Stevens, the daughter and son of Mrs. Berkeley Mostyn, formerly Mrs. Alexander Stevens and born Miss Helen White. This followed closely on the cotillion given Saturday evening by Dr. White and Mrs. White for their two younger grandchildren, Miss Elizabeth Winthrop Stevens, daughter of Mrs. Ledyard Stevens, and Miss Alexandre H. Stevens, daughter of Mrs. Mostyn. There were 150 to 200 young people present last evening, all friends and associates of Miss Stevens and Master Stevens from early childhood. No attempt was made to invite other than childhood friends, as Miss Stevens does not come out until next year, when other and more formal affairs will be given her by her grandparents. The guests were received by Mrs. Berkeley Mostyn, as Mrs. White is much of an invalid. Mrs. Mostyn wore a handsome gown of black mechlin lace—the lace being a family heirloom—over white pale gray satin, with steel paillettes. The cotillion was led by Mr. T. Chesley Richardson and Miss Helen White Stevens. There were three favor figures, and the favors were boutonnières of mistletoe and holly, college flags, horseshoes, gilt butterflies, reins and sleigh bells, hand-painted Japanese fans, pins, and some beautiful Moorish spoons. The affair began at 9 and ended at 12. The supper was served by Delmonico in the handsomely decorated billiard room in the basement. The rooms were elaborately decorated with festoons and wreaths of holly and Christmas greens. Among the young guests were the Misses Marian Fish, Dorothy Edwards, Molly Lefferts, Nellie W. Hard, Chloise Hatch, Alice Van D. Ripley, Anita Boulton, Virginia Osborn, Grace Sedgwick, Rosalind Street, May Gallatin, the Misses Fanshawe, Lillian S. Holmes, Elsie Schefer, Ella de Peyster, Josephine Williams, Marie De Neufville, Eleanor Morris, Frances C. Jones, Charlotte H. SOCIETY AT TUXEDO PARK.

Many Participate in the Gayest of All New Year's Balls—Mrs. P. Lorillard, Jr., Gives a Musicale.

Special to The New York Times.

TUXEDO PARK, N. Y., Jan. 1.—The annual New Year's ball at the Tuxedo Club took place here to-night. It surpassed all others in gayety.

The clubhouse has been packed throughout the week, and many cottages were opened for the occasion.

Dancing commenced at 10 o'clock and was interrupted at 1 o'clock, when supper was served in the large dining room. There were no favors. Two Hungarian orchestras played alternately.

A DAY'S WEDDINGS.

Baker—Held.

Miss Jeanne Held, daughter of the late Samuel Held, and Wendell Baker, son of the late Francis Baker, were married yesterday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock at St. George's Church, Stuyvesant Square, by the Rev. Dr. Rainsford. As both families are in mourning the wedding was a very quiet one, only the immediate relatives being present. The bride had no attendants, and there were no ushers. The bride's gown and hat were of brown cloth, and she entered the church on the arm of her brother, Dr. R. J. Held. Frederic Ames Baker, the bridegroom's brother, was best man. After the ceremony there was a breakfast for the members of the two families at the apartment of the bride's mother, 101 East Nineteenth Street. The young couple will make their home at the Cambridge on their return from their bridal trip.

Seeley—Mitchell.

Miss Lucy Mitchell, daughter of Mrs. Archibald Paull Mitchell, was married yesterday noon at her mother's residence, 33 West Seventy-first Street, to Herbert Barnum Seeley, son of Clinton Seeley of Bridgeport, Conn., and grandson of the late P. T. Barnum. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Matthew A. Taylor, rector of the Church of the Blessed Sacrament. The drawing room in which the marriage took place was decorated with white roses and lilies and Christmas greens. The bride was given away by her brother, Archibald Paull Mitchell. Her gown was of pearl gray cloth, with trimmings of du

MOLINEUX MURDER TRIAL

PRISONER'S NEW YEAR'S DAY

With the opening session of the new year to-day the trial of Roland B. Molineux for the killing of Katherine J. Adams in December, 1898, will be in its eighth week, and according to the best information obtainable from both sides it will be at least that much longer before the case is finally given to the jury. The prosecution has at least twenty-five more material witnesses, and it is understood that if the case is considered strong enough after they have testified it will do without the testimony of a number of witnesses that it had expected to call. If, on the other hand, Assistant District Attorney Osborne feels that he can supplement the testimony, these witnesses will be brought to the stand.

The defence will then have its inning, and it will take up as much time as the prosecution has taken. The chances are that Mr. Carvalho, the chief handwriting expert for the defence, will be on the stand quite as long as was Mr. Kinsley, who occupies the same relation to the prosecution. It took nine days, with more or less interruption, to examine and cross-examine Mr. Kinsley, and as the defence through Mr. Carvalho will seek to establish an exactly opposite state of facts to those sworn to by Mr. Kinsley, his examination by Mr. Weeks and his cross-examination by Mr. Osborne will be quite as interesting as was the testimony of Mr. Kinsley.

The prosecution has by no means put in all of its medical testimony. Prof. Witthaus has still to swear to the results of the chemical analysis which he made of the viscera of the dead woman; Dr. Potter has still to supplement the evidence given by Dr. Hitchcock, and several pathologists will be called to answer hypothetical questions, for Mr. Weeks has made it evident that he will not admit that Mrs. Adams died of poison at all. For the defence Dr. Allan McLane Hamilton will be the chief medical witness, and, from the apparatus which he daily brings to court and the copious notes he has made, the inference is fair that he will give interesting testimony.

In the evidence given last week by Harry S. Cornish, the Physical Director of the Knickerbocker Athletic Club to whom was sent the package containing the bottle of poisoned bromo-seltzer, a dose of which administered by Cornish killed Mrs. Adams, there was one material point of difference from the statement he gave to the press a week or so after Mrs. Adams's death. He said at that time that on the morning of Dec. 28, when Mrs. Adams complained of a headache, he went to Mrs. Rogers's room for the bottle of the drug and found it there on her dressing table. This was supposed to be the same bottle that Cornish had brought home the night before and the same which had been sent to him in a silver holder at the club. On the stand Friday Cornish said that this statement of his was an error. He said he had given the silver holder to Mrs. Rogers and had kept the bottle in his own room. This means that the bottle and its poisoned contents never left the custody of Cornish and destroys any theory that it might have been tampered with after he received it. The cross-examination of Cornish by Mr. Weeks will be resumed this morning.

Molineux spent New Year's Day much in the same manner as the 300 other prisoners locked up with him in the Tombs. He began the day by exercising for half an hour in the prison yard, after which he ate a hearty breakfast. He spent the morning in reading the newspapers, and seemed to enjoy his dinner of turkey and plum pudding. A delegation of several women and one man from the Union Settlement Society spent the morning visiting the cells of the prisoners and wishing them a happy new year. They carefully avoided Cell No. 36, however, where Molineux is confined, so that its inmate was left undisturbed.

Molineux appeared to be interested in the vaudeville entertainment which was given in the prison early in the afternoon. Frank Banta, who opened the performance with selections by his orchestra, stationed the musicians directly opposite Molineux's cell. Molineux was seated near the door, reading a newspaper by the light of a candle, but laid it down when the concert began and listened attentively. The music suffered considerably from the efforts of the performers to get a good view of the prisoner. He apparently was annoyed by their curiosity, for he extinguished his candle and drew his chair further back into the darkness of his cell. After the concert he received Miss Annie Hart, who had sung a ballad, with great politeness and thanked her warmly for her wishes for his speedy deliverance.

STEAMER GROUNDS AND FLOATS.

The Tordenskjold Ashore for a Few Hours Near Jones Inlet.

The Norwegian steamship Tordenskjold, Capt. Thomassen, bound from Mexican ports for New York, ran ashore about 4 o'clock yesterday morning on the Long Island shore, near Jones Inlet, between Fire Island and Rockaway. The sea was quiet, but a blinding snowstorm was in progress. The Oak Island Life Saving Crew went to the ship's assistance, but its services were not required, as the ship had not grounded hard and was in no danger. At 9 o'clock a rising tide and reversed engines freed the Tordenskjold, and she proceeded.

The Tordenskjold is a steel vessel of 1,180 tons gross, built at North Shields in 1889. She measures 225.3 feet long, 32.6 feet beam, and 15.3 feet deep. Her hailing port is Tonsberg, Norway, and she has been engaged for some time in trade between New York and Mexico as a freighter.

DRINK-CRAZED MAN'S SUICIDE.

Julius Jacobs First Shot at His Wife, Then Killed Himself.

In a sudden attack of frenzy brought on by the dissipation of a night Julius Jacobs, a driver, of 325 East Eighty-eighth Street, after an unsuccessful attempt to kill his wife, shot himself through the head yesterday morning. He died almost instantly. He leaves seven children.

Jacobs, his wife, and his step-brother were the joint owners of the house in which the attempted murder and the suicide occurred. For many years Jacobs had been drinking heavily and frequently abused his wife and children, at one time having been convicted and sentenced for two months. His wife had tried various cures for alcoholism for him, and even had him committed to a sanitarium on Long Island. After a course of treatment he was discharged as cured, but he soon relapsed.

WOMEN'S HOTEL NOW ASSURED.

Subscription of $300,000 to Pay for a Site Completed.

There is every indication now that New York is to have a hotel for women only. Charles D. Kellogg, the secretary of the committee having the project in charge, announced last night that the desired subscription of $300,000 with which to purchase the site for the building had been collected and that the project would be pushed rapidly.

The committee has an option on a site between Madison Square and Thirty-ninth Street, which can be purchased for $250,000, and this probably will be accepted. The persons who have subscribed the money with which to purchase the second express confidence of the success of the proposed hotel. It is said that applications for board and rooms have already been made by many young women who are tired of flat and boarding house life.

TROLLEY CAR LEAVES TRACK.

Motorman Hurled Against Some Rocks and Badly Injured.

TARRYTOWN, N. Y., Jan. 1.—Union Railway Trolley Car No. 60 jumped the track to-day after rounding the sharp curve at Main Street. The car ran against some rocks and the front platform was badly damaged. Motorman Joseph Burkhart of White Plains was thrown over the platform and struck on his head on the rocks. He was removed to the Tarrytown Hospital in an unconscious condition. It is thought he will recover.

There were two women and five men in the car. The women were badly frightened, but escaped uninjured, while the men received slight bruises. The car was coming from White Plains when the accident occurred.

Muslin Underwear.

The January Sale of Women's Undermuslins! Where to begin with such a mass of material? A Yankee rule comes to our aid: Begin at the beginning.

Months of busy planning culminate in this occasion. The master-stroke—the Macy-stroke—of the offerings is found in the facts that we have sustained or improved qualities without increasing the cost to you. Old rates prevail here, notwithstanding the sharp advance in the price of both material and labor.

We know the goods thoroughly, and therefore can advertise them intelligently and accurately; many of them were made in our own factory under our personal direction. Fabrics are right, workmanship is up to the highest standard of excellence—trimmings, shapes, sizes and finish have not been skimped in the least. Examination will show that the values are all we claim them to be. The grace, delicacy, goodness and strength of each garment—and the incomparable economy—will appeal to all women of nice taste and large thrift.

CHANGED FEELING IN CUBA

One of the Secretaries Says Gov. Gen. Wood Is Beginning to be Loved by the People.

HAVANA, Jan. 1.—The newly appointed Cabinet will hold its first meeting to-morrow, when the following Secretaries will meet Governor General Wood:

Secretary of State and Government—DIEGO TAMAYO.
Secretary of Finance—JOSE ENRIQUE VARONA.
Secretary of Justice—LOUIS ESTEVEZ.
Secretary of Public Works—JOSE RAMON VILLALON.
Secretary of Education—JUAN HERNANDEZ BARREIRO.
Secretary of Agriculture, Industry, and Commerce—RUIS RIVERA.

One of the Secretaries, who displayed the customary reticence of the best class of Cubans in respect to giving names for publication in connection with interviews, made the following statement to-day:

"A wonderful change seems to have come over the Cuban people during the last few weeks. It would have been impossible, on Dec. 1, to have aroused the enthusiasm which was displayed last night during the playing of "The Star-Spangled Banner." Such cheers as were given for President McKinley while the procession was passing through the streets could not have been raised for him or for any other American a month or so ago. The change, in my opinion, is due to a disappearance of that distrustful feeling which, during the greater part of last year, had been gradually growing among the Cuban people.

"President McKinley's message to Congress was the first light the Cubans had seen for a long time. It came like the sun after days of bad weather and gloom. Then followed the appointment of Gen. Wood, whom the Cubans have always admired in view of what he did in Santiago, the most difficult province to rule in the island. Now, since his published remarks on various occasions, and in consideration of the manner in which he has already taken hold of affairs, the Cubans are not only satisfied with him, but are beginning to love him.

"In summoning a conference of representative Cubans to meet him, Gen. Wood displays true statesmanship. His step shows that, though there are only six Cabinet appointments, the Governor General desires prominent Cubans to express their views as to future administration, intending, so far as their suggestions are practical, to carry these out, and also intending that those who attend the conference should carry back to their respective provinces a good working idea of Gen. Wood and the Cabinet, and be able to answer questions, to dispel fears and doubts, and to give assurances to the people of the absolute good faith of the United States regarding 'Cuba libre.'"

HAVANA FLOCKS TO THE RACES.

The Cuban Capital's Best Society Was Out in Force.

HAVANA, Jan. 1.—At the Jockey Club races to-day, Cuban society was out in force—all the best element usually to be seen at the balls and other social events being present. A large number were in carriages. Havana virtually deserted the Prado for the races.

Fully 80 per cent. of the American colony was present, including Gen. Wood, Gen. Lee, Gen. Chaffee, and Gen. Ludlow, with their families.

The principal event was the Officers and Club Members' Cup Handicap, three-quarters of a mile, five starters, which was won, after a splendid race, by Mr. Guyol, the one-armed English editor of the Lucha, beating Lieut. Healy on Hoomlah by a length and beating Gen. Ludlow's horse Adios by two lengths.

MILITARY COMMANDS IN CUBA.

It Is Believed Two More Departments Will Be Abolished.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 1.—The eastern half of the Island of Cuba is now without a permanent military commander. Gen. Wood is understood to be making plans for the reorganization of the military government. There were originally six departments in Cuba, and there are now four. It is believed that the four will be cut down to two, which will dispense with the services of two of the Brigadier Generals there.

Gen. Wilson, who commands in Matanzas and Santa Clara, has been ordered to Washington, and it is said that Gen. Lee will also return to this country. Gen. Chaffee and Gen. Ludlow are likely to be the two department commanders. One of them will be in command of the whole eastern end of the island.

THE CITY'S SHIPPING TRADE.

Year's Arrivals from All Ports, 14,067 Vessels, 9,468 Being Domestic.

The total number of vessels of all descriptions that came into the Port of New York during the past year was 14,067, the largest portion by far being those engaged in the coasting trade. The following is a summary of the vessels that arrived during the year from foreign ports:

The number of steamers that came in from domestic ports during the year was 2,054, and of sailing vessels 7,414, making a total of 9,468 vessels of all descriptions.

A BOY SENTENCED TO DEATH.

E. R. Snow Pleads Guilty to a Charge of Murder at Barnstable, Mass.

BARNSTABLE, Mass., Jan. 1.—Edwin Ray Snow, charged with the murder of James T. Whittemore at Yarmouth last October, was arraigned at a special session of the Superior Court here to-day before Judge Higgins. He retracted his previous plea of not guilty and pleaded guilty.

Attorney General Knowlton then said that, although at the time the offense was committed, the age of the defendant was only seventeen years and two months, the Government had no alternative but to ask for the sentence prescribed by the law passed by the last Legislature, substituting death by electricity for hanging. The Attorney General stated, however, that he did not believe any boy of the age of the defendant would be executed.

The Court then pronounced sentence, ordering that the prisoner be confined in Barnstable Jail until March 10, then removed to the Charlestown State Prison, where he should be executed between 10 P. M. March 18 and 10 A. M. March 19.

Whittemore, Snow's victim, was shot through the head while driving a baker's wagon, and his pockets were emptied. The fact that Snow was the last person known to have been with Whittemore led to his arrest and indictment.

BOSTON, Jan. 1.—The news that the youth Snow had been sentenced to be executed on March 19 aroused considerable interest at the State Prison at Charlestown, it being the first time that a man has been condemned to die by electricity in this Commonwealth. The apparatus at the State Prison has been in readiness for nearly a year, in compliance with the act passed by the 1898 Legislature relating to capital punishment in Massachusetts.

D. L. MOODY LEFT NO WILL.

His Eldest Son Applies to be Appointed the Administrator.

GREENFIELD, Mass., Jan. 1.—A petition was presented in the Probate Court here to-day by W. R. Moody, eldest son of the late Evangelist Dwight L. Moody, asking that he be appointed administrator of his father's estate. The petition will be acted upon to-morrow, when it is expected that the request will be granted.

Mr. Moody left no will.

MRS. HARRIET E. ALLEN WINS.

Declared in Boston Court to be the Legal Widow of E. G. Allen.

BOSTON, Jan. 1.—The contest between Mrs. Harriet E. Allen and Mrs. Flora E. Allen, each of whom claims to be the widow of the late E. G. Allen, Superintendent of the New York, New Haven and Hartford Railroad, was decided to-day by Judge McKim in the Suffolk Probate Court in favor of Harriet E. Allen, who maintained that she was married to Mr. Allen at the Park Street Church, Boston, in 1872.

The case, which has been on trial for nearly three weeks, has attracted wide attention. The presentation of evidence was concluded last Saturday, and the morning session of the court to-day was devoted to arguments. When the lawyers had concluded, Judge McKim declared the son of Mrs. Harriet E. Allen to be the legal heir of E. G. Allen and Mrs. Harriet E. Allen to be the lawful wife.

Mrs. Flora E. Allen came into the case through having been designated as his wife by Mr. Allen in a note found after the latter's suicide in New York City several months ago.

MANY HOUSES WRECKED.

Much Damage Caused by Explosion of Sewer Gas Near Pittsburg.

PITTSBURG, Jan. 1.—An explosion of sewer gas at Knoxville, near here, about midnight, wrecked a large number of houses and stables and tore up several streets for hundreds of feet. No one was, however, injured.

Among the houses totally wrecked are twelve frame dwellings in Rochelle Street. A dozen dwellings at Zara Street and Long Alley are partly destroyed. A stable in Long Alley and a block of five houses are complete wrecks.

The damage will reach many thousands of dollars.

Kings County Officials Installed.

The newly-elected Kings County officials took office yesterday with very little ceremony. Sheriff William Walton visited the County Jail in Raymond Street, where the keys of that institution were turned over to him by Frank D. Creamer, the retiring Sheriff. District Attorney John F. Clarke, who succeeds ex-Judge Hiram R. Steele, held an informal reception in his office in the County Court House. He was the recipient of a number of handsome floral pieces. County Clerk Peter P. Huberty, who succeeds William P. Wuest, and County Treasurer John W. Kimball, who was re-elected, also received many callers. Registrar James R. Howe, the only Republican elected to a county office at the last election, was called upon in his office by a large number of his friends. Mr. Howe succeeds Henry H. Haggerty.

Homesick Girl Kills Herself.

Bertha Birkenbaum, a Polish girl who came to ew NYork about two weeks ago to live with her aunt, Mrs. Silvas, at 91 Willett Street, committed suicide yesterday by taking carbolic acid. She was homesick and wandered away from her aunt's house in the morning. The family had planned a party for her, and, with the hope that she was only temporarily lost, the original plans were carried out and Benjamin Silvas was sent out to look for her. He found the girl had been picked up by the police in the morning on East Houston Street and taken to Gouverneur Hospital, where she died of carbolic acid poisoning.

Roland Reed Resting Easily.

Roland Reed, the actor, who was operated upon a week ago at St. Luke's Hospital, was reported last night to be resting easily, with little change in his condition. Every day the physicians and relatives of the actor have more and more hope of his ultimate recovery.

THE SARATOGA AGAIN AFLOAT.

Steamer Was Grounded at Santiago by an Unlicensed Pilot.

SANTIAGO DE CUBA, Jan. 1.—The Ward Line steamer Saratoga, after having been ten days aground, was pulled off yesterday by the Santiago and two tugs. An investigation has disclosed remarkable port regulations. No pilots in the harbor have a license, except two holding Spanish licenses, but several others are permitted by the commandant of the port to use the pilot flag. The man who grounded the Saratoga was not licensed, it is claimed.

LIFE CONVICT LEAVES PRISON.

Governor's Pardon Releases Baldwin, Who Had Served 22 Years.

SING SING, Jan. 1.—John C. Baldwin, the life convict who was pardoned on Saturday by Gov. Roosevelt, left the prison here this afternoon. He had served twenty-two years less two months for the murder of William H. Springstein in Port Jervis in October, 1877. He was at first sentenced to be hanged, but the sentence was commuted to life imprisonment. Major W. S. Weston of Newburg, Dr. J. J. Mills of Port Jervis, and others had been working for fourteen years to obtain his release, believing him innocent. Baldwin is a veteran of the civil war and is about sixty years old.

Dr. Mills, L. W. T. McCooskery, and Ralph Weston were at the prison when Baldwin was released, and started for Port Jervis with him this afternoon. Before Baldwin left he received $78.63 allowed him by the State.

BEDELL WINS MIDNIGHT RACE.

Tarrytown the Goal of the Associated Cycling Run—Mrs. Irene Brush's Snowstorm Century.

The race run under the auspices of the Associated Cycling Clubs of New York, from Fifty-ninth Street and Eighth Avenue to Tarrytown, beginning at midnight Sunday, was won by H. Y. Bedell of the Harlem Wheelmen, winner of last year's race. He arrived at Tarrytown one hour and twenty-two minutes after midnight. Last year the race was run under difficulties, the riders encountering a severe snowstorm.

Among the prominent cyclists that started on the run in addition to Bedell were W. E. Mosher, G. C. Schrieber, C. Fisher, E. K. Fisher, and S. De Peitro of the Harlem Wheelmen, D. Sullivan and W. Torrence of the Riverside Wheelmen, and H. Schultz and R. Stafford of the Triumph Wheelmen.

Schrieber arrived at Yonkers a little ahead of Bedell and Stafford and won the magnum of champagne. In the run to Tarrytown, however, Bedell forged ahead and won by about 300 yards from Stafford. Schrieber was a close third. The winner's time is considered good, as there was a strong wind to contend against.

There were two interesting runs held on Long Island early yesterday morning. A fifteen-mile race from the Bedford Fountain to Tom West's Hotel at Valley Stream brought out a good crowd of veteran road riders. Among these were Mrs. Jane Lindsey, Miss Lottie Brandon, and Miss Gest. Gus Egloff won the race in thirty-four minutes. Mrs. J. Lindsey was the first of the women riders to reach the finish. Her time was fifty-four minutes.

Mrs. Irene Brush, who established several records last Fall, started out with the beginning of the new year to ride a double century for a record. She gave up her task after riding 140 miles because of the storm.

Racing Firm Is Dissolved.

Special to The New York Times.

LEXINGTON, Ky., Jan. 1.—The racing firm of Bromley & Co. has been dissolved, and A. Featherstone will conduct the stable. Mr. Featherstone to-day said: "The stable will be continued as in the past. Willie O'Connor will ride for me, and Julius Bauer will continue as trainer. I think Mesmerist will be the champion three-year-old the coming season." Mr. Featherstone has added to the old string about twelve two-year-olds.

FEW OUT ON THE SPEEDWAY.

Driveway Too Slippery for Horses—Race for Champagne.

There was comparatively little driving on the Speedway yesterday, as the driveway was too slippery for the horses and not sufficiently covered with snow to warrant taking out a sleigh. A few short brushes occurred in the morning, but attracted little attention.

Several horsemen made a start early in the morning for McGown's Pass Tavern, in the Park, for the purpose of winning the annual bottle of wine. John Quinn reached the tavern in his sleigh first, but as there must be sleighing the day following the arrival of the first sleigh at the tavern, there may be another race for the bottle.

PASTIME HARRIERS WIN.

The Pastime Athletic Club, an organization that has helped to bring out more athletic champions during the past fifteen years than any other organization of its kind in this country, began the new year with a victory. The club's representatives defeated the Shamrock Harriers in a relay race from Yonkers to the New York City Hall, which was started by Mayor Sutherland from Getty Square, Yonkers, on the stroke of the new year. The distance of the course covered is about eighteen miles, in five relays. J. C. Lynch, who ran the last relay of three miles for the "Indians," by which name the Pastime Athletic Club is known, finished at City Hall Park at 1:45 A. M. He was thirty-five seconds ahead of A. McKenzie, who ran the last relay for the Shamrock Harriers.

The men ran in the usual Summer togs, with bare legs and arms. They did not attract much attention until they turned into Broadway at Fifty-ninth Street. The Tenderloin district was pretty well crowded with people who were out celebrating the advent of the new year, and to these the thinly clad figures darting down the thoroughfare, first on the sidewalk and then in the middle of the street, dodging pedestrians and cable cars, the thermometer hovering around the zero mark, was a spectacle.

At Twenty-third Street a cab driver offered Lynch the use of a horse blanket.

"G'wan, I'm not cold. You can throw me a fan if you have one handy," answered Lynch as he sped down the street.

The course led from Yonkers to Riverdale, down the King's Bridge Road to Van Cortlandt Park, through Fordham to One Hundred and Sixty-ninth Street, to St. Nicholas Avenue, to the Central Bridge, to Eighth Avenue, to Fifty-ninth Street, to Broadway.

The men composing the relays for the Pastimes and Shamrocks were E. Strupple and S. A. Mellor; S. A. Mahon and L. Schrenkeiser; D. J. Brennan and R. McKenzie; J. H. Kelly and H. Marks; T. A. O'Connor and A. McMahon; Lynch and A. McKenzie.

The prizes were silver medals to each member of the winning team and a trophy which the Shamrock Harriers awarded to the victorious team.

Yale Defeated at Hockey.

The Yale University hockey team played a holiday challenge match with the Crescent Athletic Club of Brooklyn last night at the Clermont Avenue Ice Skating Rink, Brooklyn. The collegians were no match at all for the home team, and were outplayed from start to finish, although the wearers of the blue played a plucky uphill contest. The score was 7 goals to 1.

GOLF IN CUTTING WINDS

EXTRA FEES FOR THE CADDIES.

The Contestants Played in Snow, Anxious for the Silver Trophies—Other Sports at the Winter Resort.

More than one young man who had gone to Lakewood for the New Year's season, with the idea of having a good time, and incidentally winning a golf prize or two, found that his enthusiasm in the latter respect was completely snowed under, when, with surprise, he saw the stunted pine trees partially covered with a mantle of white, yesterday morning. It required the nerve of a thoroughly sporty golfer to venture in the snow and wind, even at Lakewood, and in consequence the New Year's tournament at the Golf Club suffered somewhat in numbers.

"I never played golf in a more cutting wind in my life," said a veteran of the links as with difficulty he spoke through the icicles drooping from his mustache, coming stamping into the clubhouse, clad in a red sweater, and an old fur cap pulled far down over his ears. "My little caddie actually cried from the cold before I reached the last green, but I warmed him up a bit by paying him double rates."

The caddies who braved the rigors of an unusually cold day for Lakewood were, for the most part, rewarded with enlarged fees, and the weight of silver in their pockets had a wonderfully mollifying effect upon frost-bitten noses and fingers.

The case is yet to be seen, despite rain and snow, when a golf tournament, once announced, is absolutely called off. The poor competitors in each of the five sets of eight that qualified according to their medal play scores, on Saturday, for as many different cups, were all anxious to finish their games and see who would take the silver trophies home. Consequently, the semi-final rounds were started well on time. Willie Norton, the professional, and his staff, had swept all the greens, and tried to give the golfers as good a show as possible. Red balls were used, so as to be more readily seen when partially buried in the white snow, and snow rules were in force. These rules allow considerable liberty, as the player is allowed to brush the snow from his ball and clear a smooth space for his next stroke without penalty.

Four of the five contests were finished, the final round for the chief trophy being postponed for a future date. The fortunate victors of the other four cups in order of merit were H. A. Dalley of the Ardsley Club; James Park, Richmond County Country Club, L. I.; F. B. Studwell, Dyker Meadow, Brooklyn, and L. P. Rider, Nassau County, Glen Cove Dalley won the second cup by defeating J. H. Seaman of Dyker Meadow by 3 up and 2 to play.

James Park, one of the veterans in American golf, but who has not appeared in many events recently, won the third trophy after two lively contents. His semi-final round with Amory G. Hodges of the Rockaway Club was the only nineteen-hole match of the day. Park led all the way, but never was more than two holes in the lead. Honors were squared on the seventeenth green, and, as the final hole was halved, it was necessary to play an extra one. Both drove well over the snow, but Hodges then sent his ball into the woods, and that threw the match into Park's hands. In the final round Park met C. H. Pope, Jr., of the Nassau Country Club, and won after a plucky fight by 2 up and 1 to play. The first nine holes finished even, after Park took three holes in succession.

The Brooklyn golfers at the clubhouse gave their comrade, F. B. Studwell, a loud and good-natured ovation, when, in beating J. B. Ferris for the fourth cup, Studwell became possessor of the first golf prize he has ever won in competition. L. P. Rider won the last trophy easily by defeating F. I. Hatch of Westchester by 7 up and 6 to play.

Jasper Lynch beat C. L. Tappin of Westbrook in the semi-final for the chief cup by 1 up and 2 to play, and F. P. Kimball beat C. A. Walthew by one hole. Walthew barely missed turning Kimball down. It was nip and tuck, and, considering the wretched conditions for the game, was an excellent exhibition of golf.

As neither Kimball nor Lynch looked with favor upon another chilling experience over the white and gusty links, the final struggle was postponed by mutual consent.

Many of the golfers who went down fully equipped to play in the open handicap contented themselves with billiards and corridor promenades in the hotels, and Secretary Lynch finally announced that the handicap was off. Last year over eighty golfers took part in that event and with good weather fully that number would have been out yesterday.

The summary in the match play rounds is:

First Cup.—Semi-final round—F. P. Kimball, Lakewood, beat Francis A. Walthew, Galveston, 1 up; Jasper Lynch, Lakewood, beat C. L. Tappin, Westbrook, 3 up and 2 to play. Final round—Postponed.

Second Cup.—Semi-final round—J. H. Seaman, Dyker Meadow, beat Charles A. Blyth, Richmond County, 4 up and 2 to play; H. A. Dalley, Ardsley, beat J. C. Powers, Dyker Meadow, 3 up and 1 to play. Final round—Dalley beat Seaman, 3 up and 2 to play.

Third Cup.—Semi-final round—James Park, Richmond County, beat Amory G. Hodges, 1 up, (19 holes;) C. H. Pope, Jr., Nassau County, beat Norman S. Dike, Dyker Meadow, 3 up and 1 to play. Final round—Park beat Pope, 2 up and 1 to play.

Fourth Cup.—Semi-final round—F. B. Studwell, Dyker Meadow, beat H. C. Holder, Lakewood, 4 up and 3 to play; S. B. Ferris, Lakewood, beat W. W. Wilson, Lakewood, 4 up and 3 to play. Final round—Studwell beat Ferris, 2 up and 1 to play.

Fifth Cup.—Semi-final round—F. H. Hatch, Westchester, beat W. H. Rolston, Deal Beach, 3 up and 2 to play; L. P. Rider, Nassau County, beat George T. Moon, Crescent, 3 up and 2 to play. Final round—Rider beat Hatch, 7 up and 6 to play

At the Lakewood Country Club a number of golfers took part in informal games, but the golfers did not monopolize all the New Year's sport in Lakewood. Notwithstanding the three or four inches of snow over the ice on the lake, many patches were cleared early in the morning, and the skaters had a gala day on the ice. The hockey players, both old and young, had several lively matches, and the lake activity was still further enlivened by an iceboat that flew up and down the snow-covered sheet of ice with almost alarming rapidity.

BALTUSROL LINKS CROWDED.

Hardwick Wins Handicap Trophy and Tyng Turns in Best Score.

Twenty-six golfers turned in scores yesterday for the New Year's handicap at the Baltusrol Golf Club, Short Hills, N. J. The links were covered with a thin coating of snow, but the sport went on with as much zest as though milder weather favored the golfers. Benjamin Hardwick, one of the veterans of the club, won the cup, turning in a net score of 78 strokes from 16 handicap. James A. Tyng, the former club champion, took the prize for the best gross score—88 strokes. He and L. P. Bayard, Jr., who did 92, were the only scratch competitors. The leading players and scores were:

GOLF AT ST. AUGUSTINE.

J. P. Greaves Finishes First in the New Year's Tournament.

Special to The New York Times.

ST. AUGUSTINE, Fla., Jan. 1.—The weather turned out clear and bracing for the New Year's golf tournament, in which two prizes were offered by the St. Augustine Golf Club. Their links, locally known as the "Fort Links," are near Old Fort Marion, and were the first laid out in Florida.

The first prize, a silver cup, was won by J. P. Greaves; the second, a decanter, by A. M. Taylor, both members of the East Coast Golf Club. The only scratch player was Clayton Dixon, Jr., of the University of Pennsylvania team. As many were playing ten, a course new to them, they were allowed a larger handicap than usual, which put the scratch man at a slight disadvantage. The net scores were: J. P. Greaves, 77; A. M. Taylor, 79; Dr. M. W. Eagears, 80; Major L. McLain, Pittsburg, 84; Robert Murray, 85; E. A. Sumner, Detroit Country Club, 86; C. Menzies Miller, Mount Pleasant Club, 88; Clayton Dixon, Jr., 90; R. C. Watson, Sr., 92.

CARTERET GUN CLUB SHOOT.

D. I. Bradley Wins the Two-Cup Event and Divided the Money, Barring One, in the Sweepstakes.

Daniel I. Bradley won the two cup events at the New Year's Day shoot of the Carteret Gun Club yesterday. Incidentally, he divided the money in every additional sweepstake event with a single exception, and scored fifty-nine straight kills, the record for the grounds. He shot with a strange gun from the 29-yard mark, and defeated some of the most expert wing shots in the East. The birds were a selected lot, and left the traps, under the influence of the heavy gale, with unusual speed.

The ground was covered with snow, and, taken in conjunction with the bright glare of the sun, the fast-flying pigeons were most difficult marks for the gunners.

Bradley grassed eleven screamers in the race for the New Year's Day Cup. His nearest opponent was "Bob" Welch, who dropped ten within the boundary, and failed on a straightaway driver that soared away to parts unknown, minus a few unimportant tail feathers. W. W. Smith captured third money, with seven kills. The trophy was a handsome Greek vase, eighteen inches high, and is one of the most artistic prizes ever offered for a trap shooting event.

The contest for the January Cup was a magnificent race throughout. Harry Browne and Capt. A. W. Money were unfortunate in their first selections, and retired from the event with misses. Wilson and Smith were the next unfortunates, and dropped out with two and five kills, respectively. Welch lost a fast driver dead out of bounds that he drew for his seventh bird, and E. E. Jones cleanly missed his ninth. The seven other contestants continued to grass their birds steadily until the fifteenth round, when Harold Money and W. Stafford dropped out.

Williams failed to score on the eighteenth. Emerson on the nineteenth, and W. J. Hopkins on the twentieth, leaving Bradley and L. P. Thomas alone in the contest. Thomas missed his twenty-first, a left quarterer with the speed of a wild duck, and Bradley killed a driver nicely, again scoring a win.

Other sweepstake events during the day were divided between Welch and Bradley, Browne and Bradley, Welch and Thomas, Browne and Bradley; H. Money, A. W. Money, and Bradley, Williams and Bradley, and Williams and Bradley.

HUDSON GUN CLUB'S EVENTS.

Eight Sweepstakes at Targets Shot Off by Expert Gunners.

A score of expert gunners journeyed to the traps of the Hudson Gun Club on the edge of the Hackensack Meadows yesterday. The attraction was eight sweepstake events at targets thrown by the Sargent system traps. The wind was strong and cold. The scores were correspondingly low. The summary:

Ten Birds.—Roof, 9; Dudley, 8; Schoverling, 9; Banta, 8; Shields, 7; Black, 2; Schubel, 4; C. Von Lengerke, 8; Altz, 3; Nagel, 6; O'Brien, 11.

Twenty Birds.—Roof, 14; Dudley, 17; Schoverling, 11; Banta, 14; Shields, 13; O'Brien, 2; O'Rourke, 7; Bock, 6.

Twenty Birds.—Roof, 15; Dudley, 17; Schoverling, 11; Banta, 14; Shields, 18; Schubel, 16; C. Von Lengerke, 16; Col. Case, 10; Goetz, 6; Bock, 10.

CRESCENT CLUB COMPETITIONS.

Some of the foremost trap shooters in America gathered at the country clubhouse grounds of the Crescent Athletic Club at Owl's Head, Bay Ridge, L. I., yesterday to participate in the holiday shoot of the club.

In the century competition shot off in lots of twenty-five birds per man, by quarters, for the Crescent Athletic Club Cup, Rolla Heikes of Ohio, the former clay bird champion of the world, won out with the big score of 91 kills. G. H. Reikes, another Western expert, was second with 89 kills, and E. D. Fulford was third, with 88. In the bitter cold and against the high wind that swept over the grounds, it was considered fine shooting.

George W. Hagedorn won the Prize Trophy shoot, and in the shoot for the beautiful trophy presented by Edward Banks, the Banks Cup, Donald G. Geddes won in the shoot-off. In the shoot-off for the Kryn Cup, which was terminated with a tie on Christmas Day, and was postponed owing to darkness, Garrett W. Cropsey defeated George W. Hagedorn for the trophy. Sweepstakes races in which Grant Notman, J. S. S. Remsen, Dr. Ashley A. Webber, James A. R. Elliott, A. A. Hegeman, Jere Lott, and other cracks held "high guns," were the features of the remaining portion of the programme.

AT THE WESTMINSTER TRAPS,

G. S. McAlpin, Amateur Champion, Wins Three of Five Events.

George S. McAlpin, the amateur champion pigeon shot of America, won premier laurels in three of the five events that were attractions at the Westminster Kennel Club's traps at Babylon, L. I., yesterday.

The event which headed the programme, the Opening Sweep, was won by Messrs. C. M. Chapin and G. S. McAlpin, who gained even honors, each man having a score of 6 up.

The Allowance Handicap of seven birds for a cup given by the club was won by J. B. W. Stuart, who had a score of 7 straight to his credit.

The Miss-and-out Shoot was won by Chapin and Magoun, who each scored 5 kills.

The New Year's Day Cup match was won by McAlpin, who rolled up a score of 13 straight birds. His nearest competitor was Bird, who followed with a score of 12.

The last event, an Even-Distance Miss-and-out Handicap, for a cup, was won by McAlpin, who scored 8 kills. Kittredge took second honors, with a score of 7. This was one of the most interesting events of the day.

ARTHUR VINCENT'S NARROW VICTORY.

Arthur Vincent, a Philadelphia wing shot, defeated Dr. Thomas W. Carmon, the one-armed "crack-a-jack" from Newark, in a 100-bird match for $250 a side yesterday. The event was decided on Morfey's grounds, at Lyndhurst, N. J., in a driving gale over a field of snow. The birds were a strong lot, and, under the influence of the southwesterly wind, were mostly left-quarterers.

Vincent's score at the finish was 77 kills, while his one-armed opponent retired from the traps with one less to his credit. Vincent led by five birds at the end of the twenty-fifth round, four at the fiftieth round, and one at the seventy-fifth round. Both grassed the same number in their last twenty-five, leaving the Philadelphian a winner by a single bird.

Brooklyn Men Shoot for Gold Pieces.

The members of the Brooklyn Gun Club held an all-day holiday shoot on the club grounds, at Union Course, Long Island, yesterday, in which the members and guests of the club shot at clay birds for gold pieces. An attractive programme had been arranged, and in the main event, which was at fifty clay targets per man, handicap allowances of kills to be added, G. H. Merker and Richard Woods tied with forty-five kills each. In the Quarter Century Sweepstakes race, George Paterson, Secretary of the club, won out with twenty-five breaks to his credit. Meeker L. Piercey, G. T. Piercey, F. A. Thompson, Hatfield, and Brigham won most of the money.

TENNIS AT TUXEDO PARK.

Miles and Crane Defeat Fearing and Cooper Three to Two.

Special to The New York Times.

TUXEDO PARK, Jan. 1.—A large crowd witnessed the play at the new Tuxedo Court Tennis and Racquet Club. In the morning there was an exhibition match between Champion Miles and Joshua Crane, Jr., of Boston, which resulted in a defeat of Crane by a score of 3 sets to 1. In the afternoon the doubles—the first on these courts—were played. Champion Miles, with T. Suffern Tailer as partner, did good work in defeating Fearing and Cooper of Boston 3 sets to 2. The score was 6—0, 7—5, 2—6, 3—6, 6—2. L. M. Stockton of the Boston Tennis Club acted as referee.

A series of matches, including one between Peter Latham, champion of the world, and Thomas Pettitt, professional champion of America, is scheduled for Jan. 15.

Many Tuxedo people witnessed the defeat of the New York Naval Reserve Hockey team by the Columbia University team by a score of 2 to 1. Many brilliant plays were made by each team.

BOSTON, December 21, 1899.

To Subscribers, correspondents and friends in connection with the notice appearing in to-day's papers of the incorporation of

"BROCK'S COMMERCIAL AGENCY OF NEW YORK,"

Incorporated, Delaware, we deem it proper to say that our previous concern, established in 1841 and incorporated in 1885, of which the undersigned has been really to all intents and purposes the sole owner, and who has met all obligations, of any legitimate character, will go into liquidation December 30, 1899.

The subscribers who have paid in advance for services to be rendered, and those who have had services for which they have not paid will have their interests cared for. The reports will go on as usual, but from the new corporation, who issue no stock, for services rendered, or to credit Association men. or other organizations, they will decline to report firms where correct reports might involve such excessive expense or legal costs, defending libel suits, as to make it improper and unjust to all concerned. We will not make any contracts at any price for an unlimited number of reports, nor will any reporters be allowed to take subscriptions, nor will any party soliciting subscriptions be allowed to take statements or make any promise or ratings.

The new corporation proposes by December 30, 1900, to have carried out all contracts, as none will be taken past that date. It will be optional with parties subscribing to pay for services when rendered at the end of the year, adding 5 per cent. interest, or at the end of six months at the par face of the subscription, or in advance, receiving 5 per cent. discount, but they must receive a verified copy of their contract marked "accepted" by one of the head officers of the Company.

The undersigned will remain as the General Manager, and, with his family, is legally and morally liable for all correct obligations.

Legal matters will be attended by our counsel, in New York, and the books regularly audited by the Audit Company, of New York.

Soliciting a continuance of the patronage of friends who have been continually with us since 1875, and the bulk since 1878, when we voluntarily carried out the obligations to subscribers of the McKillup & Sprague Co. on buying their records, their valuable assets having been wrecked by the delay of a receivership.

We would state here that at the close of the business of the new company, Correspondents' letters will be returned to them, sealed, at our expense. Statements of merchants and others which have been lodged with us, under seal, not to be opened except on written order to interested parties, will also be returned. Subscribers will receive back their answered inquiries.

All employees and every one acting in a similar capacity will furnish bonds for the faithful performance of their duties.

Clerks without bonds need not apply. Respectfully yours,
HENRY BROCK, President.

KAY, HEALY & HILDRETH,
BANKERS AND BROKERS
41-43 WALL STREET, NEW YORK.

The Pennsylvania Railroad Company.

OFFICE OF THE TREASURER.
GENERAL OFFICE, PHILADELPHIA, DECEMBER 13, 1899.

At a meeting of the board held this day the following resolution was, on motion, adopted:

"Resolved, That, for the purpose of providing a portion of the necessary capital for construction and equipment expenditures, during the year 1900, on the main and leased lines and branches, and for other corporate purposes, the privilege be given to stockholders of the Company to subscribe, at par, between December 27th, 1899, and January 20th, 1900, ON WHICH LATTER DATE THE PRIVILEGE WILL CEASE, for ten per cent. of their respective holdings as they stand registered at three o'clock P. M. on December 26, 1899. The privilege of subscribing may be sold by any stockholder. Payment in full for such stock may be made after January 14th, and must be made not later than January 20th, 1900. Receipts, which will also be negotiable, will be given bearing interest at the rate of five per cent. from January 20th to May 1st, 1900, (being 70 cents per share,) at which time said receipts will cease to bear interest.

"Certificates for the new Stock will be delivered on and after May 1st, 1900, on surrender of the receipts. Receipts covering fractions of shares will be converted into Stock when presented in multiples of Fifty dollars. All receipts must be presented for conversion before January 1st, 1901, on and after which date they will only be redeemed, at par, in cash."

Blank forms, giving the particulars of the payments as above recited, forms of subscription, and allotment of privilege, etc., can be obtained on application at this office after December 20, 1899.

Stockholders desiring their new Certificates for full shares by May 1st must deposit their receipts with the Transfer Department of the Company on or before March 15th, 1900. For all receipts for full shares deposited after that date, and for all fractional receipts, Certificates will be ready for delivery as soon after May 1st as practicable, of which notice will be given.

Bleecker Street & Fulton Ferry Railroad Company

SEVEN PER CENT.
FIRST MORTGAGE BONDS.

The above mentioned Seven hundred thousand Dollars Bonds will mature on January 1, 1900.

The Bleecker Street and Fulton Ferry Railroad Company proposes to extend these bonds at the rate of four per cent. per annum until January 1, 1950, the present security and lien to remain in full force, the principal and interest of the extended bonds to be payable in gold.

Arrangements have been made with The State Trust Company to purchase the bonds at maturity at par and to extend the same on their account, The State Trust Company reserving the right to terminate without notice the privilege to be extended to the bondholders.

Bondholders who wish to avail themselves of the privilege may notify The State Trust Company at once of their intention so to do, and may present their bonds at the office of The State Trust Company, No. 100 Broadway, New York, on and after January 2, 1900, to have the contract of extension and new coupon sheets attached. CHARLES E. WARREN, Secretary.

Referring to the above notice, we shall be prepared to purchase the above named bonds on and after January 2 at par.

Bondholders preferring to extend their bonds will have the privilege to do so, if they notify us of their intention on or before Jan. 5.

not only on account of home orders, but also because of a big foreign demand. We are sold more than six months ahead, and orders are being written even later. The year 1900 with us promises to be a memorable one.

"And what is true of us is true also of other steel and iron companies, officers of which tell me they were never so rushed."

SOFT COAL ROADS IN 1900.

A Director of the Wheeling and Lake Erie discussing the prospects for the coal roads of Ohio in 1900, says:

"The outlook was never more promising. The railroads have passed into the hands of strong and conservative managers, who are working in an intelligent way to get better results. The improvement already shown in 1899 is very satisfactory, but in 1900 the improvement should be even greater. I believe that the Wheeling and Lake Erie during 1900 will show the full 4 per cent. earned upon its second preferred stock.

"Money recently provided by Brown Brothers & Co. and Maitland, Coppell & Co. for improvements is in the hands of the bankers and has yet to be used. The cutting down of grades alone will make a saving of over $100,000 a year in operating expenses. The road will have ten more locomotives and 2,000 more cars in use in 1900 than it had in 1899, and will have business for them all. This new equipment should all be in hand before April 1. The weekly increase of earnings will show the effects of this addition to equipment.

"Considering the improvements already shown and the prospects ahead of us, we believe that all our securities are selling far below their intrinsic values. Certainly, a stock that will show 4 per cent. earned, like our second preferred, is very cheap at 28.

"The acquiring of the control of the Toledo and Ohio Central by parties connected with the Hocking Valley strengthens the position materially and insures better rates and prices."

***

In this connection it is said that day by day the relations between the soft coal carrying roads in Ohio—including not alone Wheeling and Lake Erie and Hocking Valley, but also the Pennsylvania and Baltimore and Ohio—are becoming closer. It is understood that it is not the intention that there shall be a merger of any of the small roads with the larger ones, but simply that the working relations shall be harmonious and friendly, assuring better rates.

IN WESTERN NEW YORK.

A. K. Potter of Lockport, N. Y., a Director of the National Exchange Bank of that city, thinks that Western New York is in a very prosperous condition. He says:

"All through Western New York there is wonderful prosperity. Times are better than they have been for a long while. Manufacturers are busy, merchants are active, farmers are doing well, and labor is profitably employed. Particularly in manufacturing there seems to be great activity. Everything in Lockport is running to its full. The Traders' Paper Company finds its business so increased and increasing that it is doubling its capacity. Other plants also are extending.

MORE EQUIPMENT.

Among the orders placed during the past week by various railroads for new equipment are the following:

Kansas City, Pittsburg and Gulf, 400 coal cars; St. Joseph and Grand Island, 100 coal cars; Oregon Short Line, 250 stock cars; New York, Susquehanna and Western, 5 locomotives; Rutland, 4 simple mogul engines.

HEAVY FIRE LOSSES FOR 1899.

Brief Review of Rate Troubles Locally and in the Various States—Outlook for Higher Rates.

The fire insurance companies will begin to compile the results of their last year's business to-day for the purpose of filing their annual statements within the next thirty days with the Insurance Department of the different States of the Union.

The exceedingly heavy fire losses sustained during 1899, probably the heaviest in ten years, has been accompanied by rate troubles in many States. Anti-trust legislation in some of the Western and Southern States has compelled the companies to conduct their business in those sections practically without the aid of ratemaking compacts. In other parts of the country a large amount of territory has been given over to rate wars among the companies, which had their beginnings in agency troubles.

The formation of the New York Fire Insurance Exchange in this city on March 8 of last year was accomplished in order to put an end to the disastrous open-rate market created by the dissolution of the old Tariff Association on April 20, 1896. This step revived a stable ratemaking body, but in the case of a considerable number of the larger companies has not brought a much better average rate of premium on the business written.

The average rate in the metropolitan district received by fifteen companies, each of which possesses assets in excess of $1,000,000, was as follows for the last four years: 1896, 76.3 cents per $100 of insurance; 1897, 74.2 cents; 1898, 51.1 cents, and 1899, 53.3 cents. In making up this average only figures of companies whose business was distributed among the different classes of hazards in a comparatively even proportion were used.

The cause of the rate war in this city in 1898 was said by many of the more prominent underwriters to be primarily due to the presence of too much capital in the fire insurance business, which had been attracted to the prosperity of underwriting interests during the previous five years. The same underwriters say that the companies can scarcely expect to get better rates in the metropolitan district before some of the capital is forced out either by rate war or by the maintenance of low rates.

The bad fires of December and the one-million-dollar loss caused by the destruction of the Windsor Hotel last March, when aded to the otherwise unusual volume of losses, will, according to several large agency managers, lead to an inevitable increase in rates within a few weeks.

The demand of some of the fire underwriters for an advance in premium charges will be materially strengthened by the destruction of the Campbell wall paper factory in East Twenty-fourth Street last Friday night, where the insurance on the Campbell property aggregated $300,000 and that on the plant of the Manhattan Electric Light Company amounted to $113,500. The insurance on the buildings and other tenants, which have yet to be reported, are also large, and underwriters think that the entire loss may cost the insurance interests very nearly $700,000.

STATEN ISLAND FREIGHT FIRE.

Rapid Transit Railroad Building and Fifteen Cars Consumed—One Man Badly Burned.

Fire destroyed the freight shed of the Staten Island Rapid Transit Railroad Company at St. George, S. I., yesterday morning. The building, which was a large frame structure, stood in the railroad yard near the water front, about 500 feet from the ferryhouse. One track ran through the centre of the building and one on either side. On each of these cars were standing when the fire occurred. Owing to the holiday there was only one engine in the yard with steam up, and this was able to haul away only a portion of the cars, the others being burned.

The employes of the company, as soon as the fire was discovered, gave an alarm, which called out eight companies of the North Shore Fire Department. They reached the scene of the fire in a few minutes, but were handicapped because the hydrants were frozen and they could get but little water. In the meantime the crew of the steamer Robert Garrett, which was lying in the slip adjacent to the burning building, had stretched a line of hose and turned a stream on the fire, but it produced little effect. The fire gained ground with great rapidity, and soon fifteen freight cars were in flames.

Two Baltimore and Ohio tugs entered the old ferry slips and turned two streams on the fire. The tug John D. Smith was ordered to assist, but as the tide was low the vessel ran aground and remained helpless about 2,000 feet from the burning building. The fireboat New Yorker arrived shortly afterward and turned a four-inch stream on the fire, which soon brought it under control. The Captain of the United States revenue cutter Gresham, which was lying off Tompkinsville, sent two cutters loaded with blue jackets armed with axes ashore to fight the fire, but their services were not needed.

The burned building, which contained considerable merchandise, was valued at $10,000. Fifteen freight cars owned by the Lehigh Valley, Pennsylvania, Baltimore and Ohio, and Rapid Transit Railroads were consumed with their contents, bringing the loss up to about $30,000. The fire is supposed to have been caused by a defective flue in the room above the office in the freight shed.

James Considine of Stapleton, quartermaster of the steamer Robert Garrett, was badly burned about the head while stretching a line of hose near the burning freight cars. He was removed to his home.

Set Apart $100 for a Funeral Supper.

Jacob Kramer, a well-known saloon keeper of Jersey City, died yesterday at Chickamingo, Dutchess County, N. Y. He had been ill for a year from a complication of diseases. He was fifty-two years old and unmarried. He left $100 to be expended on the night of his funeral for a supper to the friends who attended. He also directed that he should be cremated.

NEW YORK BANKS ARE PROSPEROUS

Superintendent Kilburn Reports on the Year's Operations.

SOME EVILS TO BE REMEDIED

Suggestions for Laws to Prevent Dishonesty and Loss.

ALBANY, Jan. 1.—Superintendent Frederick D. Kilburn of the State Banking Department has completed his annual report to the Legislature, covering the fiscal year ended Sept. 30, 1899. In introducing the report he says:

"In any retrospect of the work of the State Banking Department for the fiscal year which ended Sept. 30 last, or of the affairs of the institutions under its supervision during the same period, attention centres first upon two general facts as surpassing all others in interest and importance. The prosperity of the several groups of institutions in question has been unusual, and the increase in the number of one of them has been unprecedented. Upon the other hand, there has been no time in the experience of the present Superintendent of Banks when so many startling disclosures have been made regarding the extravagance in management and fraudulent operations of a class of men who make a business of acquiring control of building and loan associations only to plunder and wreck them.

"Tested by the reports submitted by themselves, the banks of deposit and discount gained fifty-odd millions of dollars in resources during the year, or more than 15 per cent. But inasmuch as there has been in the same time a considerable elimination from their statements of assets which had come to be regarded as doubtful or worthless, and the quality of those which remain is believed to be improved, the gain in their actual condition has doubtless been even greater than is suggested by the figures given.

"The resources of the savings banks increased $45,500,000 from January to July, which nearly equals the gain made by them during the entire year 1898, and the number of open accounts was augmented by over 65,000 in the same six months, whereas the total increase in 1898 was only 60,000. While there are no reports available of a later date than July, there is no reason to doubt that the savings banks are experiencing a continuing growth.

TRUST COMPANY MOVEMENT.

"Eight new trust companies were organized during the fiscal year and authorized to transact business, and at least five others were in the course of organization when the year closed. The combined capital and paid in surplus of these thirteen corporations approximates $22,000,000. The fifty-two companies reporting July 1 had resources aggregating $722,000,000, or $195,000,000 more than were reported by the forty-nine companies in business at the beginning of the calendar year.

"The apprehension sometimes avowed, though rarely, that in the mere fact of the multiplication of trust companies there may lie a possible cause of collapse and serious general disturbance seems to me to be wholly without basis to justify it. Even if it be granted that all trust companies may not fulfill the hopes of their incorporators, it does not at all follow that a lack of success in this regard would involve their depositors in losses. On the contrary, such losses can be only a very remote possibility at the worst, for until a trust company's deposits become heavy its capital and surplus and the statutory and constitutional further liability of its stockholders would serve to afford an ample guarantee to depositors, while from the day that an institution succeeds in writing upon its books a large aggregate due depositors its safety and prosperity are assured if its management be prudent and sagacious.

"The recent suspension of the Produce Exchange Trust Company of New York does not at all impeach the correctness of this view, for the embarrassment of the institution was entirely the consequ

FOREIGN.—It is reported that Col. Pilcher with a force of Canadian and Australian troops defeated a force of Boers twenty miles west of Belmont, capturing forty prisoners. The victory of Gen. French near Colesberg is confirmed by official dispatches. A dispatch from Gen. Buller's camp says the British are ready for another attack. It is announced that another German vessel has been seized by the British. Ambassador Choate has been instructed to inform the British Government that the United States cannot recognize the principle under which flour cargoes were recently seized. The British Government has protested to Switzerland against enlistments for the Boers in that country. The Senate High Court closed the conspiracy case hearing at Paris yesterday and found one prisoner guilty, acquitting four others. The Portuguese Cortes opened yesterday. The Paris City Council has chosen a site for the Washington statue. An earthquake destroyed ten Russian villages. The Parnell Memorial Committee at Dublin yesterday passed a resolution thanking Americans for contributions to the fund. The North German Lloyd Company has bought the Holt Line of Singapore. A delegation of miners on Monday brought presents of sausages, salt, and hard-boiled eggs to the Kaiser.—Pages 1 and 6.

NEW YORK LEGISLATURE.—Dr. J. Franklin Barnes, the minority nominee for Speaker of the Assembly, outlined the policy of the Democrats in a speech before the caucus which named him. The Republican caucus named S. Frederick Nixon for Speaker and nominated the other Assembly officers. It was announced that the rules of the House would be amended in several important particulars. There was a mysterious caucus of Democratic Senators at the Ten Eyck Hotel, the purpose of which was not made public. It is likely that the Mazet committee will recommend that the Mayor's power of removal be extended over his entire term. Many bills will be introduced in both houses to-day.—Page 3.

TORRENCE WILL CONTEST.

Alleged Son Claims Half Interest in $1,000,000 Estate.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, Jan. 2.—The hearing of the case of David Torrence, who claims to be the disinherited son of the late Joseph T. Torrence, and is trying to break the will of the latter and to share equally with his alleged sister, Mrs. Jessie Norton Torrence Magoun, in the estate which is valued at over $1,000,000, was begun before Judge Dunne to-day.

The complainant alleges he is Torrence's son by a former wife, but he is mentioned in the will as a nephew. He was a brakeman when he learned that his alleged father was a wealthy man. He applied to him for a loan to start in business. What he supposed was a receipt for $2,500 when he signed it, now proves to be a waiver of claim to any inheritance.

By the will Mrs. Jessie Torrence Magoun of New York City was made the heir, but was not to receive the estate until she was thirty years old. Up to that time she was to have $40,000 a year. To the complainant $250 was allotted.

Ohio's Wheat Crop Badly Damaged.

Special to The New York Times.

COLUMBUS, Ohio, Jan. 2.—The climate and crop report issued by the local weather station to-day shows that wheat is badly damaged by the weather, there having been no snow to afford protection. It is estimated that unless conditions materially improve, the next season's crop will not be more than 70 per cent. of an average.

THE BOERS ROUTED AGAIN

Canadian and Australian Troops Capture a Laager.

FORTY PRISONERS ARE TAKEN

British Forces Lose Five Men Killed or Wounded—Burghers' Loss Is Six Dead and Twelve Injured.

BELMONT, Cape Colony, Jan. 2.—A dispatch from Dover Farm, dated Jan. 1, says:

"A mounted force consisting of 100 Canadians of the Toronto Company and 200 Queenslanders, commanded by Col. Rickards, two guns and a horse battery, under Major De Rougemont, 40 mounted infantry under Lieut. Ryan, and 200 of the Cornwall Light Infantry, the whole commanded by Col. Pilcher, left Belmont yesterday at noon on a march westward, covering twenty miles before sunset. The force encamped at Cook's Farm, where the troops were welcomed enthusiastically. At 6 o'clock this morning the force approached a spot where a laager of the Boers was reported. Col. Pilcher, on approaching the position, which was a line of strong kopjes, detached Major De Rougemont with the guns, Torontos, and mounted infantry, to work toward the right, making a turning movement himself, with the Queenslanders, toward the south position. The manoeuvre was a complete success. The British shells were the first indication of the presence of the troops. The Boers left their laager and opened fire, but the Queenslanders completing the movement the laager was captured with forty prisoners. The British casualties were two men killed, three wounded, and one missing. The whole force worked admirably. The two men killed belonged to the Queensland contingent."

Another dispatch from Dover Farm, dated Jan. 1, says:

"The colonial troops, who have been longing to be allowed to meet the Boers, have at last been given an opportunity to do so and scored a brilliant success. The raid conducted by Col. Pilcher was very difficult, owing to the fact that the movements of the troops were immediately communicated to the Boers by natives. In order to prevent this, Col. Pilcher, in making his forced march from Belmont, left a British trooper at every farmhouse with instructions not to allow the natives to leave their huts, the patrols calling the names of the natives hourly in order to prevent their escape.

"In the manoeuvre at Cook's Farm, Col. Pilcher sent mounted patrols east, one of these, consisting of four men, commanded by Lieut. Adie, suddenly encountered fourteen Boers, who opened fire. The Lieutenant was severely wounded, and Private Butler gave up his horse in order to carry the Lieutenant out of range.

"Another private, whose horse had bolted, pluckily returned to render assistance. He was wounded in the leg and his horse was killed.

"Meanwhile Lieut. Ryan, who had worked magnificently, reported that the veldt on the right of the enemy was clear, whereupon Major de Rougemont ordered the guns to a trot. They arrived within 1,500 yards of the laager, unlimbered, and planted five shells in as many minutes within the laager.

"Immediately the enemy could be seen streaming over the kopje. They were completely surprised, but quickly opened a well-directed fire.

"A correspondent had the privilege of carrying an order to the Toronto company to double-quick into action. The order was received with great satisfaction. The company rushed forward until within a thousand yards of the enemy's position, when it opened a hot fire upon the kopje and completely subdued the Boer fire.

"The British artillery shelled the position with wonderful accuracy, while Lieut. Ryan, with mounted infantry, worked round and completely uncovered the fire of the Boers, who had been esconced in the bushes.

"Meanwhile Col. Pilcher, with the Queenslanders, taking advantage of every cover, made a direct attack, the Australians moving slowly, but surely, and only shouting when they saw the enemy retiring under their steady fire. The Queenslanders behaved with great coolness, laughing and chaffing even at the moment of greatest peril.

"During the advance the Boer fire suddenly ceased. Thirty-five Boers hoisted a white flag and surrendered. A portion of the Torontos moved across the front of the guns and entered the laager. The Boers had fled. Fourten tents, three wagons, a great store of rifles, ammunition, forage, saddles, and camp equipment, and numerous incriminating papers were captured.

"The Boers lost six killed and twelve wounded. The Torontos stood the galling fire with admirable patience, never wasting a shot."

LONDON, Jan. 2.—The War Office has received the following from Cape Town, under to-day's date:

"'Col. Pilcher reports, through the officer commanding at the Orange River:

"'I have completely defeated a hostile command at the Sunnyside Laager this day, Jan. 1, taking the laager and forty prisoners, besides the killed and wounded. Our casualties are two privates killed and Lieut. Adie wounded. Am encamped at Dover Farm, twenty miles northwest of Belmont and ten miles from Sunnyside.'"

Col. Pilcher Occupies Douglass.

DOUGLASS, Cape Colony, Jan. 2.—Col. Pilcher, after defeating the Boers at Cook's Farm, twenty miles west of Belmont, has occupied Douglass without opposition, and has been received with enthusiasm by the loyalists.

PRAISE FOR COLONIAL TROOPS.

London Press Congratulates the Men Under Col. Pilcher.

LONDON, Jan. 3.—The morning papers are unanimous in praising the gallantry of the Canadian colonial troops.

The Times says:

"The mother country will share with the Canadians and Australians in the pride and gratification they must feel at the fine qualities displayed by their troops in this dashing little engagement."

The Standard says:

"The Canadians and Australians had been spoiling for a fight. Now they have had their opportunity, and they have greatly distinguished themselves by their coolness and discipline. From the viewpoint of imperial unity the little fight may fairly be described as one of the most gratifying events recorded in the recent history of the British race."

ANOTHER ENCOUNTER REPORTED.

Gen. Babington Attacks the Boers Near Modder River.

MODDER RIVER, Jan. 2.—Yesterday's cavalry expedition under Gen. Babington, commanding the Ninth and Twelfth Lanciers, proves to have been in co-operation with a similar movement from Belmont. This, directed by Gen. Wood, consisted of a flying column and a force under Lieut. Col. Pilcher from Belmont. This force moved into the territory between the Orange and Riet Rivers. At Sunnyside, northwest of Douglas, it encountered a considerable commando, believed to be wholly composed of disloyal British subjects.

Gen. Babington's force proceeded in the same direction, but on the north side of Riet River. The result of this reconnoissance has not yet been reported.

ANOTHER SEIZURE REPORTED.

German Bark Hans Wagner Now Said to Have Been Taken at Delagoa Bay.

HAMBURG, Jan. 2.—The Hamburger Correspondenz announces that the German bark Hans Wagner of Hamburg was seized by the British at Delagoa Bay on Dec. 21, and that her owners have lodged a complaint with the British Foreign Office.

The papers here announce that the German Foreign Office has summoned the managing Director of the German East African Line, Herr Woermann, to Berlin in connection with the seizure of the company's steamer, Bundesrath, by the British cruiser Magicienne, Dec. 29, off Delagoa Bay, on the ground that she had contraband of war on board.

BERLIN, Jan. 2.—Strict silence is maintained in official circles regarding the incident, but a correspondent learns that the affair has created an extremely painful impression in political circles. Energetic diplomatic steps were immediately taken in London and the inadmissibility of the right of a British cruiser to search a German mail steamer on the high seas has been emphatically asserted. The Government is awaiting London's response before taking further action.

The press continues to point out the innovation involved in Great Britain's action in seizing a vessel between neutral ports and searching for contraband destined to further transportation in order to reach the enemy.

The owners of the Deutschland deny positively that she contained persons or goods justifying seizure. The Hamburg Chamber of Commerce reiterates this, expressing at the same time a firm conviction that satisfaction will be demanded and accorded. Hamburg's trade is suffering through such incidents, and this increases the anti-British sentiment there.

The press continues to discuss the capture of the Bundesrath with some show of irritation. In a semi-official note, The Post remarks that in consequence of the seizure Germany has taken steps, and Great Britain is expected to deal with the matter in a "spirit of good official relations." The Neueste Nachrichten says:

"There is every reason to believe the incident will speedily be closed."

Official circles considered it imperative that Great Britain adopt some definite attitude regarding the whole question of contraband of war, and are surprised she has not adopted a firmer policy on the subject from the beginning.

MR. CHOATE TOLD TO PROTEST.

Great Britain to be Advised that Right of Seizures Already Made Cannot Be Admitted.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 2.—The State Department to-day received from United States Ambassador Choate at London by cable a statement of the facts he had developed in connection with the seizure by British warships of American goods on the three merchant vessels Beatrice, Mashona, and Maria. The goods comprised not only flour, but miscellaneous articles of common trade, and while they were forwarded to Lorenzo Marques in British and German ships, the contention of our officials is that they were not subject to seizure. They could not lodge representations on the subject until they were possessed of a knowledge of the facts, but as soon as Mr. Choate's statement came to-day instructions were cabled him to inform the British Government that we could not admit the right of seizure in these cases.

This is the preliminary step usually taken in such negotiations. No order will be a report from our Consular representative at Lorenzo Marques respecting the present condition of the seized or detained goods and the damage sustained. The State Department is not yet fully informed on these points, though they will be necessary to the further presentation of the cases. It is not even known just where the goods are or if they have all been seized or only in part.

It will be the duty of our Consular Agent at Lorenzo Marques to ascertain and report these facts and he is now engaged in this work, under the original instructions of the State Department.

While the department is acting, as it promised in the beginning, to firmly protect all American rights of trade, it is showing no unseemly haste in the presentation of the case. To-day's instruction to Mr. Choate was not a demand for the release of the goods, nor yet for indemnity, but rather a precautionary notice to the British Government to save all of our rights in the case. It will be sufficient to inaugurate the settlement of the matter by negotiation, and the State Department has not the slightest doubt that the British authorities will make full amends to the owners of the goods when the facts are all laid before it.

FRENCH REPORTS HIS VICTORY.

Official Dispatch Says He is Still Shelling the Boers.

LONDON Jan. 2.—The success of Gen. French's column is confirmed officially, the War Office this afternoon issuing a dispatch from Cape Town, dated Jan. 1, as follows:

"French reports at 2 P. M. to-day from Coleskop, by heliograph, as follows:

"'Leaving at Rensburg, holding the enemy in front, half of the First Suffolks and a section of the Royal Horse Artillery, I started thence at 5 in the afternoon, Dec. 31, taking with me five squadrons of cavalry, half of the Second Berks, and eighty mounted infantry—latter carried in wagons—and ten guns. I halted for four hours at Maidor's Farm, and at 3:30 this morning occupied the kopje overlooking and westward of Colesberg. The enemy's outposts were taken completely by surprise. At daylight we shelled the laager and enfiladed the right of the enemy's position. The artillery fire in reply was very hot from a fifteen-pounder using Royal Laboratory ammunition and other guns. We silenced the guns on the enemy's right flank, demonstrating with cavalry and guns to the north of Colesberg, toward the junction, where a strong laager of the enemy was holding a hill, and a position southeast of Colesberg, as far as the junction. Our position cuts the line of retreat via the road and bridges. Some thousands of Boers, with two guns, are reported to be retiring toward Norval's Point. All Remington's scouts proceeded toward Achterland yesterday morning. Slight casualties. About three killed and a few wounded. Details later.'"

Brief independent messages from Rensburg, filed the evening of Jan. 1, supplement Gen. French's dispatch but slightly. According to them the British were still shelling the Boer position at 5 o'clock Monday evening and expected to enter Colesberg to-day.

The British losses were three men killed and seven wounded. No officers were killed or wounded. The Boers are supposed to have suffered heavily from the accuracy of the British artillery fire. Gen. French's statement that the Boers were using a fifteen-pounder and Woolwich ammunition evidently refers to one of the British guns captured at Stormberg.

The Boer strength in the engagement with Gen. French was estimated at from 5,000 to 7,000 men.

While the afternoon newspapers are disposed to overrate the brilliancy of Gen. French's success, it will doubtless have a good moral effect, and, it is added, if promptly followed up, as seems likely from the fact that Remington's Guides are already advancing on Achterlang, it may result in securing Norvals Pont Bridge, thus gaining an important strategic advantage, as thence Gen. French will probably be able to threaten Bethulie Bridge, which is the main line of retreat for the Boers facing Gen. Gatacre.

BOERS DENY A BRITISH VICTORY.

Assert that Gen. French Was Forced to Retreat.

PRETORIA, Jan. 1.—Last night (Sunday) the British in great force attacked Commandant Schoeman's commando in the Colesberg District and tried to storm the position. They repeated the attack this morning, but were forced to retreat, the Boers holding the position.

The loss of the British is not known, but it is reported to have been heavy.

GEN. BULLER READY TO ATTACK

Intimated in a Dispatch that Preparations Are Complete for An Advance.

MR. CROKER DOING WELL.

The Tammany Chieftain Cables "The Boys" that His Injury Is Not Serious.

Several cable messages which were received by friends of Richard Croker yesterday indicated that the accident which befell the Tammany chieftain on Monday was not serious, and that he was doing well. Andrew Freedman and Richard Croker, Jr., received cablegrams in the morning, informing them that Mr. Croker's injury was a fracture of the small bone of the left leg. John W. Keller, President of the Democratic Club, received this message, dated Letcombe, Regis, England:

"Tell boys doing well. Nothing serious."

The message was posted on the bulletin board in the clubhouse, where it was eagerly scanned by all of the members of the club who visited the house during the evening.

LONDON, Jan. 3.—Richard Croker of New York, who broke a leg yesterday near Wantage while mounting a horse, is reported this evening to be progressing favorably toward recovery.

BLIZZARDS CAUSE SUFFERING.

Railways and Roads in Western New York and Pennsylvania Blocked—Snow Is Six Feet Deep.

CORRY, Penn., Jan. 2.—With unabated fury to-night the blizzard which has raged unceasingly in Northwestern Pennsylvania for the past ten days continues. Since last midnight about eighteen inches of snow has fallen, the roads leading into this city being impassable. It is feared that there is much suffering among the farmers. In this city snow plows and shovelers have been working all day keeping the sidewalks and pavements clear, but with little success. Only business that cannot be neglected is being transacted.

The through Pittsburg express, No. 2, on the Western New York and Pennsylvania Railroad, due here at 11:50 o'clock this morning, has not yet arrived to-night. The express stalled in a huge drift near Silver Creek. There are large drifts between this city and Mayville also. No. 1, bound north, arrived nearly on time, but did not proceed, remaining in the yards here. To-night she left for Buffalo, via the Pennsylvania, to Erie, and the Lake Shore to Buffalo. It is not known when the trains will be running regularly again, as it is impossible to keep the tracks clear while the fall of snow continues. The Lake Shore, Erie, Nickel Plate, and Pennsylvania, while having considerable trouble, are moving some trains.

A peculiar sight, even in this country, is to see a train of three cars and two engines moving at a snail's pace, but such is the case when the train encounters a drift. No deaths have been reported to the police as yet. The thermometer remains stationary at zero.

DUNKIRK, N. Y., Jan. 2.—A blizzard is raging in Chautauqua County to-day. No trains have reached Dunkirk, on the Western New York and Pennsylvania Road, as the drifts between Mayville and Silver Creek are ten feet deep. Trains on the Nickel Plate Road are using the tracks of the Lake Shore, between Brockton and Buffalo. Lake Shore trains are getting through, but are about two hours late. Traffic over several stage routes is blocked. In many places the snow is six feet deep on a level.

BUFFALO, Jan. 2.—Reports from many towns in Erie County tell of a terrible blizzard that has raged all day and the almost complete blocking of country roads by snow. At Hamburg pupils could not get to the High School, stage lines have ceased operations, and business is generally paralyzed. Similar reports come from towns in Cattaraugus County. In this city a high wind has prevailed, but the fall of snow has been light.

THE "OPEN DOOR" IN CHINA.

All Powers but Italy Have Replied Favorably to America—Success Pleases Great Britain.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 2.—The session of the Cabinet to-day was brief, but it was the occasion of the important announcement by Secretary of State Hay that the negotiations with the great powers of Europe and Japan to secure a common understanding for a continued "open door" policy throughout China had been eminently successful and that favorable responses had been received from Great Britain, Germany, France, Russia, and Japan.

The only country addressed which has not yet responded is Italy, and a favorable answer is also expected from her.

LONDON, Jan. 3.—The Daily News, commenting aditorially upon the report cabled from the United States that the Washington Government has obtained the assent of most of the great powers to the principle of the "open door" in China, says:

"If this assent has really been obtained gratification will nowhere be greater than it is in England, not only on account of the permanent importance of such a policy to British interests, but also because it relieves us temporarily from any anxiety as to the outbreak of complications in the Far East during the South Africa tangle.

"This double gratification will be still further enhanced by the knowledge that it is the British understanding with the United States and Germany which has brought about, for a time at least, the pacification of the Far East."

The Daily Chronicle says: "It is a distinct diplomatic success for the United States Government, and in particular, for Mr. Hay. It is also to some extent a guarantee against the dismemberment of China."

BIG NEW HAVEN CORPORATIONS.

Plant Heirs May Be Interested in $35,000,000 Concerns.

Special to The New York Times.

NEW HAVEN, Jan. 2.—Two corporations, with capital aggregating $35,000,000, were organized in this city to-day. Attorney Lynde Harrison of this city drew the papers. He is the executor of the estate of the late John Plant, the steamship line owner and capitalist, and heirs of the estate are supposed to be developing the new corporations.

One of the new companies is the War Eagle Consolidated Mining Company. It is incorporated with the purposes of owning and operating mines, for the development and use of water and electrical power, the construction and operation of drainage and irrigation canals, flumes, or tunnels, and the ownership and operation of tramways and street railways. The capital of this company is $15,000,000 in shares of $50 each, 60,000 preferred and 240,000 common.

The other company is the Ontario-Lake Superior Company, which has the right to own and operate transportation lines by rail and water to deal in timber and logs, and to own and operate mills, foundries, and factories for the manufacture of metals or wood. The capital stock of the company is $20,000,000, in shares of $50 each, 120,000 non-cumulative 7 per cent. preferred and 280,000 common stock.

CHICAGO'S RAILWAY FIGHT

The City Claims the Road's Structure Is Unsafe, and Orders All Traffic Stopped.

CHICAGO, Jan. 2.—After an exciting and grotesque struggle stretching over miles of elevated railway track, the police to-day took entire possession of the whole line of the new Northwestern Elevated Railway in this city. The police acted under orders of the Commissioner of Public Works, Lawrence E. McGann. On the outcome of the remarkable contest between the city authorities and the railway company is involved the possible forfeiture of the company's franchise as well as the sum of $100,000 posted by the railway company to guarantee the completion of the road by Jan. 1.

To-night, besides stopping the work in progress at various points of the structure, the police have erected a barrier of ties and rails at the juncture of the Northwestern Elevated tracks with those of the Union Loop at Fifth Avenue and Lake Street, and the regular crew of the company's one train is under arrest.

The arrests are the result of the refusal of the railway officials to comply with an order from the Commissioner of Public Works to cease train running. Mr. McGann claimed that the company's structure was unsafe in its present alleged incomplete state, and that it did not come within the requirements of the ordinance that it be completed for operation by Jan. 1.

The arrest of the train crew which took place at the suburban terminal at Wilson Avenue, did not, however, for a considerable time, prevent the running of the so-called "ghost train," and temporarily resulted in extraordinary discomfiture of the police. As the crew was being led to the patrol wagon, in waiting at the Wilson Street station, another crew and some of the officials of the road hurriedly boarded the train, and before the police realized the situation, the train was speeding on its way to the centre of the city, a distance of five and a half miles. The fact was immediately telephoned to the heart of the city, and when the train pulled over the Wells Street bridge across the Chicago River on to the Union Loop tracks at Lake Street, the business district of the city, fully twenty-five officers were waiting to halt the locomotive and cars. But the motorman, in spite of frantic waving of clubs and commands to stop, only turned the lever further and the officers made a wild scramble for safety as the train swung across the switch to the loop tracks.

Then the bridge across the river was swung open by the police, and a cordon of officers was stretched across the return track on Fifth Avenue. But here again the train did not stop. A switch had been turned by some emissary of the railroad, and the train instead of plunging into the river swung around to the tracks of the Lake Street Elevated Railway Company and sped westward over that structure.

The baffled police now gave up the chase of the train, and turned their attention to erecting a barrier across the Northwestern tracks where they enter the loop. A guard was stationed to prevent the removal of the barrier, thus effectually blocking train operations so far as Northwestern connection with the loop was concerned. At a number of other points workmen engaged in riveting uncompleted portions of the structure were ordered to stop work, and guards were stationed to see that the order was enforced.

The Railroad Committee of the Common Council will meet to-morrow to hear the reports of Corporation Counsel Walker and City Engineer Ericson on the construction of the road and the ordinance. Both reports are expected to be unfavorable to the road. The ordinance required the structure to be completed and trains for the accommodation of passengers running by Jan. 1, under a penalty of $100,000. Part of the franchise of the Northwestern Elevated includes the tracks on Fifth Avenue used as one side of the down-town loop by the Union Loop Company, which recently repudiated its compensation agreement with the city, and it is expected that Corporation Counsel Walker will advise the Council it has authority to vacate the Northwestern Elevated franchise, including the Fifth Avenue tracks, thus also tying up the Union Loop Company.

MARYLAND SPEAKER NAMED.

Lloyd Wilkinson Wins in Caucus—Senate President Selected.

Special to The New York Times.

ANNAPOLIS, Md., Jan. 2.—It was an easy victory for Lloyd Wilkinson, the Eastern Shore candidate for Speaker of the House in the Democratic caucus to-night. He was the choice of ex-Senator Gorman and Governor-elect Smith. Gen. F. C. Latrobe, the seven-term Mayor of Baltimore, who was his opponent, received only the votes of the city delegation and three from Frederick County.

Baltimore County secured the Presidency of the State Senate, John Hubner being nominated by acclamation. The Democratic nominations in both House and Senate are equivalent to election.

Two Deer for the Bronx Park.

Special to The New York Times.

GREENWICH, Conn., Jan. 2.—The Bronx Zoo, in New York, was enlarged to-day by two young deer—a doe and a buck—presented by William Rockefeller and shipped from his private park in Greenwich, where they were born. The park consists of sixty acres of woodland, fenced in adjoining Mr. Rockefeller's farm. In it were placed a few imported deer seventeen years ago. There are now fifty.

Moody's Last Words.

Special to The New York Times.

BOSTON, Jan. 2.—Stenographer Ben Wright of this city, who took the evidence from the son of the late Dwight L. Moody, says the very last words of the evangelist, exactly stated, were: "Earth recedes and heaven opens before me. If this is death, there is nothing awful here. It is sweet. This is bliss. Do not call me back. God is calling me. I must go. There is no valley here. It is all beautiful."

Better Pay for Norwalk Mill Hands.

Special to The New York Times.

NORWALK, Conn., Jan. 2.—The employes at the Norwalk and Fairfield Worsted Mills received a New Year's surprise yesterday, when they were notified that on Jan. 15 all hands would receive a 10 per cent. increase in wages in all of the departments. The concern has been in existence about two years, having taken possession of the old Union Manufacturing Company's plant. The work of manufacturing was commenced in a small way, but as the business increased new and improved machinery was added, until now the concern is one of the leading factories in the Norwalks.

Celebrate Their Golden Wedding.

Special to The New York Times.

NORWALK, Conn., Jan. 2.—Mr. and Mrs. Andrew J. Doane of Norwalk celebrated their golden wedding anniversary to-day, entertaining a number of relatives from New York and other cities. The aged couple received many handsome gifts, gold pieces predominating. Among the honored guests was the brother and best man to the bridegroom of fifty years ago, William Henry Doane of Norwich, N. Y. It was deeply regretted that the bridesmaid, Mrs. L. M. Landon, was unable to be present, since she would have completed the original bridal party. Mr. Doane is still in active business and is at the head of the foundry of Arnold, Doane & Co.

Champagne Imports in 1899.

As shown by Customs statistics, the imports in 1899 of G. H. Mumm's Extra Dry reached the enormous figure of 109,303 cases, being 72,495 cases more than of any other brand—a record unprecedented in the history of champagne. Its 1895 vintage now imported has no equal.—Adv.

SLEPT BESIDE A DEAD MAN.

Clerk Did Not Know His Employer Had Committed Suicide, and Got into Bed with Him.

Henry J. Steinberg, a German grocer, with a store at Gilmore and Georgia Avenues, Brooklyn, was found dead yesterday in a bedroom back of the store, and his wife and clerk tell a remarkable story of his death.

He was married seven weeks ago, and a week after marriage went into business for himself, living over the store with his wife. In the rear of the store his clerk, Charles Meyer, a young man, has a sleeping room.

Mrs. Steinberg says that her husband's business has not been as prosperous as he expected, and New Year's night he seemed despondent. He told her, she says, that he was going out to make one call, and that he would soon return. She went to bed and to sleep, supposing that he had gone to make the call, but instead he went into his clerk's room.

The clerk came home about midnight and found his employer in his bed. He thought that he had been celebrating the new year and preferred not to go up stairs, so Meyer got into bed beside him and went to sleep. In the morning he opened the store, and then tried to wake Steinberg.

After shaking him for some time he discovered that he was dead. He went up stairs and told the wife, who came down and also shook Steinberg. She satisfied herself that he was dead, but did not notify the authorities until about 11 o'clock, and then the police of the Liberty Avenue Station were informed that Steinberg had died suddenly.

About 3 o'clock yesterday afternoon Patrolman McGowan was sent around to investigate the case. He found the man undressed, with a bullet hole through his left breast and a revolver by his side. The Coroner was notified and gave permission for the burial of the body.

Mrs. Steinberg believes that her husband after leaving her on New Year's night went into his clerk's room and shot himself. He was forty-five years of age, and until going into business for himself had been a grocery clerk.

WEBSTER DAVIS MAY RESIGN.

Friction May Force the Assistant Secretary of the Interior Out.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 2.—It is reported that Webster Davis, Assistant Secretary of the Interior, will never resume the duties of his office, and his resignation is expected. He is now in South Africa. It is understood that friction has existed in the Interior Department for some time, and that Mr. Davis's leave of absence was meant to mark the end of it.

There are said to have been two causes of friction in the department, the first being the differences between Mr. Davis and Pension Commissioner Evans. Mr. Davis, to whom belongs the duty of considering appeals from the decisions of the Pension Commissioner, used frequently to overrule the Commissioner. Mr. Evans represented the Administration view of such matters, and the Secretary of the Interior agreed with him.

The second cause of friction was said to be the aggressiveness of Mr. Davis's personality. Secretary Bliss did not get along well with him, it is said, and Secretary Hitchcock has been hardly more successful.

"JACK THE SLASHER" IN BOSTON

Unknown Person Cuts Sealskin Coats and Other Garments.

Special to The New York Times.

BOSTON, Jan. 2.—The police are looking for a "Jack the Slasher," a crank who, apparently without any motive, goes about the city slashing sealskin and other costly garments with some sharp instrument. Robbery is not his motive. Since Saturday morning a number of complaints have been made. The first report came from a business man, who told Inspector Robinson that the pocket and a big piece of cloth were cut out of his $60 coat while he was passing through a crowd on Friday.

Mrs. Towle, mother of Charles H. Towle, a theatrical manager, also came in contact with the "slasher." Her sealskin coat was cut in a half dozen places. It was apparent that no attempt had been made to cut out a pocket. The cuts were in various places, and appeared as if the crank had slashed right and left in a reckless manner. The coat was practically ruined. The cuts have been examined. They appear to have been made either with a razor or sharp knife.

The police have no description to work on.

ARRESTED FOR DRESS SLASHIN

Young Man Detained in Washington on Suspicion.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 2.—A mild and innocent-looking German youth named Max Krebs is under arrest here on suspicion of being the mysterious "Jack the Cutter" who has ruined so many women's dresses. The police think he is the same man who was arrested in New York on Dec. 22, 1899, on the same charge. The New York prisoner answered to Krebs's description and gave his name as Herman Max Krebs.

He was captured in a dry goods store by a woman named Catherine Nelson of 5 East One Hundred and Twenty-ninth Street, whose skirt he had slashed. Like the mild-faced youth who is under arrest here, he was able to speak little English. The Washington Krebs reached this city about six months ago. The authorities are communicating with the New York police to find out if he is the New York Krebs.

FUNERAL OF C. A. WILLIAMS.

To Be Buried in Washington—Admiral Dewey a Pall-Bearer.

Special to The New York Times.

NEW LONDON, Conn., Jan. 2.—Mrs. Williams, widow of the late Charles Augustus Williams, who died Sunday morning last at Washington, announced to-day that the funeral services over the remains would be held at St. John's Church and at the residence, 1,735 Massachusetts Avenue, to-morrow afternoon. The following had consented to act as honorary pall bearers:

Admirals Dewey, Franklin, and Walker, Commander Clover, Col. Bingham, Robert R. Hitt, Senator Hawley, Woodbury Lovery, and Mr. Boardman. The remains are to be brought here in the Spring.

W. BUDD DEACON STRICKEN.

Prominent Mount Holly (N. J.) Resident in a Critical Condition.

MOUNT HOLLY, N. J., Jan. 2.—W. Budd Deacon, a well-known resident of this place, was seized with a hemorrhage to-day in the street while on his way to his office. He had been in failing health for some time. His condition is said to be critical.

Mr. Deacon was for years Gen. Sewall's lieutenant. He was born in Burlington County Nov. 19, 1837, and studied law, being admitted to the bar in 1859. In 1861 he was elected Clerk of the Board of Freeholders of Burlington County, and held that position until appointed Deputy United States Marshal under his father. He held that office for three terms.

He was United States Collector of Internal Revenue from 1866 to 1869. He was also elected a member of the Legislature and was also a Senator. President Arthur appointed him United States Marshal.

Mr. Deacon is President of the Mount Holly Gaslight Company and a Director of the Camden and Burlington County Railroad. He is also Secretary and Treasurer of a turnpike company.

Schooner Eva B. Rose Ashore.

CAPE MAY, N. J. Jan. 2.—The two-masted schooner Eva B. Rose is ashore at Cape Spring Harbor. She was discovered grounded this morning by the life savers, who put out to her and took off the crew. The schooner is loaded with pig iron. She is well up on the bar and taking in water from a hole in her bottom. She was bound from Norfolk for Camden.

CORNISH ATTACKED IN MOLINEUX CASE

Lawyer Weeks Speaks of Him as "A Person

section with the case. They sat almost directly back of Molineux and watched his every movement without, however, getting a very good look at his face at any time. In the afternoon a number of actresses were in the crowd.

The male portion of the audience was a queerly assorted lot. There were politicians, actors, playwrights, several clergymen, among them the Rev. Dr. Duffield, and a United States Senator, Mr. Spooner of Wisconsin.

CROSS-EXAMINATION OF CORNISH.

The trial opened with Cornish on the stand under cross-examination by Mr. Weeks. Cornish started off by correcting his testimony given on Friday that he had gone home to the Adams flat on Dec. 27, the day before the death of Mrs. Adams, at 11 o'clock at night.

"Who first suggested to you that you were wrong on Friday when you testified that you had gone home later?" asked Mr. Weeks.

"No one," answered Cornish. "I thought of it myself. Mr. King told me, though, that he had been playing billiards with me on that night."

Cornish went on to state that he paid $40 a month for his room in a flat in Eighty-fourth Street several years ago, and that this amount included his breakfast. He got $2,000 a year then, but now gets only $1,800 and his incidental expenses, which are not limited.

"Why did you select a room in West Eighty-fourth Street, when your business was in East Forty-fifth Street?" asked Mr. Weeks.

"I had no particular reason," said the witness.

"Had the fact that Mr. and Mrs. Rogers lived near by anything to do with the case?"

"It had not."

"Did you call on Mrs. Rogers when she lived there?"

"I did."

"Did you introduce Mr. McIntyre to Mrs. Rogers at that time?"

"I never introduced them at any time."

"Did you ever meet Mr. Rogers there?"

"No."

"Have you seen Mrs. Rogers lately?"

"Yes."

"Where?"

"In Hartford."

"Did you talk with her and with Mr. and Mrs. Hovey about this case?"

"Naturally," said Cornish, "but I might as well tell you right here that it was on account of my mother's illness that I went to Hartford."

CORNISH'S MARRIED LIFE.

Mr. Weeks then inquired the date of Cornish's birth, Aug. 4, 1865, and got him to tell about his various employments. He said he was married in Hartford in 1888, and went to Chicago in 1893. For the greater part of the time he was in Chicago he lived at Twenty-fifth Street and Wabash Avenue.

"Did you live there with your wife?" asked Mr. Weeks.

"I did."

"Did you not also live on West Thirty-fourth Street?"

"No."

"Your wife got a divorce from you, did she not?"

"She did. In March, 1897."

"Did you ever know a Mrs. Small?"

"Yes. She died in 1894."

"Were you ever known as Mr. Small?"

"Never."

"What was the right name of the woman?"

"Mabel Cassidy."

"Did you ever see her husband?"

"I never did."

"Or her child?"

"No."

"When she was taken to the hospital were you not known as Mr. Small?"

"I was not," said Cornish, rather angrily. "Mr. Osborne has a letter from the physician in charge and from the detective explaining the whole matter."

"Oh, then you knew all about this line of examination, eh?"

"I did."

"And you've been out there, too?"

"I have," said Cornish. "Mrs. Small died and I helped to get her a decent burial by paying her funeral expenses. I am not ashamed of it. Her brother and I bought a plot in which to bury her."

AFTER MRS. ADAMS'S DEATH.

Mr. Weeks then dropped this line of examination and returned to the question at issue. In answer to questions Cornish said he did not think at first that a crime had been committed, but rather inclined to the idea that there had been something wrong with the bromo-seltzer.

He admitted it was possible he told the hall boy to run for a doctor, that some one had been poisoned, and he said that Dr. Hitchcock may have remarked that "a diabolical crime" had been committed. He could not remember these details, he said.

Cornish again contradicted the testimony of Assistant District Attorney McIntyre regarding the time the witness called on Mr. McIntyre. McIntyre said it was after 3 o'clock, but Cornish insists it was about 1.

"Did you and Mr. McIntyre go over a list of people who might have sent poison to you?"

"No; for at that time I did not think that any one had tried to poison me." The witness said he remembered this distinctly, but he said he could not recall any other part of the conversation he had that day with Mr. McIntyre.

"Did you not say to Mr. McIntyre that it was not suicide, but a case of poisoning?" persisted Mr. Weeks.

"I may have. I cannot recall."

Cornish said that after he left the District Attorney's office he went to see his friend, Mr. Yocum, the chemist for the United States Leather Company. He remembered very little about this visit.

"Was there any special reason why you should have consulted a chemist at that time?"

"He was my best friend, and had known the family, that's all. There was nothing more natural than that I should have gone to see him."

Cornish said after he left Mr. Yocum he went to see his cousin, Louis H. Cornish, at 18 Rose Street. He got to the club at about 4:30 in the afternoon.

NEAR POST OFFICE DEC. 23.

"Were you in Yocum's office on Dec. 23?"

"I was."

This is the day that the poison package was mailed, and Cornish told of his movements on that day. He said he was in Park Row and the adjoining streets for several hours.

"You remember testifying that you were in the neighborhood of the Post Office all that day?" asked Mr. Weeks.

"Yes, and I say the same thing now," said Cornish.

"You got the package on the morning of Dec. 24?"

"I did."

"Did you not tell Capt. McClusky that you received it on the afternoon of that day?"

"I said I was not sure whether it was in the forenoon or afternoon. You must remember that I was a very sick man about that time."

"But your statement was taken down by a stenographer, was it not?"

"Yes, and he made several mistakes."

"Yes, persons accused of crime always think that stenographers make mistakes," observed Mr. Weeks.

Mr. Osborne jumped to his feet, and waved his arms. "At last!" he shouted. "So it's Cornish you want to accuse. We've reached that at last, have we? First I thought it was Heiles, then it was Adams, but it's Cornish at last."

"That will do," interposed the Recorder.

"Mr. Weeks continue with your examination."

"Did you not say that you were fully dressed when you mixed the dose for Mrs. Adams?"

"I had my street clothes on."

"How, then, do you account for the statement made by you to the newspapers on Jan. 5 that after you heard Mrs. Adams fall you turned for your shoes and pulled on your trousers? You said in that statement: 'I put on my overcoat over my pajamas, and took the bottle and ran down stairs.' How do you account for that statement?"

SAYS HE MADE AN ERROR.

"I don't know," said Cornish, looking confused for the first time "I still maintain that I was fully dressed but for my overcoat and hat."

"But you made the same statement to Capt. McClusky about being in your pajamas, and pulling your shoes on without stopping to get stockings. How is that?"

"Well, I was wrong."

"Do you remember testifying before the Coroner that the writing on the package was not Molineux's?"

"I don't think I said just that. I said—"

Mr. Weeks objected to any but a categorical answer, and asked Cornish if he did not say that it was his opinion that Felix J. Gallagher had written the Harpster letter. The question was answered in the affirmative by Cornish.

"Now, did you not read your statement to the reporters at the Knickerbocker Athletic Club on Jan. 5?"

"I don't think I did."

"Were not the copies full of corrections and interlineations?"

"I think not. I dictated the statement to a stenographer, and she made twenty copies. I don't think I read it over before I gave it out."

Cornish was then asked at length about several appointments he made with the editor of a newspaper, and Mr. Weeks asked him if he did not demand $1,000 as the price for telling who had written the address on the package. Cornish denied the price part of the letter, but admitted he said he ought to have "some recompense."

"It's just simply nonsense to think that I was trying to sell any news," said Cornish.

"You answer my questions, and don't volunteer statements," said Mr. Weeks. "Don't be quite so glib with your explanations."

"In the month of December, 1898, did you make any inquiry about certain books on chemistry that you wanted to get or buy?" was Mr. Weeks's parting shot.

"I never did," said Cornish. "I took no interest in chemistry, and never read or wanted to read anything about it."

JURORS ASK QUESTIONS.

The jurors then asked a number of questions. Mr. Foster wanted to know where the envelope was in the poison package, and Cornish said it was under the bottle holder and not in a conspicuous position. It was empty. Mr. Billings asked at some length about the various times Cornish's desk had been broken open, and Mr. Edgar asked a question that will probably result in the reconstruction, as near as possible, of the poison package.

He said he would like to know if the stamps on the package represented full letter or merchandise postage. In fact, whether the package was such a one as might have properly been opened in the Post Office. The Recorder said that this matter could be attended to later, and Cornish was allowed to leave the stand.

At the opening of the afternoon session, Harry A. King took the stand. Mr. King said he was a broker at 10 Wall Street and lived at 1,064 Lexington Avenue. He had known Cornish since the latter came to the Knickerbocker Athletic Club some years ago. He said he remembered playing billiards with Cornish at about 10 o'clock on the night of Dec. 27, the night Cornish took the poisoned bromo-seltzer home. He said Cornish had a valise with him.

Mr. King was then asked to detail the happenings in Cornish's office on the morning of Dec. 24, the day the package was received. He was warned about the rule of law which provided that he could not tell what was said by him or by others, and that he could only detail what was done. This rule robbed Mr. King's recital of much of its interest.

He said Cornish showed him the bottle and the holder. There was a conversation in consequence of which Cornish put the bottle into the holder and gave them both to the witness. He went out to the water cooler to take a dose of the stuff supposed to be bromo-seltzer, but there being no water there, he returned the bottle and holder to Cornish, who placed them in his desk. Mr. King said he noticed the top of the bottle and cork was covered with paraffin.

MR. KING CHANGES A DATE.

"Did you not say before the Coroner that you first saw the bottle and holder on Monday?" asked Mr. Weeks, on cross-examination.

"I may have," said the witness, "but it was a mistake if I did. I fix the day as Saturday because I remember on that morning I played a game of racquets with Col. Hamburger. He asked me to wait until he went to bank and drew some money, and I did so. I know that could not have been on Monday, because that was a legal holiday."

"Didn't you change from Monday to Saturday because you heard Cornish was not in the city on Monday?"

"I certainly did not," answered Mr. King. "I have given my reason."

Patrick J. Finneran, Cornish's assistant, was then called. He said Cornish got a package through the mails on Saturday, Dec. 24. He took off the string and threw the wrappings in the waste basket. There was then disclosed a blue Tiffany box, in which, wrapped in tissue paper, was a holder and a bottle of bromo-seltzer.

The witness said he looked at the address to see if he could recognize the handwriting. Mr. King came in, and after a conversation took the bottle and holder out with him. He brought them back a moment later, and in consequence of what Mr. King said, the witness said he put ice and water in the cooler.

Mr. Finneran said he went to Boston that afternoon, and did not return until Dec. 28, when he found Cornish sick at the club. He sat up with him all that night. He identified the holder, bottle, and address, and was not cross-examined.

FELIX J. GALLAGHER CALLED.

Felix J. Gallagher, now a broker and formerly an employe of the Knickerbocker Athletic and New York Athletic Clubs, was the next witness. He said he was a friend of Molineux and got his position in the New York Athletic Club through the defendant's influence. He said he new Heiles and that the latter had called on him several times at the club. He also knew Harpster and Barnet.

"Did you ever have any conversation with Molineux about Harpster?" asked Mr. Osborne.

"Once, when there was a question as to whether it would be necessary for me to furnish a bond to the club, I told Molineux that Harpster had had trouble about getting a bond on account of some previous trouble he had with his firm in Detroit."

"Did you know that Molineux did not like Harpster?"

"I knew that Harpster did not like Molineux."

"Did you know that Molineux did not like Cornish?"

"I knew that there was no love lost between them," answered the witness.

Mr. Weeks asked the witness if he had not been compelled to write for Capt. McClusky and been dragged about from place to place, the intimation being given that if he did not submit he would get in jail. The Court would not allow the question, and Gallagher was allowed to leave the stand.

Dr. Albert T. Weston, the Coroner's physician, was then called to the stand, and Dr. Hamilton, at Mr. Weeks's right, at once got his note pads ready, and was busily at work all the time the witness was on the stand. Dr. Weston told about performing the autopsy.

On opening the head and removing the brain, he said, he detcted a faint odor of hydrocyanic acid. He noticed this again in the stomach and intestines. He described the conditions of the various organs, which were put in jars, sealed, taken to a laboratory and kept until they were delivered to Dr. Witthaus for analysis.

DR. WESTON'S CONCLUSION.

Dr. Weston said that on his first visit to the house on the day Mrs. Adams died the doctor there gave him the poison wrapper address, the bottle, and the holder. The bottle was about three-quarters full of a white powder. It also gave out a faint odor of hydocyanic acid, and the witness said he thought at the time that the bottle held cyanide of potassium.

"Did you form an opinion as to what caused the death of Mrs. Adams, and from the result of your autopsy?" asked Mr. Osborne.

"I did."

"And what was that opinion?"

"That she was poisoned with hydrocyanic acid or one of its salts."

"Can there be any doubt whatever about that?"

"Not a particle."

"Was the powder in the bottle dry?" was Mr. Weeks's first question on the cross-examination.

"It was."

"And you say that when you opened the bottle and smelled the contents that they gave off a distinct odor of prussic acid?"

"They did."

"The odor of bitter almonds?"

"Yes."

"Did you ever smell mercuric cyanide before?"

"No."

"Do you not know that in its dry state it has no odor?"

"Well, the books so state."

"Yet you still maintain that you smelled the odor?"

"I do."

Then, under the direction of Dr. Hamilton, Mr. Weeks asked the witness about the condition of the various organs. He asked Dr. Weston if they were not in the same condition as in asphyxia. Dr. Weston said there were some such evidences, and finally admitted that prussic acid poisoning causes asphyxiation. He said he took no means to keep the blood in the heart; that the mucous membrane of the stomach and trachea was congested, and that the gall- bladder, and liver were in normal condition.

EXAMINED NONE OF THE BLOOD.

"Did you examine any of the blood with the microscope or spectroscope?"

"I did not."

"Do you not know that in cases of this kind that is of the highest importance?"

"I did not see it then."

"Did you ever examine blood with the spectroscope?"

"I did."

"To determine hydrocyanic poisoning?"

"No."

"Was rigor mortis well marked in the body of Mrs. Adams?"

"It was."

"Now, is it not a fact that, with the exception of the odor of peach kernels you remarked, were not the organs in a condition that death might have been caused from any other reason than hydrocyanic poisoning?" asked Mr. Weeks.

Dr. Weston thought some time before replying, and then said that the odor was the only remarkable thing, and that death might have been due to other causes, judging from the condition of the body.

"Did you ever make an autopsy in any other case of prussic acid poisoning?"

"I did in February, 1899."

"No."

Dr. Weston was then asked if he remarked any special rigor mortis in the jaw of the dead woman, and he said he did not. The eyes, he said, were glassy, but not prominent. The pupils were not specially dilated, he said.

Mr. Weeks then went on to read from Witthaus and Becker on Medical Jurisprudence, in which authority the protruding eyes, dilated pupils, and rigor mortis of the lower jaw were stated as usual evidences of death from prussic acid poisoning. Dr. Weston said he recognized the authority, but that he had remarked the same evidences in cases where death was due to other causes.

"Did you know that it has been testified that the dead woman's jaw dropped down and had to be tied up?"

"I did not hear that."

OSBORNE ANGERS THE RECORDER.

"Was there anything to show that Mrs. Adams had died from swallowing her false teeth?" said Mr. Osborne on redirect.

"Nothing."

"You say you performed an autopsy after poisoning by mercuric cyanide in February, 1899?"

"I did."

"Whose was it?"

"H. C. Barnet's," said the witness before he could be stopped by Mr. Weeks.

Mr. Weeks then condemned Mr. Osborne for his methods. "He has said here in his opening," said the counsel for the defense, "that he would also connect this defendant with the death of another person, and he is continually dragging his name into this matter."

"A mere statement like that carries with it its own condemnation," said the Recorder.

"But he constantly endeavors to do it," said Mr. Weeks.

"I am not responsible for his endeavors," said the Recorder. "I have allowed the testimony only to show that the witness has had experience in this sort of cases."

"That is all I am doing it for," said Mr. Osborne, laying his hand on his heart and rolling up his eyes.

"Then proceed," said the Court.

"Oh, well, I guess I have got enough," said Mr. Osborne, ignoring the Recorder's remarks. Mr. Weeks said that his statement was thus proved, and the Recorder, his face red with anger, at once ordered an adjournment.

SCENES AT FIRST AVENUE FIRE.

Exciting Rescues by the Firemen—One Child Was Killed and Eleven Persons Were Injured.

In the fire which was started by a candle left burning on a Christmas tree, and which destroyed the double tenement house 754-756 First Avenue early yesterday morning, one child—a baby girl—was killed and not two children, as at first reported, and eleven persons were injured. The house was crowded with families, and many persons were still in the building when the firemen arrived.

A ladder eighty-five feet long was run up to the top floor, where lived the family of Edward Leonard, whose little daughter was killed. Firemen Shaughnessy, O'Brien, Monaghan, Melia, Eckert, Smith, and Kelly were led up the ladder by Capt. Grady and Assistant Foreman Hearn of Truck No. 2. They found Leonard struggling with his wife, who was trying to jump with her babe. She fell in a faint as they reached her. One of the men lifted her from out of the smoke and carried her down.

The crew of Engine No. 21 had meanwhile reached the roof of the next house and, making a rope fast to a chimney, they dropped it over so that it fell in front of one of the Leonard family's windows. Leonard, almost suffocated, grasped it and slid down. He held on, though the rope cut the flesh through to the bone, and reached the pavement in safety. Then his fourteen-year-old daughter, Nancy, who had been prevented from jumping by her brother, Edward, seventeen years old, bravely took hold of the rope and, swinging herself from the window, followed her father. Her hands were also badly torn, but she did not fall. The firemen rescued her brother, Edward.

John Lane, his wife, and their six children on the same floor were rescued by the men of the same hook and ladder company. All were unhurt except Mrs. Lane, whose face and hands were burned from a sheet of flame that shot out from a window of one of the lower floors and encircled the ladder as she was being assisted down.

The crew of Engine No. 1 managed to get a hose into the apartments of the Leonard family, and it was while fighting the fire there that they came across the little boys, Thomas and William Leonard, in bed clasped in each others arms, unconscious. While carrying them to the ladder one of the firemen struck something soft on the floor. It was the baby's body. The firemen had not known that there was a baby when they rescued the mother from the smoke.

GUNS FOR HARBOR DEFENSE.

Large Number of 15 and 6 Pounders Being Tested at the Sandy Hook Proving Grounds.

Shipments of guns to the Sandy Hook proving grounds, destined for a new scheme of mine field defense, have been in progress during the last two months from the Derby (Conn.) factory of the Driggs-Seabury Gun and Ammunition Company. During that time 20 six-pounder and 2 fifteen-pounder coast defense guns have been delivered on contract, with their accompanying ammunition. Yesterday 18 additional fifteen-pounders were put on board the cars at Derby, two guns to a car. Each gun weighs 9,780 pounds and costs $6,000. The calibre is three-inch. These are part of an order for 80 guns. The company is also working on an order for 40 more guns. Of the six-pounders the company still has 40 to deliver. Three hundred rounds of ammunition are furnished with each gun, as follows: 150 steel shells, 100 shrapnel, and 50 cast iron shells.

The first gun of each type was subjected at Sandy Hook to an endurance test of 100 rounds. This was the test of the type. Each subsequent gun was tested with ten rounds to determine its individual fitness.

L. L. Driggs of the Driggs-Seabury Gun and Ammunition Company said yesterday:

"These guns are intended for a new system of mine field and harbor defense. It is planned to mount the small guns, the six-pounders, near the water level and the larger ones above them. The idea is this: In time of war the enemy would send his torpedo boats into a harbor to explode the defending mines. The six-pounders mounted low down would be able to reach the torpedo boats, and when the ships arrived the big guns above would come into action.

"The six-pounders, even when used behind a parapet, are mounted upon field carriages. When used behind a parapet a V-shaped anchor is used, attached to anchor bolts in the masonry. When it is desired to concentrate the small fire upon any given point, or to run the six-pounders down to the beach, the anchorage chains may be unhooked and a practical field piece results, which can be held to any desired position by a spade upon the foot of the carriage. The transports Logan, Meade, and others were armed with these six-pounders, the first we delivered.

"The fifteen-pounder, which is 13 feet long, has no carriage. It is stationary. This gun has been officially adopted by the United States as its standard gun for coast defense. Our present orders are intended for various harbors."

Fire Department Appointments.

Fire Commissioner Scannell has appointed four Assistant Fire Marshals and an Assistant Inspector of Combustibles. Joseph M. F. Oatis and Albert W. Orr were appointed Assistant Fire Marshals for the Boroughs of Manhattan and the Bronx at salaries of $1,500 a year. Orr was an assistant before the civil service rules went into effect, when he had to be retired and take the examination, which he passed. William L. Beers and Henry R. Crofton were appointed Assistant Fire Marshals for the Borough of Queens. William A. Hervey was appointed an Assistant Inspector of Combustibles for the Boroughs of Brooklyn and Queens, at $2,500 a year.

Lectures on Wagner's Music Dramas.

The Board of Education will begin the course of free lectures to the people for 1900 to-morrow evening, in the Educational Alliance Building, with a series of lectures on Richard Wagner's music dramas by T. W. Surrette. The first subject will be "Lohengrin."

Gen. White reported, under date of Dec. 31, that the number of cases of dysentery and fever is increasing.

BOERS SIGNAL "RATS" TO BULLER.

Exchange of Sarcastic Messages at Tugela River.

FRERE CAMP, Jan. 1.—The Boers inquired by heliograph to-day: "Why is Roberts coming? What has Buller done?"

The British replied:

"How did you like our lyddite in the late battle?"

The Boers signalled in response: "Rats."

DUTCH UPRISING IS SERIOUS.

Many Laagers Consist Entirely of Disloyal British South African Subjects.

LONDON, Jan. 3.—Although the continuance of minor successes gratifies the British public, it is not forgotten that the larger aspects of the campaign are unchanged.

The importance of both Gen. French's and Col. Pilcher's victories lies in the effect they are likely to have upon the Colonial Dutch. The latest dispatch from Douglass confirms the earlier report that the Boer laagers consisted chiefly of British subjects, who, on the arrival of the small Free State commando, accepted, probably, an invitation to throw in their lot with the Boers.

A Cape Town dispatch reports that "the rebels in Barkly district are demoralized by the British occupation of Dordrecht." Should it turn out that the Dutch rebellion is thus being diminished, it will be a matter of great relief for the British campaign.

The Standard, however, remarks:

"Until the Tugela has been crossed and Ladysmith relieved, it would be idle to deny that the political position in Cape Colony is one of very great danger, and, if unhappily, Gen. Buller is again defeated, it will be necessary to dispatch 100,000 additional men to keep the Dutch in order."

EXTRA PRECAUTIONS IN DUBLIN.

Military Authorities in Ireland Adopt a Watchful Policy.

DUBLIN, Jan. 3.—Extra precautions have been adopted by the military authorities here. The constabulary has been fully armed.

The sentries, from sundown to morning, have been increased at the barracks. Patrols march around, and all leaves of absence are suspended.

HUGE ARMY FOR LORD ROBERTS

When All Troops Destined for South Africa Reach There They Will Aggregate 200,000.

LONDON, Jan. 3.—Mr. Winston Churchill's estimate that 250,000 men will be required to defeat the forces of the two republics has been ridiculed in many quarters, but, as a matter of fact, this number is already almost reached, without the extra 100,000 which The Standard foresees might be required.

Yesterday the Admiralty chartered eight more large transports. When all the troops destined for South Africa join those already there Lord Roberts will be in command of about 200,000 men. Thirty thousand are now afloat or ready to embark. Military observers, in view of what these figures mean, cannot see how the British can fail to crush the Boers by mere force of numbers.

£5,000,000 FOR ARTILLERY.

Asserted that Great Britain Has Decided to Place the Nation on a Strong Basis.

LONDON, Jan. 3.—The Daily Mail makes the following statement this morning:

"We understand that the Defense Committee of the Cabinet, after careful consideration of the question of the defense of the Empire, particularly with regard to artillery, will shortly call for the expenditure of £5,000,000 to make good deficiencies and to place the nation on a par with other great powers.

"The new equipment will be provided as speedily as possible, and, while sufficiently mobile for use in the field, it is intended to be adaptable to the necessities of what are known as guns of position."

HARRY McCALMONT WILL FIGHT.

Sportsman and Millionaire Ordered to South Africa.

LONDON, Jan. 2.—Harry McCalmont, the well-known sportsman, has been ordered to South Africa with the Warwickshire militia.

Harry Leslie Blundell McCalmont, M. P., who is to go to South Africa with the Warwickshire militia, is Major of the Fourth Battalion of that regiment. He is the head of one of the largest Stock Exchange firms in London, and is said to be one of the richest men in England. He is well known in this country, which he visited during the races for the America's Cup and on various other occasions.

Mr. McCalmont, who has been the Conservative member of Parliament for Newmarket since 1895, is a brother-in-law of Mrs. Langtry, having married in 1897, Miss Winifred de Bathe, daughter of Gen. Sir Henry de Bathe, Bart. He was formerly an officer of the First Battalion, Sixth Royal Regiment, and was subsequently in the Scots Guards.

Sir Charles Vincent Incapacitated.

LONDON, Jan 2.—Sir Charles Howard Vincent, Colonel of the Westminster Volunteers, has failed to pass the medical examination necessary to qualify him to command the City of London Infantry Division bound for South Africa. The command of this corps must, therefore, be given to the Earl of Albemarle.

BRITISH PROTEST TO THE SWISS.

Ask that Recruiting for the Transvaal be Stopped.

LONDON, Jan. 3.—The Berlin correspondent of The Standard says:

"The British representative at Berne has lodged a protest with the Swiss Government, calling attention to the fact that recruiting for the Transvaal is in progress in Swiss territory. Many young men who had engaged to go to England for service were told, on arriving at Margeilles that England no longer needed them, but that they could go to the Transvaal. It is said that many have accepted this suggestion, and 100 are reported to have sailed for Delagoa Bay in a French vessel."

British Medical Men Released.

LONDON, Jan. 3.—The Times publishes the following, dated Jan. 2, from Lorenzo Marques: "It is asserted that Major Daly and forty-one men of the British Medical Corps, who were left at Dundee when the town was evacuated, are now on the way from Pretoria to Delagoa Bay."

WILL ASK AMERICA TO MEDIATE.

League of Peace to Meet at Brussels to Make an Appeal.

BRUSSELS, Jan. 2.—Senator Lejeune, former Minister of Justice and now member of the Council of State; former Senator La Fontaine, and other leading members of the Universal League of Peace have convoked a meeting, to be held next Thursday.

The object is to appeal to the United States Government to offer to mediate in the South African war.

Report Six British Officers Wounded.

PRETORIA, Jan. 1.—Three British prisoners, who were taken at Malagro, say that Capt. Gordon Chesney Wilson, husband of Lady Sarah Wilson, and five other officers, whose names they refuse to give, were wounded in a recent sortie from Mafeking.

Women to Equip Hospital.

LONDON, Jan. 2.—At a meeting held at the London residence of Viscount Curzon yesterday a committee of ladies was formed to equip a hospital base for the yeomanry. The Princess of Wales accepted the Presidency of the committee. The Duchess of Connaught and the Duchess of York agreed to serve as Vice Presidents. The membership of the committee includes most of the leading women of the British aristocracy, among them the Duchess of Marlborough.

Newspaper Correspondent Released.

LONDON, Jan. 2.—George Lynch, the newspaper correspondent who was captured outside of Ladysmith and imprisoned at Pretoria, has been released and has arrived at Lorenzo Marques.

Movement of West Indian Troops.

KINGSTON, Jamaica, Jan. 2.—A detachment of the West India Regiment (colored) embarked to-day to reinforce the Bermuda garrison. It is expected that if the imperial troops in Jamaica go to South Africa Canadian militia will be sent here for garrison duty.

Queen Accepts Militia's Services.

LONDON, Jan. 3.—The Queen has accepted the services of twelve battalions of militia for foreign stations. Seven of these are assigned to South Africa.

THOMAS RIGNEY DEAD.

He Was One of the Original Members of the Produce Exchange, and in Business Here for 56 Years.

Thomas Rigney, one of the original members of the Produce Exchange, one of the founders of the Importers and Traders' Bank, of which he was also a Director, and one of the men most influential in putting through the reciprocity treaty with Canada before the civil war, died early yesterday morning at his home, 118 West One Hundred and Twenty-third Street, in his eighty-eighth year. In spite of his advanced age he kept at his business, that of a rice commission merchant, until last Wednesday. His death was due to an attack of pneumonia, under which he sank rapidly.

Mr. Rigney had for almost fifty-six years been the head of the firm of Thomas Rigney & Co., and established in the same office. He was born on May 10, 1812, in Ferbane, a little town in King's County, Ireland, and came as a small boy with his parents, who were poor people, to Montreal, Canada, but young Thomas set off as a lad to seek his fortune in the United States, and found employment in a country store at Swanton, Vt. Here when only thirteen years old he was intrusted by the storekeeper with the charge of taking a drove of cattle afoot to Montreal. He sold them there, making his own bargains, and brought back the money in safety.

Some years afterward he went back to Montreal and became an employe in the dry goods house of Levi Cook & Co. There he saved money enough to start a general store of his own, and went to Toronto for the purpose. At Toronto he built the first four-story brick building the city had ever known, right in the heart of the business section, and here the first firm of Thomas Rigney & Co. was established. The late James Brown, Jr., and Messrs. Whittemore and Rutherford were his partners. He found himself, at the age of thirty, and without having had the advantage of a good early education, the proprietor of a flourishing business and a respectable fortune.

Pneumonia, the trouble which eventually proved fatal to him, compelled Mr. Rigney in 1844 to leave Canada, (though he retained his interest in the Toronto business for a number of years afterwards,) and he came to this city and started the firm of Thomas Rigney & Co., commission merchants, at 121 Pearl Street, where it still is. He first dealt in coffee, tea, spices, &c., shipping a good deal of this merchandise, later took up cotton, and eventually confined himself to rice. The firm kept to the same building, and Mr. Rigney used in after years to tell the agent of the Post estate, which owned it, that he had paid its value in rent ten times over. The late Henry J. Creighton was one of his partners, and some eighteen years ago Galatian P. Harmon, who had come to Mr. Rigney in 1876 as an office boy, was taken into partnership, and was the only other member of the firm at the time of Mr. Rigney's death.

Years ago he was a Director in the Niagara Fire Insurance Company and other institutions. Before the panic of 1857 he was worth not far short of $500,000, but was badly crippled then. He refused, however, to suspend business, and as a result he failed some five years later, but managed to get on his feet again, keeping his offices open all the while. It is about two years since he was on the floor of the Produce Exchange, though he retained his membership until his death.

Mr. Rigney's home in this city was first in Seventh Street, near Second Avenue. The transit arrangements were so primitive at that time that any one at his house wanting to use the Broadway and St. Mark's Place stage line, which was running then, could send around to St. Mark's Place, and the stage would call. The same accommodating arrangement obtained in the Winter, when a sleigh replaced the stage. From this house he family moved to West Twenty-first Street, and later to 318 Fifth Avenue, at the northwest corner of Thirty-second Street. In the latter place Sir Francis Hincks and Sir John Macdonald, who was once Premier of Canada, used to meet and discuss with Mr. Rigney the prospect of getting through Congress a reciprocity treaty between this country and the Dominion. Mr. Rigney, it was said, advanced a sum of money for the purpose of lobbying the bill for the treaty through, and it was finally negotiated in the early fifties. It was abrogated after the civil war, as an unpleasant feeling between the Dominion and the United States was one of the results of that conflict. Mr. Rigney had to wait some years before the Canadian Government paid him what he had advanced to get the treaty through.

Mr. Rigney was thrice married. His last wife died in 1863. Three daughters and a son survive him. Mr. Rigney was not a member of any club. For a number of years he attended the Church of the Puritans. His funeral will take place at his home to-morrow, the Rev. Dr. Alfred Marling officiating. The burial will be in Greenwood Cemetery.

Reception to Edwin Markham.

The rooms of the Social Reform Club, at 45 University Place, were filled last evening with members who had come to attend the reception given to Edwin Markham, the author of "The Man with the Hoe." He was introduced by Joseph R. Buchanan, who said Mr. Markham was one of the stanchest champions of labor on the Pacific Coast. Mr. Markham, in responding, explained how the idea of writing that poem was suggested to him by Millet's painting, and traced the development of mankind from the selfish savage to the modern humanitarian. He was afterward induced to read a number of his poems. Speeches were delivered by Edward King, Robert Crowe, Henry White, and others.

Charity Contributions Acknowledged.

The Charity Organization Society acknowledges with thanks the following additional contributions in response to its appeal for funds toward the support of a middle-aged single woman who is without friends able to help her, and for funds with which to pay the entrance fee into a home for a widow verging on eighty years of age: "E. A. W.," $300; "F. H. B." and Mrs. John Ellis Blake, $10 each; "C. W. A." and "C. C. A.," $5 each; "M. F. H.," $2; Cash, $1. Sufficient money has now been received for both of these cases.

THE WEATHER.

LOCAL FORECAST—Fair, fresh westerly winds.

The area of high pressure, central in Texas, covers nearly the whole United States, and will dominate the weather for the next forty-eight hours. Light snows have fallen in the lake region. The temperature has fallen slightly in the upper lake region, and has generally risen elsewhere. Fair weather will prevail in all districts with slowly rising temperature. Fresh westerly winds, diminishing, will prevail on the North Atlantic Coast, and light westerly on the Middle and South Atlantic Coast.

The record of temperature for the twenty-four hours ended at midnight, taken from THE NEW YORK TIMES thermometer and from the thermometer of the Weather Bureau, is as follows:

	—Weather Bureau.— 1899.	1900	TIMES. 1900.

CHICAGO BANKRUPTS RELIEVED.

Levi R. Doty Loses $5,000,000 of Old Liabilities.

CHICAGO, Jan. 2.—Levi R. Doty, capitalist and formerly President of several large coal companies, was relieved of liabilities aggregating $5,000,000 by order of Judge Grosscup, in the United States District Court, to-day.

The assets of Mr. Doty amounted to $400,000, consisting principally of stock in various coal companies. The financial panic of 1893 and the subsequent failure of several of the large coal concerns in which Mr. Doty was a stockholder caused his financial embarrassment.

Henry C. Speer, formerly a bond broker, and interested in some large Western railroad companies, was relieved of debts aggregating $513,000. His assets were $67,981.

Pratt & Pratt, formerly interested in the Lagrange Land Association, were discharged of indebtedness of $157,000.

PRESIDENT CRAFTS RESIGNS.

BOSTON, Jan. 2.—President James M. Crafts of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology has sent to the corporation a letter resigning the Presidency of the institute with the close of the present academic year.

In his letter President Crafts said that his reason for taking the step was his desire to return to purely scientific occupations.

Trust Absorbs Lister Works.

NEWARK, N. J., Jan. 2.—Vice Chancellor Stevens to-day in the Chancery Chambers here signed an order confirming an agreement for the sale of the majority of the stock of the Lister Agricultural Chemical Works to the American Agricultural Chemical Company. The heirs of the founder of the Lister works at first objected to the action of the executors in disposing of the stock, but later decided to sell out, as they received an excess on the face value of the stock they held. The Lister Company was the biggest independent concern outside the trust which the American Company had formed.

Gen. Zenas R. Bliss Dead.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 2.—Major Gen. Zenas R. Bliss, United States Army, retired, died at Providence Hospital, in this city, to-day after an illness of some weeks. The deceased was a native of Rhode Island, and performed distinguished military service during the war of the rebellion, being twice brevetted for gallant and meritorious services at Fredericksburg and the Wilderness. He reached the grade of Major General in May, 1897, and retired a few days later at his own request, after forty years' active service.

Col. W. A. McIntyre Dead.

THOMASVILLE, Ga., Jan. 2.—Col. W. A. McIntyre died here to-day. He was a member of the Forty-eighth Congress, a member of the Georgia Constitutional Convention of 1865, a Trustee of the University of Georgia since 1876, and President of the Board of Trustees of Youngs Female College at this place. During the civil war he was on Gov. Brown's staff, and commanded a regiment of State troops.

NEW YORK LEGISLATURE

Democratic Policy Defined by Minority Assembly Leader.

REPUBLICANS NAME OFFICERS

Mysterious Caucus of Democratic Senators—Many Bills to be Introduced in Both Houses.

ALBANY, Jan. 2.—The caucus of Democratic members of the Assembly met in the Chamber at 8 o'clock, and was called to order by Assemblyman P. H. Roche of New York. Joseph Guider acted as Secretary. The session was chiefly notable for the distinct enunciation of the policy of the Democrats.

The caucus made the following selections of candidates:

For Speaker—J. FRANKLIN BARNES of Schuyler.
Sergeant-at-Arms—JEREMIAH BURNS of New York.
Clerk—WILLIAM LEONARD of New York.
Doorkeeper—THOMAS J. BARRY of New York.
First Assistant—HENRY CHRISTIE of Rockland.
Second Assistant—DENNIS McTIGHE of Erie.
Stenographer—CALEB REDFERN of New York.

These nominations are merely complimentary, except that of Dr. Barnes, which carries with it the leadership.

George F. Kelly of Albany, in nominating J. Franklin Barnes of Watkins as the Democratic choice for Speaker, explained the Democrats' position and attacked Gov. Roosevelt. He said:

"We are on the eve of an important National and State campaign. Grave questions occupy the minds of the people of the Nation and State at this time. On Jan. 1, 1895, when the late Gov. Flower retired from office, the State was free from debt. Never was there such a small tax rate as under the administrations of Govs. Hill and Flower. Now, with an enormous income to the State from the Raines liquor tax law amounting to between $4,000,000 and $5,000,000, the large income from the inheritance tax law, and corporation tax, the State debt has increased. These are undisputed facts and matters of public record, and should be studied by the people so that the public may learn that the Democracy has given the State the most economical form of government.

"The Democracy of the State is gradually reaching the goal of success. In 1894 we were confronted by a large Republican majority. In 1896 by a less plurality. In 1897 we elected a Chief Judge of the Court of Appeals. In 1898 the Republican leaders in their wisdom saw that a condition confronted them and not a theory and nominated Col. Roosevelt, who won by a small majority, a gentleman for whom we have the highest regard, and whose achievements all citizens, irrespective of politics, will point to with pride on account of his services for his country and his flag.

"Under the Constitution of our State we have three departments, the legislative, the executive, and the judicial. What I am about to say I say with no disrespect to the Governor. But the last year we have been confronted with a spectacle of a Republican Governor dictating to and assuming to be the Legislature for the Empire State, whose motto is 'Excelsior,' telling the Legislature what it should do, framing laws for it to enact, making the members mere automata and not allowing them to voice the sentiments of their constituents or vote as the representatives of the people, and violating all the provisions of the Constitution of the State. If the Legislature enacts bad laws, the Governor can exercise his veto power. The Legislature is competent to introduce and enact its own laws without dictation from the Governor or any other person."

Hon. J. Franklin Barnes in his speech accepting the minority nomination for Speaker defined the attitude of the Democrats in the Legislature. He said in part:

"That we are the minority and not the majority is due not to popular confidence in our opponents, or to distrust of us, but rather to an unfair apportionment of legislative districts. In the election of 1898 9,236 more votes were cast for Democratic State Senators and 4,302 more votes for Democratic Assemblymen than for Republican ones. Despite the evident popular will as thus expressed the Senate elected that year was Republican by a majority of 4, and the Assembly was Republican by a majority of 42.

"The true province of minority leadership is, it would seem to me, to protest against extravagant, unwise, and improper legislation, and to endeavor to get before the people in an intelligent and forcible form our reasons for our objections. In so endeavoring I ask for the assistance and co-operation of the entire Democratic membership of the Assembly.

"The Legislature of 1899 enacted a law introduced by a Democratic Senator and known as the Donnelly bill, which was designed to curb and restrain the great trusts. There appears to have been no effort made by the Republican State administration to exercise the powers conferred by the Donnelly anti-trust law. It is our duty to the people to demand that the Donnelly bill be put into active operation and that, should it prove in any respect insufficient, other and more drastic legislation against the trusts should be enacted by the present Legislature.

"In general, the Democratic policy should be as it has been heretofore, to endeavor to promote economy in State affairs. That is the problem that at present confronts us as members of the State Legislature. The taxpayers have seen with alarm the steady growth in the volume of appropriations, which in 1881 amounted to only $9,878,214.60, for the entire expense of State Government, but which last year reached a total of $22,031,674.13. In no year since the Republicans came into power in 1895 have the total appropriations amounted to less than $20,000,000. We annually expend nearly the equivalent of the cost of building another State Capitol. From indirect sources the State is receiving enough funds every year to pay the entire cost of State Government fifteen years ago, and in addition an equivalent amount is received by direct taxation—so that these large indirect revenues produce no substantial relief from the burdens which weigh so heavily upon the taxpayers. This increasing expense has been caused by the creation of superfluous commissions, extravagant salaries, and the establishment of a list of supernumeraries with no legitimate duties to perform, and without any apology for existing, save their contribution to the success of the Republican Party.

"It is said that an attempt will be made at the present session to pass a bill in the Legislature in the alleged interest of educational unification, but whose real intent seems to be the creation of a huge educational machine, with numerous and high salaried officials appointed for long terms of years and in such manner as not to be readily removed from office. Against such project, which takes the public schools out of popular control, we should present a united front.

"It is, furthermore, our duty to scrutinize carefully all appropriations for additional expenditures upon the canals upon which, under a Republican Administration, the trust fund of $9,000,000 has already been squandered, stolen, or misapplied.

"All bills of expenses presented by the so-called Mazet committee of ridiculous memory, should be subjected to a like careful scrutiny in the interest of the taxpayers and for the purpose of putting an end to such frivolous investigations."

Out of respect to the memory of Speaker Nixon's mother and Assemblyman Edward C. Stone, the caucus then adjourned.

REPUBLICAN ASSEMBLY CAUCUS

Rules to be Amended So as to Prevent Members from Speaking Twice on the Same Bill.

ALBANY, Jan. 2.—The Republican Assembly caucus was called to order at 8:30 by Assemblyman Fancher of Cattaraugus. Assemblyman James T. Rogers of Binghamton was chosen Chairman, and Assemblymen Fallows of New York and Graham of Orange, Secretaries. The following candidates were unanimously selected, and they will be declared officers of the House at the session to-morrow:

Speaker—S. FREDERICK NIXON of Chautauqua.
Sergeant at Arms—FRANK W. JOHNSON of Erie.
Clerk—ARCHIE E. BAXTER of Chemung.
Principal Doorkeeper—THOMAS F. MURPHY of New York City.
First Assistant Doorkeeper—CHARLES R. HOUGHTALING of Albany.
Second Assistant Doorkeeper—ROSWELL B. WARREN of Washington.
Stenographer—H. C. LAMMERT of Kings.

Prior to adjourning Mr. Kelsey of Livingston gave notice of a revision of the rules of the House, copies of which he said would be laid on the desks of the members to act upon at to-morrow's session. The rules of last year, he said, did not strictly conform to parliamentary practice. The opposition, he thought, would be to the amendment prohibiting members from speaking on the same bill twice and not over fifteen minutes at any time unless by a two-thirds majority vote of the members.

DEMOCRATIC SENATE CAUCUS.

Much Mystery in a Meeting at the Ten Eyck Hotel—May Have Discussed Payn's Successor.

ALBANY, Jan. 2.—There was considerable mystery surrounding the caucus of the Democratic Senators held here to-night. Such action was unprecedented. No Democratic Senator could be found before the caucus who could explain why they had been summoned. Senator Grady, the Democratic leader, said it was merely for an informal talk, to shake hands, and renew old acquaintanceship. But that it should take an hour and a half for this renewal of acquaintances created suspicion among the politicians, who thronged the corridors of the Ten Eyck Hotel, not the least interested being Chairman B. B. Odell of the Republican State Committee.

When the caucus was concluded all who had participated asserted that it was but an informal conference, a friendly exchange of views upon matters that might possibly be submitted for their consideration. No vote was taken upon any proposition, and no effort made to pledge any Senator to any specific measure.

It was generally understood, however, that the prospect of a successor to Superintendent of Insurance Louis F. Payn was the topic of most absorbing consideration. Upon this no definite conclusion was reached. There was a diversity of opinion as to whether it would be better politics to vote for the confirmation of the Governor's choice as against Senator Platt, or to vote against confirmation as against Gov. Roosevelt. Upon this no decision was reached, but it was stated after the caucus that the unanimity of sentiment expressed assured absolute harmony when final action was required.

Senator Louis Munzinger of New York, John C. Sheehan's lieutenant, did not attend the caucus of the Democratic Senators to-night. His absence caused considerable comment among the members, but no satisfactory reason was assigned for it.

Senator Grady, the Senate minority leader, made a speech in reply to a resolution thanking him for his services at the last session. The Senators talked over the legislation proposed by the majority, but no definite line of action was agreed upon. At the close of the caucus Senator Grady said that the minority would wait until the Republican measures were introduced before they determine what to do.

MAYOR'S POWER OF REMOVAL.

Mazet Committee Likely to Recommend Its Extension to Cover His Entire Term.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, Jan. 2.—Assemblyman Costello of Oswego, one of the members of the Mazet committee, is authority for the statement that no report will be submitted by the committee to the Legislature until Jan. 15, at least.

Mr. Costello, in discussing the work of the committee, said to-night that he favored an amendment to the New York City charter extending the power of removal vested in the Mayor of New York from six months, as the law now stands, throughout the entire term. Mr. Costello believes that the Mayor should be held the responsible head of the city Government, and should have the power at all times to remove and appoint his subordinates.

This suggestion has been received with considerable favor by Republican members, and the prediction was made to-night that Mr. Costello's idea would be embodied in the report of the committee and be one of the bills favored by the majority.

BILL FOR A CITY GAS PLANT.

ALBANY, Jan. 2.—The Democratic organization of New York City has a gas bill, and it will be introduced in the Assembly by Assemblyman Harburger. He will ask unanimous consent to introduce the bill from the floor as soon as the House is organized, but failing in this attempt will drop it in the bill box. The bill provides a maximum rate of 75 cents per thousand cubic feet for a high quality of gas, and provides also for municipal control.

For the purposes of the act the bill provides that the City of New York is authorized and directed to establish a system and plant for supplying gas to the City of New York and its inhabitants, and to acquire title for the use of the public to all or any of the lands and premises or easements therein, whether the same be above or below high water mark or under water required for the establishment of such system. The city may acquire any existing system and plant within the City of New York by agreement with the owners. The terms and conditions of all such agreements, in all their details, before they are entered into are to be approved by the Board of Estimate and Apportionment by resolution duly passed. If the City of New York cannot agree with the owners of such system for the purchase, condemnation proceedings may be taken to acquire title to the same.

The Board of Public Improvements is directed to cause the establishment of the system and plant for supplying gas to be done by the Commissioner of Public Buildings, Lighting and Supplies. It shall be the duty of the Corporation Counsel, when required in writing by the Board of Public Improvements, immediately to institute a proceeding or proceedings to acquire title for the use of the public to all lands and premises.

The Board of Public Improvements is authorized to direct the Commissioner of Public Buildings, Lighting and Supplies to acquire by purchase after public letting, as prescribed in this act, all such personal property as may be required in establishing and maintaining the system. The said board is authorized to fix and establish the price to be charged for supplying gas, such price not to exceed 75 cents per 1,000 cubic feet.

It is the duty of and lawful for the Controller of the City of New York when authorized by the Board of Estimate and Apportionment to create and issue such additional amounts of the corporate stock of the City of New York as shall be necessary to provide for the cost and expense of establishing and maintaining the system.

The Commissioner of the Department of Public Buildings, Lighting and Supplies shall have control of the system.

Senator Donnelly proposes to introduce the bill in the Senate. He asserts that that organization has not changed its opinion in the matter, and will give its loyal support to the bill this Winter. The developments of the past few months afford him renewed encouragement.

"If a competitive war will reduce the price of gas one-half," he says, "what can the citizens of Greater New York hope from a plant conducted not for individual profit, but upon co-operative principles. No one believes that these companies are furnishing gas at a loss, and if they can furnish it at such prices the people should have the benefit. I will introduce this bill on the first day for the reception of bills, and Tammany Hall will give it its undivided and earnest support."

FOR A SCHOOL TEACHERS' FUND.

ALBANY, Jan. 2.—Senator Ford said to-night that he would introduce in the first week of the session a bill similar in all its essential features to that proposed by him last year, in behalf of the New York school teachers.

The bill will provide for the establishment of a special fund for the payment of school teachers apart from any exigencies of municipal government, and will compel the levy of a tax of 4 mills upon the dollar for the sole purpose of the support of the schools. The bill will further create an independent management for the schools which shall be independent of political or other influence and the fund raised by this arbitrary tax rate will be at the disposal of this management.

A NEW "POISON BOTTLE" BILL.

ALBANY, Jan. 2.—Senator Wilcox of Auburn, who has vainly endeavored to secure the passage of a "poison bottle" bill through the past two sessions of the Legislature, will introduce a bill providing that any bottle containing poison shall be of such peculiar shape that it can be readily distinguished in the dark by the touch.

Opposition to the bill heretofore was based upon the ground of discrimination in favor of some particular manufacturer who might secure a patent upon his design. To avoid this, Senator Wilcox proposes this year to incorporate in his bill a provision that the style of bottle shall be determined by a committee of the State Medical Society, acting in conjunction with the State Board of Health. With such provision, he feels confident that the bill will pass.

TO AMEND THE PRIMARY LAW.

ALBANY, Jan. 2.—The Sheehan-Croker feud, which involves the Ninth Assembly District, represented by N. Taylor Phillips, is to be brought to the attention of the Legislature. Mr. Phillips has prepared two bills, which he says will, if passed, forbid the disgraceful acts that occurred at the primaries in that district, and for which several men have been indicted.

One bill, already prepared and to be introduced to-morrow, makes it a felony, instead of a misdemeanor, to violate the primary laws. Making the punishment much more severe, Mr. Phillips believes, will prove a deterrent influence.

The other bill, which is to be perfected and introduced next week, will so amend the primary law as to make it conform exactly with the election and ballot law, with all the safeguards used on election day.

SHORTER HOURS FOR DRUG CLERKS.

Bill Satisfactory to the Governor to be Introduced.

ALBANY, Jan. 2.—When Gov. Roosevelt allowed the drug clerks' shorter hour bill to die last year he said that he would like to do something to shorten the hours if he could with equity. A new bill has been prepared on lines that it is known will be satisfactory to the Governor, and Dr. Henry will introduce it in the Assembly to-morrow. It provides that no clerk or pharmacist shall be compelled to or shall work more than seventy hours in one week, except to shorten the hours in the succeeding week; six hours' overtime may be added to a week, providing, however, that in two weeks the total number of hours worked shall not exceed 140. The ten hours per day stipulated must be served consecutively, except that one hour may be given for each meal.

The bill provides that no clerk shall sleep in stores or in rooms directly connected with stores unless under a permit from the Board of Health, and applies only to cities of the first class.

TO ABATE BARREN ISLAND NUISANCE

Last Year's Bill to be Introduced with Time Limit of Six Months.

ALBANY, Jan. 2.—Assemblyman George W. Doughty of Queens called on Gov. Roosevelt to-day, bringing with him his Barren Island bill of last year, which provides for the abolition of the bone-burning nuisance on that island and for the disposal by the City of New York of its own garbage and ashes.

The only change in the bill from last year is that it gives the owners of the plants six months in which to abate the nuisance.

COAL FOR THE POOR.

Another Effort to be Made to Get an Appropriation of $25,000.

ALBANY, Jan. 2.—The usual attempt will be made to have the Legislature authorize New York City to give more money to the poor for coal. Julius Harburger will introduce the following bill:

The Board of Estimate and Apportionment of the City of New York is hereby authorized and empowered, in its discretion, to appropriate the sum of $25,000 for the purpose of supplying coal to the poor residing within the Boroughs of Manhattan, Bronx, Brooklyn, Queens, and Richmond, and the Department of Public Charities in said boroughs is hereby authorized to distribute the same.

More Pay for Election Officials.

ALBANY, Jan. 2.—Senator Plunkitt intends to introduce a bill in the Senate providing for a decided increase in the salaries of election officials in New York City, and Mr. Fitzgerald will probably introduce a similar bill in the House. It will increase the sum paid to election inspectors from $30 to $50, and poll clerks from $7.50 to $12 per day. The reasons given for the increase is that the officials are now paid so poorly that good men cannot be obtained.

Horton Sparring Law Amendment.

ALBANY, Jan. 2.—Assemblyman Merten E. Lewis of Rochester said to-night that he would reintroduce directly after the usual recess his anti-sparring bill calling for the repeal of the Horton law, which permits sparring exhibitions of twenty-five rounds' duration. It is generally believed that Senator Horace White of Syracuse will introduce an amended sparring bill, which will limit all prizefight exhibitions to five rounds.

Another Pure-Beer Bill.

ALBANY, Jan. 2.—Assemblyman Jean L. Burnett of Canandaigua is to introduce a Pure Beer bill this Winter in the Legislature, and it is probable that it will be dropped in the bill box to-morrow morning. The bill will be somewhat similar to the Cogseshall bill of last Winter.

For Lower Pawnbrokers' Licenses.

ALBANY, Jan. 2.—Assemblyman P. F. Trainor of New York City will at the opening of the legislative session reintroduce Assemblyman (now Judge) Finn's General Pawnbrokers' bill of last year, which reduces the license from $500 to $250 and cuts the rate of interest down one-half.

Bill to Make May 1 a Legal Holiday.

ALBANY, Jan. 2.—Assemblyman N. Taylor Phillips of the Ninth New York District will introduce a bill to-morrow making the first day of May of each year a legal holiday to commemorate the victories of the navy of the United States in the Spanish-American war.

PRAISE FOR JUSTICE WERNER.

The Governor Speaks of His Work in Recent Election Cases.

ALBANY, Jan. 2.—Gov. Roosevelt stated to-day that he took especial pleasure in designating Justice William E. Werner as an Associate Justice of the Court of Appeals as a well-earned recognition of the services he rendered as Presiding Justice at the sessions of the Special Grand Jury which indicted violators of the election law in New York City at the late election. The Governor said that it was a very difficult matter to secure convictions in cases of this character. In this instance, with forty indictments and twenty convictions, some of the offenders receiving terms as long as five years, the work of Judge Werner was deserving of the highest commendation.

The Governor further said that he believed that the work of Judge Werner and the Special Grand Jury would do much toward preventing the colonization of voters such as was practiced in the Nineteenth Assembly District, where Assemblyman Mazet was a candidate for re-election.

THE GARDINER CHARGES.

A. F. Cosby of This City Is Named to Aid in the Investigation.

ALBANY, Jan. 2.—Attorney General Davies to-day appointed Capt. Arthur Fortunatus Cosby of New York City to be Deputy Attorney General to assist Deputy Attorney General Coyne in the investigation of the charges brought against Major Asa Bird Gardiner as District Attorney.

Lunacy Commission for Tankard.

ALBANY, Jan. 2.—Dr. Charles L. Dana and Dr. Charles A. G. Steinsieck of New York City were to-day appointed by Gov. Roosevelt Commissioners to make an examination as to the sanity of Squire Tankard, now confined in Auburn Prison under sentence of death. The Commissioners are directed to report in writing their conclusions to the Governor.

Convicted of Violating Game Laws.

ALBANY, Jan. 2.—The State Fish and Game Commission announces the conviction of Edward Roberts of Hamilton County for hounding deer, and of Joseph Kerstatter of Cattaraugus for shooting birds out of season. The former was fined $100.

Cincinnati Broker Fails.

Special to The New York Times.

CINCINNATI, Jan. 2.—Ashbrook, the well-known broker, to-day filed his petition in bankruptcy in the United States Court. His liabilities are given at $20,660, and the assets are $250, the value of some personal possessions. The chief creditors are H. B. Holds & Co., brokers in Wall Street, New York, to whom is due $8,000. Accommodation notes, on which Ashbrook is indorser, amount to $7,500 in the liabilities.

New Haven Gas Company.

Special to The New York Times.

NEW HAVEN, Jan. 2.—At a meeting of the Directors of the New Haven Gas Company to-day it voted to increase the capital stock of the company $1,000,000, making the total capitalization $2,000,000. The new capital will be used for the purpose of improving the plant. The stock is now selling at $87 and the par value is $25. The stockholders hold an option on the new stock at par.

Calls a Buffalo Pastor.

ELIZABETH, N. J., Jan. 2.—The congregation of the Westminster Presbyterian Church met this evening and decided to extend a call to the Rev. Henry E. Mott of the Central Presbyterian Church of Buffalo to take the pastorate of the church, which has been vacant for a year and a half.

FINE SKATING IN BROOKLYN

VAN CORTLANDT AGAIN PACKED

Possibility that the Lakes in Central Park Will Be Ready for the Public To-day.

To all appearances, every man, woman, girl, and boy in Brooklyn who owned a pair of skates and knew how to use them was abroad on the big lake in Prospect Park, Brooklyn, yesterday afternoon and last evening. Red balls conveying the welcome inintelligence that the lake was ready for skaters were hoisted at the several entrances to the park at 3 o'clock, and between that hour and 10 o'clock fully 20,00 skaters enjoyed the long-looked-for sport on the lake.

A number of skaters went to the park in the expectation of playing hockey, but the police allowed no one to go on the lake with a cane or a hockey stick.

No accidents occurred to mar the day's sport. The lake will be open every day for skating as long as the ice remains in proper condition.

There was also skating yesterday on the lake adjoining the reservoir on Ridgewood Heights, which was crowded with skaters from the upper section of the borough all day.

Thousands again enjoyed the splendid skating at Van Cortlandt Park. After the skaters left the park Monday the surface of the lake was scraped and the ice flooded for a couple of inches so that a new surface was formed yesterday morning.

Crowds flocked to the park by train and trolley, and before 10 o'clock the ice was packed and remained so all day. The ice has frozen for nine or ten inches.

The ice on the Central Park lakes was several inches thick yesterday. Secretary Holly of the Park Board said if the cold weather continued the ice might reach by to-day the required five inches in thickness, in which event there would be skating on the lakes.

YACHTING ON THE SHREWSBURY

Number of Ice Boats Launched, and a Prolonged Season of the Sport Looked For.

Special to The New York Times.

RED BANK, N. J., Jan. 2.—The North Shrewsbury River Ice Yacht Club expects to have a prolonged season of boating this Winter, and if present indications count for anything the members will not be disappointed. The present cold snap has coated the river with five inches of ice. The snow yesterday morning was light and did not interfere with any of the ice sports.

A number of the third-class yachts were launched yesterday, and to-day two of the big boats, James B. Weaver's Kittie and F. M. Randall's Bella were put on the ice. Several scrub races were held, but the prize races will not be commenced before Thursday or Friday.

If conditions are satisfactory at that time the opening of the season's races will be commenced with the Commodore's prize contest. After that will come the pennant races, including those for the championship pennants of the North and South Shrewsbury Rivers and New Jersey.

The more important of the latter will be the race for the New Jersey pennant, now held by the North Shrewsbury yacht Georgie, owned by Charles P. Irwin. The challenging boat is the Vixen of the Burlington Ice Yacht Club.

Nothing official has been received here concerning the Hudson River races. Mr. Weaver, who owns the Scud, which is now at Low Point, is awaiting news regarding ice yachting matters up there, and if conditions agreeable to all parties interested shall be made, there is every probability that the Scud will try conclusions with the Hudson River boats during the Winter.

Westchester Ponds Frozen.

SING SING, N. Y., Jan. 2.—The continued cold weather has frozen all the ponds in Westchester County, so that the young folks are having great sport skating. If the same conditions continue, the ice men will begin to make preparations for cutting and housing their crop.

STEPS FOR TELEPHONE UNION.

Interests Opposing Bell Company to Meet This Week.

A meeting of telephone manufacturers and representatives of independent exchanges will be held this week, at which formal steps toward the organization of a concern to be formed of the interests opposed to the Bell Telephone Company will be taken. The meeting will probably be held to-morrow at the Waldorf-Astoria.

Among those interested in the combination of which William J. Latta of Philadelphia is at the head are Charles R. Flint, William H. Gelshenen, Morgan O'Brien, and Martin Maloney.

The meeting is the culmination of the movement begun a year ago to merge the independent telephone manufacturing interests into a combination, which was designed to include the American Electric Telephone, the Kellogg Switchboard Company, the Victor Telephone Manufacturing Company, the Stromberg-Carlson Telephone Manufacturing Company, and a number of other companies being operated independently of the Bell Company.

Mr. Flint declined to say anything last night as to just what is to be done, as he had but recently returned from a trip to South Carolina and did not know just what had been planned.

KENTUCKY LEGISLATURE MEETS.

FRANKFORT, Ky., Jan. 2.—In the House Trimble, for Speaker, received the full fifty-eight Democratic votes and was elected. J. P. Haswell received all of the forty-two Republican votes.

For President pro tem. of the Senate Goebel was elected. The four Democratic Senators who bolted the caucus last night voted for the caucus nominees to-day.

The grounds for the contest to be taken up by the Legislature allege the use of tissue ballots in forty counties, military interference in Jefferson County, unlawful issuance of mandatory injunctions in Louisville, intimidation of Louisville & Nashville Railroad employes, Republican conspiracy with the American Book Company and other corporations and trusts, alleged unlawful injunctions in Knox and Lewis Counties, interference of United States Marshals, and conspiracy to intimidate the Election Commissioners.

J. C. S. BLACKBURN NOMINATED.

FRANKFORT, Ky., Jan. 2.—After four years of retirement ex-Senator Joseph Clay Styles Blackburn was nominated to-night by the joint caucus of the Democratic members of the Legislature as the successor of Senator William Lindsay in the United States Senate.

Blackburn's nomination was moved by Senator Goebel, who said that the longest and bitterest fight ever fought for Senator in this State, which began four years ago, when Deboe defeated Blackburn, was about to reach its just termination. Senator Thomas asked that the roll be called, so that every Democratic member might have an opportunity to go on record for Blackburn. Senators Alexander and Hayes failed to respond to their names, otherwise the vote was unanimous.

ALLEGED BRIBER SURRENDERS.

FRANKFORT, Ky., Jan. 2.—John H. Whallen, for whom a warrant was issued on complaint of Senator S. B. Harrell, that he had attempted to bribe him by offering him $4,500 to vote against Goebel in the Gubernatorial contest, arrived here this afternoon and gave bond in the sum of $10,000. His examining trial is set for 2 o'clock to-morrow, when his attorneys will enter a plea to the jurisdiction of the local courts, claiming that the offense, if there is one, was committed in Louisville.

The Louisville Trust Company officers refused to turn over to the authorities here the safety box in which the money is said to be deposited, and Judge Cantrill issued attachments for them.

At the request of the Franklin County officers, the Louisville police have kept a watch on the box since a late hour last night.

FOR A TEMPLE TO LIBERTY

Robert B. Roosevelt Talks About His Political Life—Rev. Mr. Slicer Also Speaks.

A meeting and dinner of the Architectural League of New York were held last evening at the headquarters of the league, 215 West Fifty-seventh Street. About fifty members and guests were present. Among the guests were Gen. O. O. Howard, Robert B. Roosevelt, the Rev. Merle St. Croix Wright, Clarence Gordon, Prof. Albert S. Bickmore, Col. William C. Church, Everett P. Wheeler, the Rev. Thomas R. Slicer, Capt. Richard Henry Green, and Beverley W. Robinson.

The topic introduced for discussion after the dinner was a suggested "Temple to Liberty," to be erected in this city. The first speaker, after some introductory remarks by the Chairman, R. W. Gibson, President of the league, was H. K. Bush-Brown. He said in part:

"Can we sufficiently impress the masses of humanity with the real and true meaning of the word 'liberty' by the proper juxtaposition of the letters it contains? Must we not have a rallying place, a definite, concrete thing that we can see and touch; a temple of liberty raised in all sincerity and reverence to the ideals of civil life; a place where all may enter with some of the depth of feeling that one has when standing in a great primeval forest—a temple built by the people and for the people's use, that should be also a veritable historical monument and contain the pictures of every great event of our history, and portraits and statues of every great man our country has produced?

"Preach as we may of liberty and union in the churches; write as we may in the newspapers; talk till we are hoarse on the stump, learning and eloquence cannot reach the heart and soul of the people without the adjuncts of architecture, painting, and sculpture to appeal to their senses at the same time."

A sketch of a suggested Temple of Liberty at the junction of Fifth Avenue and Broadway was explained by the architect, Henry F. Hornbostel. The building designed was circular in shape, with four columns surrounding the circle, and rested on a platform shaped like a Maltese cross. Plans for a suggested building in Longacre Square were thrown on a screen and explained by Mr. Bush-Brown.

The next speaker, Col. Church, Chairman of the Citizens' Committee for Perpetuating the Dewey Arch, in the course of his remarks referred to a suggestion that had been made with regard to the permanent arch. It was that the space in the interior of the attic should be utilized to form a large room in which valuable historical relics might be preserved.

The revenue which would result from charging a small fee to those who wished to view these relics might go to pay the wages of a caretaker for the arch. If this were not done, Col. Church said, it might be necessary to create a permanent fund to provide for keeping the arch in good condition.

The Rev. Thomas R. Slicer, in the course of an address which was received with much applause, said the result of the various stages of development in which the population of a great city like New York existed was a sort of tribal condition. This could only be escaped from by a great idea, such as the idea of patriotism, being made manifest to the people and influencing their lives.

For instance, he had been more impressed by the congregation of observers round the Dewey arch than by the parade that passed under it. The arch had become a memorial of a nation's enthusiasm. In conclusion Mr. Slicer asked that, if any such temple of liberty as suggested were ever erected, its meaning should be so all-sufficient as to make not to be possible to mistake it for "an exaggerated bathhouse." It should be capable of stimulating the imagination of the youngest child with an idea of the glory of the land in which he was to live.

Mr. Roosevelt said he could sympathize, with the words of Mr. Slicer about a monument meaning something, because he and the other members of the Holland Society had been for two years trying to get a monument that would do this.

In sheer despair they had been obliged to choose a statue of William the Silent, who wasn't a Dutchman, who was never in New York, and who never had anything to do with New York. When they went to the sculptors the latter said, "Just give us an idea of what you want, and we'll engage to do it." But what they wanted was that the artists should supply the ideas.

Passing on to speak of other matters, Mr. Roosevelt said, in the course of his address: "I have been a politician all my life, and am sorry to say I have at times been a reformer. That is to say, I did not then know what I wanted or what I was trying to do. But I want my friends to place this to my credit, if they can place nothing else—I never had anything to do with the Strong administration." [Laughter.]

Everett P. Wheeler and others also spoke.

New Automobile Ambulance.

Edward Kelly will this week present to St. Vincent's Hospital an auto-ambulance, said to be the first of its kind in this country. It will cost $3,000, and will be driven by electric storage battery. The ambulance is receiving its finishing touches in the shop of Clarence W. Wood, at 219 West Nineteenth Street. No paint is used, but enamel of the most durable kind has been baked on wherever paint is generally used. The interior is leather. It will be equipped with windows front and rear, and can be made as warm and comfortable in cold weather as in the mild seasons. It will make ten miles an hour easily.

The Dewey Theatre Case.

Magistrate Mott yesterday heard the Dewey Theatre case, in which the proprietors are charged with giving a performance on Sunday, in violation of the law, and reserved decision. The Rev. William S. Hubbell of New Jersey was the main witness for the Sabbath Committee, which brought the case. Emanuel Friend, who appeared for the managers of the theatre, said: "It appears, your Honor, the people of New Jersey are more interested in the morals of New York than the New Yorkers themselves."

Trenton Girls Not Long at Large.

TRENTON N. J., Jan. 2.—Two more girls escaped from the State Industrial School for Girls last night. The girls made their escape at midnight and tramped through the snow to Pennington, where they were captured in the morning and brought back to the school.

NOTES OF INSURANCE INTERESTS.

The New York Fire Insurance Exchange will meet to-day.

The Home Insurance Company has reinsured in the inland marine business of the Washington Assurance Company of New York.

George Barley has been appointed suburban special agent of the Phenix Insurance Company of Brooklyn, and J. W. Stephens general adjuster for the company.

Yesterday was the second largest day in the history of the Equitable Life Assurance Society. The company received applications for and issued policies aggregating over $6,000,000.

The Mercer County (N. J.) Committee of the Fire Underwriters' Association of the Middle Department will meet at Trenton next Tuesday to consider the critical situation existing in the local rating compact in that city.

At the annual election of the Citizens' Insurance Company of New York yesterday, the following Directors were chosen to serve during the ensuing year: Amos F. Eno, Edward A. Walton, Edward King, George H. McLean, George F. Baker, William Barbour, H. B. Stokes, Edward H. Schell, W. E. Clark, Harrison B. Gawtry, Joseph Bird, J. Walter Spalding, and Arthur W. Soper.

The insurance on the property of George Hilen at 28 East Fourteenth Street, which was considerably damaged by fire Sunday, was distributed as follows: Sun, $10,000; American of New York, $10,000; Phenix of Brooklyn, $5,000; Commercial Union, $5,000; Continental, $5,000; Hartford, $5,000; Boston, $5,000; Caledonian, $5,000. On use and occupancy, Springfield, $10,000; Westchester, $10,000; Providence-Washington, $4,455. On household furniture, $5,000. On lease, Queen, $8,000. C. R. Young & Co. will adjust the loss.

President E. C. Irvin of the National Board of Fire Underwriters has addressed a letter to the members of the board asking for authority to select a committee of twenty-five members to consider and discuss the present bad condition of the fire insurance business in order to formulate a report for presentation to a meeting of the companies next April, it being understood that the National Board as an organization will not exercise any authority beyond the appointment of the committee.

WANAMAKER'S WANAMAKER'S WANAMAKER'S WANAMAKER'S

Plain Facts About the White Sale

A MILLION DOLLARS' worth of muslin underwear and other white goods are owned by us.

The greater part of this vast stock was accumulated for this January selling.

Muslins and linens are going much higher—wholesalers and makers are charging very much greater prices right now. As stores sell out the lots on hand you will face the full advance.

But present stocks were bargained for long ago—some before advances began; all before they had amounted to much. Any housewife is justified in laying in a year's supply of muslins and linens—and she will make (by saving) a good many times the interest paid by savings banks.

So much of our stocks were secured below even the old low prices that

January Prices Are Lower Than Ever

We believe this month's business will be the best test yet of this store. The reality of its economies, the blunt candor and directness of its statements, are to be contrasted with many pretended bargain sales.

Will you prove the store, once again for all? We are pledged to even better service than ever for this year 1900. But how about our prices? Test them!

We Are Showing "1900" Dresses and Skirts

Daintiest dresses—that hint of peach time rather than snow-drifts. You see we have to start early to create styles. And how quick the appreciation! One of the finest dresses prepared for this exhibit was seen by a customer as the cases were being dressed, Saturday. The rest of you won't see it till next summer. It was bought and sent home. Just such other first choices remain. With maybe two exceptions, each dress differs. Organdie and Point d'Esprit. $22 to $48. One of the Point d'Esprit dresses has bow-knot insertions wrought on the same fabric. Some of the colored dresses are finished with ruffles a shade darker than the body of the dress.

Muslin Underwear

The conditions under which our muslin underwear is produced are as good as those of your own sewing-room—rather better. The workers are well-paid, there is no drudgery—for the machines are driven by steam. The garments are liberal in cut and finish. The cheaper ones cost no more, and some even less than the materials alone would cost you. The finer ones have an amount of work on them that no housewife has time for.

We asked a fashion expert and good judge of goods to freely express an opinion on the garments we have to offer you. The reply was—

"It's ladylike underwear."

"And so cheap that home-sewing is really a foolish waste of time and strength."

Muslin Sheets and Pillow Cases

In the face of prices quoted here there's absolutely no saving in the home-making of sheets and pillow cases. We can't buy—even in the large quantities we always order—as cheaply as we're offering these goods. You will have to pay at least 20 per cent. more when these lots are gone. Besides, the work on these is better than you can usually procure in the home-made—straighter hems, more accurate stitching. It will pay to lay in a store of these 84,000 standard sheets and pillow cases, ready to-day:

PILLOW CASES—Bleached, plain hem.

Among the Household Linens

What if prices have advanced 15 to 25 per cent. abroad? No note is taken of that fact in this selling. You're not made aware of the higher prices yet. In fact, they're even lower than a year ago,—lower, we're told, than those we'll have to pay for the next lots. Some new items are presented to-day, together with several from yesterday's announcement—all well worth while looking into—

Men's Imported White Shirts---$1

In this collection are many fine shirts fully worth $3—are selling to-day at that price; others in the lot are $1.75 values, and none is worth less than $1.50. Yet you may choose to-day among all desirable styles and excellent qualities at one dollar each. No other reason for this than that stocks will not be carried over from one season to another. These are forced out to-day:

All linen, fine linen shirts, open fronts; value $3.
Dress shirts, cuffs attached, open fronts; value $1.75.
Shirts with fine linen bosom, long cloth body, open front and back; value $1.75.
And coat shirts, that are fully worth $1.50.

Not all sizes in every style. But your size is here in one style or another.

Enameled Ware at Half

To-day we start the selling of a great lot of Kitchen Utensils, at half the usual prices. Why? Because the makers will to class them as "seconds." It's hard to find a blemish, but we tell you the pieces are supposed to have imperfections of finish that spoil the beauty of the shaded coating or possibly take the shape of nicks. We guarantee every piece not to leak. For service we count them almost the full equal of "firsts." Certain factory changes called for very absolute clearances of stock and to hurriedly class a utensil as "second" and sell it at half, was the short way out of it all.

Every sensible housewife knows that good enameled ware even at full price is cheaper than the tin because it wears longer. And it is daintier; is safe; is in every way satisfactory.

Just a hint of the stock and prices follows. Selling starts this morning.

NAVAL OFFICERS' REWARDS

The President Seeks Means of Recognizing Services.

CONSULTS WITH CAPTAINS

WASHINGTON, Jan. 2.—The President has again taken up the question of rewarding the naval officers who participated in the destruction of Cervera's fleet off Santiago, and his final conclusions will be embodied shortly in recommendations to Congress, either in the form of a renewal of the advancement of Rear Admiral Sampson and the officers under him by numbers, with perhaps some modifications, this being the scheme which the Senate refused to ratify last Spring, or according to some other method.

The Secretary of the Navy, in his report, recommended as an alternative proposition legislation on the line of the bill introduced last Spring, (Senate Bill No. 5,005,) which provides for three classes of medals—one for conspicuous conduct in war, one for extraordinary heroism, and one for general meritorious service, the first to carry with it a percentage of increase of pay, based upon the rank of the recipient, and calculated to take the place of the increase which would be the result of promotion were that the form of reward given. Either method would contemplate, in addition, the thanks of Congress to the Commander in Chief of the North Atlantic Squadron and the officers and men under his command.

There also has been a suggestion for the creation of the grade of Vice Admiral for the benefit of Rear Admirals Sampson and Schley.

As a result of the Sampson-Schley controversy the reward of all the subordinate officers in the North Atlantic Squadron has been blocked up to this time, and it is the urgent desire of both the President and Secretary Long that justice be done to them, and that they obtain the rewards which they have earned.

Preliminary to a decision upon his course of action the President and Secretary Long to-day had a consultation with eight of the Santiago Captains at the White House. The naval officers present were Chadwick of the New York, Cook of the Brooklyn, Clark of the Oregon, Philip, now Rear Admiral, of the Texas, Evans of the Iowa, Higginson, now Rear Admiral, of the Massachusetts, Folger of the New Orleans, and Lieut. Commander Wainwright of the Gloucester. Rear Admiral Sampson was not present. These commanding officers were especially invited by the President, who desired to hear from their own lips the story of the battle of Santiago, the general movements and difficulties of the campaign, including the cruise of the Flying Squadron in search of Cervera's fleet, and their own ides as to the method of conferring the rewards.

For almost two hours the Captains talked with the President, who manifested keen interest in their personal accounts of the stirring events off the south coast of Cuba. Some of the controverted questions were discussed at length. The concensus of opinion of the naval officers, as developed at the conference, seemed to favor the method of reward recommended by Secretary Long—the conferring of medals which would carry with them a percentage of increase of pay in lieu of advancement by numbers. This would compensate for actual promotion, both by giving increased pay and by giving to the recipients distinction which would mark them for future service.

At the same time in some cases it would work hardship; as, for instance, in the case of Capt. Clark. Despite his heroic service in bringing the Oregon around the Horn in such marvelous style and the gallant service of the Oregon in the Santiago fight, Capt. Clark to-day is two numbers below his position at the opening of the war. This is due to the advancement of the Manila Captains whose promotions were confirmed by the Senate. Capt. Clark, at the conference to-day, however, was willing that Secretary Long's plan should be adopted in order that justice might be done to the others.

The President, shortly after the reconvening of Congress to-morrow, will transmit his recommendations. It is not improbable that in doing so, he will accompany them by a special message calling attention to the grave injustice that has been done to the commander in chief, officers, and men of the North Atlantic Squadron in so long withholding from them the rewards to which their gallant service entitles them.

TO REPORT ON ROBERTS'S CASE.

It Is Believed Majority of Committee Will Favor Expulsion.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 2.—The report of the Committee of the House of Representatives which is investigating the case of Roberts of Utah will be made soon after Congress reassembles, and there is reason to believe the majority will recommend that Roberts be excluded from the House and that he be not permitted under his credentials to exercise any prima facie right of being sworn in. Whether the report will be unanimous is open to doubt, as three of the committee are not counted on as positively favorable to the course indicated, and this may result in the submission of a minority report. The minority view, if submitted, will probably deal with the prima facie right to be sworn in on credentials which are regular and will recommend that Roberts be sworn in and thereafter expelled.

The committee will resume its hearings on Thursday at 11 o'clock. The testimony is closed, however, Chairman Tayler having heard that the remaining witnesses in Utah will not come on. It is expected, therefore, that Thursday will be given to Mr. Roberts for his argument. A vote is likely to follow the latter part of the week, and the Chairman will probably be authorized to draw the report and present it to the House. Mr. Tayler and Mr. McPherson of the committee were in conference to-day, examining law books and precedents, preparatory to drawing up the report.

THE QUAY CASE MAY BE DELAYED.

Likely to be Kept Out of the Way of the Currency Bill.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 2.—Senator Chandler, Chairman of the Senate Committee on Privileges and Elections, said to-day that the case of Matthew S. Quay would probably come up in about ten days. There will be no further hearings on the case before the committee, but it will take some time to prepare and print the reports.

The Republican leaders do not want the Quay case to interfere with the consideration of the Currency bill, which will be taken up at once and pressed to a vote as soon as possible.

Pension and Deficiency Bills.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 2.—It is said that the Pension Appropriation bill and the Urgent Deficiency bill will be reported to the House of Representatives on Friday of this week. The appropriation bills are the first matters of importance to be considered.

JANUARY WEATHER FORECAST.

Frequent Gales Predicted in the North Atlantic Ocean.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 2.—The Chief Naval Hydrographer has issued the following forecast for the North Atlantic Ocean for the month of January:

"Stormy weather along the transatlantic routes, with frequent strong westerly and northwesterly gales. Frequent gales north of the thirty-fifth parallel, extending northward to the fortieth parallel, west of the fiftieth meridian; occasional gales as far south as latitude 25 degrees north. Northers in the Gulf of Mexico. Occasional fog along and to the northward of the transatlantic routes, longitude 47 degrees and 70 degrees west. Limits of the trades moving southward. Ice probable as far south as Cape Race. Recent indications point to an earlier ice season than usual."

Sunday Shaves and Meat Selling.

PATERSON, N. J., Jan. 2.—Recorder Senior, who two weeks ago decided that shaving on Sunday is a necessity, decided to-day that selling meat and provisions on Sunday is not a necessity. Antonia Pezzuti, James Montania, and James Sands, who were called to trial on charges of working as butchers on Sunday, Dec. 3, were each fined $1 and costs.

HEARD ABOUT TOWN.

Occupants of a rather pretentious apartment house on the upper west side of town are facing a curious sort of fate of which they knew nothing when they leased their quarters. Most of them know nothing of it now, for that matter, but there is an anxious look on the face of the janitor whenever there is the least flurry of snow. The building is owned by an architect who himself designed the plans and furnished the by no means small amount of money necessary to the erection of the building. That makes the situation all the more strange. There are the usual furnaces and boilers for heating, for furnishing hot water, and all that sort of thing, and plans were properly arranged for their installation. There are storage rooms for the tenants, and there is even a room in the basement provided for the storage of bicycles. But there are no coalbins. The result is that for this building, which has ten large apartments to heat, there is room for less than a week's coal supply. In case there should come a heavy snowfall, when half the coal supply is exhausted, there are ten families that stand a chance of doing some shivering, unless they abandon their homes and go temporarily to some hotel, whose builder had been thoughtful enough to have a coal cellar that will hold a sufficient amount of coal to carry the house through such a coal famine as we had a year ago, for instance. A man who has the renting of a lot of apartment houses up town says this apartment is but one of several similar buildings that developed a like shortage a year ago, though this seems rather more singular than the others, as the man who forgot to provide the coal cellars in his plans is owner, builder, architect, and occupant. Had he been building for sale only, the omission of such a necessary part of a building's equipment might not have been so strange. That architect is now puzzling his head as to how he will be best able to correct the error next Spring, when he can remodel the cellars of his house.

Two urchins stood at the edge of the lake in Central Park near Seventy-fifth Street, on the west side, on Tuesday afternoon. Each had a pair of skates, and they had been informed by the policeman that the ice was not yet strong enough to bear them, and that it would have to freeze a couple of inches thicker before they would be allowed to try their skates there. Both were well wrapped up, wore ear tabs, and had their hands incased in heavy woolen mittens. But they shivered as they stood watching the frozen surface. Finally tears of disappointment came to the eyes of the smaller lad. The elder made several attempts to cheer the younger, but with little effect. Tears coursed down the cheeks of the smaller, until finally the older said, "Don't you cry, Jimmie; it will be all right to-morrow and we can skate then. Just look over on the ice there, and you can see it freezing so fast that it will be all ready for us in the morning."

A couple of diminutive, faultlessly dressed youngsters who will be missed from the lobbies of the theatres where they have been very much in evidence of late are "Tod" Sloan and "Skeets" Martin. Both have haunted the theatres, particularly those that have a female chorus of any size, ever since their return from England. Both have seemed to miss the lionizing to which they have been subjected at similar places on the other side of the ocean. Even such attention as was paid them when they were factors in the racing game here has been missing, and the youngsters have discovered that whatever their popularity in England they have become "back numbers" here. They are no longer sought out and patted and petted as they had been before they expatriated themselves. This absence of hero worship has been a sorry blow to these lovers of adulation. It is understood that the two jockeys will go to San Francisco for the Winter, where they are sure to be made more of than they have been in New York. The two Reiff boys, now English jockeys also, will be there, and the quartet anticipate for themselves a "social sensation" in the city of the Golden Gate. That, at least, is the statement of one of their number, which one it is almost needless to say to such as are at all familiar with these little men.

They were talking about the scarcity of bluefish at Fulton Market and of the good prices that the small stock of frozen fish of that sort was fetching. "I suppose it would surprise those not in the trade to be told that, if they want the best bluefish to be found in New York on a Thursday or Friday, they can get it on the push-carts on and about Hester Street. Uptown marketmen will frequently refuse to buy bluefish at the price at which we hold them when there is a scarcity down here. This is never the case with the push-cart men from the Yiddish quarter, however. Bluefish they must and will have, and, though, as a rule, those push-cart fellows are the sharpest of buyers, and look for the lowest prices, they do not hestitate to take the blues when marketmen from more fashionable and richer quarters pass them over. People over in that locality look upon the bluefish as the greatest of delicacies, and they will pinch themselves in other directions rather than go without a bit of it at least once a week. As a matter of fact, the demand for this particular kind of fish in Hester Street has more to do with the making of its price than does the demand at the Waldorf and the other fashionable restaurants, where the fish is in good demand the year round. But the big restaurants will take sheepshead or pompano or kingfish or shad as substitutes. There is no substitute for the bluefish on Hester Street." No fresh bluefish are expected in the market until there is a considerable change in weather conditions, and the dealers say that the stock of frozen fish is now smaller than it has been in years.

"You mustn't mourn over the wart," said the mother to her little one, who was bemoaning the appearance of one of the unwelcome visitors on her shapely neck. "A wart is only a dimple turned inside out, and when the wart goes, there will be a pretty dimple in its place."

***

"Have you happened to notice the latest thing in servant girls?" asked the observant man, apropos of nothing in particular. "She comes now in eyeglasses, and is really a very impressive sort of person. A new girl came to our house the other day, and until I heard her speak she impressed me as a sort of cross between a Boston female and a 'co-ed.' Directly she opened her mouth, however, the illusion was dispelled, for she had a brogue on her that was fairly odorous of 'ould Ireland.' A couple of days later my wife called my attention to the fact that the family occupying the adjoining apartment in the same building with us had a servant who also wore eyeglasses and had the air of a student instead of a servant. At breakfast this morning I looked out of the dining room window, and there I saw, with her head sticking out of the window of the flat at the rear, another servant with eyeglasses. This time it was a light-colored mulatto. I reckon there must be an invasion of weak-eyed servants. Perhaps it is only a fad among girls of this class, for they have their peculiar fashions as well as other people, I suppose."

***

"There are two things that have struck me forcibly and favorably this season," said one of the fashionable Broadway confectioners while speaking about the holiday trade. "I sold at least 45 per cent. more confectionery this season than I have ever sold in my experience of now more than a quarter of a century. I have never had to work my shop and my stores so heavily as I did during the month of December, and the demand was for the very best grades of goods done up in the fanciest of packages. New York girls must now be sweeter than they ever were before, if the quantity of candy and sweetmeats they got for presents had anything to do with it. I doubt if there was a man in our business who ever had such a trade as that of the Christmas holidays just passed. I know I had to run my factory night and day, and even then I could not wholly supply the demand with three shifts of men working all the time manufacturing the goods. Expert packers among girls were so scarce that they made better wages than they ever have before, and toward the close they commanded all sorts of fancy wages as a stimulant to keep them at their work, so that orders could be filled."

WARM PRAISE FOR GEN. WOOD.

Representative Cubans Speak Highly of the Attitude of the New Governor General.

HAVANA, Jan. 2.—Gen. Wood had a busy day with the public officials and the members of the conference of representative Cubans, including Gens. Rabi, Lara, Sanguily, and Betancourt and Señor de Castro. The conference will be in session three days. All the Cuban notables who were present at the meeting to-day speak with enthusiasm regarding the frankness with which Gen. Wood developed his plans for the benefit of Cuba. They point out that the Governor General has already begun work along several lines.

Gen. Maso says:

"The new Governor General is a man of wonderful tact and marvelous capacity for work. I confidently believe that he will prove a great blessing to Cuba."

The Patria says:

"Gen. Wood is obviously imbued with the best intentions. Although the council of Cubans convened by him is not an elected body, it nevertheless does represent the wishes of the Cuban people."

The Lucha says:

"The new cabinet contains men whose honest names are guarantees that the moral and material interests of the country are to be conserved."

The President of the Supreme Court, Señor Mendoza, in the throne room of the palace to-day administered the oath of office to the members of the new Cabinet, with the exception of Señor Villalon, the Secretary of Public Works, who is unable to reach here before next Sunday. After the Secretaries were sworn in they visited their respective offices to make themselves acquainted with certain details before meeting again for consultation.

Gen. Wood believes that each department should have power to do a very important work. He will appoint a commission to deal with each subject requiring, in his judgment, special consideration. These commissions will consist of several members, and the duty will be to get the affairs of the island upon a practical working basis of self-government. The most important commissions will deal with finance and the judiciary. The former will arrange a plan of local taxation for all the cities of the island, which will make a majority of them self-supporting, and will leave the customs receipts for important public works, many of which are badly needed.

The commissions will deal with judicial reforms and Cuban laws in connection with the prisons and Cuban lawyers. The American members will probably be Messrs. Rubens, Conant, and Ruble. It will take charge of the reorganization of Cuban criminal jurisprudence, and will change the horrible prison system of the island, although many minor evils in connection with the prisons have already been abated.

The commission will be scarcely less important than the others, and will have its hands full.

America[n] Hogs Die in Cuba.

HAVANA, Jan. 2.—Eight hundred hogs were recently imported to Havana from the United States, but 600 died within three days. Major [Davis] says the animals died of cholera, and recommends that no more hogs be brought from the United States, as he considers that further importations would be dangerous to the health of Havana.

BATTLESHIP TEXAS HERE.

Trip from Havana to Newport News with Bodies of Maine Dead Was Exciting.

The United States battleship Texas, Capt. Charles D. Sigsbee commanding, arrived at the Brooklyn Navy Yard yesterday from Newport News, after having brought from Havana the bodies of the sailors who lost their lives in the destruction of the battleship Maine.

The Texas is to be placed in dry dock to-day to have her bottom cleaned and her machinery repaired. She is also to be thoroughly fumigated. It is expected that the Texas will join Rear Admiral Farquhar's North Atlantic squadron in the West Indies in a few weeks.

The Texas, from all accounts, had a rough time of it on her trip from Havana to Newport News. The heavy metallic coffins containing the bodies of the Maine sailors had been placed on either side of the main deck, and their weight made the vessel somewhat top heavy when she ran into a stiff northester off Hatteras. The vessel, it is said, rolled so badly at times that it was feared that she might "turn turtle." Because of the rolling of the ship, the big guns were secured with extra lashings.

NOT TOSSED BY A BULL.

Facts in Report of Prof. Curtis's Encounter Were Exaggerated.

Under the caption "Charged by a Mad Bull" a dispatch was printed in THE NEW YORK TIMES of Dec. 29, which was an exaggeration of the facts. It was made to appear that Prof. Frederick S. Curtis of Brookfield Centre, Conn., while driving near Danbury with his son, was met by a farmer leading a bull to market. Enraged at the sight of the wagon, the bull was said to have charged the vehicle, throwing Prof. Curtis to the ground, and that the animal then tossed him in the air. Leaving the Professor, the bull, so the story went, charged the wagon again, but in doing so was crowded over an embankment, falling some fifty feet and having its neck broken.

The facts in the case were that the bull charged the wagon and leaped over it, without hurting any one, and inflicting only slight damage to the vehicle. The animal then went quietly along the road.

THE NEW APPELLATE COURT

WOMEN AMONG THE AUDIENCE

With ceremonies appropriate to the importance of the occasion, the magnificent new home of the Appellate Division of the Supreme Court, at Madison Avenue and Twenty-fifth Street, was opened for the administration of justice yesterday afternoon. Greetings and compliments formally exchanged between bench and bar, the expectant eagerness of a large audience, which included several women; the richness of the decoration, and the sense of newness and comfort of the place imparted an air of quasi-festivity to the early proceedings.

Promptly at 1 o'clock the hour set for the opening of the court, the Justices in their silk gowns entered and ascended the bench. They were Presiding Justice Charles H. Van Brunt and Justices Barrett, Rumsey, Patterson, and O'Brien. At the same moment Capt. Ricketts, the crier, opened the court. The members of the bar and the spectators arose as the Justices entered and bowed as they faced them. The Justices bowed in turn and took their seats. Everybody else thereupon sat down.

There was a brief pause, and then Austen G. Fox rose and, addressing the Justices, observed that it was deemed proper that the occasion should not be allowed to pass without an expression of the sentiments of the bar, and that John E. Parsons had been requested to act as their spokesman. Mr. Parsons expressed his appreciation of the high honor conferred upon him in being selected to speak for the bar. He continued:

"Moving into a new house is an event both in public and in private life. It is suitable that an occasion so interesting as this shall receive special commemoration.

"It is the first time the Supreme Court of the State in this its most important division has a house which is suitable, conveniently situated, adapted to its use, and which can be called by its own name. A few years ago the site might have been considered up town. My memory of New York goes back to the time when the city lay below Fourteenth Street. The late Mayor Havemeyer built for his residence a house in Fourteenth Street, west of Ninth Avenue, in preference to Fifth Avenue above Twenty-sixth Street, influenced by uncertainty about what was to be the future of the very part of the city which has been selected for this building.

THE OLD COURT IN THE PARK.

"When, as a student in the office of the late James W. Gerard, I first had occasion to visit the Supreme Court it was established in the old Almshouse building, at the Chambers Street end of the City Hall Park. I remember to have been present for a short time when Ogden Hoffman was summing up the Mason will case to a jury in that building. When the court became transferred to what was called the Brownstone building it was considered that a great advance had been made in its accommodation. A comparison between that building and this shows what progress has been made in taste and architecture in recent years.

"Not one of the places where the sessions of the court have been held had about it a sense of permanence or stability. This building, in which the Appellate Division convenes for the first time to-day, meets every requirement for the proper and convenient discharge of the duties of the court. The importance of the court justifies a building of this character.

"There never was a time when there was more urgent need for municipal economy. The very wealth of the city has led to a scale of expenditure which, if continued, must impair the source from which it comes. None the less must every one sympathize with the wish that this court shall have for the transaction of its business a building like this, which corresponds with the high character of its Judges, the importance of their duties, and the magnitude of the interests with which they have to do.

"There is necessarily a marked correspondence between a court, meaning the Judges who constitute it as a tribunal, with their assistants and accessories, and the building in which their sittings are held. England, in its New Law Courts, has a commodious and imposing building which may easily furnish all requisite accommodation for her Majesty's Judges for centuries to come. A building more interesting in its history of jurisprudence in England is Westminster Hall. Its name is synonymous with that of the courts which had their sessions there. To think of Westminster Hall is to remember Sir Edward Coke, Sir Matthew Hale, Sir John Holt, the great Lord Mansfield, and the other names which have made illustrious the bench and the bar of the mother country.

AMERICAN AND ENGLISH JUDGES.

"I have often visited the English courts. I have talked with many of the Judges. I have read the lives of the English Chief Justices. We have all had frequent occasion to examine the cases, upon their decisions of which rest the fame of these Judges, and which led to the honors which came to them.

"I am satisfied, from observation and from reading, that there never was a time when the work of an English Judge was more arduous, was more conscientiously done, or when his judgments affected more important interests than is the case to-day with the Judges of this honorable court.

"I congratulate the court that there has been provided for it this beautiful and appropriate home. It was due to the court that it should be as imposing, as attractive, and as commodious as it is.

"I am glad to have the opportunity, speaking as I do for the bar, to bear testimony to the untiring industry, the self-sacrificing labor, and the judicial ability with which your Honors discharge your duties. It would be a poor recompense if by furnishing you with unsuitable accommodation your burden was made heavier and the strain upon your health and life made more serious.

"It is neither necessary nor suitable that I should say more about the beauty of the building. I take pleasure in referring to its stability and the thoroughness of its construction. Other buildings have defied the corrosive touch of time and have become memorials for future centuries. Westminster Hall itself dates back to the year 1100. May we not hope that this building will have corresponding permanence, and that for an indefinite future it will testify to the deserved respect which is entertained for the distinguished court over which your Honors preside?"

Mr. Parsons resumed his seat amid a burst of applause.

Presiding Justice Van Brunt nodded to Justice Barrett, who responded on behalf of the bench to the address of the bar. He said:

JUSTICE BARRETT'S SPEECH.

"The last time I had the honor and pleasure of responding to the friendly sentiments of the bar, my selection resulted from the Presiding Justice's modesty. To-day it results from a combination of modesty and generosity. He probably would have you infer, from his own silence upon this occasion and my speech, that his part in the origin of this noble structure was small, while mine was large. This is pure altruism. I helped, it is true, to formulate the bill which conferred the power to construct the edifice. But what was it that gave life to the draughtsman's work? Assuredly it was the character behind the measure, the fact that its advocates could point to the head of the court as a guarantee of efficiency and probity. However, I accept my chief's magnanimity in the spirit in which it is proffered; and I find it easy to do, for I have become accustomed to similar manifestations of good-will.

"Speaking, then, for the court, I thank you, brethren of the bar, for the renewed expressions of confidence and esteem which have fallen from the lips of your distinguished representatives. Your presence in our new and beautiful judicial home is a happy augury of continuous fraternity. It is your professional home as well as ours. I am glad you like it; and I hope you will all be successful—when you are on the right side.

"I cannot permit the occasion to pass without gratefully acknowledging the consideration which has been shown us by the two great political parties to whom we had to look for those essentials—power and money. Without hesitation—without a tithe of partisanship—the dominant party in the State gave us all the power we desired. With equal consideration the dominant party in the city gave us all the money we asked. They vied with each other in their practical expressions of trust and confidence.

EXPENSE WITHIN ESTIMATES.

"It is with profound satisfaction that we are able to point to the result as justifying their confidence. In speaking of the result, I refer not merely to this beautiful and commodious structure itself, but to the more prosaic fact—interesting to the taxpayer—that the entire expense of the work is somewhat less than was originally estimated. And this, I understand, is not so common a feature of public works as to render comment superfluous.

"Our thanks are next especially due to the Commissioners of the Sinking Fund for the happy selection—with our approval—of the eminent architect to whose genius the city is indebted for what I am within the bounds of moderation in styling a monumental structure—a Court House unequalled in our own country and unsurpassed in any other. If I may venture upon a single criticism of his superb work it is that it is, perhaps, too beautiful; and I am filled with misgivings when I consider that we may be expected to live up to it. He surrounded himself with talented coadjutors—sculptors, painters, designers of glass, decorators, experts in every field of art. And all these brilliant men seem to have conspired with the architect to woo our spirits from these sombre robes and waft us back to youthful dreams of fairyland.

"But their appeal to our imagination must not divert our judgment from the element of solidity. The competent and honest builder is also entitled to his meed of praise. He has done his work thoroughly and satisfactorily; fulfilled his contract on time and to the letter; and—would you believe it?—without a bill for extras. I wish him a very happy New Year.

SHARE OF THE JUSTICES.

"And now, what is to be our share in the completed work? Science has contributed its latest and most improved inventions. Art has added the gracious touch of its skilful hand. What, then, remains for us? Not science—for that concerns itself with the utilization of force, while the science of the law rests upon reason. Not art—for art is the hand-maiden of beauty, and neither the law nor its ministers—I feel authorized to say as much on behalf of my brethren—make any pretensions in that direction. No. We must complete and give vitality to the structure upon quite other lines. It is our province—nay, our sacred office—to supply the moral fibre which supports the edifice upon its spiritual side. What we can contribute are qualities, character, devotion to duty, untiring industry, high endeavor, lofty ideals. We have given the people our best work in the past, and have given it without much regard to our physical resources. We pledge ourselves to give it quite as liberally in the future. But you must aid us, brethren. We need your loyal support and sympathetic interest to cheer us upon our sometimes weary way. Let us then work together and in unison steadfastly to promote the administration of justice, and to inspire the people with faith that, so far as fallible mortals can make it, this shall not be merely a majestic Court House of law, but a temple consecrated to Justice."

Prolonged applause followed Justice Barrett's speech. When it had subsided the court immediately proceeded to business and the calling of cases began.

Considerable work still remains to be done before the building is actually completed.

CITY BANK INCREASES STOCK.

Stockholders Authorize Change from $1,000,000 to $10,000,000.

The stockholders of the National City Bank voted yesterday to increase the capital stock of the institution from $1,000,000 to $10,000,000. The meeting was a special one to consider the proposition, which was intended to give the bank more working capital and so broaden its field. About all of the stock was represented at the meeting, either by holders or their proxies. The Rockefellers and other principal stockholders were there in person.

The meeting lasted a good while, and was then followed by the weekly Directors' meeting, after which the following statement of what was done in the former meeting was given out:

"The total number of shares outstanding is 10,000; there were represented in person and proxy 9,287 shares.

"By a vote of 9,247 shares in favor and no shares against it was voted to increase the capital stock from $1,000,000 to $10,000,000.

"By a further vote of 9,247 shares in favor to 31 shares against, (represented by an executor who declared himself personally in favor of the resolutions, but prevented by the terms of his trust from voting therefor,) it was further resolved that of the increased capital stock 85 per cent. be allotted to all the stockholders at par and the remaining 15 per cent. be allotted to Henry Parish as trustee, to be apportioned by him in his discretion among the Directors to be elected Jan. 9 next, they paying therefor $150 per share; of this $150 per share, $50 is to be distributed among the present stockholders, thus reducing their payment to about $91 per share, and the remaining $100 per share being payable to the bank.

"This arrangement is made in the interests of the bank for the purpose of allowing the Directors to be elected at the next annual meeting to acquire a permanent investment in its capital and earnings, and thus becoming permanently identified with the institution."

LEGAL NOTES.

SELECTMEN DIVERTING A TRUST FUND.—The four brothers, David Dudley Field, Stephen J. Field, Cyrus W. Field, and Henry M. Feild, purchased twenty acres of land in 1878 in the central portion of the town of Haddam, Conn., their native place, and had it laid out into parks, called the Field Parks. Ten years later, when the work was completed, the land was deeded to the Haddam Park Association, which was incorporated to receive the property. David Dudley Field by his will, which was admitted to probate about six years ago, gave $5,000 "to my native town of Haddam, Conn., in trust, to be kept invested in bonds and mortgages upon unincumbered productive real estate situated in the State of Connecticut, or in public stocks of the United States or of Connecticut, the income thereof to be applied forever to the care and decoration of the Field Parks." A suit was brought in the Supreme Court in this city by Stephen J. Field and Henry M. Field, executors of David Dudley Field, the complaint stating that the Selectmen of Haddam in July, 1896, accepted a check for $5,000 less the transfer tax, and then decided to use the money to take up certain orders of the town and to pay $150 a year as interest for the care of these parks. Thereupon the attorneys for the Field estate stopped payment of the check, claiming that the town had not accepted the trust, by agreeing to take the money in the way proposed. While the will required the fund to be invested in certain stocks, the Selectmen had simply intended to pay off their own debts with it. It is alleged further that Mr. Field had forgotten having incorporated the association when he gave the money directly to the town of Haddam. After Stephen J. Field's death the action was continued by Henry M. Field, who asked to have a new trustee appointed, and to have the interest of the fund turned over by the new trustee to the Haddam Park Association. Justice Gildersleeve, before whom the case was tried, yesterday granted a decree appointing the Hartford Trust Company as trustee in place of the town, and directing that this trust company pay over the income of the fund regularly to the Haddam Park Association. The town of Haddam did not contest this disposition of the case.

CONTRACT TO CLEAR OUT A CANAL AND CHANNEL.—The Western New York and Pennsylvania Railroad Company, owning the banks and prism of the abandoned Genesee Valley Canal, had removed an aqueduct over Baird's Creek, near Rochester, thus allowing the waters of the canal to discharge into the creek. Subsequently it constructed a spillway through the east bank of the canal to conduct the overflow into the State channel, which ran along the canal and then, diverging northeasterly, discharged into Baird's Creek. Charles Jones, who owned lands lying between the State channel and the canal, slightly north of the spillway, covenanted with the railroad company to clear out and maintain the State channel from the spillway to Baird's, and to maintain a channel in the abandoned canal from the spillway to the creek. Jones released the railroad company from all damages for the flooding of his lands in consideration of his use of the spillway in time of high water. Jones afterward sued Samuel G. De Coursey, receiver of the company, to recover damages from a flood which occurred in August, 1893, overflowing the channel and damaging his farm, because, as he claimed, the company had failed to clear out the State channel and the canal, as it had agreed to do. The Court of Appeals recently affirmed judgment of the Appellate Division of the Fourth Department, which sustained a verdict given in favor of the plaintiff on a verdict. The Court, on the trial, submitted the question as to the construction of the contract to the jury as a question of fact, both parties having given testimony to show what the intention of the parties to the contract was. The Court holds that, as oral evidence had without objection been given relative to the contract, to establish the intent it was not error to submit the question of intent to the jury. In any event, inasmuch as the jury had construed the contract correctly, the submission of the question as to its constructions to the jury was not an error which prejudiced the defendant.

TRANSFER TAX.—Joseph Thorne, some time prior to his death, transferred property worth $100,000 to Eunice E. Huff, and she, in accepting the transfer, agreed to care for Mr. Thorne during his lifetime and supply him with money as he needed it. The Surrogate of Westchester County decided last June that the property was subject to a transfer tax of $5,000. The Appellate Division of the Second Department recently reversed the decree, holding, Justice Hatch giving the opinion, that such an agreement did not, in the absence of affirmative proof that the transferrer reserved to himself the beneficial use and enjoyment of the property during his life, limit the absolute character of the transfer or render it taxable at the transferrer's death, under Sub-division 3 of Section 230 of the tax law, upon the ground that it was not intended to take effect in possession or enjoyment until after the death of the transferrer.

Unequalled Values.

All of these goods are just from our own and other factories—factories in New York and the environment of New York. Their freshness is evident. Examine critically. You'll find no soiled creases, no dinginess; there's a crispness and delicacy about the trimmings that all women with dainty tastes admire. The shapes, sizes and workmanship are excellent in every respect. Nothing has been slighted or skipped that would enhance their grace and goodness.

The one oversbadowing, vital, unchallenged fact we wish you to fully comprehend is that our prices are invariably less than elsewhere. That truth, thoroughly proven, backs our bid for your preference.

Muslin and Cambric Night Gowns, 39c. to $10.42
Muslin and Cambric Corset Covers, 14c. to $3.99
Muslin and Cambric Petticoats, 29c. to $12.99
Muslin and Cambric Drawers, 9c. to $5.24.
Muslin and Cambric Chemises, 29c. to $5.99.
Nainsook Dresses for Infants, 39c. to $9.69.

Men's and Boys' Shirts.

We've levied tribute upon muslin mills, and linen factories, and thread factories, and button factories, and now the culminating time is practically here.

Our completed products, in bulk and excellence, are monuments to the genius of Shirt-making. The bosoms are three-ply linen inserted, not cotton and merely patched on. The bodies are liberal in length and cut with ample fulness. The seams are flat felled. The foregoing minutiæ may be monotonous; they are usually ignored by dealers—but they count in the wear of a Shirt, and for that reason we've watched them closely without increasing the cost to the retail buyer.

28c. for Men's and Boys' Unlaundered Shirts, bodies made of good heavy muslin, three-ply linen "set-in" bosoms, reinforced front and back, full felled seams throughout, continuous facings, collar button protector on back of neckband and tie tape; cut full size in body, well sewed and perfect fitting; sizes up to 18 inches, different sleeve lengths.

38c. for Men's and Boys' Unlaundered Shirts, bodies made of Utica muslin, three-ply 1700 count linen "set-in" bosoms, handworked button holes in neckband, reinforced front and back, full felled seams throughout, continuous facings, collar button protector on back of neckband and tie tape; sizes up to 18 in. Boys' Shirts open back only; Men's, open back and open back and front.

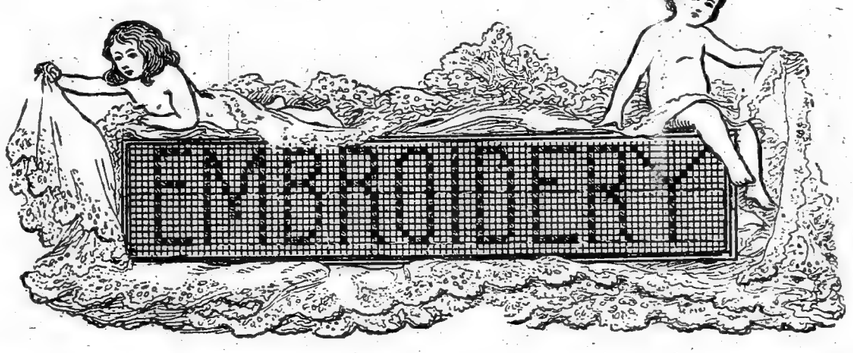
49c. for Men's Laundered White Shirts, bodies of Utica muslin, three-ply fine linen bosoms, handworked buttonholes in neckband, reinforced back and front, full felled seams, continuous facings, collar button protector and tie tape.

44c. for Men's and Boys' Unlaundered Shirt Bodies of Utica Nonpareil or New York Mills muslin, three-ply 1900 count pure linen bosoms, handworked buttonholes in neckband, reinforced back and front, full felled seams throughout, continuous facings, collar button protector on back of neckband and tietape, sizes up to 18 in. Boys' Shirts, open back and closed bosom only; Men's, open-back and open back and front, short and regular bosoms.

68c. for Men's Unlaundered Shirts, made in our own factory of Utica Nonpareil muslin. Three-ply solid linen bosoms, all modern improvements, handworked button and eyelet holes, linen neck and wrist bands, open back and open back and front, sizes up to 18 in. We have manufactured and sold this shirt for over twenty years, always bettering and strengthening it whenever possible; competition has never approached it.

69c. for Men's and Boys' Pajamas, made of heavy flannelette, very fine, soft and fleecy, excellently made and finished throughout, large assortment of prettily striped and plaided designs.

A Sale of 75,000 Yards



The regular Macy prices—they mean a saving of from 20 to 40 per cent.

The materials are principally Swiss, Cambric and Nainsook—made fine, smooth and strong by the choicest staple and best shuttles. There are all-overs, Edgings and Insertings—baby widths, medium widths and flounce widths. Patterns from a fraction of an inch to half a yard with unusually liberal margins. The designs are beautiful, artistic and diversified. Neat, exquisite effects for baby clothes and women's lingerie; dainty styles for trimming waists, and showy, elaborate combinations for flounces and ruffles—scrolls, stars, wheels, medallions, crescents, dots, bar-vines, flowers, leaves and scores of other pretty ideas figure in the embroidery schemes.

THE SENATE AND THE CURRENCY BILL.

The Senate will take up the House Currency bill to-morrow or next day. To speak with entire accuracy it will take up the bill that the Finance Committee has reported as a substitute for the House bill. The general opinion is that the Senate will ultimately accept and pass the bill of its committee. It is believed that it has the support of all the Republicans and of one or two Democrats.

If this forecast is correct, whatever changes are made in either bill to secure a compromise that can pass will be made in the Conference Committee. We have already pointed out the important differences between the two bills and the ground of our opinion that the House bill is in some essential respects much the better. Its superiority lies chiefly in the greater clearness of the declaration of the gold standard and in the broader effect given to this declaration. We do not think that the Senate will be found so rigid in its adherence to its own bill on these points as it will on the provisions its committee has devised with reference to the National banks and the refunding of the bonds. The question that the House will have to meet finally, in all probability, is whether it will yield on these provisions in order to secure its own as to the gold standard.

We cannot regard the general policy of refunding, to be stimulated, as provided in the Senate bill, by a reduction of taxation on banknotes secured by the new and lower rate bonds, as a very wise measure. As a means of obtaining a suitable bank currency, such as the events of the past few years show that we sorely need, it is entirely inadequate. It will merely make it a little easier to continue the present inelastic system somewhat longer, but it will not make any less the inelasticity that is the chief defect of that system. As a purely fiscal measure for the advantage of the Treasury and of the taxpayers who supply the Treasury it has serious faults. It adds a large sum to the payment of interest without any compensating benefit. Nevertheless, we should say emphatically that the concession of this plan or of any other included in the Senate bill that may be necessary to secure the most clear and complete provision for the gold standard and the promptest action in that sense would be justified.

There is nothing that begins to be so important now as this. With this we can look forward with entire confidence to the solution of all minor questions. This is the solid basis that we must have for all our business at home and abroad. Let us once secure it, and we can trust the energy, practical sense, and ingenuity of the American people to complete the superstructure. And the sooner we get it the better. We should complete the work before the National Conventions of the two parties meet. Let them face the accomplished fact and let the opposition take its stand, if it dares do so, for the undoing of that fact. Then we can approach the Presidential campaign, not only with equanimity, but, so far as the currency issue is concerned, with contented indifference.

THE BRITISH VICTORY.

Gen. FRENCH'S engagement with the Boers was evidently not what is technically known as a battle, but only an "affair." In the numbers engaged it would have been ranked as a battle in our own Revolution, but not in modern warfare. And in the number of casualties on the British side it would have been no more than a skirmish in any real war. It is true that the British believe that the Boers lost much more heavily than themselves. That is likely enough, but it is not likely that the Boer losses were very important.

Strategically, the results of the engagement may be much more serious. It is true that the advance of Gens. GATACRE and FRENCH toward the Orange Free State has been the least important part of the British combined movements. It has sometimes seemed more like a feint, meant to draw off as many Boers as possible, than an attack meant to be vigorously followed up. The main theatres of action have all along been on the Natal border, where Gen. BULLER is endeavoring to relieve Ladysmith, and the western border, where Lord METHUEN has been brought to a standstill in the advance for the relief of Kimberley. Nevertheless Gen. FRENCH'S action has put the Boers on the defense, and has apparently much relieved the pressure upon the British centre, if that may be called so which is entirely out of relieving or supporting distance from the right or the left.

The most important result of all, however, is the sentimental. This is the first gleam of success which has fallen upon the British arms since Elandslaagte. As fast as it becomes known it will tend to dispel British belief in the invincibility of the Boers and to encourage the British forces throughout South Africa. In that aspect it is worth many times the few lives it has cost.

THE JUSTIFICATION OF WEALTH.

Mr. ANDREW CARNEGIE'S splendid gift to Cooper Union serves purposes of high utility aside from the primary purpose of the donor to help young men to get an education in the mechanic arts. Mr. CARNEGIE justifies his wealth by this disposition of it. A millionaire who uses his money in a beneficent way is no longer on his defense. Those shallow and Socialistic persons who call wealth culpable are put on their defense by such an act.

Mr. HEWITT states this point with his usual clearness, force, and courage in his comments upon Mr. CARNEGIE'S gift:

> All that the Trustees say in their letter to Mr. CARNEGIE is heartfelt. He has done great good with his wealth. He has cheapened the price of one of his important products, steel, and he has kept on advancing the pay of his employes. His career is a complete refutation of the argument of the demagogue against the wealthy and against trusts. The accumulation of riches is part of a beneficent plan for the betterment of the condition of mankind.

When a man who is a great many times a millionaire, as Mr CARNEGIE is, can demonstrate that he has done good both in the accumulation and in the scattering of his fortune, there is nothing left for the Socialist and the demagogue to say to which sensible persons will pay any attention. Mr. HEWITT is not only a rich man, but he is a philanthropist. His frequent and intelligently bestowed benefactions show him to be a man whose warm heart is filled with the desire to see his less fortunate fellow-mortals made happier and better off. His observation upon Mr. CARNEGIE'S generous act is extremely valuable, for he is both a competent and a sympathetic critic. No doubt his indignation has been roused, as what right-thinking man's has not, by the denunciations of wealth which so many of the modern professional friends of man pour out so volubly upon every occasion. They treat riches as culpable in themselves. A millionaire must, ex vi termini, have been a great public robber in the past, and is a menace to the liberties and the welfare of the people in the present. All the members of this class of economists, now grown numerous as well as noisy, denounce trusts and combinations of capital as wicked and dangerous. From this position it is but a step to the assertion that business is a crime, or is, at least, a semi-criminal practice, which the State should allow to be carried on only under rigid restrictions and constant scrutiny. Many of the new economists take this step.

Not all of them are the merely envious and soured and spiteful who denounce wealth because they have none of it. Not all of them, either, are demagogues trying to stir up class hatreds for their own political profit. There are among them men of education, who have got into Socialistic company by sheer force of wrong thinking while trying to be professional friends of man. A few of this kind, if they have the ability to command the attention of the public, will do more harm by false teaching than many walking delegates who habitually rail at wealth because it helps them to keep up the passions out of which they get their living.

If PETER COOPER had not amassed a great fortune there never would have been a Cooper Union. If there had been no rich man after him the institution would never have been able to do all the good it has done to the children of poor parents in this city by enabling them to earn an honest living. Mr. CARNEGIE is probably doing more than any other man in this country to-day to aid the cause of popular education and promote the diffusion of knowledge among the people. If he had been compelled by law to conduct his steel business in such a manner that it should yield him only $5,000 a year profit he would never have been in a position to give $300,000 to endow the Department of the Mechanic Arts in Cooper Union. If Mr. ABRAM S. HEWITT and Mr. EDWARD COOPER had not been possessed of large wealth they could not have supplemented Mr. CARNEGIE'S gift with benefactions of $100,000 each to make up the half million required to carry to completion the noble design of PETER COOPER.

Great fortunes are a prerequisite to great benefactions. The Drexel Institute in Philadelphia, Pratt Institute in Brooklyn, Cooper Union, Girard College, Leland Stanford University, Vanderbilt University, Clark University at Worcester, the University of Chicago, and Colby University as it exists to-day, would never have been called into being if the accumulation of wealth had been made a penal offense in this country, or if the country had never produced men of sufficient energy and ability to make fortunes running into the millions.

It is only from concentrated capital that institutions of this nature can take their origin. You cannot endow a great university by passing round the hat. You cannot get Congress or the State Legislature to appropriate millions for Cooper Unions and Pratt Institutes.

The new economists are fond of repeating the apothegm of one of their number that no man can have a fortune of a million dollars honestly come by. They hold that it is only by pillage and the daily grinding of the face of the poor that so much money can be gathered in the hands of one man. Gifts like that of Mr. CARNEGIE and comments like that of Mr. HEWITT serve to dispel this mischievous delusion. There are going to be more great fortunes in this country in the next century than we have seen in this century. The United States is a land of great opportunities, and its people know how to make money. Millionaires and multi-millionaires will be common in coming years. The country will be the better for them, better for their wealth, better for the good they will do in giving employment to labor in the industries which produce their fortunes, and better for the charities they will found and the schools and colleges they will endow. It is a matter of importance that the false teaching of the new economists in regard to wealth be refuted and neutralized. The generous and beneficent use of wealth tends to that wholesome end. Riches justify themselves against all accusers when they are wisely employed by their possessor for the raising up of his fellowmen.

MR. GODKIN'S "REMINISCENCES."

The reminiscences of Mr. GODKIN, the late editor of The Evening Post, published in that paper last Saturday, must have been of interest to all intelligent readers. Such readers must hope to have more of them, and that a writer who has known so many noteworthy men and lived through so many noteworthy events and who is, moreover, such a master of expression, may be moved to amplify and particularize the outlines which he has given us of his career and its environment and may give it some more permanent form than that of a page of a daily newspaper.

But necessarily it is to the members of the reminiscent's own guild that these reminiscences particularly appeal. For more than a generation Mr. GODKIN, as an editor of The Evening Post, and at least not less before that as the editor of The Nation, has been in the front rank of the "newspaper men" who took their vocation seriously. That is to say, he has been one of the leaders of those of them who looked upon their calling less as a business than as a profession, and who were even not afraid to regard it as what CARLYLE called the "literature" of which it is part, the modern priesthood. It is not saying too much to say that an American journalist does honor to this retiring journalist almost in the degree in which he respects himself and his work. He cannot help respecting a journalist who has held the standard so high. And this without regard to his own agreement with the censor. Respect for his honesty and admiration for his ability may well have survived disagreement with him on almost every topic upon which he has delivered his opinions, excepting those, like the questions of currency and finance, which were susceptible of a scientific, of a mathematical, demonstration.

Why the influence of such a censor should have been so much more intense than it has been extensive is a question which has puzzled some people and upon which these reminiscences shed some additional light. It is because the censor has never been a believer in democracy, has always regarded himself as an "outsider" and a critic from the outside, in all matters which wrought up the fierce interest of the American people. And in saying this we do not, of course, mean to suggest that the censor's foreign birth and education had anything to do with his attitude. His attitude was of that inveterately temperamental kind which has its origin far behind the "accident of birth." An American of Irish extraction temperamentally antipathetic to The Nation once remarked that, whatever question came up, The Nation "contributed a sneer" to the discussion of it, and, if a sneer would not do, "had nothing further to offer." Of course, this was a wild exaggeration of The Nation's chronic attitude, but the likeness is discernible through the caricature. A journal which takes the attitude thus caricatured may have excellent qualities. Its censorship or censureship may be a highly valuable corrective or restraining influence upon a democracy. But, by the nature of the case, it can never exercise any directing influence or control upon a democracy, can never be its "organ."

The gloomy and pessimistical tone which pervades Mr. GODKIN'S reminiscences, and which finds its most concrete expression in his final jeremiad over the decline of the pulpit and the press, seems to be the outcome and reflex of a disbelief in democracy, in the pretension of the general mass of men to act in public affairs upon their own judgments, enlightened only according to their own perception of their own need for enlightenment. Without doubt there is a good deal of superficial evidence in favor of the view that journalism at least has suffered a decline as an organ of opinion and as an arena of discussion. It has become more of a business and less of a profession than it was when Mr. GODKIN first took part in it. Doubtless he is right in dating the beginnings of this change to the course of The New York Herald while still under the control of its founder. The "editorial page" in some journals of wide circulation has abjured serious discussion altogether and become negligible. But, on the other hand, the superiority of the newspaper of to-day over that of 1860 in the abundance of the information which it gives the reader to enable him to make up his own mind, without the assistance of an editorial guide, philosopher, and friend, is beyond computation. Never has the actual newspaper approached anything like so closely to BURKE'S definition of the ideal newspaper, "the history of the world for a day," as it does now. And, in spite of the superficial phenomena of yellowness which exhaust Mr. GODKIN'S attention to the press of to-day, it is safe to say that the proportion of readers who attend to serious discussions of public affairs has increased far out of proportion to the increase of population. When he contrasts the dignified discussions which he seems to recall with the utterances of his disesteemed contemporaries, he ought to remember that the combined circulations of all the serious journals of half a century ago would not furnish a living circulation for a single newspaper of to-day. And he ought also to remember that the most influential journalist by far of the time to which he looks back as the golden age of American politics was that same HORACE GREELEY of whose unfitness to be a leader of the people he himself bears witness in terms which seem to us much too harsh to be just.

It is not too much to say that in his character of a "praiser of time past" Mr. GODKIN has fulfilled the law that a day comes to every man when he can see no good in the things which have arisen "since his time." Laments that "the service is going to the devil" have been the burden of retired officers since and before Capt. MARRYAT'S novels, and the active officers learn to regard them with indulgence. And we think that an enjoyment of Mr. GODKIN'S reminiscences may be combined with a reasonable expectation that in 1940 some veteran journalist who shall have devoted the interval to deprecations of the way the world is going may publish some reminiscences in which he in turn shall look back, to the wonder of his juniors, upon the year 1900 as the golden age of American politics and journalism.

TOPICS OF THE TIMES.

—New Yorkers know so little about Hoboken that almost any news from there is surprising to them, in one sense, and in another the merest commonplace, however remarkable, intrinsically, it may be. (To try again for the idea deeply concealed in the preceding sentence, nothing that comes from Hoboken is astonishing, because anything might come from there without disturbing any preconceived notions, but on the other hand anything that comes from there is astonishing because nothing at all is expected thence.) So we both are and are not amazed by a letter dated Hoboken and signed by a Hobokener, which appears in The London Saturday Review. The writer of it, one JAMES H. BATES, seems to be a deep student of history and a statesman of highly original genius. He is worried about the future of England and warns its rulers not to repeat in South Africa the mistakes, most unfortunate from a British point of view, by which their predecessors lost control of the North American Continent Mr. BATES does not refer to events before but after the Revolution. Great Britain, he declares, might easily have retained the territory between the Alleghany Mountains and the Mississippi, since we, at the close of the war, had no power to enforce its cession. Secondly, England should have refused to recognize, and so have prevented, our acquisition of Louisiana, with the result, later, of herself getting possession of what is now our Far West, including California and Oregon. Lastly, England should have seized Alaska at the time of the Crimean war instead of waiting until Russia sold it to us. All this, according to the Hoboken authority, would have been done if Great Britain had possessed an Intelligence Department worthy of the name, in either her War or Foreign Office, and from the course, so far, of the Boer war, he suspects that she is still destitute of that useful utensil. And these are the speculations that occupy the minds of our neighbors across the river! But while the Londoners are pondering over Mr. BATES'S epistle, they might as well ask themselves what we would have been doing while they were acquiring all this land.

—Topeka has a New Farmers' Club, and the members thereof occasionally meet to partake of dinners arranged on a scale worthy of Kansas's new prosperity. Some of the speeches delivered at these banquets are eloquent, and all of them are enthusiastic. At the last dinner, Prof. S. J. HUNTER of the State University indulged in really passionate eulogy of alfalfa, which is, it seems, a most admirable herb. The most picturesque passage in the professor's oration was this: "'Up to the eyes in clover' has ever been one of the beatitudes; its superlative is, 'up to the eyes in alfalfa,' a consummation to be obtained in Kansas." Then the professor explained: "Alfalfa," he said, "the civilizer of the plains, has come from old Media, in Asia, to convert the short grass country into waving meadows and vernal fragrance. Independent of the laws of evaporation and condensation, it seeks its water supply far below the surface and with perennial regularity transforms the elements of air, earth, and water into food for man and beast. Of its abundance it unselfishly gives to all alike. Man, the dominant type, desirous of the major share, is forced to combat contending forms. Most aggressive is the voracious grasshopper." There is always something to detract from perfect happiness. Kansas has alfalfa, but, alas! she also has grasshoppers.

NUGGETS.

Makes Breakfast Pleasant.

New Cook—What does your husband like for his breakfast, Ma'am?
Mrs. Growells—Oh, he likes anything we haven't got.—Chicago News.

Small Supply.

"Yes, there are so few butlers who are really competent and yet look less important than her husband."—Detroit Journal.

A Foe to Sunday Closing.

"Mrs. Jones, why don't you lay in your Sunday provisions on Saturday?"
"Because if Mr. Jones comes home hungry late Sunday night he's liable to eat everything in the house."—Chicago Record.

Misplaced Lines.

Nell—Mad at him? Why, he wrote a lovely poem to her.
Belle—Yes, but she never read it. When she saw the title of it she tore the whole thing up in a fit of anger. You see, he called it, "Lines on Mabel's Face."—Philadelphia Catholic Standard and Times.

RHYMES FOR SMALL PEOPLE.

S. E. Kiser in Chicago Times-Herald.

Lordly Man and Lowly Mule.

Man is the greatestowork of God,
The oxen are his slaves;
He lures the lightning from the cloud,
And harnesses the waves.

To him alone a soul is given,
And he receives at birth
The glorious hope of joy in heaven
When he is done with earth.

Man is sublime, the homely mule
Is made of poorer stuff,
But mules quit drinking, as a rule,
When they have had enough.

Man the Godlike, Goat the Mean.

The goat is not regarded as
A noble beast, and it
Has never won distinction for
An undue share of wit.

Compare the homely goat with man:
How Godlike does he stand;
How pitiful the beast becomes
And how absurdly planned!

Yet, while we look upon the goat
As neither fair nor wise,
It doesn't live by taking pills
Instead of exercise.

BUYS A STEAMSHIP LINE.

North German Lloyd Acquires the Holt Line of Singapore.

BERLIN, Jan. 2.—The North German Lloyd Steamship Company has purchased the Holt Line of Singapore, and will combine it with the recently purchased Scottish Oriental Line, under the name of Indo-Chinese Line, flying the North German Lloyd flag.

PRESENTS FOR THE KAISER.

Miners Bring Sausages, Salt, and Hard-Boiled Eggs.

BERLIN, Jan. 2.—A deputation of salt miners from Halle arrived here yesterday, bringing to the Emperor congratulations upon the opening of the new year and a number of gifts. The latter consisted of sausages, pyramids of salt and hard-boiled eggs that had been soaked in salt. The distribution of these gifts among the members of the royal household will require nine days. In the meantime the miners will be fed from the royal kitchen.

OFFER THANKS TO AMERICANS.

Parnell Memorial Committee Acts at a Dublin Meeting.

DUBLIN, Jan. 2.—At a meeting of the Parnell Memorial Committee in this city to-day, Daniel Tallon, Lord Mayor of Dublin, presiding, John E. Redmond announced the result of the recent tour of the Lord Mayor and himself in the United States in the interest of the fund. He said the tour yielded £6,000.

The committee adopted a resolution thanking the people of the United States for their generosity, with particular reference to Richard Croker's donation of £3,000.

It was decided to proceed immediately with the erection of the memorial.

FRENCH CONSPIRATOR GUILTY.

High Court Convicts M. Buffet, but Acquits Four Others.

PARIS, Jan. 2.—The Senate High Court concluded the hearing of the conspiracy cases to-day with counsel's speech in defense of M. Guerin. The Court then retired to deliberate on its judgment.

Later the Court interrupted its deliberations, and announced that it had decided by a vote of 148 to 48 that M. Buffet was guilty, with extenuating circumstances; that it acquitted MM. Godefroy and De Vaux owing to the large minority in their favor, and that it acquitted MM. Sabran and De Ramel.

The Court then adjourned until to-morrow, without arriving at a decision respecting MM. Guerin and Déroulède.

WASHINGTON STATUE IN PARIS.

City Council Has Chosen a Site in the American Quarter.

PARIS, Jan. 2.—The City Council has chosen the site for the equestrian statue of Washington. It is at the intersection of the Avenue d'Lena and the Avenue du Trocadero. It is a fine site, in the midst of the American quarter, with the Place du Trocadero, the Palais du Trocadero, the Arc de Triomphe, and the Champs Elysées close by. The pedestal has also been approved by the Council.

The United States Ambassador, Gen. Horace Porter, has had charge of the matter, and has devoted much time to it. He found that the French people were greatly pleased with the idea of the statue, which is the result of the efforts of patriotic American women, who raised the necessary funds by subscription.

It is desired to unveil the statue July 3 next, the anniversary of Washington's acceptance of his commission as General, which act the statue represents. Daniel C. French is the sculptor of the statue and pedestal.

PORTUGAL'S CORTES OPENS.

Message from the Throne Fails to Mention the Transvaal.

LISBON, Jan. 2.—The Cortes was opened to-day. The message from the throne declared that the cordiality of Portugal's relations with the other powers was shown by the presence in the Tagus of fleets of France, Germany, and Great Britain. The Government, it continued, had caused itself to be represented at the Brussels and The Hague Conferences, the former to check the abuses of alcoholism in South Africa and the latter to reduce the frequency and to minimize the horrors of war, and it was hoped that both humanitarian objects would be achieved.

The remainder of the speech was confined to domestic affairs, and no mention was made of Great Britain or the Transvaal.

LONDON, Jan. 3.—The Lisbon correspondent of The Standard says:

"It is reported here that Great Britain officially acknowledges the correctness of the attitude of Portugal regarding Delagoa Bay. It is also asserted that inquiries instituted by the British Consul at Lorenzo Marques show that since hostilities began nothing contraband has been imported there except barbed wire and breadstuffs."

The Kaiser Entertains Attaches.

BERLIN, Jan. 2.—The foreign Military Attachés lunched with the Emperor yesterday. The Emperor and the Crown Prince at noon received the Japanese Minister, who presented the Order of the Chrysanthemum to the Crown Prince.

PARIS, Jan. 2.—Charles Page Bryan, the United States Minister to Brazil, is here. Gen. Porter has given a dinner in his honor. He leaves for his post in a day or so.

Earthquake Destroys Russian Towns.

ST. PETERSBURG, Jan. 2. — An earthquake yesterday destroyed ten villages in the Achalkalak District of the Government of Tiflis.

Money for Chilean Public Works.

VALPARAISO, Jan. 2.—The Government proposes to devote the surplus revenue—8,000,000 pesos—to public works.

DEATH DUE TO FROZEN PIPES.

Exploding Ranges Kill a Baby and Fatally Injure a Little Girl.

BRIDGETON, N. J., Jan. 2.—The water pipes in the house at 518 North Laurel Street froze last night, and when a fire was lighted in the range this morning there was an explosion. The thirteen months' old child of Thomas Cossaboon, which was playing on the floor at the time of the explosion, was struck by a piece of the range and instantly killed.

This was the second accident of the kind in the city within a few hours. David Bennett and his family moved from Salem yesterday into a house which had been unoccupied for some time. The water pipes were frozen. A fire was started in the range and the water back exploded. Mrs. Bennett was badly burned about the face, neck and arms. A little boy was struck in the eye with a live coal, and the eye destroyed. A little girl was struck by a piece of iron and one side of her face torn off. She cannot recover.

Will of Orleana R. E. Pell.

Special to The New York Times.

NEWPORT, R. I., Jan. 2.—The will of Orleana R. E. Pell, who died in Paris a couple of weeks ago, was offered for probate here to-day. The document and its accompanying codicil were executed in Paris July 26, 1899, and after a few bequests to her servants and attendants, and a bequest of $10,000 for the American Institute in Paris, the residue is divided equally between Charlotte Von Gorrissen, Martha Maria Anderson, Rosalie R. Ford, and Elbert Anderson, the latter being named the executor. The will also bequeaths $2,000 to Sidnie Newman of Newport. Consideration of the petition for probate of the will was continued to Jan. 22.

Alfred Morrison Exonerated.

MOUNT VERNON, N. Y., Jan. 2.—Coroner Banning held an inquest to-day into the death of Mrs. Alfred Morrison, who was shot and killed by her husband on Friday morning. The jury found that the husband was not to blame and that the shot was fired while he was in a somnambulistic state following a dream of burglars standing beside his bed about to kill him and his wife.

Child Gets a $10,000 Verdict.

NEWARK, Jan. 2.—A jury in the Circuit Court to-day brought in a verdict for $10,000 against the New Jersey Street Railway in favor of Ida H. Herlich, three years old, whose right hand was cut off by a trolley car on July 6 last.

FROZE TO SEE ACTOR IRVING.

Women Overcome While Waiting Outside Columbia Theatre, Brooklyn —Messenger Boys' Cold Job.

"I'll tell yer what, fellers. If dat Henry Irving comes ter Brooklyn agin I chucks up me job. I ain't no Eskimo," remarked Patsy Kelly, of the force of boys in a Fulton Street, Brooklyn, messenger office yesterday morning, hugging the steam radiator in the office and looking about him with an air of deep disgust.

His sentiment anent the great English tragedian was heartily and unanimously approved by the "fellers," all of whom were undergoing the process of thawing out.

Sir Henry Irving and Miss Ellen Terry are to appear at the Columbia Theatre in Brooklyn next week. The sale of seats for their engagement at that house began at 8 o'clock yesterday morning. Wise patrons of the drama in Brooklyn, knowing that there would be a rush for the choice seats, planned to get first pick by employing messenger boys to wait for the opening of the Columbia box office and buy their tickets for them.

The first boy appeared in the lobby of the theatre as early as 6 o'clock on Monday night. He was soon followed by another and another, until there were fully thirty of the lads in line. The boys suffered no discomfort while the theatre remained open, but when it was closed for the night and they were forced out of the warm corridor into the street the trying part of their experience began. All night long the boys hung about the doors of the theatre with teeth chattering and faces blue with the cold. They stamped their feet, whistled, sang, wrestled with each other, and resorted to other methods to keep from freezing.

Before daylight yesterday other boys and men began to arrive, and by the time the box office was opened the line of waiting people extended to the doors of the Post Office, half a block up Washington Street. Several women who were in line were overcome by the cold, and had to be taken into the Post Office corridor and thawed out.

MISS POTTER'S END IS NEAR.

The Elocutionist is Dying of Cancer at St. Luke's Hospital.

One of the most cheerful patients in St. Luke's Hospital is Jennie O'Neil Potter, who has been there for several days suffering from cancer of the stomach. Her end, the physicians say, is not far off. She may die at any time, and yet may linger for a couple of months longer. She was well known as an elocutionist, and made a great hit on the stage by reciting, "How Salvator Won."

She received a good many visitors on New Year's Day and recited for them, and said her greatest hope is to be able to appear before the public on the stage once more.

IRVING E. PINOVER RESIGNS.

Leaves the Business of Weber & Fields—London Trip Abandoned.

Irving E. Pinover, who for the last three months has looked after the business end of Weber & Fields's Music Hall, tendered his resignation yesterday to the actor-managers. The Assistant Treasurer of the house will fill the vacancy for the present. It was said Mr. Pinover severed his connection with the theatre for the purpose of returning to newspaper work.

The contemplated trip to London after the season in this city closes next April has been abandoned, owing to the serious condition of theatrical affairs in England, consequent upon the Boer war. The plan is now being mapped out to take the entire stock company for a tour of the largest cities of the United States, embracing a period of two or three months.

The music publishing firm of Weber, Fields & Stromberg, which heretofore controlled and handled all the music produced at the music hall, has been by mutual consent dissolved, the entire business being purchased by Witmark & Sons. This, it is said, was done to enable Weber and Fields to devote more attention to their theatrical enterprise

FELIX SCHWEIGHOFER'S PLAYS.

The Austrian Comedian's New Roles at the Irving Place Theatre.

As old Klapproth, the unsophisticated provincial, in Karl Lauff's "Pension Schoeller" Felix Schweighofer, whose engagement at the Irving Place Theatre continues with unabated success, is particularly well suited. His command of facial expression has not been so strongly illustrated in any other rôle, thus far. The piece is an old-fashioned farce or farcical comedy, but the remarkable talent of Schweighofer makes its performance worth while. Schoeller's boarding house is rich in the matter of eccentricity among its inmates.

A stagestruck youth, a posing retired Major, a literary lady, and other inmates are the kind of folks an innocent old man might well be led to suppose crazy. Albert, Klapproth's nephew, is not disposed to waste much time and labor to gratify that old person's droll whim to see the inside of a lunatic asylum. It occurs to him that it would be just as satisfying to the old man to see Schoeller's pension, if he can be made to believe that a lunatic asylum.

The scheme works well. Klapproth's moods under the influence of the presence of the supposed lunaties form an amusing study. His fearful delight, his timidity, his desire to humor the fancies of all, his constant surprise are depicted by the comedian with flawless art. Later in the play the fun grows wilder, for by a series of misunderstandings the boarders all visit Klapproth at his country home.

"Pension Schoeller" will be acted to-night. To-morrow night the play will be "Gypsfigur," a farce with songs, in which Schweighofer is said to have another thoroughly congenial rôle.

"The Village Postmaster" Souvenirs.

Next Monday night Manager Rosenquest of the Fourteenth Street Theatre will distribute handsome souvenirs in commemoration of the three hundred and fiftieth performance of "The Village Postmaster." The present will consist of figured china tea pots, and will be given to every woman in attendance at that performance.

SUNDAY CONCERTS STOPPED.

Police in Washington Close a Theatre in an Unusual Manner.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 2.—Sunday concerts at one of the local theatres have been stopped by Major Sylvester, the Chief of Police, in an unusual manner. Two performances had been given when a Lieutenant of Police was sent to the manager to request him to close his theatre. There is no law on the subject, so that the manager was asked to obey, not a law, but "public sentiment."

A year ago a similar attempt was made by three theatres, and Major Sylvester sent them the same request that they should "respect public sentiment," and they closed their doors. "We brought public sentiment to bear on the managers last year," said the Major to-day, "and we will do it again this year if they do not close."

Receiver for Theatrical Company.

NEWARK, Jan. 2.—Vice Chancellor Stevens to-day appointed James F. O'Mealie receiver of "The Bowery After Dark" Company, which broke up in Paterson early in November. The receiver was appointed on application of Rocco Defina, who claims his partner, Alfred W. Woods, took the management of the company from him at Port Jervis, N. Y., and that he has not received back any of the money he put into the enterprise. After the company went to pieces Philip Sullivan of New York purchased the rights to the piece, had it remounted, and it is now in Philadelphia.

Mr. Trompen Will Not Appear.

HACKENSACK, N. J., Jan. 2.—Rev. J. N. Trompen, pastor of the Ridgewood Church of the Christian Reformed denomination, has announced he will not answer the summons of the Classis of his church to appear before it on Tuesday next to answer charges. He is accused of insubordination and also with ill-treating a little girl who had been adopted by him.

Arthur Hillebrand Ill.

PRINCETON, N. J., Jan. 2.—Ex-Capt. Arthur Hillebrand, right tackle on the Princeton football eleven, and also Captain of the baseball team of 1899, was taken sick with malarial fever this afternoon. He was removed to McCosh Infirmary.

DANGERS IN THE TRUSTS

PUBLIC CONSCIENCE AT FAULT

Political Ethics, It Is Asserted, Must Be Reformed Before Combinations Are Adequately Controlled.

CHICAGO, Jan. 2.—President Hadley of Yale delivered the chief address at the Chicago University convocation to-day. He said in part:

"An unusually well-informed foreign critic, Mr. Muirhead, has recently published the opinion that the standard of personal morality in America is decidedly higher than in England, that of commercial morality probably a little lower, and that of political morality quite distinctly lower. There is reason to think that in this view he represents the consensus of opinion of well-informed observers on both sides of the Atlantic. The causes for this condition of things demand serious attention. A failure to carry into politics the same kind of ethical standard which is applied in matters of personal morals implies, as a rule, that there is something in a people's political condition to whose understanding it has not fully grown up. Such a failure implies a defect in public judgment rather than in individual character. It indicates that we do not know what virtues must be exercised for the maintenance of organized society as well as we know what virtues are necessary to the harmonious living of individuals among their neighbors.

"Organization in business, in local politics, and in National politics has brought with it an inequality of opportunity and an unfairness of conditions in which the game of life is played. Competitive business is giving place to trusts. The town meeting has been supplanted by the organized municipality. The old federation of States with strong traditions of home rule has become a centralized nation, reaching out beyond its old borders to rule over other nations less civilized than itself.

"Under these circumstances it becomes impossible for the community to rest complacently in that egotistic morality which seemed sufficient for the needs of a generation earlier. We can no longer rely upon competition to protect the consumers against abuse when industry has become so highly organized that all production is centralized in the control of a single body. It is no longer true, in the sense that it was fifty years ago, that each man may be left free to manage his own business and that the community will find its work best done as a consequence of such freedom. Commerce and industry are no longer to be regarded as games where we have nothing to do but to applaud the most skilful player when he wins, and rest in the assurance that his triumph is in line with the best interests of the community as a whole.

"What was once regarded as a game has now become a trust, not merely in the superficial and accidental sense in which the name 'trust' is now applied to all large combinations of capital, but in a profounder sense—as a trust exercised on behalf of the public, which it is in the power of those who control this capital to use well or ill, at their pleasure, without adequate restraint from any quarter. Where competition is thus become a remote contingency, and where law is almost necessarily inadequate unless it be made so strict as to forbid the good no less than the evil in private business enterprise, a new system of ethics is a matter of vital necessity for the American people—a system which shall treat the Director no longer as an individual pursuing private business of his own, and with the right to resent the suggestion that he should conduct it unselfishly, but as having moral responsibility to his stockholders, to his workingmen, and to the consumers that purchase his goods or his services. In the absence of such an ethical advance, no political or legal solution of the so-called trust problem is likely to be effective.

"Until there is a fundamental reform in the code of political ethics which the community imposes upon its members, public trusts will be no more adequately controlled than private ones. Nay, they are likely to be even less adequately controlled, because a public official, holding his power as a tool of a ring, and acknowledging no allegiance to standards higher than those which have made his organization successful is as a rule more firmly intrenched in authority than the representative of any private corporation, however extensive or powerful. Until such a change is made, the socialistic ideal of reforming abuse of private trust by the substitution of public trust will be but the substitution of one set of masters for another.

"If this difficulty is felt in internal affairs, where those who suffer are, at any rate, citizens and men of action, with the power to make their protests heard even where they cannot make their resistance successful, much worse will it be in dealing with colonies and dependencies. Under an imperialistic policy our Government cannot remain what it was. It must grow either worse or better. It cannot remain the same where the struggle for success is as far as possible disassociated from the moral sense of the participants. It will involve either a direct breach of trust or a direct acceptance of trust.

"Our own experience with problems other than these, and the experience of England with this particular problem, both warrant us in the belief that we shall move toward a better solution rather than toward a worse.

"A country which has in so many of its parts passed in a single generation from the lawlessness of frontier life to the extreme of legality may readily in a generation more pass from a state where conceptions of public duty are bounded by legality alone to one where they are inspired by a moral obligation which will carry into the conduct of public affairs the principles and the sentiments which we recognize as private ones."

NEW GRAND JURY SWORN IN.

Charged by Judge McMahon to Give Attention to the Brooklyn Rapid Transit Case.

Judge McMahon, in Part I. of the Court of General Sessions, swore in the January Grand Jury yesterday. Judge McMahon, after following the usual procedure by reading the law for the guidance of the jurors, made reference to the Brooklyn Rapid Transit matter by saying: "I have here a document in the nature of a presentment which was handed down by your predecessors. Give this matter the same careful and conscientious consideration required by law as you would to any other case."

This was the extent of the reference, and after delivering himself of this brief charge he went on to say that there were two hundred and seventeen prisoners in the Tombs, and of that number ninety-eight were held for the action of the Grand Jury, and the remainder were awaiting trial. Judge McMahon said he regarded this as a remarkably small number of cases, and he was of the opinion that the District Attorney's office should be congratulated for its good work of the year.

In speaking of the Brooklyn Rapid Transit affair, Acting District Attorney Unger said: "All I wish to say now is that the matter is in statu quo. The Grand Jurors did not touch upon it to-day or refer to it officially in any way. They had a good deal of routine work to attend to, there being quite an accumulation. Just when the Rapid Transit case will be taken up or what will be done I cannot say. If the jury wishes to take action it will summon those witnesses who appeared before the former jury and possibly others."

The January Grand Jury is as follows: James S. Curry, foreman, merchant, 45 East Tenth Street; J. G. King Duer, retired, 65 East Fifty-third Street; William Junghaus, trimmings, 455 Broadway; F. W. Smith, merchant, 36 West Thirty-sixth Street; Samuel Lowe, real estate, 142 West Twenty-second Street; Hugh D. Auchincloss, merchant, 22 William Street; Edward D. Depew, grocer, 14 Harrison Street; John G. O'Keefe, broker, 66 Broadway; De Forest Grant, President, 287 Fourth Avenue; William F. Harfinger, glass, 36 Murray Street, Edward [illegible]wight, Jr., insurance, 27 William Street; George Reed, painter, 1,464 Third Avenue; Meyer Jonasson, cloaks, 817 Broadway; Dr. Barry, retired, 148 West One Hundred and Twenty-fifth Street; Edward G. Wells, Secretary, 169 Warren Street; John Ve[illegible]y, blue stone, 1,125 First Avenue; Calman [illegible] Haas, quicksilver, 27 William Street; Herman

THE FALL OF O'DONNELL

A FILIPINO LED AMERICANS

Took the Negro Twenty-fifth to the Place Where 125 Prisoners with Munitions Were Captured.

BAMBAN, Luzon Nov. 26.—During a general advance such as the one made from Angeles to Dagupan by our soldiers during the last two weeks, there occur many episodes which can be only briefly chronicled at the time, but are worthy of lasting recognition. After the rush of the advance is over, when the provisions have caught up with the columns and officers have resumed the comforts of army life, then comes the time for the telling of tales.

There was the taking of the town of O'Donnell by Col. Burt's Twenty-fifth Infantry, for instance. The name O'Donnell is a relic of the Irish in Spain; there is an "O'Reilly" Street in Havana, Chile has her warship O'Higgins, and Luzon has her O'Donnell from the same cause. O'Donnell lies some six miles northwest of Bamban and off the railroad from Manila to Dagupan. Our main advance missed O'Donnell on its way north. When an officer of Bell's Thirty-sixth was told of Col. Burt's capture he swore gently and said: "And to think we stopped a day in Capas, and Capas is only three miles from O'Donnell."

The Twenty-fifth was stationed at Bamban, having arrived there after a hard march from down the track. They had missed the excitement, the hurrah of fighting. Like many another regiment supporting those in the lead, they had the hard work without the stimulus of battle, and the Twenty-fifth, like many another regiment, was anxious for a fight.

On Nov. 17 a Filipino came to the outposts of the Twenty-fifth, and, throwing his Captain's shoulder-straps on the ground, said, expressively, "No quiero mas," ("I don't want any more."). He was taken to Col. Burt, well treated, and well fed. It soon was learned that this man had several followers out in the bush, also anxious to surrende , and only awaiting news of their leader's reception at our hands before venturing in themselves.

"Go and fetch them," said Col. Burt; "we'll give each man $15 who turns in a rifle." These men came and their eyes opened with wonder at their good fortune when the Colonel counted out thirty Mexican dollars for each good rifle surrendered. They were fed and the good food warmed the cockles of their hearts.

"Over here about six miles is O'Donnell filled with soldiers and arms," said the Filipino Captain, "and if you want to send men to surprise and capture the town I'll lead them."

This was just what the Twenty-fifth wanted to do; there was no doubt of that. Preparations were made at once, and the evening of the 15th at 7 o'clock Companies B, K, and E, under command of Capt. Leonhaeuser, started for O'Donnell under the guidance of the traitorous Filipino Captain. Lieuts. Martin and Sharen commanded Company B, Company K was commanded by Capt. Bates, and Capt. Albright and Lieut. McNally officered Company E. Lieut. Schenck accompanied the expedition as Battalion Adjutant.

At 4 o'clock in the morning, when the night air was positively cold, the advancing command sighted a Filipino outpost on top of a hill. It was deserted. The next Filipino outpost was at a palm-leaf shack at the edge of the road. Lieut. Bates surrounded the house with a detail of K company. Inside men could be seen moving.

"We have the town surrounded," said Lieut. Bates in Spanish, speaking into a black window two feet from his head. "If you surrender quickly we won't hurt you, if you give an alarm we'll kill you." This was too tempting a proposition even to consider. Out of the dark windows the insurgents passed three rifles and three bags of cartridges, and even a bowl of rice. Then three abject and frightened Tagalogs came out to the Americans with humble protestations of friendship.

At this moment the yellow, barking, howling curs that infest every village on the island, gave the alarm. There was an immediate move toward the town and a few scattered shots were fired as our troops entered, but the bugles played "Cease," and the order was obeyed. We were in the town now, and the colored soldiers showed a grim and great earnestness in their work of gathering in prisoners, rifles and bolos. Strong black arms caught fleeing insurgents upon the streets and hauled them from under beds and beneath houses.

Daylight now came, and with the same earnestness the searching went on. Order appeared out of the confusion of the first rush, and it was seen that the prisoners, as fast as taken, were being rounded up in a roofless church, facing the plaza. One hundred and twenty-five prisoners, including two insurgent Majors and two Lieutenants, were captured, and it was said by these latter that not more than forty managed to escape, so sudden and unexpected was the attack.

At 6 o'clock in the morning the command started to return, bringing with it the prisoners, some 125 rifles and nearly 10,000 rounds of ammunition, loaded on bull carts procured in the town. The soldiers were pleased and elated with the result of the expedition, and on the home march they hauled the bull carts out of mudholes with alacrity and good spirits. The trip back seemed very long, for the sun was getting hot and the men sleepy. That same afternoon Company E of the Twenty-fifth returned to O'Donnell to gather in sixty-nine more rifles, and they destroyed certain insurgent supplies and an outfit for the reloading of rifle cartridges. The hundred and twenty-five prisoners were fed and then released.

The exciting adventure of Sergt. Green of this regiment occurred the same morning, and at a point about three miles south of here. It is necessary to explain that between the towns of Angeles and Bamban, a distance of some eight miles, the insurgents had utterly destroyed the railroad track, carrying the rails into Tarlac and burning the sleepers. The big iron bridge one mile south of Bamban had been wrecked with dynamite. Hence there is a gap in the road, over which all supplies for the army above us must be conveyed in bull carts. The bull cart road and the old railroad bed follow close to each other between Bamban and Mabalacat, a hamlet four miles south of here; in some places the two roads are but 200 yards apart.

On this morning a Spanish prisoner, an emaciated young man held for sixteen months among the insurgents and finally released by the recent American advance, was walking down the bed of the former railroad track between Bamban and Mabalacat in company with two unarmed American soldiers. About three miles south of here these three men were suddenly fired upon by Filipinos ambushed in the jungle lining the path. Sergt. Green was on the wagon road in an escort wagon, and at the time of this attack was in plain sight of the three men under fire. The Spaniards and the two Americans immediately broke across the field toward the escort wagon, followed first by the bullets of the Filipinos and then by the Filipinos themselves. Sergt. Green saw them all coming; so did the driver of the wagon, who started his mules on a run.

"We ain't got no arms, and them devils will be on us with bolos," was the reply.

"You stop them mules and get down in your wagon. I'll do the fighting," answered Green. He stood up with his six-shooter and emptied it twice over the heads of the fugitives and into their pursuers. They stopped and poured two volleys directly at the wagon. Strange to say not a man nor a mule was hit. The three fleeing men had almost gained the road and the wagon when a last shot from the insurgents dropped the Spaniard. He was bundled into the wagon, and then the mules galloped into town.

Ten minutes later a detail from the Mabalacat garrison was on the spot, but the Filipinos had disappeared. The wounded Spaniard is in the hospital at Mabalacat and will die.

FILIPINOS FEAR THE PRIESTS.

Believe that Mgr. Chapelle and Father McKinnon Will Support the Spanish Brotherhoods.

MANILA, Jan. 2.—Archbishop Chapelle, the Papal Delegate to the Philippines, arrived here this morning on the United States transport Sherman, which sailed from San Francisco Dec. 8. He will lodge in the house formerly occupied by Charles Denby, of the Philippine Advisory Commission. This action on the part of Mgr. Chapelle settles the contest between the various friar brotherhoods in Manila who, separately, have been using their influence to obtain the privilege of entertaining the Archbishop and the Rev. Father McKinnon, late of the California Volunteers and now a Regular Army Chaplain, who was also a passenger on the Sherman.

It is said that the friars are striving to get Mgr. Chapelle's ear for the purpose of securing better protection for individual interests.

The arrival of the Papal Delegate directs attention to the question of the Church and the brotherhoods in the Philippines, including the matters of deciding the brotherhoods' claims to real estate and other property, of the Church receiving State support, and of the re-establishment of Spanish curates in native parishes. By the appointment of Mgr. Chapelle as Archbishop Nozaleda's successor the Filipinos and Spaniards feel that steps will be taken in these momentous matters which may bring infinite good or evil to the islands. Consequently, Mgr. Chapelle's actions will be closely watched and fully discussed.

All classes of the brotherhoods are anxious to send representatives to the parishes in the provinces recently occupied by the Americans. This matter will soon be brought to Mgr. Chapelle's attention and his aid in this connection will be solicited. Inasmuch as the question of the expulsion of the brotherhoods from the islands and the freedom of the people from the alleged injustice of some members of the orders has always been declared to be the principal cause of the revolt of the Filipinos against Spain's sovereignty, long-time residents of the islands declare that if the friars are returned to their former parishes, the natives, seeing them return under American administration, will surely attack and kill them and otherwise cause disorder.

Revolutionists have started the rumor that Mgr. Chapelle intends eventually to appoint Father McKinnon as Archbishop of the Philippines. The latter's defense of the brotherhoods in the American newspapers has been translated and circulated among the natives for the purpose, it is declared, of showing that Father McKinnon will support the brotherhoods if he is elected. Such statements as these create uneasiness among the natives, which is increased by recent news from Spain to the effect that Mgr. Chapelle will support the brotherhoods.

The Tagalogs, it is declared, have become more embittered against the Church since Archbishop Nozaleda excommunicated an insurgent priest, and, it is added, the number of Protestant marriages among the natives continually increases.

SMUGGLING ON PANAY ISLAND.

The Navy, by Hard Work, Breaks Up the Traffic in Carrying Provisions to Insurgents.

ILOILO, Panay Island, Philippines, Nov. 13, 1899.—The geographical disposition of islands and coast line near Iloilo, and the proximity of the insurgent forces in need of provisions and contraband of war made the smuggling and blockade running of stores and munitions from Iloilo to the rebels a possible and profitable industry. In Iloilo there were many men ready and anxious to engage in this occupation, for the profits to be derived from the successful landing of a cargo of rice, kerosene, and matches in rebel territory were large, and, until the navy took the matter of its suppression strongly in hand, the attendant risk of capture was not great enough to deter men of an adventurous turn of mind. But now it is not so easy, the Concord and the two gunboats, Paragua and Pampanga have been exercising great vigilance over this smuggling, and the man who can run a cargo to-day is either very skillful or very lucky.

Three miles south of Iloilo, and forming the southern shelter of Iloilo Bay, is the Island of Guimaras. It is twenty-five miles long and about ten miles wide, and thus, skirting the southern shores of Panay, it forms Iloilo Straits, which must be traversed by all vessels coming to this port. Guimaras is not American territory, and this only because we have never attempted to occupy it. The inhabitants of the island, some ten thousand, are Visayans, and they would be very glad of the protection of the United States. As it is, they are subjected to the raids of insurgents from Panay, who come over and levy a tribute of money and food and make use of Guimaras as a way station for provisions between Iloilo and the insurgent territory immediately surrounding it. Running north from Iloilo the coast of Panay is full of bays, indents, and small islands, all of which are helps to the smuggler and serve to render the work of our patrolling gunboats more difficult.

Guimaras Island is full of miniature valleys and mountains, and from the sea its aspect is most pleasing; it was formerly a popular pleasure resort. Parties were made up for Sunday excursions across the harbor to Guimaras and foreign residents had bungalows and Summer homes there. The island produces primarily lime, which is essential in the extracting of sugar from the cane, and secondly it was the truck garden for Iloilo. Milk, fruit, chickens, and vegetables came over each morning to the Iloilo market.

In exchange, Guimaras drew the supply of rice from Iloilo. Guimaras, not being insurgent territory, was a proper market for rice and other provisions to be used by the inhabitants of the island, and then it was but a short step back to Panay, but this time to insurgent territory, where rice was in great demand. The boats used in this traffic are known locally as paroas. A paroa is a narrow canoe with wide bamboo outriggers on each side. It is propelled by a square lateen sail and steered by a rudder dragging over the starboard stern which the boatsman cleverly manipulates with his feet. The boats range in length from twenty to eighty feet, and with a good wind astern can easily distance our coast patrol.

The near-by island of Negros also offered a good excuse for smuggling into Panay. Negros is at peace, and all her coast towns are occupied by American troops; hence merchants in Iloilo have a right to clear schooners with provisions to points on Negros. To reach Negros ships pass out the northern entrance of Iloilo straits, between Guimaras and the mainland. A schooner bent on smuggling and cleared for Negros will coast along Panay watching for a slant of wind to carry her over if no gunboats are in sight the same wind will carry her humming into some bay on Panay, near the insurgent town of Bonate, for instance, where her cargo can be sold at such good profit that the schooner can be beached until these troublous times are over.

Many a coasting steamer is missing from Iloilo port to-day, and the merchant owners naively declare they fear these must be lost. Or, if the schooner finds no chance to get into Panay she will continue on to Negros and unload with all the earmarks of honesty. From certain points on Negros it is only a two hours' sail to Panay, and paroas carried cargo over to the insurgents under cover of darkness. This method was possible because our garrisons on Negros are small; many towns have but a dozen or so American soldiers and it is impossible for these men to watch long reaches of a coast well cut up into bays and inlets.

This, then, was the field for profitable smuggling out of Iloilo back into Panay, and the field was actively occupied when our navy, represented by the Concord and the former Spanish gunboats Pampanga and Paragua, developed an activity and watchfulness that has put a new phase upon the industry. The former Spanish gunboats here mentioned were built for service in these waters and are consequently more useful in their present ocupation than are any vessels of our own. They are both of about 200 tons burden, draw eight feet of water, and can steam nine knots. They are unprotected.

The steam launch Nesan, belonging to the office of the Captain of the Port, is armed with a Hotchkiss revolving cannon, and has been by no means inactive in putting down smuggling and discouraging the transfer of rebel troops to and from Panay. There was a dark night about three weeks ago when the Nesan was coming down the coast inside of Guimaras, showing no lights, and ran right atop of a collection of paroas carrying insurgents from a cove on the Panay side, apparently over to Guimaras, for one of their raids on the inhabitants. The Nesan asked no questions when once assured of the facts; there was the revolving cannon and a swift steam launch quick and sure to her helm; there followed a few moments of swift manoeuvring, the snapping of bamboo outriggers and confusion; the Hotchkiss cannon spun around, and the flashes showed struggling forms in the water. It can safely be said this particular raiding expedition was thoroughly discouraged.

The two gunboats and the Concord ceaselessly patrol the coast; with no lights showing, they slip into bays and behind headlands; they are always on the watch for coasting craft whose papers are not in order or who are approaching parts of the coast where they can have no legitimate business. The work is hard and wearing, but the results have been most satisfactory.

A paroa was bought and freighted out of Iloilo by four natives, who swore allegiance to the United States for the purpose of navigating their craft. She was seen by the Pampanga to be acting suspiciously and ordered to halt. Instead of obeying she turned to fly, with a good wind astern. Then a remarkable shot from the Pampanga's three-pounder settled the matter. At 2,800 yards the shot carried away the paroa's mast, and she was easy prey. When the Pampanga closed in, several bolts of insurgent uniform cloth were found floating behind the canoe, likewise two insurgent uniforms, while two of the crew of four were naked. All four are prisoners now, and it is only a question of a few days before the sailors will tell who the insurgent officers may be.

The people of Guimaras have shown a noticeable aptitude for their new and approaching Americanism. They have organized a local Vigilance Committee for their protection against the raiders from Panay, and have already caught their first man red-handed. They are unfamiliar with lynching, but the culprit has been sentenced to crucifixion.

LAWTON RELIEF FUND GROWS.

Gen. Corbin Has $39,263.35 on Hand, and Says More than Hoped for Has Been Subscribed.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 2.—Gen. Corbin, Chairman of the Lawton Relief Committee, announces that the subscriptions to the Lawton fund received up to noon to-day amount to $39,263.35, which does not include all the subscriptions made to independent agents in various outside cities.

Gen. Corbin also announces that the amount subscribed already exceeds the amount hoped for when the movement was originated, and is amply sufficient for the purposes of the fund, which is to raise the mortgage on the Lawton homestead at Redlands, Cal., and to provide for the education of the children. Owing to the highly gratifying success of the movement, it has been decided to close the subscription lists on the 5th inst.

Secretary Wilson of the Agricultural Department walked into Gen. Corbin's office at the War Department this morning, and handed him $100 in gold for the Lawton fund, remarking that "it was a farmer's contribution to a soldier's widow."

Another contribution to the fund received by Gen. Corbin to-day was a check for $1,000 from J. Pierpont Morgan of New York.

New York Subscriptions.

The Bankers' Trust Company's quota of the Lawton Fund was increased to $5,028.94 yesterday by $301 in new subscriptions, as follows: Thomas H. Hubbard, $100; Mrs. Ellen P. Kellogg, $25; H. A. Butjer & Co., $25; China and Japan Trading Company, $100; cash, $1; cash, $25; M. C. Bouvier, $25.

PHILIPPINE CASUALTIES.

CONFIRM SOLDIERS' COMPLAINTS.

Officers Say Reported Conditions on the Manauense Were Facts.

MANILA, Jan. 2.—Col. Pettit, commanding the Thirty-first Infantry, and Lieut. Col. Hayes, who commanded the three companies of that regiment on board the transport Manauense, which arrived here Nov. 28 and reported terrible experiences at sea, the steamer being classed as unseaworthy, undermanned, and short of provisions, have filed official reports corroborating in every detail the account of the voyage sent out at the time of the arrival of the ship describing the hardships of the soldiers.

The Colonel's report, which is particularly vigorous, recommends a claim against the ship's owners for the uniforms of the whole battalion, which were ruined during the passage.

PHILIPPINES AND THE SENATE.

The Situation in the Islands to be Discussed Soon.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 2.—It is probable that very soon after the Senate reconvenes there will be more or less discussion of the situation in the Philippines, the resolutions of Senators Tillman, Bacon, Morgan, and Hoar being used as a text for the speech-making.

Senator Beveridge of Indiana, who spent several months in Luzon and other islands of the archipelago, and made a special study of conditions there in preparation for consideration of the Philippine question when it came up in Congress, probably will make an elaborate and comprehensive speech soon after the discussion begins. He has had several conferences with the President on the subject.

Plans of Philippine Commissioners.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 2.—President Schurman will not return to the Philippines with the other members of the Philippine Commission when the body goes back to Manila, on account of his duties at Cornell. Admiral Dewey's return is also more than doubtful. Mr. Denby and Prof. Worcester will remain on the commission after it completes the report upon which it is now engaged, and will return to Manila to aid in the establishment of civil government.

Military Attache at Paris Relieved.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 2.—Major Alexander Rodgers of the Sixth Cavalry has at his own request been relieved from duty as military attaché at the United States Embassy at Paris and ordered to join his regiment in this country.

AGAINST SLAVERY IN GUAM.

Capt. Leary Decrees the System Be Abolished Feb. 22—Also Deports All Spanish Priests.

MANILA, Jan. 2.—A naval officer who has arrived here from Guam brings a proclamation issued by Capt. Leary, Naval Governor of that island, decreeing the absolute prohibition and total abolition of slavery or peonage, the order taking effect Feb. 22.

The prologue of the proclamation declares that the Spanish system of peonage, amounting to slavery, is a menace to popular liberty and a violation of the privileges guaranteed by the American Constitution.

Capt. Leary also deported all the Spanish priests, for reasons which he deemed sufficient.

New Torpedo Boat Shows High Speed.

PORTLAND, Ore., Jan. 2.—The torpedo boat Goldsborough was given a second builders' trial by the Wolff & Zwicker Iron Works. The machinery worked perfectly, and during an eight-minute run she steamed at the rate of thirty-two miles per hour against a two-mile current.

Movements of Naval Vessels.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 2.—The Nashville arrived at Manila Saturday, making the fourth of the five vessels recently ordered to Manila at the suggestion of Admiral Dewey.

The transport Logan, from New York Nov. 20, has arrived at Singapore on her way to Manila.

The hospital ship Missouri left Manila Dec. 31 for San Francisco with 286 sick soldiers on board.

The Machias has arrived at Santo Domingo and the Lancaster at San Juan, Puerto Rico.

The Yankton left Port Antonio yesterday for Banes.

WHAT IS DOING IN SOCIETY.

The clear, crisp weather of the last few days has made country life so enjoyable that the many people who went out to the various suburban resorts for over the New Year's Day have not yet returned. There is skating at Tuxedo, and at Meadow Brook there have been some interesting games of hockey on the ice. Mrs. James L. Kernochan, Mrs. Van Rensselaer Kennedy, and Miss May Bird have been among the fashionable women who have taken part in these diversions. In town it has been rather dull. There was little going on yesterday, and the calendar for to-day is hardly better filled. There are a few receptions, and of course the usual meetings of the dancing classes.

The matrimonial event of to-day will be the wedding of Miss Elizabeth Hunt Welling and Mr. Charles Edward Manierre, at Calvary Church at noon. There will be this evening the second meeting of the Wednesday Cotillion, and Mrs. Bayard Dominick and the Misses Dominick will hold a reception at their residence, 22 West Fifty-first Street. The second meeting of the Thursday Evening Club will be held at the residence of Mrs. Henry Draper, and the Bachelors and Spinsters will have their second dance at Delmonico's, and Mrs. Albert B. Boardman will give a luncheon for her daughter, Miss Cecil Boardman.

The Fuerst Bismarck, which sails to-day for Mediterranean ports, has booked among others the Countess de Frankenstein, Mr. and Mrs. J. R. Burnham, Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Churchill, parents of Mrs. Harold Baring; Mr. and Mrs. R. F. Carman, Parker Corning, W. R. Morgan, Mrs. Gouverneur, M. Ogden, Mr. and Mrs. John B. Trevor, Mr. and Mrs. D. S. Ellsworth, Mrs. G. Olyphant Vail, Mrs. J. K. Worthington, Mr. and Mrs. W. D. Parsons, Mr. and Mrs. Duncan Ellsworth, Mr. and Mrs. Edward H. Litchfield, Mr. and Mrs. Townsend Cushman, Mr. and Mrs. Isaac Stern, Mr. and Mrs. George A. Heyl, of Philadelphia, and three daughters; Col. Edward Gebhard, and Mrs. Gebhard, Mr. and Mrs. C. W. Watson, Mr. and Mrs. Edward D. Jones, Mr. and Mrs. Sidney Williams, Miss Catharine Williams, Sidney Stewart Williams, Ramsay Turnbull, Mrs. Van Buren, Miss Edith M. Van Buren, Miss Elizabeth Stevens Mrs. H. A. Wainwright and three daughters, Mrs. W. J. White and children, Mrs. J. K. Worthington, Mr. and Mrs. Walter J. Mitchell and children, and Mrs. L. Z. Leiter. If Mrs. Leiter really sails it will be a surprise to Washington as well as to New York society, and means that she probably goes over to meet her daughters, who have been visiting their sister, Lady Curzon, in India. It is hardly likely that Mrs. Leiter herself will this winter take the long trip to India.

Among those sailing on the Germanic on Saturday, which will be the last White Star sailing until the Oceanic departs on Jan. 24, are Mrs. A. L. Black, Mr. Tracey Dows, Mrs. C. Poer French, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Gray, and Mr. Ritchie. The American Line resumes weekly sailing with the departure of to-day of the New York, and among those booked to sail on her are Theodore C. Bates, W. F. Clark, and Miss Ethel Duncan.

The graduates of St. Paul's School resident in New York and surrounding towns will meet this evening in the building of the Medico-Legal Society, 17 West Forty-third Street. The rector, Dr. Joseph Coit, and a number of the masters will be present, and after the meeting a supper will be enjoyed. The number of prominent men in all lines of business and in the professions in this city, proud of the fact that they are St. Paul boys and who will be present at the reunion this evening, makes it a really notable event.

Mrs. James Wilson Clark of 46 East Fifty-third Street gave a dance at Dodworth's last evening for her daughter, Miss Catharine M. Clark. The rooms were decorated with palms. Mrs. and Miss Clark received the guests. Mrs. Clark's gown was of purple velvet, and she wore diamond ornaments. Miss Clark's costume was of Renaissance lace over pink liberty silk. There was no cotillion. The dance was a large one, there being between 150 and 175 guests present. Among the guests were Miss Van Nest, Miss Josephine Roe, Miss May Low, Miss Alta Rockefeller, the Misses Katherine and Daisy McClure, the Misses Ethel and Edith Gould, Miss Plummer, Miss Anna Mead, Miss Ruth Hoe, Miss Lily Lefferts, Miss Elizabeth Swift, Miss Fanny Foote, Miss Molly Hayes, Miss Beadleston, the Misses Leonie and Anita de Bary, Miss Julia Clark, Miss May Flower, Miss Louise Grace, Miss Margie Hulburt, Miss Nettie McClay, the Misses Sinclair, Miss Grace White, the Misses Van Arden, the Misses Owen, Miss Fox, Miss Helen Sahler, Mr. and Mrs. Rufus Cowing, Mr. and Mrs. Selah B. Strong, Mr. and Mrs. B. Adams Batchelor, and the Messrs. John D. Rockefeller, Jr., Henry Brookfield, the Messrs. Campbell, Crowell, Nathan Flower, James P. Grace, Albert Gallatin, Lawrence Elliman, R. Lefferts, Jr., Heth Lorton, S. F. Plummer, Jr., Joseph Stout, Jr., Fred Woodruff, Arthur Wily, Spotswood Bowers, Seymour Perkins, L. T. Martin, Newton Schafer, Jr., the Messrs. Brokaw, Lawrence Mead, Thomas S. Strong, Jr., Dudley Dupignac, Gano S. Dun, Henry Dalley, Jr., Edward Kirkland, Dr. L. Williams, E. Morgan Brookfield, and T. Savage Clay. The affair ended about midnight and a supper was served by Maresi.

It has been generally announced that Miss Alta Rockefeller is to give a musicale on Thursday evening, Jan. 4. This is a mistake. Miss Rockefeller is a member of a club known as the Thursday Evening Musicale Club, which gives four musicales during the season. The first was held at the Rockefeller residence some weeks ago. The next one, on Jan. 4, will be held at the residence of Mrs. A. A. Coles, 249 West Seventy-second Street. The club in question has about twenty-five members. Some professionals are included in the membership, and the members are privileged to invite guests to the affairs.

Among dinners and theatre parties for young people given last night was that of Mrs. H. O. Havemeyer, the guests and the play having been announced yesterday in this column. On Jan. 5 Mrs. Pierpont Edwards gives a small dinner to the young people, who will afterward go with her to the dance at the Metropolitan Club Annex. The four other patronesses of this dance will also give dinners to other parties of young people, all afterward going in stages to this dance. On Monday, Jan. 8, Mrs. Ledyard Stevens of 53 East Seventy-eighth Street will give a small dinner for her niece, Miss Helen White Stevens. Among the guests will be Miss Molly Lefferts, Dorothy Edwards, Chloise Hatch, Oscar E. Stevens, Goelet Schroeder, Louis De Koven, and Reginald S. Willets, Jr.

The second Junior Cotillion was danced last evening at Sherry's. There was a large attendance of members and a number of guests. Mrs. Alexander Van Nest and Mrs. Henry F. Osborn assisted Mrs. Arthur M. Dodge and Mrs. Anson Phelps Stokes in receiving. The cotillion was led by Mr. Phoenix Ingraham, who danced with Miss Crocker. Among the matrons present last night who are subscribers to these dances were Mrs. Lloyd S. Bryce, Mrs. Ernest R. Adee, Mrs. George C. Clark, Mrs. Bayard Dominick, Mrs. John H. Iselin, Mrs. Henry P. Loomis, Mrs. Edward H. Ripley, Mrs. George Bird, Mrs. John M. Bowers, Mrs. Henry B. Barnes, Mrs. Prescott Hall Butler, Mrs. Henry De Coppet, Mrs. Frederic Gallatin, Mrs. Anson W. Hard, Mrs. J. W. Miller, Mrs. B. Aymar Sands, Mrs. Philip Sands, Mrs. George R. Schieffelin, Mrs. Louis C. Tiffany, and Mrs. Alexander T. Van Nest. The cotillion began shortly after 9 and ended soon after midnight. The dancers were mostly of the younger element, and among them were Miss Julia and Miss Edith Clark, Miss Clare Bryce, Miss Metcalf, the Misses Dominick, Miss Anne Sands, Miss Van Nest, Miss Bowers, the Misses De Coppet, de Peyster, and Delafield, Miss May Gallatin, the Misses Higginson, Miss Cecil Boardman, Miss May Gurnee, Miss Atterbury, Miss Anna Dodge, Miss Josephine Williams, Miss Mildred Stokes, Miss Mary Wagstaff, Miss Amy G. Olyphant, Miss Mary Moran, and the Messrs. Higginson, Marshall and Murray Dodge, Anson W. Hard, Jr., Harry Batcheler, and Sands.

Mrs. Albert Barnes Boardman of 40 West Fifty-third Street will give a luncheon to-day for her daughter, Miss Cecil Boardman. The guests will be the Misses Evelyn Parsons, Mary Crimmins, Elsie Ladd, Jean Brown, Katherine McClure, Hilda Tiffany, Emily Trowbridge, Mildred C. Dix, and Emily Grugan. Miss Caterini Fachiri and Miss Lottie Miller, the latter a débutante of last season, and the former who is to make her début next season, were the only girls present not débutantes of the present season.

Mrs. Whitelaw Reid has sent out cards for a reception in honor of Miss Crocker of California for Saturday afternoon, Jan. 6. The following week she will give a cotillion for Miss Crocker, as already announced.

Miss Callender and Miss De Forest gave last evening in their apartment in the Tiffany Building, 27 East Seventy-second Street, the first of a series of informal musicales which are to take the place this season of the two large musical entertainments at which these hostesses have entertained for some seasons past New York society in general. There were present last evening some 150 men and women, for the most part intimate friends of Miss Callender and Miss De Forest, and some very excellent music was enjoyed. Miss MacDougall, the soprano, and M. Galgoco, the baritone, sang, and Mr. David Mannes rendered some selections on the violin. After the music a buffet supper was served. Among the guests last evening were Mr. and Mrs. George B. De Forest, Mr. and Mrs. William Callender, Mr. and Mrs. F. E. Webb, Mr. and Mrs. H. Emmet, Mr. and Mrs. Hillhouse, Mrs. Henry Clews, Dr. Holbrooke Curtis and Mrs. Curtis, Miss Breese, Miss De Barril, and Miss Whitney.

The sad though not unexpected news from Davos that Lady Alice Montagu is dying, which was cabled yesterday, is also confirmed by a letter from the same place bearing date Dec. 20. At that time Lady Alice Montagu was hovering between life and death. Lady Lister Kaye and Miss Emily Yznaga had arrived at the Hotel Belvidere to be with the Duchess of Manchester, and Mr. Fernando Yznaga was expected. At the Palace Hotel had arrived Mr. and Mrs. Adrian Iselin, Jr., and the Misses Iselin. Mrs. Adrian Iselin, Jr., passed a part of last Winter at Colorado Springs. The Iselins have engaged rooms for the season at St. Moritz. Richard Peters has also taken rooms at the Palace for the season, and Mrs. George Law is expected later. Christmas Day—from a later letter—was celebrated at St. Moritz by a Christmas tree and a ball at the Kulm. The St. Moritz Bandy Club has been reorganized, and bandy is one of the most popular games of the season. The weather has been very severe, and the snows have been heavy. Other American visitors in the Engadine are Misses Grace Howard Potter, Miss B. Howard Potter, Mrs. J. W. Payne, and Miss Payne at the Kulm; Mrs. Livingston Cutting at the Hotel Suisse, and Miss Gladys Whiting at the Palace. At Davos are Mr. and Mrs. Worthington, his sister, Mrs. Cooper Hewitt; Mr. Winthrop Rutherfurd, and the Baron and Baroness von Hugel. Col. Astor and Mrs. Astor are expected shortly. At Innsbruck, at the Hotel Tyrol, are the following registered from New York: Mr. and Mrs. Horton and Miss Edith Horton, and Miss Quackinbush.

It is still a bit dull along the Riviera. There are not many English or American visitors. Mr. and Mrs. Georges de Montgomery, who are so well known to the transatlantic visitor, have returned to their villa at Cap-Martin and have opened the season by a series of Thursday luncheons. Mrs. Alfred Roosevelt is registered at Nice and again at Mentone. Mr. James Gordon Bennett and Mr. W. R. Hearst are at Monte Carlo, where the name of Mr. Gordon Paddock also appears. Mr. de Stuers was likewise a visitor at Monte Carlo, just before the Christmas holidays. The Nice newspapers announced with authority that Mr. and Mrs. William K. Vanderbilt, Jr., have leased an apartment there for the entire season, and that they will make their headquarters there while taking different excursions by land and sea. At Cannes the Golf Club was recently opened with a dinner, at which the Grand Duke Michael of Russia presided. Among recent American arrivals registered at Bordighera Dec. 24 were Miss Cammell, the Misses Leavitt, Mr. and Mrs. L. E. Clark, Miss M. A. Post, Mr. and Mrs. Henry White of the American Embassy in London, Mrs. F. Thompson, and Mr. and Mrs. Spencer and family. At San Remo were Miss R. A. Polhemus, and Mrs. William Pratt of Boston, and at Ajaccio Mr. David Kimball.

A DAY'S WEDDINGS.

Smith—Barnum.

Special to The New York Times.

NORWALK, Conn., Jan. 2.—Miss Eva Barnum, daughter of Mrs. Emma J. Barnum, and Warren P. Smith, Jr., of South Norwalk and New York City, were married this afternoon at the residence of the bride, in Trinity Place. Only the immediate relatives were in attendance. The Rev. Frederick W. Norris, rector of Trinity Church, performed the ceremony. The bride was attired in a traveling gown of brown, trimmed with point lace.

Poe—Cromwell.

FROSTBURG, Md., Jan. 2.—Miss Laura Lee Cromwell, daughter of Dr. Benjamin Cromwell of this place, was married this evening to S. Johnson Poe of Baltimore. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Alexander Haverstick, in St. John's Episcopal Church, which was handsomely decorated for the occasion. Miss Josephine Parrott was maid of honor, and the bridesmaids were Miss Susan Cromwell, the bride's sister; Miss Anne Poe, sister of the groom, and Miss Sarah Burrell. The ushers were Nelson Poe, Jr., Lewis Cromwell, Hunter Boyd of Cumberland, and Baker Clotworthy of Baltimore. Henry Garfield of Baltimore was best man, and with the groom met the bride at the door of the chancel. The bride was gowned in white satin and point lace, with a tulle veil with a coronet of orange blossoms. Mr. Poe is the son of John P. Poe of Baltimore, and is associated with his father in the practice of law in that city. He is the eldest of six sons, all of whom have distinguished themselves at football at Princeton.

DEATH LIST OF A DAY.

Charles MacRae.

Charles MacRae, who died on Saturday at Seabreeze, Fla., and whose funeral took place yesterday morning at the Church of the Intercession, Broadway and One Hundred and Fifty-eighth Street, was one of the oldest and best known real estate brokers in the city.

Mr. MacRae had been in the real estate business all his life with the exception of a brief period following the panic of 1873, and numbered among his clients some of the wealthiest men who have dealt in Manhattan realty. His specialty was property in Fifth Avenue and those adjacent streets which make up the Fifth Avenue section. He purchased the site for the residence of the late Cornelius Vanderbilt, Fifth Avenue, Fifty-seventh to Fifty-eighth Street, and represented John D. Rockefeller when the latter bought the ground for his house in Fifty-fourth Street near Fifth Avenue. At one time and another Mr. MacRae also acted as broker for Collis P. Huntington, the late Robert Bonner, and the Havemeyers. Through him William C. Whitney bought his country seat, Whe

FATHER MALONE IS BURIED

Irrespective of Creed, Thousands Attend the Funeral Services.

Aged Rector of Sts. Peter and Paul's at Rest in Calvary—His Casket Wrapped in the National Colors.

Father Malone was buried yesterday in Calvary Cemetery after one of the most impressive funeral ceremonies ever held in the Williamsburg section of Brooklyn. Clergy and laity of every creed and nationality went to the Church of Sts. Peter and Paul to pay the last tribute of respect to a man who more than any other had endeared himself to the community. That Father Malone was beloved was demonstrated by the thousands of mourners who gathered, the inside of the church being packed, and beside a large crowd outside was unable to gain admittance.

Father Malone's body was robed in purple vestments and reposed in a black casket, the head of which was elevated so that the face of the dead was visible in every part of the church. The epistle side of the church had been reserved for the immediate relatives and friends of the family, as well as the household servants, while the pews to the left of the centre aisle were occupied by many nuns and prominent city, county, and State officials, as well as clergy outside the Roman Catholic faith. Admission to the church was only by card.

Fully 150 Catholic priests took part in the chanting of the offices for the dead, which preceded the requiem mass. When the service began there were present in the body of the church a distinguished array of mourners. Among these were Lieut. Gov. Timothy L. Woodruff, Col. George Curtis Treadwell, Gov. Roosevelt's personal representative; Seth Low, P. T. Sexton, and W. H. Watson, Regents of the State University; the Rev. T. De Witt Talmage, ex-Mayors Charles A. Schieren, David A. Boody, and Frederick W. Wurster, the Rev. Dr. James N. Darlington, rector of Christ Episcopal Church; the Rev. Dr. John D. Wells, pastor of the South Third Street Presbyterian Church; the Rev. Joseph Silverman, of the Temple Beth-Elohim; the Rev. Sydney Herbert Cox, pastor of the Lexington Avenue Congregational Church; [illegible] Samuel M. Haskins, rector of St. Mark's Episcopal Church; Mrs. Theodore A. [illegible]ers, Mrs. James D. Leary, ex-Postmaster Andrew T. Sullivan, Moses May, William H. Maxwell, ex-Fire Commissioner Bernard Gallagher, and Borough President Grout.

There were so many floral pieces that it was not possible to place them beside the body. Half an hour was occupied in the service of the office for the dead, and then the mass was begun with the Very Rev. William Byrne, Vicar General of Boston, a cousin of Father Malone, celebrant; the Rev. Henry Gallagher of St. Michael's Church, deacon, and the Rev. Hugh Ward of St. Malachi's Church, sub-deacon. Bishop McDonnell occupied the throne in the chancel. The Rev. Edward McCarthy of St. Augustine's Church delivered the eulogy. Among other things, he said: "This glorious old priest of God lies there lifeless at the foot of the altar at which he ministered for over fifty years. Day by day and month by month until the months and days rolled up into that almost unexampled number of years, he had been doing God's work among the people. Like a blessed candle resting in its candlestick, he has illumined those about him. God shielded it from blasts, and permitted it to continue in its shining until it had burned down into its socket, and then finally the flickering flame went out.

"Nearly sixty years ago Father Malone came to this section of our great city, then a comparatively small place known as Williamsburg. He came here the pioneer priest of this locality. He came across the East River bearing in his hands the commission given him by the great immortal John Hughes, Archbishop of New York, to plant the seeds of truth here. And he faced the difficulties unflinchingly.

"Now, my dear friends, in God's dictionary there is no such word as chance. Pioneers are providential men. The Apostles were pioneers of Christianity. They who framed and adopted and vitalized the Constitution of our great country were providential men. And so he whose requiem has been sung to-day was no exception to this rule. He set about hewing down the forest of bigotry that grew here. He set about to dig the plow of his knowledge into the stubborn soil of unbelief, and he laboriously sowed the seeds of God's doctrine and by his self-denial he wearily waded for the coming of the harvest. And the harvest came. He met here an evil, narrow-minded, and vicious anti-Catholicism. They who were the followers of this sentiment were called "Know-Nothings," and the title was appropriate—eminently so. They knew nothing about the Church whose representative he was. They knew nothing of her salutary doctrine. They knew nothing of her mass; they knew nothing of the means she resorts to to benefit the masses. They did not know that her only object of existence is to fulfill the angel message, 'the echoes of which are now ringing in our ears, 'Glory to God in the highest, and peace on earth to men of good-will.'"

At the grave a large crowd was present, including many priests. Here the Rev. Thomas McLaughlin, the Rev. Father Bennett, and the Rev. Dr. Burtsell officiated. The casket, entwined in the American colors, was buried beside Father Malone's brother, Dr. Edward Malone, who died ten years ago.

APPEALS FROM RABBI'S DECISION

Abraham Drusin Will Take His Business Troubles to the Courts.

"I still have more faith in the rabbis' decision than in the courts, and if my brothers will only swear in the Orthodox fashion before the rabbis that they have not wronged me, I'll be satisfied." That was what Abraham Drusin of the firm of Drusin Brothers, cloak manufacturers, at 269 Canal Street, said to his lawyer, M. Strassman, after concluding to appeal from a rabbi's decision to the Supreme Court in a dispute with his brothers, Aaron and Harris Drusin.

Aaron, said Mr. Strassman, had in the first instance sued Abraham and Harris in the Supreme Court for a dissolution of the copartnership and the appointment of a receiver. When the papers were served the brothers came together and agreed to submit their differences to a board of arbitrators. The board was to consist of two rabbis and three laymen, and the brothers were all to take oath in the Orthodox Jewish fashion as to the amount of money each one put into the business, &c.

The rabbis who were elected on the board of arbitration, said Mr. Strassman, were Chief Rabbi Salomon E. Jaffe of Brooklyn and Rabbi Widrowich of Manhattan. The laymen were Messrs. Weinstein, Hanlon, and Shapiro. In Russia members of the Jewish religion have been allowed to have their differences settled before their rabbis, but as this custom does not prevail here the brothers each deposited with the rabbis $500 in cash and $1,000 in notes as security that they would accept the decision of the board. Before any session of the board was held the laymen withdrew, saying they thought the rabbis could settle the matter.

Then, continued Mr. Strassman, Harris and Aaron Drusin came to an understanding between themselves to shut out Abraham, and refused to appear before the rabbis. Abraham went before the board and obtained a decision in his favor that he should receive his money and interest. But before the money was paid, Mr. Strassman said, the rabbis themselves had a dispute over the decision.

Continuing, Mr. Strassman said the money and notes which had been deposited by Aaron and Harris Drusin were returned to them, and that the $500 which had been deposited by Abraham was divided between Aaron and Harris. So Abraham decided to appeal to the courts.

CALLS ON MAYOR HOOS AGAIN.

Cannon Tries to Take Possession of the Office and Lands in a Cell.

Rufus Cannon, the colored man who proclaimed himself Mayor of Jersey City on Monday, returned to the City Hall yesterday and attempted to take possession of the Mayor's office. Mayor Hoos tried to get him out by telling him he must first go before the City Clerk and take the oath of office.

"It is not necessary," said Cannon, waving the Mayor aside. "I was not elected to this office. A higher power sent me here, and I do not have to be sworn in like an ordinary Mayor. But you needn't worry. I'll make you my private secretary. I'm going to make a few changes for a beginning. Just sent for School Superintendent Snyder. I want the public schools opened today. This custom of including 'ladies' day' in the Christmas and New Year's holidays is all wrong."

Cannon was placed under arrest and arraigned before Police Justice Nevin, who committed him to the county jail to await examination as to his sanity.

INTERNAL REVENUE DEPOSITS.

Treasurer Roberts Says Every Application Has Been Accepted—List of Banks Participating.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 2.—Ellis H. Roberts, Treasurer of the United States, announces that the distribution of the Internal Revenue collections is going on according to the original plan, and probably will be completed as to the first group of additional depository banks in eight days. He says:

"Every application for a share of these deposits has been accepted and no restriction has been set on the amount of bonds placed as security by any applicant. When the depository bank was already the recipient of Internal Revenue collections, it has been permitted to retain the deposits up to the amount of its pledged bonds. In cases where the rate of exchange rendered transfers to New York a burden the funds have been assigned to banks in the same city or in neighboring localities. With these exceptions the Internal Revenue collections have been concentrated in the National City Bank of New York for convenience of distribution.

"Every day these collections have been distributed in installments of $50,000 to the several depository banks in the ratio of their bonds to the amount pledged. By this process the smaller banks first received their quota, and funds remained in the National City Bank only as the distribution went forward.

"The second group of depository banks is now taking form, and will be treated in all respects in the same way, and will begin to receive moneys soon after Jan. 10."

The first group completed is as follows, with names and locations of the banks and the amount of bonds pledged by each:

CONSOLIDATION OF LIBRARIES.

Officials of Several Institutions Discussing How It Can Be Effected.

The consolidation of all the public libraries in Manhattan is being considered by the officials of the different circulating libraries. The scheme has the approval of the Trustees of the New York Free Circulating Library and of the Aguilar Free Library, the two largest of their kind in the city, and also of the Trustees of many of the smaller libraries. Of the reference libraries, the New York Public Library is in accord with the scheme, and if a union is not made with the other reference libraries it is possible that the circulating libraries will be consolidated with the New York Public Library alone.

The desire for consolidation is the outcome of the growth of the circulating libraries. The New York Free Circulating Library, by far the largest in the city, which was founded twenty years ago, has increased its circulation from 400,000 books during its first year to over 1,500,000 during the past year. The result has been that the library was obliged to call for public aid, which it received in the shape of donations from the city. Last year this sum amounted to $62,000. The year before it reached $82,000.

The direct benefits of consolidation would, it is pointed out, be very numerous. The presence of two libraries in the same neighborhood would be done away with at once. The labor of cataloguing would be largely minimized, especially in view of the fact that a different system is at present in use in nearly each library. Another important result which is recognized by the Trustees is the saving which could be effected if all the libraries were under one head.

J. Frederic Kernochan, President of the New York Free Circulating Library, in speaking of the matter yesterday, said:

"Consolidation is bound to come, sooner or later. All the Trustees of our library are in favor of it. The confusion and clashing which now exist will increase rather than decrease if nothing is done."

This view, Mr. Kernochan said, was shared by officers of other libraries he had talked with.

"While nothing has yet been done," he added, "we are discussing the matter among ourselves. The theory of consolidation is well enough, but it is going to be a difficult thing to carry it into effect. As soon as some definite plan is suggested we will go ahead."

MERRIMENT BEST OF SAUCES.

Miss Parloa Deprecates Hurried Eating and Silence at Meals.

"People are too self-conscious about what they eat," said Miss Maria Parloa at the meeting of the Household Economic Association yesterday.

"People who are always studying themselves never will be well. If we hold our sides after each mouthful and wait to see how that digests before we take another, where will we be?"

Prof. Hubert W. Hart, a scientific food specialist of London, who was one of two men present, approved this observation with a loud "Hear! Hear!"

The talk for the day was upon food for the nerves and brain, and Miss Parloa proceeded to show that good food, from a hygienic standpoint, would be conducive to sound nerves and brains also.

"Our trouble with nerves and indigestion comes as much from our manner of life and social conditions as from badly cooked food, though there is altogether too much of that," she continued. "Hurried eating and silence at the table are two of our failings. I believe in a great deal of utter nonsense at the table. Laugh and grow fat, they say; laugh and you will have a good digestion.

"One of the important things about food and nourishment is exercise and bathing. A mixed diet is necessary for perfect physical condition. Common sense and thought must be used in the selection of food. I believe in simply prepared food. Broiled fish and meats are best, roasted next, and after that the boiled."

Prof. Hart also addressed the meeting.

Loan and Improvement Company.

At a special meeting of the New York Loan and Improvement Company held yesterday at 71 Broadway it was voted to reduce the capital stock of that corporation from $2,189,800 to $1,970,900. Among the Directors in the company are Charles T. Burney, H. F. Dimock, John J. McCook, and H. B. Cocheu.

CHICAGO CANAL IS OPENED

ENTIRE WORK COST $33,000,000

Will Accommodate a Flow of 300,000 Cubic Feet of Water a Minute—Seven Years in Construction.

CHICAGO, Jan. 2.—Water was turned into the $33,000,000 drainage canal and began to flow toward Lockport this morning, where it will fall into the Desplaines River, and thence through the Illinois and Mississippi Rivers to the Gulf of Mexico. What is termed by the canal engineers the collateral channel has been for some time completed from the Chicago River in the southwestern part of the city to within fifteen feet of the main channel. The fifteen-foot wall of earth with two sluice gates behind it has been all that has kept the Chicago River and Lake Michigan out of the canal.

Monday night a steam dredge began to cut away this wall of earth, and a few minutes before 9 o'clock to-day the water in the collateral channel was against the sluice gates and only a few inches of timber remained. When the water began to back up against the sluice gates the timbers were knocked away and the first water from the Chicago River ran into the canal. The engineers of the sanitary district have cut a channel to carry 300,000 cubic feet of water a minute, but to-day the water was allowed to flow into the canal at the rate of only 50,000 cubic feet a minute.

The effect of turning 300,000 cubic feet of water a minute into the empty canal would be like the opening of a reservoir, and would tear away every bridge over the canal and wreck the controlling works at Lockport. Therefore the water will be turned in gradually. Probably a week will elapse before the canal is full of water and is carrying away the sewage that now flows into the Chicago River.

An occasion that might have been made one of the most memorable in the eventful history of Chicago was suffered to pass by unimproved because the Trustees of the Sanitary District were intent only on their great aim—the opening of the canal. Aside from the Trustees and the engineers of the board, there were less than a dozen spectators present.

The first work in this great enterprise was begun on "Shovel Day," Sept. 3, 1892, on the rock cut below Lemont, on the line between Cook and Will Counties, so that a little over seven years have been consumed in the entire work, involving an outlay of about $33,000,000. Over 80 per cent. of the entire work was done during the so-called panic period, and owing to this fact the entire cost of construction was reduced about $8,000,000. Indeed, the Board of Trustees and its engineers are unanimous in the belief that the work could not be duplicated under existing prices for both labor and material for less than $40,000,000.

The canal is of the minimum depth of 22 feet. The rock sections are constructed of a width of 160 feet at the bottom. All of the rock sections and five of the earth sections have now a capacity for a flow of 600,000 cubic feet of water per minute, so that when the population of the City of Chicago increases to 3,000,000 people the sections will still be adequate for all demands, consequently the only work then remaining to be done to fulfill the requirements of law and the necessities of the increasing population will be the mere work of shoveling and dredging to deepen and widen eight miles of the earth sections to conform to the rock sections.

The plan of the canal has been a great development, and many men can justly lay claim to having played a prominent part in this public work. The Hering Commission under Mayor Harrison the First, made definite recommendations for the disposal of Chicago's sewage by this method. Later on, a joint commission was appointed by the General Assembly of Illinois to sit between sessions and formulate a bill for discussion by the Thirty-first General Assembly. This commission in January, 1889, presented to the General Assembly at Springfield a bill drawn under its direction by John P. Wilson of Chicago which became the ground work for the present sanitary district act. After a protracted fight the General Assembly finally enacted a law full of compromises and concessions. The sanitary district was organized according to the requirements of law, by an affirmative vote of the people within the district in November, 1890, and it comprises within its area 182 square miles. The sanitary district comprises twenty-four square miles in Cicero and Lyons, which are not within the city of Chicago, but which latter, on the other hand, comprises fifty square miles in Hyde Park, Lake, Evanston, and Jefferson, which are not within the sanitary district. Consequently, while the city of Chicago contains 188 square miles and the sanitary district 182 square miles, there is really within the combined area of the two ninety-four square miles in which there is no community of interest as affecting the two municipalities.

The district has already issued $13,990,000 of bonds, all payable in currency, $8,000,000 being 5 per cent. bonds, $5,600,000 being 4½ per cent. bonds, and $390,000 being 3½ per cent. bonds, running from one to twenty years, except the 5½ per cent. bonds, which run for twenty years from their issue. The others, one-twentieth of the issue must be paid off and retired each year, and $3,200,000 have already been retired, leaving $10,790,000 now outstanding. Additional bonds to the amount of $430,000 will be retired Jan. 1, 1900. These bonds have been sold at an average premium of about 1 1-10 per cent. The taxes afford a revenue sufficient to pay the interest on these bonds, to pay off and retire one-twentieth of the issue each year, and leave a surplus to apply upon the current obligations of the district incurred for construction.

The first year after the law was passed was consumed in attempts to agree upon a plan and a route for the canal. Dec. 8, 1891, definite plans were adopted, so that in September following contracts were let and the first work of excavating was actually begun. Within four years 75 per cent. of the actual construction of the canal was done. In November, 1895, the following Board of Trustees was elected: William Boldenweck, Joseph C. Braden, Zina R. Carter, Bernard A. Eckhart, Alexander J. Jones, Thomas Kelly, James P. Mallette, Thomas A. Smyth, and Frank Wenter.

This board completed the work, and under its direction the gates were opened to-day.

Retail Clothing Trade Change.

Bierman, Heidelberg & Co., who have been identified with the wholesale and retail clothing business for over fifty years, have retired from the retail branch. The stock of clothing, furnishing goods, hats and shoes of the retail store, Broadway and Chambers Street, has been sold to the Frank L. Taylor Clothing Company. The wholesale business will be continued by several members of the old firm, including Mr. Heidelberg, under the name of Heidelberg, Wolff & Co., Mr. Wolff succeeding I. Bierman, who retires on account of advancing years, and who will hereafter devote all his time to his many charitable works, he being the director and leading spirit of several prominent charity organizations. Frank L. Taylor, who has organized the new company, has just retired from the Continental Clothing Company of Boston. J. B. Holz, long identified as manager of the old company, will be Vice President, and, with Mr. Taylor as President, will be active in the management of the new firm.

Bigger Water Plant for Jersey City.

The Jersey City Street and Water Board yesterday decided to notify P. H. Flynn, who holds the contract for the new water supply, to make the capacity of the plant 70,000,000 gallons daily instead of 50,000,000 gallons. This will make no difference in the cost of water so long as it is delivered by the company, but should the city decide to purchase the plant outright on completion, which it may do under its option, the upset price will be increased from $7,595,000 to $8,745,000.

Pays Off $80,000 of Jersey City's Debt.

The Jersey City Board of Finance yesterday paid off $80,000 of the city's debt and refunded $255,000 worth of bonds varying from 4 to 7 per cent. at the uniform rate of 3½ per cent. The refunded bonds were bought by the Commissioners of the Sinking Fund.

Prisoner Cuts Throat with a Plate.

Michael Kelly, thirty-eight years old, of 276 Oakland Avenue, Jersey City, was arrested on Dec. 29 as a disorderly person. As he could not pay a fine he was committed to the City Prison. He broke the plate on which his dinner was served yesterday, and with the sharp edge of one of the pieces he cut his throat. He died while being removed to the City Hospital.

AUTOMOBILE STAGE TRIED.

Electric Omnibus Makes Its First Appearance on Fifth Avenue—Trial Trip Satisfactory.

No one would have predicted several years ago, when the Fifth Avenue Stage Company and the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals were having so much trouble, that some day or other, and in all likelihood before the end of the century, horseless vehicles would take the places of the antiquated stages then running on Fifth Avenue. But the horseless era in the history of Fifth Avenue started yesterday, and within the year it is likely that automobiles will have completely taken the place of the old Fifth Avenue stages.

At present the stages care for a heavy traffic during shopping hours, and the animals used to haul the 'buses are fairly representative of the genus equine, but the Fifth Avenue Coach Company, which operates the line, is seeking cheaper motive power, as well as more stylish vehicles, and the proposition was made by a Hartford concern to use automobiles. The proposition was taken to kindly by the management, and yesterday, for the first time, a trial trip of an automobile over the line was made. The trip was not a regular one for passengers, although some of the patrons along the line seemed to think it was. It was for the benefit of the officers of the company and their guests, a body of newspaper men, and it was a successful one from all standpoints. The vehicle was the largest suitable for the purpose that could be obtained at present, and it will be run daily with the horse stages for probably a month, in order that its advantages or disadvantages for transportation purposes may be thoroughly tested.

The proper size for an automobile 'bus, the power necessary to operate it, the capacity of the batteries, and the average speed when taking up and letting down passengers will all be determined upon through the test vehicle, and when the test is completed the company will, if it deems the automobile more suitable for Fifth Avenue traffic, order a sufficient number built.

The trip yesterday was a novel one to those who made it. Manager Howard Scribner and two of his guests occupied the outside seat, while eight others sought more comfortable quarters within. On down grades the 'bus ran freely, even under the motorman's brake, and on up grades its speed slackened perceptibly. Pedestrians along the line looked at the 'bus curiously, and at Forty-fourth Street a pair of horses, attached to a fashionable brougham, shied to one side as it approached. A young woman at Fortieth Street did not consider the 'bus anything extraordinary, for she stepped out briskly and hailed the motorman as she would have done ordinarily to the stage driver, and then looked embarrassed when the vehicle did not pull up.

The new 'bus made the trip from the stage barn to the terminus, on Washington Square South, and return in one hour, which is a gain of about forty minutes over the schedule time of the horse stages.

AUTO-PERMIT FOR A WOMAN.

Miss Florence E. Woods Can Now Drive Her Knockabout in the Park.

One of the happiest young women in New York this New Year season is Miss Florence E. Woods. She established the record yesterday of being the first member of her sex to obtain a permit to operate an automobile in Central Park. Miss Woods is seventeen years of age and the daughter of Clinton E. Woods, general manager of the Woods Auto-Vehicle Company of Chicago, where her home is. She is, however, spending the Winter with relatives at 182 West Eightieth Street, and is attending school in this city.

For a fortnight past she has been seen in the uptown streets and up and down Fifth Avenue operating a smart little electric knockabout built for two. Generally she was alone, but sometimes a girl companion accompanied her. It occurred to her that there was no just cause or impediment why she should not drive her horseless carriage in Central Park, and about ten days ago she wrote to President Clausen of the Park Board for a permit. She received the answer that no permits were being given out, but toward the end of last week came another letter requesting her to call at the Arsenal with her carriage. She went there Saturday, and Secretary Willis Holly of the Park Board accompanied her for a ride around the Park. She proved to his satisfaction that she was a very expert operator. Mr. Holly so reported, with the result that the permit was issued to her yesterday.

"An automobile is the easiest thing in the world to handle," said Miss Woods last evening, "and I am astonished that women seem so timid. Any girl could operate one as easily as she could drive a pony. You ought to have seen the sensation there was among the coachmen when I first appeared alone in my little knockabout on Fifth Avenue. They all looked at me with astonishment, and some, it seemed to me, with displeasure. They made all sorts of remarks and followed my evolutions with great interest. Of course I'm very proud to be the first woman to get a permit to ride an automobile in the Park, and I shall avail myself of it the first fine morning."

BROOKLYN CITY COURT MUDDLE.

Clerk Wieman Refuses to Give Court Records to Justice Lynch.

When Justice William P. Lynch arrived yesterday at the Third District Municipal Court, in Brooklyn, over which he presides, he found ex-State Senator Julius A. Wieman, ex-Justice Schnitzspan's appointee as Chief Clerk of the court, already there, and also John W. Carpenter, Justice Lynch's own selection as Chief Clerk of the court.

When the Justice stepped out of his private room to the bench Wieman followed him.

"I am now ready, as Chief Clerk," said Wieman, "to obey any orders you may give me."

Justice Lynch replied that he did not recognize him as the Chief Clerk, and told Wieman that he would have to step from behind the rail. A demand was then made upon Wieman for the combination of the safe, which contains all the court documents, and which had been given to him by the retiring Justice, but, on the advice of his counsel, he refused to disclose it. He also declined to give up the keys to the Chief Clerk's desk. Wieman then went to the Chief Clerk's room, where he remained all day alone.

But for Assistant Clerk Arthur Higgins, who had some papers that were not under lock and key, which he turned over to the Justice, the latter would have had nothing to do all day.

In speaking of the tangle Wieman said yesterday that the rulings in the case of the appointment by Justice Goldfogle in Manhattan of Thomas Fitzpatrick as Clerk and Charles H. Sheils as Assistant Clerk, and of Abraham Lamb by Justice Martin, just before his term expired, would prevail in his case.

CLAIMS AGAINST GLEASON.

Creditors Will Fight His Petition in Bankruptcy.

Claims to the amount of $55,900.25 were filed yesterday against Patrick J. Gleason, ex-Mayor of Long Island City. They were filed with Charles A. Wadey, referee in bankruptcy in Long Island City, Mr. Gleason having asked to be allowed to take advantage of the bankruptcy law.

The creditors have determined to fight the application. They propose to examine Mr. Gleason closely as to his resources, and what he did with the money they claim must have been his. A pool was made to pay the stenographic costs, and $250 has been raised for the preliminary work.

THE GIFTS TO COOPER UNION.

Trustees Meet, but Mr. Hewitt Has Nothing More to Say.

The Trustees of the Cooper Union held a meeting last night at Cooper Union. Abram S. Hewitt said that the meeting was purely a formal one, and that there was no further statement to make in connection with the endowments of Andrew Carnegie, ex-Mayor Cooper, and himself.

When reference was made to the $200,000 which he and his brother-in-law, Mr. Cooper, give, he shrugged his shoulders and said that there was nothing more to say about it than had been already published.

STUDENTS IN "THE MAGISTRATE"

Dartmouth and Columbia Boys to Perform at Carnegie Lyceum.

The Dartmouth College Dramatic Club and the Columbia University Glee Club will give a joint performance at Carnegie Lyceum on Friday evening. The Dartmouth Club will present Pinero's comedy, "The Magistrate," while the Columbia Glee Club will sing before and after each act. This is the first time that the Dartmouth Club has made an appearance in New York.

It is hoped that the friends and Alumni of the two colleges will make a special endeavor to be present. Tickets may be obtained from George A. Green, 268 South Third Street, Brooklyn, and Harold H. Gibson, 153 Fifth Avenue, Manhattan.

MOODY MEMORIAL FUND.

Increased Endowment Needed for the Evangelist's Institutions.

The management of the Northfield schools has issued a statement for circulation in connection with the appeal for the Moody Endowment Memorial Fund to carry on the work begun and brought to so extensive a scope by Dwight L. Moody. The work of the Northfield Seminary and Training School for Young Women and the Mount Hermon School for Young Men, at Northfield, and the Bible Institute, at Chicago, is described. It is necessary to raise the endowment fund to a figure which will insure an income of $125,000.

As has before been said, the income was largely raised by the personal efforts of Mr. Moody during his life. The appeal expresses the hope that the friends of Mr. Moody throughout the world will contribute toward raising the present limited endowment to $3,000,000. Such an endowment would be a monument to his memory, it is stated, such as he would himself have desired. Those wishing to contribute are asked to notify his son, W. R. Moody, at East Northfield, Mass.

PASTOR GOES TO WASHINGTON.

The Rev. John Van Schaick, Dr. Eaton's Assistant, Accepts a Call.

The Rev. John Van Schaick, Jr., assistant pastor of the Church of the Divine Paternity at Central Park West and Seventy-sixth Street, has accepted a call to the pastorate of the Church of 'Our Father, the only Universalist Church in Washington, D. C. The call was extended Dec. 21, but it was not until yesterday that Mr. Van Schaick telegraphed his acceptance.

Mr. Van Schaick is a son of ex-Senator John Van Schaick of Cobleskill, and was graduated from Union College in the class of '94. Second Lieut. Louis J. Van Schaick of the Fourth Infantry, now in active service in the Philippines, is his brother.

Mr. Van Schaick was Professor of History in a college at Emporia, Kan., when a year and a half ago he was called as assistant pastor of the Church of the Divine Paternity. His relations with the pastor, Dr. Charles H. Eaton, have been very pleasant and he leaves his present office only because of the broader field of usefulness now opened up for him. He leaves this week for Washington, and will preach his first sermon in his new charge next Sunday.

THE REV. J. C. AGER RESIGNS.

Will Remain as Associate Pastor of New Jerusalem Church, Brooklyn.

The Rev. John Curtis Ager, pastor of the Swedenborgian Church of the New Jerusalem, at Clark Street and Monroe Place, Brooklyn, has resigned as active pastor and his resignation has been accepted. Mr. Ager has for a long time been engaged in the work of translation for the American Swedenborg Printing and Publishing Society, and he retires from the active pastorate of the church that he may devote more time to his work as a translator. His health is somewhat impaired, and this is said to be another reason for his retirement. He will continue, however, as associate pastor of the church.

Mr. Ager closed a pastorate of thirty-five years in Brooklyn on Sunday night. On Monday night he was presented with a testimonial and a handsomely framed set of resolutions which had been adopted by the society. The resolutions express the regret of his people at his retirement, their esteem for him, and appreciation of his labors in behalf of the church.

A committee is now at work with a view to submitting a name to the society for nomination as pastor. Until that office is filled Mr. Ager, as associate pastor, will perform all the essential functions of the pastoral office.

FOUND DEAD IN BED.

Virgilio de Escoriaza Passed Away Suddenly at the Rockingham.

Virgilio de Escoriaza, and old-time sugar merchant of this city, but long retired from active business, was found dead in bed at the Rockingham, 1,748 Broadway, yesterday morning. He occupied a single room on the ground floor, but took his meals with the family of his son-in-law, B. Souto, an exporter, who occupy an apartment directly overhead. When he did not appear for breakfast Mr. Souto went down stairs and found him dead.

He called in Dr. T. M. Ludlow Chrystie, whose office is in the building, but the physician could only say that the old man had been dead several hours, probably since midnight. Dr. Chrystie thought death was due to old age, but said a kidney complaint might have been a contributing cause. Mr. Escoriaza, however, had never called upon a physician for professional services in his life. As he had not received medical attendance during the twenty-four hours preceding his death, the Coroners' office was notified, as the law requires, and an inquest will be held.

Mr. Escoriaza was born in Puerto Rico seventy-three years ago. He came from an old Spanish family, once prominent on that island, but all the members of it left there long before the Spanish-American war, the majority of them returning to Madrid. Mr. Escoriaza, after receiving his education in the City of San Juan, left Puerto Rico when seventeen years old and went to Philadelphia. He lived there but a short time, when he came to this city, where he spent the greater part of his life.

He was a member of the firm of Gimbernat & Escoriaza, which went out of business through financial difficulties about twenty years ago, and though a full settlement was afterward effected, Mr. Escoriaza never again returned to a regular mercantile life, although of late years he had been a familiar figure around the Consolidated Exchange, where he traded in a limited way through brokers. He leaves a widow and two daughters, one of whom is married.

Dr. Pryor Slightly Better.

Dr. William R. Pryor, son of ex-Judge Roger A. Pryor, who is ill with typhoid fever at his residence, 121 East Thirty-eighth Street, was announced to be slightly better yesterday. On Christmas day Dr. Pryor attended a family reunion at his father's house. He complained a little at the time, and on the next day was unable to leave his bed.

DELAY OF TEACHERS' PAY

Mr. Coler Says the Trouble Is Not Chargeable to Him.

The Pay Rolls, He Says, Have Not Been Made Out in the Form Required by Law.

Controller Coler said yesterday that the reports given out at the headquarters of the Board of Education that the teachers' pay rolls of the Boroughs of Manhattan and the Bronx were being held up by him were unfounded. Previous to consolidation the teachers in the old city never were paid until the 15th of the month, but through his efforts their pay day was advanced as nearly as possible to the 1st of each month. None of the December pay rolls had reached his department, he said, and consequently there could have been no delay there.

Mr. Coler remains firm in his determination not to accept these rolls, unless the charges are made against the proper accounts. All the increases under the Ahearn act, by the terms of that law, are required to be paid out of the proceeds of special revenue bonds issued for the purpose, while the ordinary scheduled salaries are paid out of the appropriation made by the Board of Estimate to the Board of Education. Auditor Cook and Acting Secretary Bussey of the Board of Education contend that this distribution of the payments due the teachers for December cannot be made except after at least two months' work. In referring to this contention the Controller said yesterday:

"The Brooklyn Borough board has prepared its pay rolls in accordance with my wishes, and there is no reason why the Manhattan and Bronx board should not do likewise. In any event I cannot pay out of a bond account bills which are chargeable to a budget account. Neither can I pay out of the budget moneys required by law to be paid from the proceeds of a bond sale. There must be something radically wrong when these amounts cannot be charged by the authorities to the proper accounts. Either they have not enough clerks or those that they have are incompetent. If the board will accept of the services of a number of accountants from my office, I will guarantee, even at this late day, to get the pay rolls out on time to hand the teachers their salaries not later than Jan. 15."

In speaking of the criticisms leveled at the Board of Estimate and various city officials by the School Commissioners, their subordinates, and teachers, Mr. Coler said:

"There should be no deficiencies if the schools were managed in the way that other city departments are by men who made themselves familiar with the routine of and with the laws governing and affecting expenditures. All the trouble we have had has come from the fact that the School Commissioners do not know their duty. As I said the other day, I do not think the defect can be remedied until the present system is abolished, and a department established composed of a few well-paid men who will make it their business to attend to the duties of their department, and to run it according to law.

"There should be no complaint from boroughs now included in the City of New York that receive sums very much larger for the maintenance of their schools than they did before consolidation. Take the case of Brooklyn from which there is and has been a howl for want of money. The records will show that the Borough of Brooklyn now receives more than 50 per cent. more money for the maintenance of its schools and the payment of its teachers than the City of Brooklyn received before consolidation. Why, then, this cry about lack of funds to carry on the school government? I tell you, it should not be. The city should not be condemned, and the members of the Board of Estimate and Apportionment should not be condemned, when it has provided enough money to maintain the schools, if the School Commissioners did the right thing."

Mr Coler said that the City of Brooklyn in 1897 had $3,336,000 for school purposes, while for 1900 the Borough of Brooklyn would receive $4,793,000, an increase of over 40 per cent.

SCHOOL SALARIES IN RICHMOND.

Deductions Made to Bring List Within the Appropriation.

The 253 school teachers of Richmond Borough were summoned to the assembly rooms in the various schools yesterday before beginning work for the day, and a notice was read by the Principals showing the salary each one would receive during the year. Nearly half of the teachers are protected by the provisions of the Ahearn law, while the remainder lose amounts ranging from $50 to $200.

The cuts in salaries were ordered by the School Board in order to bring the salary list within the amount appropriated for 1900, $242,809.59, or $75,068.89 less than the amount asked for. The committee divided the sum into the following amounts: Teachers, $192,060; janitors, $21,740; compulsory education, $8,520; Superintendents, $9,050; officers and clerks, $10,925. The apportionment will leave a balance of $514.59 in the Treasury.

The above figures show reductions in the salaries of all the employes of the School Board, with the exception of the attendance officers. The reductions are as follows: Hubbard R. Ketcham, Executive Superintendent, from $4,000 to $3,000; Anna M. Gordon and George Hogan, Assistant Superintendents, from $3,000 to $2,775 each; Franklin C. Vitt, Secretary of the board, from $3,000 to $2,775; Peter J. Kiernan, Assistant Secretary, from $2,000 to $1,600; William S. West, general clerk, from $1,500 to $1,400; Frederick W. Pfaff, clerk, from $1,200 to $1,050; George Egbert, clerk, from $1,400 to $1,300; Matilda Z. Dowd, stenographer and typewriter, from $1,400 to $1,200, and Margaret A. Dermody, stenographer, from $1,000 to $950.

QUEENS SCHOOL TROUBLE.

Borough Board Makes Another Attempt to Straighten Tangle.

The School Board of the Borough of Queens made another attempt yesterday to straighten out its tangled financial affairs before the Queens County Grand Jury could begin the threatened investigation. Most of the time was taken up by an executive session.

When the board resumed open session Commissioner Kelly of Far Rockaway called attention to a section of the by-laws that prevented the reducing of the salaries of the office attaches without a two-thirds vote. He then moved to reconsider the resolution adopted a week ago cutting down the salaries of School Superintendent Stevens and other office attaches. The board so voted, and then rescinded the resolution altogether. Then it was voted to restore the salaries to the old rates.

The board adopted a schedule for salaries and designated schools to be opened during the year and the number of teachers to be assigned to each. Under that schedule the force of teachers can be reduced by forty. The board voted to take money out of the training class fund to pay E. F. Lewis, a teacher in the Long Island City High School, his salary from Sept. 15 to Jan. 1, 1900, amounting to $290.66, and the salary of Miss Annie S. Thompson, a teacher in the Flushing High School, for the same period of time, amounting to $262.60.

BROOKLYN SCHOOL AFFAIRS.

Claimed that Borough is Entitled to $35,000 More.

The question as to what schools in the borough are entitled to share in the distribution of school funds occupied the attention of the Brooklyn School Board at its meeting yesterday afternoon. Superintendent of Schools Edward G. Ward presented a communication, in which he asked the board to pass upon this matter. Mr. Ward said that an error had been made in making up the report of the aggregate attendance in the Brooklyn schools, with the result that the borough had lost $35,000 which it was entitled to in the apportionment of school funds. Mr. Ward said the authorities of three industrial and orphan schools had failed to include in their reports the attendance of children known as "county wards." Corrected reports, he added, had been made.

Horace E. Dresser moved that the communication be forwarded to the Central Board with the recommendation that no apportionment be made until the Corporation Counsel has rendered a decision as to what outside schools are entitled to share in the school funds. This motion was carried.

It was said that the Brooklyn School Board would seek to have the apportionment delayed until the Legislature should rectify the inequalities that exist in the charter relative to the apportionment of school moneys.

Water Works Bond Issues Asked.

Commissioner Dalton of the Department of Water Supply yesterday sent a letter to Mayor Van Wyck, in which he asked the authorization by the Board of Estimate of bond issues aggregating $1,580,000 for the improvement of the city's water supply. The purposes for which the bond issues are desired are the construction of an additional storage reservoir on the Cross River branch of the Croton River, at a cost of $980,000; the partial reconstruction of the reservoirs near the Millburn pumping station, one of the sources of supply for Brooklyn, at a cost of $500,000, and the placing of an additional pumping station for the Brooklyn high service at Mount Prospect, at an estimated cost of $100,000.

Soldiers and Sailors' Monument.

The Soldiers and Sailors' Monument Commission held a meeting in the Mayor's office yesterday and decided to advertise for bids for the monument, based on the plans submitted by Stout Brothers, architects, and approved by the commission. The monument is to be located on Riverside Drive, between Eighty-ninth and Ninetieth Streets, and its estimated cost is $250,000. The successful bidder will be required to furnish a bond in the sum of $75,000.

IN THE BOWLING ALLEYS.

Three interesting games were decided in the Harlem League last night. The Audubons won from the Grove Hills in the first game after a close fight. In the second game the Knickerbockers rolled up a big score, defeating the Grove Hills. The final game was closely contested throughout. The Knickerbockers led until the eighth frame. The Audubons then forged ahead and won out by twelve pins. Scores:

FIRST GAME.

Audubon—Maher, 147; McGuire, 191; Brand, 150; Petrie, 165; Sprenger, 163. Total, 825.

CHESS PLAY AT VIENNA.

VIENNA, Jan. 2.—The pairing for the tenth round of the Kolisch chessmasters' tournament, which was played in this city to-day, had been arranged so that the contests were: Wolf vs. Alapin, Zinkl vs. Kortc, Schlechter vs. Schwarz, Popiel vs. Maroczy, Prock vs. Brody, Marco vs. Albin. In the play Wolf lost to Alapin, Zinkl and Kortc divided honors, Schlechter disposed of Schwarz, Popiel and Maroczy drew, Prock was beaten by Brody, and Marco worsted Albin.

The total number of points won and lost by each contestant up to date are:

	Won.	Lost.		Won.	Lost.
Alapin	6	4	Popiel	4½	5½
Albin	4	6	Prock	0	10
Brody	7	3	Schlechter	7	3
Kortc	5	5	Schwarz	2½	7½
Marco	1½	1½	Wolf	5	5
Maroczy	8	2	Zinkl	5½	4½

The eleventh and final round will be played to-morrow in the following order: Maroczy vs. Prock, Schwarz vs. Popiel, Kortc vs. Schlechter, Alapin vs. Zinkl, Albin vs. Wolf, and Brody vs. Marco.

BIG PIGEON MATCH IN SIGHT.

A challenge which gives promise of being the forerunner of the greatest pigeon shooting contest of the decade was issued yesterday by Capt. A. W. Money on behalf of his son, Harold Money, to George H. McAlpin, the amateur champion, for years the acknowledged "crack-a-jack" of the Carteret Gun Club.

Mr. McAlpin has shot few matches during the past three years, for the reason that he has invariably declined to shoot a race unless the acompanying wager was at least $1,000, too great a sum for the average trap shooter to risk against such a formidable opponent. Capt. Money's offer is for a match at 100 first-class birds for any amount, from $100 to $500, or, if McAlpin prefers, for $1,000 a side, at any time or place he may choose to name. There is little doubt that the champion will accept, for although young Money is a good shot, few believe he is a match for McAlpin.

RACING MEN ALERT.

The names of the candidates for the Brooklyn and Suburban Handicaps for 1900 will be announced this week, probably on Saturday, and from now until they are published, racing men in all parts of the country will await anxiously the lists. It does not matter to the racing men that the events will not be decided until the Summer and that only a small number of those named will probably race. They will begin at once to figure on the relative merits of the candidates, judging entirely on last season's form, and then as the time for the big events approaches the racing men will watch carefully for all information as to the work of the horses, so that they may better determine chances for winning.

The stakes of the Coney Island Jockey Club, which are a rich lot this coming season, will close to-day, while those of the Brooklyn Jockey Club closed yesterday. The candidates for the stakes were not given out, for the Western mails posted on the days of closing must be awaited.

The Coney Island stakes to close to-day are as follows:

THREE-YEAR-OLDS AND UPWARD.

The Suburban, $10,000. One and a quarter miles.

Coney Island Handicap, $2,000. Six furlongs.

Sheepshead Bay Handicap, $2,000. One mile.

Long Island Handicap, $2,500. One mile and an eighth.

The Advance, $3,000 added. One mile and three-quarters.

THREE-YEAR-OLDS EXCLUSIVELY.

The Swift, $1,500 added. Seven furlongs.

The Spindrift, $1,500 added. One mile and a furlong.

TWO-YEAR-OLDS EXCLUSIVELY.

Great Trial, $20,000. About six furlongs.

Double Event, $10,000, divided into two races, the first at five and a half furlongs, the second about six furlongs.

AUTUMN MEETING STAKES.

The Flight, $1,500 added. Seven furlongs.

The September, $1,500 added. One mile and three furlongs.

The Autumn, $3,000. Six furlongs.

The Flatbush, $5,000. Seven furlongs.

The Great Eastern, $7,500. Six furlongs.

AUTUMN MEETING, 1902.

The Futurity, $10,000 added. Six furlongs.

Secretary McIntyre of the Brooklyn Jockey Club has been ill for some time, but his assistant, Fred Rehrberger, says that the list of entries that came in yesterday was exceedingly large In the three-year-old stakes especially the entries are very large and the quality of the best. The indications are that the season will be a good one for three-year-olds, for most of those named are in the lot that raced in the East last year on such even terms.

BUSINESS TROUBLES.

New York City.

WRIGHT GILLIES.—Justice Gildersleeve of the Supreme Court has appointed William H. Ricketts received in supplementary proceedings for Wright Gillies, on the application of James C. Yates, who recovered a judgment against him on Nov. 25 last for $2,619

PETER KLOTZ.—Peter Klotz, caterer, of 444 Amsterdam Avenue, has made an assignment to Gustave R. Hamburger without preference. Mr. Hamburger said that the liabilities are $4,000 and assets $1,000. He thought the creditors would get more by an assignment than by a petition in bankruptcy.

FINLAY BROTHERS.—Patrick M. and John M. Finlay, composing the firm of Finlay Brothers, dealers in dry goods and fancy goods at 834 to 838 Columbus Avenue, made an assignment yesterday to Ambrose O. McCall without preference. The latter said he could give no particulars at present, and would take charge of the store at once and have an inventory made of the stock. They began business in 1881 at 564 Third Avenue, and built up a good trade. In October, 1896, they moved to Columbus Avenue and spent, it was said, about $6,000 in fitting up the new store, and carried a stock of about $40,000. For some time past it has been said in the trade that they were slow in payments and did not have sufficient ready capital. Their liabilities are not definitely known, but are estimated at $30,000.

NEW YORK CHINA, GLASS AND TOY COMPANY.—The New York China, Glass and Toy Company of 37 and 39 Murray Street made an assignment yesterday to Walter P. Long. The deed of assignment is signed by Thomas P. Young, as President, and James W. Sneden. An hour later Deputy Sheriff Leavitt received an execution against the company for $511, in favor of David P. Clark, on a judgment obtained in the City Court. The company occupies a large double five-story building, but there was no stock of goods on the ground floor when the reporter called yesterday. It was said that President Young was at home sick and there was no one present in a position to give any particulars of the assignment. The present company was incorporated on April 1, 1897, with a capital stock of $100,000, to continue the business of the J. M. Young Importing Company, which had gone into the hands of a receiver in March, 1897. It was stated at the time that some of the largest creditors of the old company took stock in the new company for their claims. A statement of the condition of the New York China, Glass and Toy Company on Feb. 1 last showed assets, $180,000; liabilities, $40,000, and debenture bonds, $40,000.

The complete figures show the net earnings for the month to be $2,278,000, as compared with $1,777,400 a year ago, while from July 1 to Nov. 30 the net figures were $11,201,900, and the increase $2,172,400.

BROOKLYN RAPID TRANSIT.

Brooklyn Rapid Transit was one of the few stocks on the list yesterday that marked a net decline for the day, the loss totaling two full points on trading of over 47,000 shares. At one time, indeed, the quotation was forced down almost two points lower, but profit-taking carried the quotation up in the afternoon.

While undoubtedly the bear campaign against the stock was being quietly waged yesterday, the depression in price was primarily due to the report that a bill is to be introduced at the coming session of the Legislature requiring the company to put its wires underground. This report was heard toward the close of the last session of the Legislature, and its revival at the present time was regarded as of more or less significance. It is said that the other traction companies who have put their wires underground feel that there should be no discrimination in favor of the Brooklyn company, and are back of the present movement. This, however, cannot be verified.

The voting trust of the company expired at midnight Dec. 31, and there is much speculation as to what developments may be forthcoming at the annual meeting of the company to be held Jan. 26.

LOCAL TRACTION STOCKS.

Apart from Brooklyn Rapid Transit, the local traction stocks, particularly Third Avenue, were strong yesterday. Third Avenue gained 3 points on the belief that the granting of the King's Bridge franchise would be a material factor in the development of the road and would add largely to its earning capacity. Manhattan rose 1½ points, though there was no positive news respecting the property. A meeting of the Executive Committee of the company was held during the day, but no business of consequence was transacted. Metropolitan's gain for the day was 1¾ points.

EARNINGS GROW GREATER.

Norfolk and Western preferred scored a further gain of 1⅜ points yesterday, on the publication of the November statement of earnings, showing a gain in net earnings of over $155,000. Since July 1 the increase has been $575,500. It is pointed out that the total net earnings for the last five months, amounting to $2,281,300, are such that they not only will pay all fixed charges for the entire year, but will leave a surplus of practically $50,000.

Further reports were heard yesterday connecting Norfolk and Western and the Pennsylvania system in a deal said to be of considerable magnitude. No official information on the subject can be had.

SUGAR WAR DEVELOPMENTS.

The announcement by the Sugar Trust of the abandonment of the factor plan and the practical establishment of a flat price, leading to a belief that this was a step preliminary to a settlement of the sugar war, led to a sharp upward movement yesterday in the American Sugar Refining Company's stock, the quotation appreciating six full points. The trading in the stock continued on the same extensive scale as on previous days recently, about 80,000 shares changing hands. Boston and Philadelphia interests were buyers.

Under the new selling plan all guarantees are withdrawn, and no discounts will be allowed; but where it is desirable the trust will allow 15 cents per hundred in addition to the 1 per cent. for cash on seven days. The decimal plan of quotations is also adopted. A number of the independent refineries have adopted the new plan, and it is expected all will follow suit.

TOBACCO'S STRENGTH.

After a rather hesitating opening, American Tobacco yesterday took on a firm tone and steadily advanced until, on sales of over 31,000 shares, it crossed the 100 mark and closed at the high figure for the day, 102¾. The annual report of the company is soon to be forthcoming, and it is said it will make an exceptionally good showing.

Continental Tobacco common was equally as strong, gaining 3¾ points for the day on sales of less than 10,000 shares, while the preferred advanced 2 points. Insiders speak very hopefully of the condition of the property.

GRANGER STOCKS ACTIVE.

The Granger stocks were strong yesterday, and there was in particular good buying of such issues as St. Paul and Burlington, both of which were sold recently on what were conceived to be unfavorable earnings statements, but which in reality, when analyzed, showed that the business of both companies was steadily increasing. Northwest and the "Three C's" were also among the strong stocks.

It is said that in the recent decline New England purchasers secured fully 15,000 shares of Burlington in blocks of from 100 to 500.

MORE DIVIDEND TALK.

There was good buying of Louisville and Nashville yesterday on more talk of an extra dividend and continuing reports of increased earnings, as shown by the November statement of net profits, which totaled $917,700, an increase over the same month in 1898 of $86,200.

TENNESSEE COAL'S GAIN.

Tennessee Coal and Iron scored the substantial gain of 3¼ points on sales of something like 5,200 shares yesterday. During the day the regular semi-monthly meeting of the Executive Committee of the company was held, but it was announced at its conclusion that nothing but routine business had been transacted.

The amount of bullion taken into the Bank of England on balance yesterday was £1,325,000, including £1,099,800 in United States coin. Gold premiums are quoted as follow: Buenos Ayres, 127.70; Madrid, 27.75; Lisbon, 43.50; Rome, 7.31¼.

Spanish 4s, 63⅞, ex dividend.

In Continental Centres.

PARIS, Jan. 2.—Prices were firm on the Bourse to-day owing to the receipt of favorable war news from South Africa and the easier money. The settlement progressed satisfactorily. Contangos were moderate. Spanish 4s were in active demand, and there were numerous purchases of Rio Tintos in anticipation of the issuance of favorable statistics. De Beers and Kafirs rallied. Three per cent. rentes, 99 francs 35 centimes for the account. Exchange on London, 25 francs 24½ centimes for checks. Spanish 4s, 67.30.

BERLIN, Jan. 2.—On the Boerse to-day prices were firm, particularly for mine shares, transactions being encouraged by the receipt of favorable manufacturing reports. Exchange on London, 20 marks 51 pfennigs for checks. Private rate of discount, 5½ per cent.

FRANKFORT, Jan. 2.—Prices were firm on the Boerse to-day in sympathy with the foreign markets and owing to easier money.

MADRID, Jan. 2.—The weekly statement of the Bank of Spain shows the following changes: Silver in hand, increased 583,000 pesetas, notes in circulation increased 2,720,000 pesetas. Gold in hand shows no change from last report.

NEWS OF THE EXCHANGES.

The cotton market was fairly active yesterday and irregular. Between 300,000 and 400,000 bales changed hands on the Cotton Exchange, the market opening for the new year about 10 points up and then selling off 7 or 8 points on the average after news of less favorable prices had been recived from Liverpool.

The Produce Exchange was comparatively dull, though brokers of experience express belief that it is to broaden this year. Wheat, corn, and provisions were all strong. Wheat and corn showed notable firmness in resisting declines early in the day. There were some 200,000 bushels of wheat taken for shipment abroad.

Trading on the Consolidated Exchange was active and the market was of course strong in sympathy with Stock Exchange conditions. The Coffee Exchange enjoyed fairly active dealing, and deliveries made an average gain of 5 points.

CORPORATIONS IN THIS STATE.

Secretary McDonough Reports on the New Companies Formed.

ALBANY, Jan. 2.—Secretary of State McDonough to-day issued the following financial statement showing the classification of stock corporations organized during the year 1899:

	Number.	Capital.
Those organized under the business corporation law, which includes manufacturing, (except gas and electric lighting companies,) mercantile agency, and commission, and natural gas and oil companies	1,537	$117,799,895
Organized under the railroad corporation law	40	61,165,000
Organized under the transportation corporation law:
Gas and electric companies..	49	7,891,000
Water companies	15	2,892,500
Telegraph and telephone companies	40	2,487,200
Navigation companies	5	1,975,000
Pipe Line companies	1	100,000
Turnpike companies	2	34,000
Ferry companies	1	9,000
Total	1,690	$194,240,995
Capital increased		167,450,380
		$361,868,375

	1898.	1899.
New corporations	1,535	1,690
Capital stock	$216,061,060	$194,240,995
Corporations increasing capital, $148,207.
Total amount of capital and increases	$293,585,000	$361,686,375

Under the law railroad corporations are not required to pay the organization tax at the time of filing a certificate of incorporation, but may defer the same until the consent of the railroad commission to construct the road is obtained. In consequence of this law, there are several railroad companies organized in 1899 and in 1900 that have not yet paid their organization tax. Their applications for consent may not have been presented, or if filed not acted upon, or the application refused or withdrawn.

White Knob Copper Company.

The annual stockholders' meeting of the White Knob Copper Company was held at the offices, 34 Pine Street, yesterday, and the following Directors were elected: Edward J. Mathews, (President of the company;) Wilbur K. Mathews, E. C. Platt, (Treasurer of the Commercial Cable Company); William J. Hardy, and C. G. Funk. Encouraging reports of the company's mines were presented. There were 51,056 pounds of copper from the mine sent here on Dec. 20, which have been sold, and 30,000 pounds more are now on the way East.

American Deposit and Loan.

The annual stockholders' meeting of the American Deposit and Loan Company was held at 122 Broadway yesterday and the following Directors re-elected: William Alexander, Lyman Rhoades, William H. McIntyre, Bainbridge Colby, Marcellus Hartley, James H. Hyde, and G. W. Jenkins. The following officers will be re-elected: George W. Jenkins, President; James H. Hyde, Vice President; Charles H. Hamilton, Treasurer; George D. Hartley, Secretary.

Old Directors Re-elected.

The Fidelity and Casualty Company stockholders held their annual meeting yesterday and re-elected the old Board of Directors for another year. Similar action was taken by the stockholders of the Standard Oil Company of New York, who met at 26 Broadway.

Electro-Gas Company.

At the annual stockholders' meeting of the Electro-Gas Company yesterday the following Directors were re-elected: Charles F. Dieterich, A. B. Froal, Walton Ferguson, E. N. Dickerson, Samuel Thorne, R. Somers Hayes, and Anthony N. Brady.

OUTSIDE SECURITIES.

Favorable conditions prevailed yesterday in the market for outside securities, and substantial improvement was recorded in a number of stocks. Closing quotations showed several net gains of two or more points, and many issues ended the day with smaller advances. Feeling in regard to the market was very generally optimistic, as, indeed, the course of prices indicated. Very little disposition appeared in any quarter of the market to sell stocks, while, on the other hand, good demand was had for most of the prominent issues, and it was in many cases only at considerable advances over Saturday's closing figures that buying orders could be filled. In very few stocks did transactions amount to as much as 1,000 shares, while in many in which large net gains were recorded trading was limited to 200 or 300 shares.

DISTILLING OF AMERICA was prominent in the industrial list. Much strength showed in the preferred stock, which advanced very sharply on the opening sales, and during the day reached 31, an advance of 4 points over the last sale of Saturday. A reaction just before the close brought the price down more than a point, but the issue ended the day with a net gain of 2½ points, at 29½ bid. Good demand was had early in the day for the common stock, but the supply of this issue proved larger than that of the preferred, and though transactions were about equal in the two issues the common advanced only fractionally. It subsequently lost all the advance and ended the day with a small net loss at 8½ bid.

AMALGAMATED COPPER shared the generally strong tone of the market, and ended the day with a substantial advance. It opened at 81, sold up to 81½, and closed at 81¼ bid, against 80⅝ bid at the end of last week. Transactions in the stock amounted probably to 1,000 shares.

AMERICAN WOOLEN GOODS.—Favorably affected by the announcement of the regular quarterly dividend of 1¾ per cent., American Woolen Goods preferred sold up to 80, and closed with a net gain of 1 point, at 79½ bid. Similarly, the common stock went from 22 to 24, and showed a net advance of 1½ points.

ROYAL BAKING POWDER preferred was in strong demand, but bidders found practically no offerings of the stock, and as far as reported no transactions were made in the issue. Bids were raised from 92 to 95, and it closed at 95 bid, with no stock offered.

Similar conditions prevailed in other issues, and during the day evidence was had in a number of stocks that confidence has been very much strengthened and that holders are now less desirous of selling than they have been in a number of weeks. Thus conditions prevailing on the first day of trading of the new year gave much promise of market betterment, and in this light were viewed as most encouraging.

Among the other issues that contributed to the general strength were Rubber Goods preferred, showing a net gain of 1 point; National Tube common, which sold up to 45 and closed at 45 bid, a net gain of 2 points; Havana Commercial preferred, which went to 59½ and ended the day with a net gain of 1½ points, at 58⅛ bid, and International Pump common and preferred, each of which showed a net gain of 1 point.

AMERICAN BEET SUGAR was transferred yesterday to the Stock Exchange.

Closing quotations were as follows:

DECEMBER TREASURY FIGURES.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 2.—The monthly statement of the public debt issued to-day shows that at the close of business Dec. 30 the debt, less cash in the Treasury, amounted to $1,134,300,007, a decrease for the month of $5,791,824. This decrease is largely accounted for by the purchase of bonds during the month.

The debt is recapitulated as follows: Interest bearing debt, $1,026,772,320; debt on which interest has ceased since maturity, $1,208,500; debt bearing no interest, $389,914,649—total $1,417,894,460. This amount, however, does not include $686,979,403 in certificates and Treasury notes outstanding which are offset by an equal amount of cash on hand.

The cash in the Treasury is classified as follows: Gold, $398,032,027; silver, $497,200,739; paper, $64,583,670; deposits in National bank depositories, disbursing officers' balances, &c., $88,184,605—total, $1,048,006,041. Against this total there are demand liabilities outstanding amounting to $764,410,588, which leaves a net cash balance on hand of $283,595,453.

The comparative statement of the Government receipts and expenditures shows that for the month of December, 1899, the receipts were $46,759,104, as against $41,404,793 for December, 1898. The expenditures during last month were $30,145,559, as against $41,864,807 for December, 1898, which leaves a surplus for last month of $7,613,545, as against a deficit of $460,014 for December, 1898.

The receipts from all sources during the last six months amount to $284,793,494, with expenditures amounting to $263,766,560, which leaves a surplus for the half year of $21,026,934, as against a deficit for the corresponding period of last year of $83,719,422.

Following are the receipts from the several sources of revenue for the last month, together with the increases as compared with December, 1898: Customs, $19,120,884; increase, $2,356,560. Internal revenue, $25,075,574; increase, $2,454,256. The receipts from miscellaneous sources show an increase of $543,495.

The disbursements charged to the War Department during the last month amount to $11,000,110, as against $18,184,676 for the corresponding month in 1898.

The Navy Department expended $4,684,374, as compared with $4,373,729 for December last year.

Of the $4,408,688 paid out on account of interest during the month about $4,000,000 was anticipated January interest.

A statement issued by the Director of the Mints shows that the total coinage executed at the mints of the United States during the calendar year ended Dec. 30 was $139,243,191, as follows: Gold, $111,344,220; silver, $26,061,519; minor coins, $1,837,451.

The coinage executed during the month of December last amounted to $9,711,884, as follows: Gold, $7,469,952; silver, $1,886,605; minor coins, $355,827.

The monthly circulation statement issued by the Controller of the Currency shows that at the close of business Dec. 30 the total circulation of National bank notes was $246,195,523, an increase for the year of $2,460,418, and an increase for the month of $2,435,275. The circulation based on United States bonds amounted to $209,759,985, a decrease for the year of $4,256,002, and an increase for the month of $598,083.

The circulation secured by lawful money was $36,435,538, an increase for the year of $6,716,420, and an increase for the month of $1,837,192.

The amount of United States registered bonds on deposit to secure circulating notes was $234,481,570, and to secure public deposits, $75,097,880.

BOSTON STOCK MARKET.

Special to The New York Times.

BOSTON, Jan. 2.—The best strength in to-day's market, outside of the arbitrage shares, was in the coppers, which came near having a boom. All the leaders were up. Amalgamated sold at 82, Montana at 277, Butte above 54, Tamarack at 184, Osceola above 70, and so on through all the more important shares. Outside the copper shares, Bell Telephone, Old Dominion Coal, Chicago Junction, and Boston Elevated were the strongest spots. The sharp rise in the copper shares was in turn attributed to Lawson buying, covering by shorts, and National City Bank influence. Some selling of United States mines mining stock at 12 was noted.

At the Clearing House 6 per cent. was the rate between banks, and New York funds sold at from 25 to 16 2-3 cents discount. On call, money is nominally 6 per cent. Some houses, however, are in such a strong position that they are not inclined to pay over 5½ per cent. Time money is in good supply at 6 per cent. for all dates up to six months, where names and collateral are acceptable, and 5 per cent. for a year. The market for mercantile paper is quiet, with best names quoted from 6@6¾ per cent.

Incorporated in Delaware.

Special to The New York Times.

WILMINGTON, Del., Jan. 2.—The H. P. Dwyer Company of Baltimore, capital $40,000, to engage in the commission business, was chartered at Dover to-day.

Under the new corporation law, to-day was the time fixed for the concerns chartered under the law to make their returns of receipts, expenditures, and capital employed to Secretary of State Hughes. Of the 896 companies chartered, only 140 have complied with the law. Secretary Hughes will extend the time for making the reports before proceeding against the derelict companies in actions to revoke their charters.

Franklin Zinc Company.

NEWARK, Jan. 2.—Articles of incorporation have been recorded with the County Clerk by the Franklin Zinc Company, which has a capital stock of $2,000,000. It will "mine, mill, smelt, buy, sell, exchange, or otherwise deal in gold, silver, copper, lead, zinc, brass, iron, steel, and all other kinds of ores, metals, and minerals." The capital stock is divided into 200,000 shares of $10 each. The incorporators are Harry H. Picking, Thornton Parker, and Mathew H. Picking.

IN THE REAL ESTATE FIELD

Frank Jay Gould Buys Fifty-seventh Street Lots—Other Dealings and Auction Sales.

Frank Jay Gould has bought, through Frederick Zittel, from the estate of Ralph Marsh the two lots, 50 by 100, on the north side of Fifty-seventh Street, 191 feet east of Broadway.

The property is between the building of the American Fine Arts Society and the apartment house known as the Scarboro Mansions. In reply to an inquiry, Mr. Gould said last evening that he had no special object in view in the purchase of the plot, and that he was not prepared to say what disposition he will make of it.

Negotiations are well advanced and will probably be concluded within a day or two for the sale of a 120-foot frontage on the south side of Fifty-second Street, just east of Madison Avenue—part of the Orphan Asylum block. The prospective buyers, four in number, two of whom are Henry G. Trevor and G. R. Schieffelin, will erect dwellings for their own occupancy on the lots.

R. Rollins Wood has sold for Michael Tully the six-story apartment house 306 West Eightieth Street, 50 by 91 by 102.2, taking in part payment the four-story dwelling 25 West Seventy-first Street, 19 by 102.2.

Slawson & Hobbs were the brokers in the recently reported sale of the six-story building 228 West Broadway, running through to 8 North Moore Street.

Announcement has just been made of what will be one of the most important auction offerings of the Spring season. On Feb. 6 the executors of the estate of Charles H. Contoit will sell, through Auctioneer Meyer, 353, 355, and 357 Broadway, 70 and 72 Franklin Street, together with several other parcels on Church, Walker, Prince, Crosby, and West Houston Streets, the Bowery, and Sixth Avenue.

Among the firm changes announced on the 1st of the year is the association of Harry Stewart Hall with his father under the firm name of N. Brigham Hall & Son. A. W. Perry, formerly with A. W. McLaughlin & Co., has established himself at 20 Nassau Street, where he will conduct a general real estate business, making a specialty of mortgage loans.

REFEREES' NOTICES.

SUPREME COURT, NEW YORK COUNTY.—THE MUTUAL LIFE INSURANCE COMPANY OF NEW YORK, plaintiff, against THE NEW YORK STEAM POWER COMPANY, and others, defendants.

In pursuance of a judgment of foreclosure and sale, duly made and entered in the above-entitled action, and bearing date the 6th day of October, 1899, I, the undersigned, the referee in said judgment named, will sell at public auction, at the New York Real Estate Salesroom, No. 111 Broadway, in the Borough of Manhattan, in the City of New York, on the 3d day of November, 1899, at 12 o'clock noon on that day, by Herbert A. Sherman, auctioneer, the premises in said judgment directed to be sold and therein described as follows:

All that certain lot, piece, or parcel of land, with the buildings thereon erected, situate in the Borough of Manhattan and City of New York, and bounded and described as follows: Beginning at a point in the northerly line of Ann Street, at the division line between the premises hereby conveyed and land formerly of F. Panton, and which point is distant one hundred and forty-four feet one and one-half inches, more or less, westerly from the northwesterly corner of Ann and William Streets, running thence westwardly, along the northerly line of Ann Street, twenty-eight feet one inch, more or less, to the division line between the premises known as Numbers fifty-seven (57) and fifty-five (55) Ann Street; thence northeastwardly through a party wall standing on the line between the said premises Numbers fifty-seven (57) and fifty-five (55) Ann Street and beyond the same seventy-four feet and three inches, more or less, to the rear line of the said premises Number fifty-five (55) Ann Street; thence westwardly along the rear line of the premises Numbers fifty-five (55,) fifty-three, (53,) fifty-one, (51,) and forty-nine (49) Ann Street, seventy-five feet seven and one-half inches, more or less, to land formerly of the heirs of George Lorillard, deceased; thence northeastwardly along the said land formerly of the heirs of George Lorillard, deceased, a distance of three feet nine and one-half inches, more or less, to land formerly of Thomas H. Leggett; thence eastwardly along said land formerly of Thomas H. Leggett and land of others so as to include the storehouse lately occupied by the American Fur Company one hundred and one feet seven inches, more or less, to the said land late of F. Panton; and thence southwestwardly along the said land late of F. Panton one hundred and twenty-two feet eleven inches, more or less, to the said northerly line of Ann Street at the place of beginning, being now known by the street Numbers fifty-seven (57) and fifty-nine (59) Ann Street, and being the same premises which were conveyed to the said The New York Steam Power Company by Patrick Reilly and wife by deed dated February 1, 1870, and recorded in the office of the Register of the City and County of New York February 2d, 1870, in Liber 1142 of Conveyances, Page 177.

Dated New York, October 11, 1899.

CHAS. G. F. WAHLE, Referee.

CHARLES E. MILLER, Attorney for Plaintiff, 32 Nassau Street, New York City.

The approximate amount of the lien or charge to satisfy which the above-described property is to be sold is $50,355.43, with interest thereon from September 28, 1899, less the sum of $2,000 paid on account thereof, together with the costs and allowances, amounting to $375.75, with interest from the 6th day of October, 1899, together with the expenses of the sale. The approximate amount of the taxes, assessments, or other liens, which are to be allowed to the purchaser out of the purchase money, or paid by the referee, is $1,396.18 and interest.

SUPREME COURT, COUNTY OF NEW YORK.—LOUISE BORCHARDT, as executrix of the last will and testament of Albert Borchardt, deceased, plaintiff, against FRANK PISEK and others, defendants.

In pursuance of a judgment of foreclosure and sale, duly made and entered in the above-entitled action, bearing date the 10th day of November, 1899, I, the undersigned, the referee in said judgment named, will sell at public auction at the New York Real Estate Salesroom, No. 111 Broadway, in the Borough of Manhattan, City of New York, on the 23d day of January, 1900, at 12 o'clock noon on that day, by Peter F. Meyer, auctioneer, the premises directed by said judgment to be sold and therein described as follows:

All that certain piece or parcel of land, situate, lying, and being in the City of New York, and being the whole of the lot known and designated as lot numbered fifty-seven (57) and the southerly or southwesterly one-half of lot known and designated as lot numbered fifty-eight (58) on a map made by John A. Van Horne, surveyor, and filed June 18th, 1891, in the office of the Register of the City and County of New York, entitled "Map of 71 beautiful lots, being the choice property known as the Kingsland estate, situated at Morris Heights, 24th Ward, New York City," and bounded and described as follows, to wit: Beginning at a point on the northerly or northwesterly side of Tremont Avenue where the same is intersected by the southerly or southwesterly line of Lot No. Fifty-seven (57) as laid down on said map, and running thence northeastwardly and northwardly along the southerly side of Lot No. Fifty-seven (57) as laid down on said map one hundred and thirty-eight and 87-100 feet to the rear line of said lot as laid down on said map; thence in a northerly or northeasterly direction along the rear of Lot No. Fifty-seven (57) and Lot No. Fifty-eight (58) twenty and 335-1,000 feet; thence southeastwardly in a straight line, being the centre line of Lot No. Fifty-eight (58) to a point on the said northerly or northwesterly side of Tremont Avenue distant thirty-seven feet and six inches northerly from the point or place of beginning, as measured along Tremont Avenue, as laid down on said map; thence in a southwesterly direction along said side of Tremont Avenue thirty-seven feet and six inches to the point or place of beginning. Together with all the right, title, and interest of the parties of the first part to so much of Tremont Avenue as adjoins the above-described premises to the centre line thereof.—Dated New York, December 27th, 1899.

SURROGATE NOTICES.

FITZGERALD, MARY A.—The People of the State of New York, by the grace of God free and independent, to THOMAS HODNETT, Richard Hodnett, Patrick Hodnett, and William Hodnett, the heirs and next of kin of MARY A. FITZGERALD, deceased, send greeting:

Whereas, John E. FitzGerald of the City of New York has lately applied to the Surrogate's Court of our County of New York, to have a certain instrument in writing relating to both real and personal property, duly proved as the last will and testament of Mary A. FitzGerald, late of the County of New York, deceased, therefore, you and each of you are cited to appear before the Surrogate of our County of New York, on the 13th day of February, 1900, at half-past ten o'clock in the forenoon of that day, then and there to attend the probate of the said last will and testament.

And such of you as are hereby cited as are under the age of twenty-one years are required to appear by your guardian, if you have one, or if you have none, to appear and apply for one to be appointed, or in the event of your neglect or failure to do so, a guardian will be appointed by the Surrogate to represent and act for you in the proceeding.

In testimony whereof we have caused the seal of the Surrogates' Court of the said County of New York to be hereunto affixed. [L. S.] Witness, Hon. Frank T. Fitzgerald, a Surrogate of our said County, at the City of New York, the 9th day of December, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and ninety-nine.

J. FAIRFAX McLAUGHLIN,
Clerk of the Surrogates' Court.

What $15 buys.

Your choice among hundreds of fancy mixed sack suits—favorite styles, so but few of each style; were $15 to $30. Only 42 were as low as $15.

You may prefer a black cutaway suit—if you can't find trousers, coat and vest go at $12.50; were $18 to $32.

Then there's double-breasted frock coats and vests; last week $20 to $38—a mere handful left.

To top it all, one of these rough or smooth overcoats; were $16 to $25.

FLINT'S FINE FURNITURE

Oriental Imagery in Color.

Old weavers found in the birds and flowers of their own beautiful Persian gardens the inspirations for the wonderful color harmonies of their rugs. Catching the vivid brightness of plumage and bloom, they set them against dull but rich grounds of gold, red, blue, and pure deep ivory with an art that even the famous Italian "colorists" never attained.

We have greatly reduced many which show what a glamorous charm these old rugs impart as portieres or couch covers for walls or strewn on floors. Their luxurious masses of rare old tones, giving changing lights and wonderful sheen, as none of our rugs are overtreated with acids to give them their antique effect.

NEW YORK LEGISLATURE.—Both houses convened at Albany about noon, but after organizing and listening to the Governor's message they adjourned until Wednesday night next. In the Assembly the amended rules limiting debate to fifteen minutes for each member were adopted.—Page 5.

CONGRESS.—In the Senate a number of amendments were offered yesterday to the Currency bill, which is to be called up for consideration to-day. Representative Sulzer offered a resolution in the House asking Secretary Gage to furnish any letters or agreements that may have passed between the National City and Hanover Banks relative to deposits of public money. Senator Pettigrew offered a resolution in the Senate asking for certain information concerning the early fighting near Manila. When it was objected to, Senator Hoar expressed his disapproval and intimated a belief that there was a tendency to suppress desired information.—Page 10.

FOREIGN.—Gen. French, who expected to occupy Colesberg, has met with such stubborn resistance that he has asked for reinforcements. An unconfirmed report has been received that the Boers yesterday attacked Gen. Gatacre's forces near Molteno. Lord Methuen is expected to attack the Boers soon at Modder River. Ambassador Choate presented a protest to Lord Salisbury on the flour seizures yesterday. No definite reply was received, but the British Premier intimated that Great Britain would act equitably. No reply to the German protest against the seizure of the Bundesrath has been sent to Berlin. The French Royalist conspiracy trials have ended, with the conviction of three men, MM. Déroulède, Buffet, and Guerin. Seventy-two prisoners were acquitted. Sentence has not yet been passed on the convicted men. The British royal yacht Victoria and Albert was yesterday partially wrecked at the Pembroke dock. Mr. Choate yesterday opened the free library at Acton. The bubonic plague has been discovered in Manilla. It has also reappeared in Honolulu, and broken out in a hitherto uninfected district in Brazil. The earthquakes in Russia Tuesday killed 600 persons. Maroczy won first prize in the Vienna chess tournament. It is stated that Austria contemplates the immediate expenditure of £20,000,000 in increasing the army and navy.—Pages 1, 2, and 7.

CAR AND FOUNDRY DIVIDEND.

Earnings of Nearly $3,000,000 in Nine Months Reported.

Special to The New York Times.

LOUISVILLE, Ky., Jan. 3.—The directors of the American Car and Foundry Company at a meeting held in St. Louis yesterday declared the usual quarterly dividend of 1¾ per cent. on the preferred stock, payable Feb. 1. Books close Jan. 10.

One of the directors is authority for the statement that the figures produced at the meeting showed that the earnings for the first nine months were $2,717,412.60. The net earnings for the quarter ended Nov. 30 were $1,130,100 against $930,000 for the quarter ended Aug. 31.

Furthermore, he says, it is the policy of the company to make no distribution among the holders of the common stock, but to continue the accretions to the surplus until from $4,000,000 to $5,000,000 have been accumulated. As a further step toward this, the company at the meeting today canceled $914,000 of stock represented by cash in the treasury, leaving but $29,090,600 of the preferred instead of the $30,000,000 authorized.

MR. CHOATE ACTS QUICKLY

Protests to Lord Salisbury Against Flour Seizures.

NO DEFINITE REPLY RECEIVED

British Premier Does Not Relish This Country's Attitude on the Question, but Is Courteous.

LONDON, Jan 3.—The United States Ambassador, Joseph H. Choate, visited the British Premier, Lord Salisbury, at the Foreign Office this evening, for the purpose of making the first official representations on the subject of the Delagoa Bay flour seizures. Mr. Choate received no definite reply, as the Premier informed him that the British Government had not yet arrived at any decision as to whether or not foodstuffs were contraband of war. But Lord Salisbury assured Mr. Choate that the commercial rights of the United States would be equitably considered, and that a decision in this important matter would be reached as soon as possible. The interview was brief.

It is learned that Lord Salisbury has not only got the Attorney General, Sir Richard Webster, working hard on the question of the Delagoa Bay seizures, but that he is consulting with the ablest lawyers in Great Britain. To quote a high official:

"England is between Scylla and Charybdis. If we declare foodstuffs contraband we put ourselves in a most awkward position should we be a neutral power in some future war. We are most anxious to conserve the interests of the United States, yet self-preservation must necessarily come first."

It was further learned that Great Britain may lay down new regulations regarding contraband, making a distinction between food evidently intended for domestic purposes and food palpably intended for field rations. Under the latter head might come certain classes of canned goods.

The British Government fully realizes that the representations of Mr. Choate will compel it to decide this far-reaching matter, and while his request has been made and received in the most friendly spirit, the quandary is not relished by Lord Salisbury, though it is not regarded as likely to cause international friction.

One thing is certain, the question will not be settled hurriedly, though it is impossible even for the Cabinet Ministers to forecast the date when Mr. Choate will receive a definite answer, which must settle Great Britain's stand upon the question of contraband.

A correspondent has been informed on good authority that Great Britain will not take Delagoa Bay. The British Government, it is added, does not contemplate any such step, in spite of the clamor of the press and public opinion upon the advisability of so doing.

A dispatch to The Pall Mall Gazette from Berne says the award in the Delagoa Bay question is being drawn up, and that it is positively stated that it will be published toward the end of the month.

LOSSES BY FLOUR SEIZURES.

Only a Portion of the Amount Rests on the Shippers in This Country.

It now appears that a portion of the cargo which was shipped from this port on the steamship Mashona to Delagoa Bay and seized by the British was not paid for when it left New York, and that in consequence the shippers are at present under financial loss.

After the various seizures were made it became known that a number of exporters in this city had goods on one or more of the vessels. While considerable annoyance was expressed about the seizures, and Great Britain was accused of acting in an unjustifiably high-handed manner, none of the exporters complained that they would lose anything, as they said that they had demanded cash in advance for shipments to South Africa in consideration of the present unsettled condition of that country.

The firm of Flint, Eddy & Co., however, it is learned, did not receive payment in advance for all their shipments. As soon as they learned of the seizure they communicated with their counsel, S. G. Hopkins of Hopkins & Hopkins, who laid the matter before the Secretary of State. The latter communicated with the United States Ambassador in London and with the United States Consul at Lorenzo Marques, and notified Flint, Eddy & Co. that he had done so. As stated in THE NEW YORK TIMES of yesterday, instructions have now been cabled to Mr. Choate to the effect that the United States cannot admit the right of seizure in such cases.

A member of the firm of Flint, Eddy & Co. said yesterday that if cargoes shipped to neutral ports were to be regarded as contraband of war because they were likely to be resold by the consignees to the belligerents, American exporters wanted to know it.

"These shipments," it was added, "were made before the outbreak of the war. We sent our goods to our regular correspondents, just as we had done for years past. There is of course little doubt that part of the cargoes seized would have gone to the South African Republic, since Delagoa Bay is the natural port of entry for the Transvaal. But that result would have been reached only by a reselling on the part of our correspondents. Our interest in the disposal of the goods would have ceased entirely."

Interviews with other exporters make it probable that Flint, Eddy & Co. are the only firm in this country which has a direct financial interest in the seized goods. All the other goods shipped by Americans on the vessels whose cargoes were seized were paid for before they were placed on board.

The flour in the steamships Beatrice, Mashona, and Maria was made by a milling company in West Reading, Penn. There were 50,000 sacks, and each sack contained ninety-eight pounds, or a half barrel. The value of the whole lot seized is placed at $125,000. The Reading company, it is said, has 10,000 additional sacks ready for shipment, but it will not be sent for the present.

GERMANY AWAITS AN ANSWER.

Government Is Cool, but a Threatening Tone is Discernable in Some Official Quarters.

BERLIN, Jan. 3.—The German Foreign Office informed a correspondent this afternoon that Great Britain had not then answered Germany's note of protest regarding the seizure by the British cruiser Magicienne of the German imperial mail steamer Bundesrath off Delagoa Bay. It appears that the British Foreign Office desires first to communicate with Durban on the subject. This desire is not regarded as indicating any disposition on the part of Great Britain to delay the final adjustment of the matter.

There has been a lively interchange of notes between London and Berlin, but the German Foreign Office is apparently keeping cool.

On the other hand, a violent and threatening tone toward Great Britain is observable in other official quarters.

The Berliner Tageblatt, remarking that the anti-British sentiment is stronger than ever, and recalling Joseph Chamberlain's Leicester speech, says that "if this is the way in which England hopes to gain an alliance with Germany, she is making the veriest mistake."

The Neueste Nachrichten says it learns that the Foreign Office is pressing the Bundesrath incident decisively from the legal standpoint, but hopes for an adjustment "without interruption of correct official relations."

A correspondent has received information going to show that Bundesrath was possibly guilty of carrying contraband. Heavy shipments of arms and ammunition were shipped in December to Macao and Hongkong, consigned to order. It is surmised that their ultimate destination was either the Philippines or the Transvaal.

In any event, the Bundesrath incident is being worked to create sentiment in favor of naval increase, and the passage of the Navy bill is now considered assured in spite of Centrist opposition. No serious conflict between Emperor William and the Reichstag is expected. On the contrary, popular sentiment for a larger navy is constantly growing.

The semi-official Berliner Post says:

"We expect to see the Reichstag equal to a great national task. Otherwise an appeal to the voters will undoubtedly secure a favorable majority."

The official Berliner Correspondenz quoted, in a double-leaded article, the declaration of the Hamburg Chamber of Commerce that Germany's navy must not remain behind other navies, and pronounces this a most significant demonstration in favor of an increase of the fleet and a world-policy for Germany.

The pronouncement of the Hamburg Chamber was very emphatic: "Germany must cast her eyes toward the future and make her power felt if she wishes to maintain her rank among the nations. We can congratulate ourselves upon having a ruler impressed with this historical necessity."

An inquiry is progressing among exporters concerning the trade possibilities of the Transvaal. This is considered to mean that the Boers after the war will divert their trade from England to Germany.

SQUADRON FOR DELAGOA BAY.

Great Britain Will Order Warships from Gibraltar.

LONDON, Jan. 3.—It is reported that the Particular Service Squadron, now at Gibraltar, will be ordered to South Africa as soon as the Channel Squadron returns to Gibraltar.

It is added that this squadron of cruisers is just suited to watch Delagoa Bay.

Contraband Found on the Bundesrath.

LONDON, Jan. 3.—It is reported at Durban that the captured German steamer Bundesrath had on board five big guns, 50 tons of shells, and 180 trained artillerymen.

WILL OF GEORGE A. POWERS.

His Estate Valued at About $2,000,000—A Large Portion Left to His Son George.

The will of George A. Powers, who was one of the best-known real estate operators in Brooklyn, was filed yesterday in the Surrogate's office. The estate, which consists mainly of real property, is roughly estimated to be worth $2,000,000. Mr. Powers is survived by five children, George Powers, Mrs. Mary L. O'Flynn, and Mrs. Georgiana Keep of Brooklyn; Thomas Powers of Manhattan, and William Powers of Tottenville, S. I.

The testator leaves to his son George, who is named as the sole executor, the greater share of the property, which includes many valuable pieces of real estate in Fulton, Pacific, Pierrepont, and Navy Streets and Washington and Fourth Avenues, Brooklyn. The property at 138 Fulton Street, Manhattan, is also a part of the estate.

The testator also leaves all of the household furniture, wines, musical instruments, &c., in the family residence, at Washington and Greene Avenues; all of his carriages and horses, and a bond and mortgage for $100,000 to his son George. The family residence is also left to him.

The properties at 290 Livingston Street, 5 and 557 Fulton Street, 156 and 158 Pierrepont Street, and 610 Fulton Street are left to George in trust for the benefit of William Powers for life.

The testator leaves the properties at 159 Pierrepont Street, 559, 579, and 599 Fulton Street to George in trust for the benefit of Thomas Powers and his heirs.

Parcels of real estate in Fulton, Pacific, and Navy Streets, in Fourth Avenue, and in St. James Place are left to George, the son, in trust for the benefit of the testator's daughters, Mrs. Keep and Mrs. O'Flynn.

The legatees are forbidden to contest the will on pain of being disinherited.

LAUNDRY TRUST FORMED?

Company Incorporated in Illinois to Absorb Smaller Concerns.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, Jan. 3.—Articles of incorporation of the Sanitary Laundry Company of Chicago were issued at Springfield to-day. The capital stock was placed at $2,000,000. The object of the company is set forth as being "laundering, dyeing and repairing, and the manufacture of toilet articles." The incorporators are E. D. Ellis, President of the Eureka Laundry Company; Abraham F. Doremus, proprietor of a laundry at 458-464 West Madison Street, and Peter D. Amble. The corporation is backed by A. J. Graham, a banker. Several other capitalists are said to be interested in it.

For some weeks the promoters of the concern have been visiting the laundries of the city trying to secure their co-operation in the scheme, and it is understood that a number of them have entered the combine. Officials in the new concern were reticent about the matter this afternoon, and refused to give out any definite information.

WILL PUSH GOEBEL'S CONTEST.

Committee Which Will Hear the Evidence Is to be Formed To-day.

FRANKFORT, Ky., Jan. 3.—The joint committee which will hear evidence in the Goebel-Taylor and Beckham-Marshall contests for Governor and Lieutenant Governor will be formed to-morrow. The law provides that the members of the committee shall be drawn by lot, three in the Senate and eight in the House. The policy of the Goebel leaders will be to push the contests to a final issue as speedily as possible.

Col. Whallen was arraigned on the attempted bribery charge before Magistrate Thompson to-day, and held over to the Franklin County Grand Jury, his bond being fixed at $10,000. In the Circuit Court President Hector V. Loving of the Louisville Trust Company was before Judge Cantrill, charged with contempt for disobeying the order of the court to turn over the vault box alleged to hold the $4,500 which, it is claimed, was to be paid to Harrell in the event he voted against Goebel in the contest. Loving stated that he merely desired to protect the customers of his company, and his attorney moved to quash the summons against him. This the court overruled.

Thereupon a response was filed to the rule for contempt, and in this it is stated that Whallen, Harrell, and Charles Ryan rented the box in question and deposited something in it, the box being sealed up and covered over with white paper. The trust company officials were notified not to allow the box to be opened except in the presence of and by the consent of all three parties. Judge Cantrill adjudged the response insufficient, and ordered the box to be produced in court at 11 o'clock to-morrow. It is understood the order of the court will be complied with, a motion for an appeal to the Court of Appeals having been overruled.

Papers in seventeen contested election cases affecting seats of House members have been filed with House Clerk Leigh. Ten of the contestants are Democrats and seven Republicans. The result of these cases will have an important effect on the contests over the Governor and the Lieutenant Governor.

"LUCKY" BALDWIN'S VENTURE.

Special to The New York Times.

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 3.—"Lucky" Baldwin, to whom remains only a remnant of a once large fortune, proposes in the Spring to go to Cape Nome, the new mining camp under the Arctic circle, and start a dance house. Whether he will add games of chance that appeal to miners is yet uncertain.

Mr. Baldwin has chartered a vessel to carry his troupe, and it is probable the theatre will be so arranged that it can be put up in a few hours. Out of this venture Baldwin hopes to recoup the fortune he has lost in the last ten years.

A THANKSGIVING AT GUAM

Proclamation Issued by Capt. Leary, the Governor.

Celebrations of Feasts of Patron Saints Forbidden—No Export of Food Allowed.

Special to The New York Times.

BALTIMORE, Jan. 3.—Capt. Peter Leary, United States Army, stationed at Fort McHenry, received a letter to-day from his brother, Capt. Richard P. Leary, Governor of Guam, in the Ladrone Islands, which contained a number of interesting documents pertaining to the affairs of the new possessions of the United States. The first Thanksgiving proclamation ever seen by the inhabitants of Guam was issued by Gov. Leary, and follows:

"Whereas, It hath pleased Almighty God in His divine providence to grant to us during the past year a continuance of His goodwill and unbounded love, as exemplified in His bestowal of the countless blessings of health, happiness, peace, prosperity, protection, and freedom of religious worship, exemption from devastating scourges of epidemic diseases and storms, release from the arrogant and tyrannical domination of unworthy preceptors, and in the enjoyment of other unceasing blessings, it is proper that a special day be set aside as a day of thanksgiving and prayer to our Supreme Benefactor for all these gifts;

"Therefore, in conformity with the time-honored custom of the United States Government, I, Richard P. Leary, Captain, United States Navy, Governor of the Island of Guam, do hereby appoint and set aside Thursday, Nov. 30, 1899, as a day of thanksgiving and prayer, and all persons in this island are recommended to abstain from unnecessary work on that day and to assemble in their respective places of worship at such times as may be convenient to give thanks and praise to Almighty God for His merciful goodness and loving kindness to us and all men."

Gov. Leary has already caused slavery to be abolished in the islands, compelling a number of friars to leave the place, and has amended the marriage laws in regard to polygamy. One of his recent orders states that it is prohibited to import or sell intoxicating liquors in the island except by a special license issued by the Government, and that violation of the order will be punished by a fine of $100 or imprisonment for thirty days, or by both. For a second offense, all of the offender's goods may be confiscated. "Drunkenness," says the order, "is the chief source of all crime and trouble in this island, and must and shall cease."

A second order says: "For the protection of Government interests, and as a safeguard against the machinations, devices, and schemes of speculators and adventurers, it is hereby ordered that all persons who claim ownership of land in this island or its dependencies, are prohibited from selling or transferring any portion of such property without first obtaining the consent of the Government. Violation of this order may be punished by fine or imprisonment or both." Capt. Leary states that he is making every effort to teach the natives to be self-supporting. An order issued to further this idea follows:

"Until otherwise ordered, the exportation of hogs, cattle, fowl, eggs, rice, corn, and sweet potatoes from this island is hereby forbidden. Articles of food may be delivered to vessels in sufficient quantities for the subsistence of those on board during their stay in port, and their passage to the next port of destination. The delivery of such articles of food to ships is prohibited without a Government license."

In consequence of the liability of riots, the following order was issued.

"Public celebrations of the feast days of the patron saints of villages will not be permitted. The Church and its members may celebrate their feast days within the walls of the church, chapel, or private residences in accordance with the regulations for the maintenance of public peace, and unless otherwise ordered; the only public holidays recognized will be Sunday, and the holidays authorized by the United States statute laws, and by proclamations of his Excellency, the President of the United States.

FEARS FOR A TRANSPORT.

The Victoria May Have Been Lost in a Typhoon on the Way to Manila.

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 3.—The big transport Victoria is now seventy-eight days out of this port for Manila, and shipping men are fearful that the vessel has gone to the bottom. Twenty per cent. reinsurance was made on the Victoria to-day.

She was spoken by the transport Tartar on Nov. 14, between this port and Honolulu, with a broken shaft. The Victoria refused tow, expecting to have the broken shaft repaired in a week at most. A few days later a terrible typhoon raged in the track of the Victoria, the same storm that nearly sent the Manuenuse to the bottom. Nothing has been heard of the transport since spoken by the Tartar.

The vessel is owned by J. Ness of London, and left here for Manila loaded with forage and supplies for the forces in the Philippines. Capt. Blakely was in command, and it carried a crew of fifty-two Europeans. The ship is of 1,500 tons net, and valued at $150,000.

DR. McGLYNN VERY ILL.

He Is Not Strong Enough to Undergo a Necessary Operation.

Special to The New York Times.

NEWBURG, N. Y., Jan 3.—The Rev. Dr. Edward McGlynn, pastor of St. Mary's Roman Catholic Church in this city, is still confined to his room by illness, and his condition is such as to cause alarm among his large circle of acquaintances. Six weeks ago he was taken ill, but there was every sign of an early recovery, and the physicians said he would be himself in ten days, but he continued to lose flesh and strength daily. His once tall and robust frame is now emaciated and he is now scarcely recognizable even by close friends. It has just become public that he has a mysterious growth on the right hip and its appearance has baffled his physicians. It is eating its way in his system and robbing him of his vitality and strength.

The doctors say he is not in a condition to undergo an operation, as the strain on his present weak system would undoubtedly prove fatal. Dr. McGlynn is sixty-eight years of age, and has always been active and enjoyed the best of health until his present illness. Only clerical friends are allowed to see him. Every day the parsonage is besieged by members of the congregation inquiring as to the condition of their pastor. Dr. McGlynn, although weak physically, is strong in mind and spirit. He jokes with his callers and converses with his usual keenness and intelligence. He says he hopes for the best, but must bow to the will of Him who is all-wise.

Man and Wife Sixty Years.

BURLINGTON, Jan. 3.—John T. Severns and wife celebrated the sixtieth anniversary of their wedding at their home last evening. Three children, eight grandchildren, and one great-grandchild of the couple were present. Two witnesses of the wedding only survive, one of them, Mrs. Cornelia Goslin, of Washington, D. C., being present at the celebration.

POUND TO SUCCEED PAYN

Cornell Professor Is Selected for Superintendent of Insurance.

FORMERLY A STATE SENATOR

Payn's Friends Say It Will Be Impossible to Secure Enough Votes to Displace Present Incumbent.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, Jan. 3.—It is stated positively and on good authority that Gov. Roosevelt has determined to nominate Cuthbert W. Pound of Lockport for the position of State Superintendent of Insurance, to succeed Louis F. Payn, whose term will expire next month. The report is accepted without reservation by the legislators who are still here, and there is much speculation as to Mr. Pound's chances for confirmation by the Senate.

The friends of Superintendent Payn, and they are prominent in all the groups in the hotel corridors, are boasting to-night that the Governor will find it impossible to secure the twenty-six votes needed to confirm the nomination. Some of the Payn men are making offers to wager odds that their chief will hold over until the end of the Governor's term.

There is no mistaking the feeling of the followers of Mr. Payn. Led by him, they are ready to make a contest against the Governor, and openly declare that they will carry the fight into the State Convention next Fall and attempt to prevent the renomination of Gov. Roosevelt.

It is impossible to learn here what answer Mr. Pound made to the Governor when the latter made a tender of the nomination. It is said that the Governor offered the place to six different organization Republicans, who each refused to accept it.

Mr. Pound was a member of the State Senate for one term, which ended in 1895. He was a member of the Lexow committee which investigated the workings of the New York City Police Department in 1894, and during the two years in which he was in Albany he was quite prominent in legislative affairs. He was a candidate for renomination in 1895, but was defeated by Timothy E. Ellsworth, the present Senator from the Forty-fifth District. Since that time Mr. Pound has not been actively engaged in politics, having accepted a chair in Cornell University, which he now holds.

CHICAGO MULCTS A RAILWAY.

Agrees to Give the Northwestern Elevated Road an Extension of Time for $100,000.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, Jan. 3.—After a short and bitter conflict the municipal authorities and the officials of the Northwestern Elevated Railroad Company agreed to-night to bury the hatchet. The chief stipulation is that the company pay into the City Treasury $100,000 in consideration of an extension of time for the completion of its track and sub-structure to May 1, 1900, and for the building of its stations to Jan. 1, 1901. The sum named is an equivalent for $100,000 forfeit provided in case it failed to finish the huge framework by the first day of this year.

The city agrees to drop the prosecution of its case against the train crew arrested Tuesday while attempting to run a train in defiance of the order.

The arrangement was effected at a conference held late this afternoon between the Mayor and the Council Committee on Finance, acting on the part of the city and representatives of the road. After a brief session a modus satisfactory to both sides was established. Its provisions were drawn up in the form of an ordinance, which will be presented Monday evening.

In view of the newly made agreement all effort on the part of the city to use the Northwestern as a club to enforce the payment of compensation alleged to be due the city from the Union Loop Company is expected to cease.

FAVORS AMERICAN LABOR.

Mrs. Anderson of Greenwich Orders that Italians Be Discharged.

Special to The New York Times.

GREENWICH, Conn., Jan. 3.—Mrs. Elizabeth Anderson, the daughter of the late Jeremiah Milbank of New York, has decided in favor of home labor in preference to Italian labor from out of town, although it will cost her many thousand dollars to do so. She owns the large estate where "Boss" Tweed once lived, and recently added to it by purchasing 100 acres of the Lyman Mead estate. The last acquisition she proposes to make into a large park, to which the townspeople will have free access. She has engaged a Superintendent to carry out her ideas, and for several weeks past 100 laborers have been employed there, laying out and building five miles of roads, an artificial lake, and doing grading.

It will take at least a year to complete the work, and then Mrs. Anderson will admit the public to it, although it is understood she will not deed it to the town until her death.

On Saturday night last, in looking over the pay roll, Mrs. Anderson discovered that there were many foreign names thereon. She inquired and found that the Superintendent had thirty Italians from nearby towns working at $1.15 per day. The other men were getting $1.75. She was displeased and ordered that hereafter none but resident laborers be employed, and that the wages be uniformly $1.75 per day.

TWO-MINUTE MILES ON ICE.

Boats on the Shrewsbury Cover Six Miles Under Twelve Minutes.

Special to The New York Times.

RED BANK, N. J., Jan. 3.—The small yachts of the North Shrewsbury Ice Yacht Club fleet tried conclusions in a six-mile race this afternoon. The little fellows did some fast sailing, the winner covering the distance in a trifle less than twelve minutes. The starters and the order in which they finished follow:

Commodore Samuel Morford's Flaw, Joseph L. Bursowe's Hurricane, Rensselaer Hendrickson's Nip, and Charles Foxwell's Flirt. Several more yachts were put on the ice to-day and in a race which will be sailed to-morrow there will probably be a large entry list.

INSURANCE COMPANIES BARRED.

Right to Do Business in Massachusetts Taken from Two Concerns.

Special to The New York Times.

BOSTON, Jan. 3.—Insurance Commissioner Cutting yesterday peremptorily revoked the authority to do business in this State of the Globe and Rutgers Fire Insurance Company and the Insurance Company of the State of New York for violation of the laws of the Commonwealth. Both companies have recently reinsured their business, including their Massachusetts risks, in the Manhattan of New York, which has no authority to do business in this State. The law violated by these companies is Chapter 537 of the Acts of 1898.

The risks of the Globe and Rutgers Fire Insurance Company and that of the Insurance Company of the State of New York were reinsured in the Manhattan Fire Insurance Company just before the close of 1899, and it was then announced that the former company would continue to operate in a limited manner, and that the latter company would be placed in voluntary liquidation.

FITCHBURG RAILROAD LEASED.

The Boston and Maine Will Assume Control Under an Agreement on a 5 Per Cent. Basis.

Special to The New York Times.

BOSTON, Jan. 3.—The "Street" this afternoon learned the fact that the Fitchburg Railroad is to become in the immediate future a part of the Boston and Maine system, and the price of Fitchburg preferred advanced to 125. The Fitchburg Directors, as is well known, recently rejected the New York Central's offer of a ninety-nine-year lease at 4 per cent., and Fitchburg Railroad interests have planned to vigorously oppose the ratification of the Boston and Albany-New York Central lease by the Massachusetts Legislature.

It is declared that the Vanderbilts could better afford to lease the Fitchburg on a 5 per cent. basis, and thus stifle opposition, than to court the possibility of a defeat at the hands of the Legislature. But the Vanderbilts have not raised their bid. Meanwhile the Fitchburg Directors have been in consultation with the Boston and Maine people regarding the lease, and the announcement of completed negotiations will not be long delayed.

Both President Tuttle of the Boston and Maine and President Codman of the Fitchburg refused to-night to either affirm or deny a report that a lease agreement on a 5 per cent. basis had been made by the two Boards of Directors, and several of the Directors of both companies who were interrogated were likewise dumb. Nevertheless, there is the best of authority for stating that the deal was consummated to-day.

The Boston and Maine and the Fitchburg are competitors for Canadian business, the former being the ally of the Canadian Pacific and the latter having a traffic arrangement with the Grand Trunk. They are also in a less important fashion in competition for Chicago business. This alliance, while it gives the Boston and Maine Central control of all Northern New England, will be in the nature of a coup, and will not be at all palatable to the Vanderbilts, who thus lose their only hope of monopolizing New England traffic with the West.

THE SOLDIERS' HOME INQUIRY.

Witnesses Before the Charity Commissioners at Bath Testify Against Col. Shepard.

Special to The New York Times.

BATH, N. Y., Jan. 3.—Commissioners Eugene A. Philbin, Peter Walrath, and Harvey W. Putnam of the State Board of Charities; Deputy Attorney General John H. Coyne, representing Gov. Roosevelt and the Attorney General's office, and Deputy State Controller Theodore P. Gilman, representing the Controller, to-day, behind closed doors, resumed the investigation of Col. Charles O. Shepard's administration of the Soldiers' Home at this place.

The committee held three sessions, convening promptly at 10 o'clock this morning. The first witness was former Assistant Surgeon Dr. E. C. Pixley, who testified that in his opinion Col. Shepard was addicted to the excessive use of intoxicants, and was at times irritable and harsh in his treatment of the inmates while under the influence of liquor. The next witness was Walter Stewart, a former servant at Commandant Shepard's house. His testimony was in reference to certain vouchers which were alleged to have been certified to by Shepard and upon which Shepard drew Stewart's salary, $16 per month, for two months, while the latter was away and not in the employ of the State.

Gen. John M. Palmer of Albany, a Trustee of the home, was the next witness. He gave a history of the home from its infancy being one of the original Trustees. Gen. Palmer said that in his opinion Commandant Shepard was unfit for the position. The committee adjourned to-night until 10 o'clock to-morrow morning.

DIES IN A LODGE ROOM.

Ralph Phillipson of Chicago Expires After Making a Speech.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, Jan. 3.—After delivering a short address to the members of District Grand Lodge No. 3, Independent Order of B'nai Brith, Ralph Phillipson, sixty-seven years old, a wealthy retired clothing dealer, died suddenly of heart disease in the lodge room of the society, in the American Express Building, shortly before midnight.

After being called upon several times to speak, Mr. Phillipson reluctantly agreed, and spoke for fifteen minutes, during which time he became very much wrought up. The hall was still reverberating with applause when he made for a chair on the side of the stage. The speaker suddenly fell face downward on the floor, and was in an unconscious condition when picked up by his fellow-members. A doctor was called, but the man died before the arrival of the physician.

WASHINGTON "GANG" IN COURT.

Boy Who "Initiated" Another with Yellow Paint Is Fined.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 3.—The four small boys who painted young Edward McFarland yellow on Christmas Day, were tried for assault to-day. The testimony was novel and diverting. They produced, as witnesses, their entire "gang" of about a dozen boys. All swore that it had been the custom ever since they could remember to "initiate" new boys into the "gang," and the oldest boy in the lot could remember that when he was a toddler in skirts the custom had been in full blast among boys who are now grown up. Generally the new boys are divested of their clothing, painted, and turned loose in the street, as was McFarland. Boys have been painted crimson, black, and navy blue, so that McFarland was considered by his peers to have gotten off easy.

John Griggs, who wielded the paint brush, was fined $5, and the personal bonds of the other boys were taken.

"JACK THE CUTTER" IDENTIFIED

Washington Prisoner Has Operated Here and in Philadelphia.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 3.—The mysterious "Jack the Cutter" of Washington is Max Krebs, and he is the same man who was caught when beginning operations in New York in 1898. There is evidence that he is the same cutter who slashed so many women's dresses in Philadelphia during the Grand Army encampment there. He has operated, therefore, in at least three cities. He is a mystery to the police, who cannot account for his crimes.

There is nothing about Krebs to suggest an unbalanced or nervous person. He is placid-faced, meek, and guileless looking, a mere boy in appearance. He has many reputable friends here, who, in spite of his positive identification, still declare that it is impossible that such a well-behaved and quiet youth could commit such crimes.

Krebs has confessed that he was arrested in New York for dress slashing, but will say nothing to shed any light on his mysterious mania.

DENIED BY SENATOR HANNA.

CLEVELAND, Ohio, Jan. 3.—Senator Hanna declared to-day that, although he had been urged to stand for the permanent Chairmanship of the next Republican National Convention, he would not do so.

"There are other men," he said, "who are more ambitious than I, and who value that honor more than I do. I will give way to them."

He also declared that he will not be one of the delegates at large from Ohio in the convention.

"I greatly desire that Gen. Dick shall have an uncontested place in the Ohio delegation at large," he explained, "and I am glad to step out in his favor. If I was to be considered as one of the delegates at large, precedent giving the place to me as a Senator, there would be a contest between Gen. Grosvenor and Gen. Dick. I being out of it, there will be room for both of them, as there should be, and friction will be avoided."

DEFIES THE CONTROLLER

School Board Refuses to Alter the December Pay Rolls.

CHARGES AGAINST MR. COLER

President Little Makes a Speech Reviewing the Year's Work and Upholding Official Action.

The School Board for Manhattan and the Bronx, at its meeting yesterday afternoon, the first held this year, took issue with Controller Coler in regard to the making out of its pay rolls and adopted a resolution, offered by ex-Judge George M. Van Hoesen, which, unless the Controller recedes from the position he has assumed, will compel another resort to the courts to decide the question in dispute.

President should make some statement about the arrangement entered into between himself and the Controller as to the making out of the pay-rolls. This board wants its President and itself set right in this matter. We want to show that we have performed our duty correctly under, to use a vulgar term, our job-lot charter. I have no desire to enter into a controversy with any other official, but I want it shown that certain statements, if not maliciously made, were known to be false and misleading. I don't think they ought to be allowed to pass unnoticed when we have all the necessary facts and papers to prove that we have been and are in the right. Our first duty, of course, is to protect the interests of the public school, and we can't do that properly unless we also protect the interests of the teachers. I don't believe that any department has the right to ask us to make sacrifices when we deem them illegal. Controllers and lawyers are not infallible. We don't want the charge to go unchallenged that we are conducting school affairs in a careless manner. We don't want to be criticised when we have done nothing to deserve criticism."

PRESIDENT LITTLE'S SURPRISE.

"The Chair," said President Little, "hardly knows where to begin in making such a statement as requested. It was to my utter surprise that Controller Coler raised another technical opposition to the payment of our teachers' salaries. If there is any one thing as to which this board took pains to be right, it was this same question. We were willing to admit for all the differences of opinion that prevailed as to the interpretation of the law. We were moderate and courteous in the stand we took, and willing that the matters in dispute be adjudged by the courts. When the question came before the courts, it was quickly decided in our favor. Justice Gaynor, in his opinion, used almost the same language that the President of this board did when the new schedule of May 17 was passed. We did not believe that it was the intention of the Legislature, or of the Mayor, or any one else that the pay of a male teacher should begin with $900, that he should be called upon to teach a number of years without any increase, and then at one jump be advanced to $2,100. It did not seem to us reasonable. So we adopted the May schedule, making a moderate increase of about $10 a month after a certain length of service, and so on. The Controller did not think we had any right to do this. We, therefore, joined issue, and the courts decided we were right.

"When it passed the May schedule the board, while not doubting its right to make it, and still not liking to overstep the line, had some correspondence on the subject with the Controller. On June 7 he was informed by letter that we had adopted the new schedule and that we couldn't then tell how much money would be needed to pay the boards increases and the Ahearn law's mandatory provisions. We, therefore, asked permission to pay salaries out of the general fund. Controller Coler, in reply, said that he fully concurred with us. We then made out the pay rolls under those conditions for June, July, August, and September. He paid them without protest. But now, he says, we were all wrong. He has waited until the end of the year to come to this conclusion. If we are wrong now, we were wrong in June, July, August, and September. In my opinion, Controller Coler has not shown a candid acquiescence in the order of the Court."

"For what purpose does he want us to make out different schedules?" asked Commissioner A. Stern.

DISCOURTESY TO THE BOARD.

"He wants us to give each particular in each teacher's account," replied President Little. "It is not treating us fairly or legitimately to ask us to go back to June last. It's a question of bookkeeping entirely. It is going outside the bounds of official courtesy to demand that this board should make out these different accounts."

Ex-Judge Van Hoesen asked if the Controller did not mean the December pay rolls only. President Little replied that Mr. Coler included all rolls since April 25 last, even the supplementary pay rolls.

"He wants them all analyzed since that time," added President Little. "Otherwise there would be nothing in his requirement. If he was willing to pay the last five months without protest there would be no reason for his protesting against the December pay rolls only."

"It seems," said ex-Judge Van Hoesen, "that we may have to take action in the courts to compel the Controller to adhere to the rolls as made out. Let the Controller himself assume the responsibility if he doesn't like the way the pay rolls stand. He has no right to shift this burden on us because it would mean more labor to his own employes. This is something for the Controller to attend to, it is not for us. If he has any difficulty in making up his books he ought to increase his staff, and not throw this work on the auditor of the Board of Education."

To explain the situation fully the privilege of the floor was extended to Auditor Cook. In answer to questions by various members, he said that $750,000 of revenue bonds had been sold to meet the mandatory provisions of the Ahearn law, that nearly $490,000 was required to meet the increases for 1899 under the May schedule and the Ahearn law's provisions that it was a very easy matter to state in bulk how much was required to meet each account, but that it would take several months to show in the pay rolls under which fund each cent was expended.

"What useful purpose is to be subserved by the Controller's demand?" asked Commissioner Burlingham.

"I know of no good reason," replied Auditor Cook.

"Is it a fact," asked ex-Judge Van Hoesen, "that he requires a statement from you not only for December, but for all amounts increased since June 1?"

"Yes, Sir."

Commissioner Burlingham asked if it was true that Brooklyn had sent in pay rolls showing the discrimination required by the Controller. Auditor Cook replied that it was not true. The only full pay rolls sent in from that borough were for Schools Nos. 9 and 23, and they were for the purposes of the test suit.

Commissioner Burlingham moved that President Little and the Committee on Finance be asked to confer with the Controller on the disputed question and report, if necessary, at a special meeting to be called by the President.

THE BOARD'S DEFIANCE.

Ex-Judge Van Hoesen offered the following substitute, which was unanimously adopted:

"Resolved, That the pay rolls for December, 1899, as presented to the Controller, are the same in form and make-up as the pay rolls presented to him every month since June, and that there is no reason known to this board why the pay rolls for the month of December should now be put into a new and unusual form; and that it is for the Controller, and not for this board, to keep the account of the amounts to be charged to the fund raised by the sale of revenue bonds under the so-called Ahearn bill, inasmuch as the proceeds of the sale of the revenue bonds, when received by the Controller, necessarily form part of the general school fund, out of which the salaries of teachers are paid."

The meeting then adjourned.

SCHOOL SUPPLIES TOO HIGH.

Controller's Charges Against Department of Education — Commissioner Moriarty Accuses Him of Injustice.

An investigation which Controller Coler recently made into the methods of purchasing supplies for the Department of Education disclosed the fact, he says, that the city was paying higher prices for certain articles, especially scissors, of which large quantities are used, than was absolutely necessary, and that the quality was restricted, thus shutting off competition. The inquiry was occasioned by the discovery by one of the Controller's subordinates that the prices paid for scissors were higher than equally serviceable articles command in the open retail market. Further investigation showed that, although the scissors bought were in accordance with the conditions relating to bids for stationery, they were of inferior quality.

In this particular instance all bidders for the supplying of the articles were compelled to submit prices on scissors, which were marked "official samples," bearing the exclusive mark of dealers, and consequently compelled to pay such prices as were asked by said dealers, irrespective of the quality or merits of the same. In this case there were furnished 550 dozen scissors, for which the price charged was $1,766.50, which was over $500 in excess of the price for which they could have been purchased from reputable dealers, who have stated that they are prepared to guarantee the quality of the scissors as being equal to those furnished to the Board of Education.

A great saving would have been made, the Controller says, had the bids on "official samples" been dispensed with.

Controller Coler objects particularly to the introduction of any provision in the invitation for bids for scissors and all supplies furnished and work done for the city that will restrict or embarrass full and open competition and prevent obtaining the lowest prices for the city. Under the conditions prospective bidders, he says, are discouraged from participation in bids for city work, and a decided benefit is lost by not having open competition.

Considerable correspondence between the Controller and the Board of Education followed the discovery of the alleged irregularity, and the bill of the successful bidder was held until after the Auditor of the Board of Education had explained the matter, when it was said because the prices were in accordance with the bid and the resolution of the Committee on Supplies authorizing the purchase. President Little, in a letter to the Committee on Supplies, upheld the position of the Controller, and advised that hereafter the competition for all supplies be open. In conclusion, President Little said:

"I have given some attention to the question of scissors and am satisfied that the board has lost a great deal of money during the year by not following the suggestion here made, and I fear that this is not the only article of which the same thing may be said."

The matter was brought up at the meeting of the School Board for Manhattan and the Bronx yesterday by Commissioner Moriarty, who is a member of its Committee on Supplies, and is also Chairman of the Central Board's Committee on Supplies. He said that the contract for the scissors was awarded by the board before he became a member of it. He was sorry, he said, that the Controller had been guilty of an attempt to cast an undeserved slur on the present board. He could not help declaring it an unfair and unjust statement.

Commissioner A. Stern raised the point of order that it was a matter for action by the Central Board, and President Little declared the point well taken.

BIG CUTS IN TEACHERS' PAY.

Appropriation for 1900 $600,000 Under the Amount Now Needed.

One of the officers of the School Board for Manhattan and the Bronx said yesterday that the whole staff of 6,000 teachers of these two boroughs, except such as profited by the $600 mandatory provision of the Ahearn law, would have their salaries reduced by the new schedule which is to go into effect this month. The appropriation for 1900, he said, is $600,000 less than asked for and needed. Some of the teachers will be reduced as much as $200 or $300.

None of the salaries of the fifteen Associate Superintendents or of the clerks and other employes of the School Board will be reduced, as the amount asked for in their cases was not cut down by the Board of Estimate and Apportionment.

NEW SCHOOL COMMISSIONERS.

The Mayor Appoints A. H. Morris and T. W. Timpson.

Mayor Van Wyck yesterday appointed Alfred Hennen Morris and Thomas W. Timpson School Commissioners for Manhattan and the Bronx. The School Board, therefore, now has its full complement of twenty-one members.

Mr. Timpson is the senior partner of the firm of T. W. Timpson & Co., real estate dealers, contractors, and builders, whose offices are at 1,231 Franklin Avenue.

Mr. Morris is a son of the late John A. Morris. He and his brother, D. H. Morris, are owners of Morris Park. A. H. Morris was born in 1864 at Wilmington, Del., and was graduated from Harvard University in 1885. He married Miss Jessie Harding, and his home is at Avylon, Westchester. He is in the real estate business, and has always been a Democrat. In March, 1892, he was elected Supervisor of the Town of Westchester, and in November, 1892, was elected to the Assembly from the Second District of Westchester County. He served on the Committees on Ways and Means, Affairs of Villages, and Public Education. In November, 1893, he was a candidate for the Senate in the Fifteenth District, but was defeated by George W. Robertson, Republican.

PROSPECT PARK THRONGED.

Twenty-five Thousand Skaters on the Lakes During the Day.

A record-breaking crowd of skaters visited the lakes in Prospect Park, Brooklyn, yesterday, the second day of skating this season. The entire chain of lakes in the park was thrown open yesterday afternoon, and the police estimated that fully 25,000 skaters were on the ice during the day.

There was a big rush of girls and boys to the Park when the schools closed. There were thousands of skaters on the ice at 10 o'clock last night, when the lakes were closed. The probabilities are that there will be excellent skating in Prospect Park for a week at least, the ice being in fine condition.

PHONETIC SPELLING APPROVED.

Press of the University of Chicago Will Use It.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, Jan. 3.—Phonetic spelling was given a vote of approval by the University Congregation at the University of Chicago this afternoon. The following resolution was adopted:

"Resolved, That the adoption by the Board of the University Press for use in the official publications and journals of the university of the list of words with changed spelling accepted by the National Educational Association be approved."

About a dozen publications are printed by The University Press. The Press Board adopted the change several months ago, but delayed making the innovation because the Faculty members wished that the question should be discussed by the congregation.

ST. PAUL'S ALUMNI MEET.

Gifts of $100,000 Toward a New "Upper School" and a Library from George R. Sheldon.

The whole ground floor of the Academy of Medicine was given over yesterday evening to graduates of St. Paul's School, at Concord, N. H., whose "old boys" are scattered from Maine to California. The occasion was a meeting of the Alumni Association of the school, where former pupils of various ages shook hands with masters of the school and recalled old escapades and athletic contests between choruses which they had sung in Concord years ago.

There were several hundred of the alumni, coming from various parts of the country, young fellows but a short time out of school and gray-haired men who could discuss with accurate memories conditions existing at St. Paul's considerably before the birth of the present generation of valedictory orators and football Captains. Many of the men who met at the reunion had won distinction of one sort or another.

The members began to arrive about 8:30 o'clock and after spending a half hour or so standing about in groups and chatting vigorously over old times, they entered the assembly hall on the ground floor, there to listen to news of the school.

Sherman Evarts, son of ex-Senator William M. Evarts, President of the Alumni Association, presided and made an interesting and witty address. He was followed by the rector of the school, the Rev. Joseph M. Colt, who received an ovation. Dr. Colt announced the gift to the school of a new and beautiful library by George R. Sheldon and his family of this city, and of gifts aggregating $100,000 toward a fund of $150,000 for the erection of a new "upper school."

The Rev. Edward Parker, a master at the school, gave some details as to its condition and progress, and urged the alumni to make personal visits there and see what had been done for themselves. He further stated that of 117 boys graduated last year from the school only 6 failed to pass the entrance examinations at Harvard, Yale, Princeton, Columbia, Cornell, Williams, and Trinity Colleges. This statement was received with cheers.

The Board of Trustees of the school was represented at the reunion by Bishop William W. Niles of New Hampshire, the Rev. Henry Ferguson, Moses Taylor Pyne, Douglas Robinson, George Harrison Fisher, Charles F. Gardiner, the Rev. Alexander Mackay-Smith, and Edward Abott. Others present included Dr. Frederick C. Shattuck and Gen. F. H. Appleton of Boston, Owen Wister, Sydney George Fisher, Henry Drayton, and D. Murray Bohlen of Philadelphia; R. Brent Keyser and Laurison Riggs of Baltimore, Edwin A. Stevens of Castle Point, the Rev. Prescott Evarts, E. C. Potter, Alonzo Potter, Hamilton Fish Kean, Charles M. Oelrichs, Henry Parish, Jr., James D. Livingston, L. L. Delafield, De Lancey Howland, S. H. Hoppin, Percy R. Pyne, T. F. Bayard, Hoffman Miller, Charles D. Dickey, Elisha Dyer, Herbert Parsons, George R. Sheldon, J. J. Chapman, W. Cowdin, Henry L. Wardwell, Anson Phelps Stokes, Jr., F. Egerton Webb, H. F. Webster, Dr. La R. Morris, and Grenville Kane.

Gen. Butterfield Gaining Strength.

Dr. Frederick A. Castle of 51 West Fifty-eighth Street, who is Gen. Daniel Butterfield's attending physician, said last night that Gen. Butterfield was in no danger whatever and was steadily regaining his health.

British Commander Is Unable to Occupy Colesberg.

BOERS' STUBBORN RESISTANCE

Guns Supposed to Have Been Silenced Are Still Active—The Attacking Troops Need Reinforcements.

NAAUWPOORT, Cape Colony, Jan. 3.—There was brisk fighting to-day in the hills around Colesberg. The Boers stubbornly resisted the British at every point, but gradually retreated.

The British hold the extreme position to the south and east, overlooking the town.

The hills around Colesberg are numerous, not in ranges, but in groups, making it very difficult to hunt the Boers out.

Sixteen wounded have arrived at Arundel.

LONDON, Jan. 3.—The latest advices from the Colesberg district tend to modify the self-congratulations on Gen. French's success. The predicted occupation of Colesberg had not been accomplished yesterday evening, while the Boers' guns, announced to have been silenced, were still active.

The War Office this afternoon issued a dispatch received from Gen. French under yesterday's date, saying his position was the same as on the previous day, that with small reinforcements he could dislodge the Boers from Colesberg, and, in the meantime, he continued manoeuvring.

The total British casualties about Colesberg in two days were six men killed and twenty wounded.

Apparently Gen. French holds nothing within five miles of Colesberg Junction. His request for reinforcements dispels any present hope that he will be able to seize one of the crossings of the Orange River.

It is probable that when Lord Roberts arrives Gen. French will be ordered to quit his present unsupported position and to concentrate his command at De Aar or Orange River. As The Daily Telegraph says, Gen. French "seems to be in the position of a man having a tiger cat in a trap and unable to kill it for want of a stick."

A special dispatch from Rensburg, dated Tuesday, Jan. 2, says a supply train, without a locomotive, was set in motion within the British lines near Colesberg, and proceeded so near the Boer position that it was impossible to recover it, and the British guns therefore destroyed the trucks. It is suspected that this was the act of a traitor.

The supply train, says another dispatch from Rensburg, ran into a broken culvert and was wrecked. The Boers began looting it and another Rensburg train was dispatched to the spot in an attempt to recover the provisions. The Boers opened fire on the troops and natives accompanying it, forcing the second train to retreat after several of the natives had been killed.

A special dispatch from Naauw Poort, dated Tuesday, Jan. 2, says the British command Norval's Pont Bridge with two guns and also command the Colesberg Bridge, and that the Boers have no way to retreat, except by way of Normberg. The dispatch adds that big developments are expected to-morrow.

BOER ARMY ATTACKS GATACRE?

Unconfirmed Report Received of a Sharp Fight Near Sterkstroom, Cape Colony.

STERKSTROOM, Cape Colony, Jan. 3.—The Boers attacked Gen. Gatacre's forces near Molteno this morning. A brisk action is now in progress.

LONDON, Jan. 3.—The report of the attack on Molteno is not confirmed.

METHUEN EXPECTED TO ATTACK

Col. Pilcher's Movement Said to be a Part of a Plan to Flank the Boers.

LONDON, Jan. 3.—From a source which has many facilities for gaining inside news from South Africa, it is learned that Col. Pilcher's occupation of Douglas is regarded as merely the first step of Gen. Methuen's carefully matured plans to outflank the Boers.

According to this authority, it is probable that Col. Pilcher, in conjunction with Gen. Babington's force from the Modder River, will proceed to the rear of those intrenchments which now prevent Gen. Methuen from proceeding to Kimberley. Col. Pilcher has only about forty miles' travel before he achieves this end, and, if this understanding is correct, an attack by Gen. Methuen and a determined effort to relieve Kimberley may be expected any day.

KIMBERLEY STILL BOMBARDED.

British Artillery Replies to the Fire of the Boers.

KIMBERLEY, Dec. 26.—The Boers last night evinced considerable interest in the Premier Mine, using their searchlights. This morning they actively shelled the fort. The Royal Artillery replied. Our shells were well placed and dropped amid the smoke of the enemy's guns.

Last night's storm ignited some of our military mines, but there were no casualties.

Cecil Rhodes has supplied the Boer prisoners with new clothing.

RUSSIA WILL NOT INTERVENE.

Czar Said to Have Given This Assurance to Great Britain.

LONDON, Jan. 4—The Vienna correspondent of The Standard says:

"Emperor Nicholas has assured the British Ambassador at St. Petersburg (Sir C. S. Scott) that Great Britain need not fear intervention or any sort of difficulty from Russia in the present South African complications. This may fairly be interpreted as an assurance, including an indirect promise, that France will abstain from creating difficulties for England."

WARM PRAISE FOR COL. PILCHER.

Commander of the Colonial Troops Wins Commendation.

LONDON, Jan. 3.—Lacking news from the main British camps in South Africa, whose future action can alone have an important effect on the larger issues of the campaign, the British public is making the most of Col. Pilcher's miniature battle. Unbounded tribute is paid to the prowess of the Canadians and Australians, and graphic accounts are published of the enthusiasm in Douglas as the victorious troops entered that place.

A correspondent with the flying column says:

"The immediate result of Col. Pilcher's success is the entire dispersal of the rebels who have been governing the country for the past six weeks.

"After Sunnyside was captured the Torontos occupied the lasager for the night, and joined the main body the following morning, bringing the whole of the Boer tents, wagons, and loot, and leaving the Cornwalls in garrison at Sunnyside. The British force then started for Douglas, the Torontos bringing up the rear in wagons. In the afternoon the troops entered the town unopposed and amid extraordinary scenes. The inhabitants were overjoyed, and crowded about the soldiers, shaking hands with them, and when they learned that their deliverers were Canadians and Australians the enthusiasm became frenzied. There were deafening cheers as the troops traversed the main street, and it was almost impossible for them to make progress, the crowds being so eager to shake hands with the colonials.

"It appears that the Landdrost and all the mounted rebels evacuated the place on the previous night. The unmounted rebels are reported to be intrenched in the vicinity. Quantities of ammunition were captured and destroyed."

ARMS FOR BRITISH FORCES.

The steamship Sabine, Capt. Thomas, will leave this port this morning at 10 o'clock bound for Delagoa Bay with a miscellaneous cargo, and, although no definite information could be obtained from her commander, it is believed that she has on board an immense quantity of provisions, arms and ammunition, army blankets, and general supplies for the British Army in the Transvaal.

The ship was lying alongside the East Central Pier at Atlantic Docks last night, and the last of the cargo was being stowed away in order that she could be pulled out into the stream at daylight. When seen by a reporter for THE NEW YORK TIMES, Capt. Thomas declined to give the name of the charterers of the Sabine, but gave the port for which the vessel was to clear.

A rumor yesterday afternoon to the effect that the Norwegian steamship Thordis had been chartered by Edward Perry & Co. of the Produce Exchange Annex, through Bennett, Walsh & Co., to carry munitions of war to the British Army in South Africa, was denied by both Mr. Perry and Capt. Bennett.

"There is absolutely no truth in the rumor," said Mr. Perry. "We have chartered the Thordis for our regular trade, which is exclusively with China and Japan, and will not carry any supplies of any description to either army."

Inquiry at the British Consulate failed to throw any light on the destination of either the Sabine or the Thordis.

BULLER SHELLING THE BOERS.

LONDON, Jan. 3.—Gen. Buller continues his night bombardments and patrol surprises. As the Tugela River is again fordable and the stretcher-bearers have again been requisitioned at Durban and Pietermaritzburg there is a disposition to believe that the British advance will not be long delayed.

Since Commandant General Joubert's return to the front the cannonade of Ladysmith by the Boers, it is reported, has been much livelier. Between Dec. 18 and Dec. 29 four shells killed one officer and thirteen men, and wounded thirteen officers and eleven men.

CANADIAN MAYOR CAUSES A STIR.

Message to the Queen Repudiated by Other Officials.

Special to The New York Times.

ST. JOHN, N. B., Jan. 3.—New Year's Day, Mayor Sears sent the following cable to the Canadian High Commissioners: "Stratcona, London: May New Year's blessings rest upon her Majesty, bringing peace with honor."

As a consequence the Aldermanic Board is after him. At a meeting of the Board of Public Works yesterday Aldermen Millege, Christie, Maxwell, Waring, McMulkin, and others indignantly repudiated the Mayor's right to speak for the people. The Mayor refusing to call a special meeting of the counsel to discuss the matter to-day, a meeting was called by eight Aldermen, and a warm time is expected.

The Board of Public Works, before adjournment, adopted a series of resolutions setting forth that, whereas the expression "peace with honor," in diplomatic language, indicates that a nation having suffered reverses, may, without loss of dignity, accept terms of its opponent, and that the unalterable opinion of this committee is opposed to peace upon any other terms than the unconditional surrender of the national enemy, the board regrets that in a semi-official manner the views of the people of St. John should have been set forth in the language quoted above, and desires to not only express the hope, but the firm conviction, that her Majesty's Government will prosecute the war in such a manner as to vindicate the honor of the nation and the cause of justice they have, as ever, undertaken to sustain.

MANY NOTABLE VOLUNTEERS.

Prince of Wales's Equerry Among Those to Go to the Front.

LONDON, Jan. 3.—The Hon. Sidney Robert Greville, Equerry to the Prince of Wales, has obtained the Prince's commission to go to the front. Recently he has been acting as Lord Salisbury's secretary instead of Mr. Schomberg McDonnell, who has gone to South Africa.

Among the announcements of those who volunteered yesterday appear the names of a hundred or more sons of gentlemen. Many of these are Scotch.

The papers comment upon the fact that, in view of the state of public opinion, it is much easier to go to war than to stay at the clubs, which wear a particularly deserted aspect.

All parts of England and Scotland report lively volunteering, a leading feature being the great sums raised by private subscription for volunteer equipment. Some of the counties have given sums as high as £30,000. It is computed that the provinces have already raised nearly £600,000, while London is raising £120,000 for the City Corps.

TRANSVAAL AGENT AT THE HAGUE.

Dr. Leyds Shown Great Courtesy by the Queen.

Queen Wilhelmina conversed several times with him. He was received by the Foreign Minister to-day.

MARLBOROUGH MAY STAY AT HOME.

LONDON, Jan. 3.—At Lord Chesham's headquarters it was said to-day that the Duke of Marlborough's offer to accompany the Oxfordshire Yeomanry to South Africa has not yet been accepted, in spite of the published statements to the contrary.

It is further said that it is quite likely he will not go to South Africa as he already had a black mark against him on account of being married, and, a correspondent was informed, his successful passing of the medical examination is doubtful.

Great Britain Orders New Guns.

LONDON, Jan. 3.—The War Office acknowledges the inferiority of the regular artillery by authorizing the equipment of the new battery attached to the London Volunteer Corps with Vickers and Maxims, some of which the Boers use, and by ordering 100 of these 12½-pounder quick-firers built immediately. The officers and men of the new battery will be supplied from the Honorable Artillery Company.

Commandant Swanelef Dead.

LONDON, Jan. 3.—A dispatch from Sterkstroom announces that Swanelef, the Boer commandant at Stormberg, has died of his wounds.

Eight More Regiments Called Out.

LONDON, Jan. 3.—Eight additional militia regiments have been called out. Seven of these will serve in Ireland, replacing the regulars sent to South Africa.

Shoes Ordered from India.

LONDON, Jan. 3.—In consequence of the strain on the Army Clothing Department, the War Office has been obliged to order a hundred thousand pairs of shoes at Cawnpore, in the Northwest Provinces of British India, a town noted for its leather works, and a place where strong forces of British troops are usually stationed.

Churchill Gets a Commission.

LONDON, Jan. 3.—The Pall Mall Gazette to-day announces that Winston Churchill, the newspaper correspondent who was captured by the Boers in Natal and taken to Pretoria, whence he subsequently escaped and arrived safely at Delagoa Bay, has been appointed a Squadron Leader in the South African Horse.

Golf Champion Ordered to the Front.

LONDON, Jan. 3.—The amateur golf champion, John Ball, Jr., has been ordered to South Africa with the Denbigshire Yeomanry.

Mr. Astor Contributes £1,000.

LONDON, Jan. 3.—Mr. William Waldorf Astor has contributed £1,000 to the Prince of Wales's Hospital Fund.

Colonial Troops Greatly Admired.

LONDON, Jan. 3.—At the Modder River camp the conduct of the colonials is greatly admired, and all are delighted that they have struck the first blow on the western frontier since the battle of Magersfontein. It is believed the relief of Kuruman will quickly follow.

German Count Joins the Boers.

BERLIN, Jan. 3.—Count von Rothkirchtrach has joined the Boers.

British Agent Arrested in Prussia.

BERLIN, Jan. 3.—It is reported that a British enrolling agent has been arrested at Korbetha, Prussia.

Chamberlain Congratulates Canadians

OTTAWA, Jan. 3.—Lord Minto, the Governor General, to-day received the following cablegram: "London, Jan. 3.—I congratulate Canada on gallant behavior of contingent engaged at Sunnyside. Chamberlain."

Canadians to Sail This Month.

OTTAWA, Ontario, Jan. 3.—It is stated by the Militia Department that the transports Laurentian and the Montezuma, carrying the second Canadian contingent to South Africa, will sail from Halifax on the 18th inst. and the Pomeranian on the 20th. The Western squadrons go by the last steamer.

AMERICANS TO SUPPLY SADDLES.

ST. LOUIS, Jan. 3.—The Globe Democrat says:

"E. F. Hutchings, President of the Great West Saddlery Company, Limited, of Winnipeg, Manitoba, who secured a contract with the British Government for furnshing the equipment for a portion of the 10,000 new cavalry troops called out after Gen. Buller's reverse at the Tugela River, has sub-let most of the order in the United States. Three leading army saddle manufacturers of the United States, located at St. Louis, Chicago, and Cincinnati, secured the business. The British Government has adopted for its rough rider service in the Transvaal the United States cavalry saddle and bit."

Great Britain Charters Steamers.

Special to The New York Times.

BALTIMORE, Jan. 3.—The British Government has chartered the steamers Lord Iveagh and Lord Dufferin to be used as transports to South Africa. It is also negotiating for the Lord Ormonde. All of the vessels belong to the Lord Line and run regularly to this port. Their agent is the Atlantic Transport Company, of which Bernard N. Baker, who recently presented the steamer Maine to the British Government as a hospital ship, is the President.

Capt. Reichmann to Accompany Boers

WASHINGTON, Jan. 3.—Capt. Carl Reichmann of the Seventeenth Infantry and Assistant Adjutant General of Volunteers, has been detailed by the Secretary of War to accompany the Boer army for the purpose of observing and reporting upon military operations in the war in South Africa. His duties will be similar to those of Capt. Slocum of the Eighth Cavalry, who is with the British army in the Transvaal.

Michigan Send Money to the Boers.

GRAND RAPIDS, Mich., Jan. 3.—John Steketee, Vice Consul of the Netherlands, to-day forwarded to Holland a draft for 9,200 guilders, Grand Rapids Hollanders' latest contribution for the widows and orphans of Boers killed in South Africa. The sum amounts to $3,078 American money.

MOLINEUX MURDER TRIAL

HARPSTER SHEDS NO LIGHT

It was a day of small details in the trial of Roland B. Molineux yesterday. Mr. Osborne switched again and began to take up the collateral matters intended to piece out the fabric he has sought to weave and to incorporate into it the elements necessary to make it a complete whole.

To do this, Mr. Osborne put on the stand during the morning session the policemen who first went to the Adams flat after Mrs. Adams died, a number of detectives, some of the women employed by the various patent medicine firms who knew of the receipt by their employers of the letters signed "Cornish" and "Barnet," asking for the remedies, and John H. Yocum, a chemist and a friend of Cornish, who told the jury how easy it was to make cyanide of mercury, the poison which was sent to Cornish, and which he afterward administered to Mrs. Adams, causing her death.

In the afternoon there were a number of detectives and Capt. McClusky, the chief of the bureau, as well as Andre Bustanoby, the Superintendent of the Knickerbocker Athletic Club, and A. A. Harpster, who has been a central figure in the case from the start, owing to the fact that a letter signed in Cornish's name, and alleged to have been written by Molineux, was sent to a Detroit firm asking for Harpster's record while in their employ.

Of all this testimony, that of Mr. Yocum seemed to be of the most importance from the fact that the chemist testified that he had made mercuric cyanide from a combination of various dry colors, and Mr. Osborne did not let the jury forget that the defendent was Superintendent of a dry color factory. Mr. Yocum was careful to state that his experiments in poison compounding were made after the death of Mrs. Adams.

The testimony of Harpster was a complete surprise and nothing was elicited that shed any light on the case. The defense thought so little of it that Mr. Weeks asked but one question on cross-examination. Harpster was not asked anything about his relations with Molineux, and as he testified that he knew nothing of any feeling existing between Cornish and the defendant except what he had heard he was not allowed to throw any light on the question of motive.

AMATEUR HANDWRITING EXPERT.

The testimony of Andre Bustanoby was in some points remarkable. Mr. Bustanoby swore that, in spite of his duties as Superintendent of the Knickerbocker Athletic Club, he had yet time enough to become something of a handwriting expert, and to make a study of the defendant's writing. Molineux, he said, signed a great number of checks for meals in the restaurant when he was a member of the club, and as a member of the House Committee he had also signed and written orders for various articles.

Then Mr. Osborne, after vigorous objection from Mr. Weeks, asked Bustanoby to look at all the disputed writings, and after a look at them the witness said that they were undoubtedly in the handwriting of the defendant. He said the same of the address on the poison package, except that in that instance he qualified his statement by saying that the writing of the address was disguised.

Mr. Bustanoby also maintained that he was a friend of Molineux, and in the next breath testified that the day after the murder he had at once gathered all the samples of Molineux's writings that he could find, and had compared them with the "fake" facsimile address published in a newspaper.

Mr. Weeks declined to cross-examine Mr. Bustanoby at all, and the witness seemed very much nettled that his testimony was not thought of more importance by the defense. When Mr. Weeks said he had no questions to ask, the witness looked at the attorney for the defense in blank surprise and still kept his seat in the witness chair. A court attendant told him he could go, and he went.

Molineux's smile was very much in evidence again yesterday. It first became evident when Mr. Yocum was on the stand telling how easy it was to make mercurial cyanide. It was intensified when Miss Evans, formerly an employe of a patent medicine maker, was being pressed by Mr. Osborne to tell what the remedy made by her former employer was for.

It broadened when Bustanoby said he was a friend of the defendant, and was in evidence all the time Harpster was on the stand. In fact, Molineux seemed very well pleased at the trend of things. He looked well, and after the session he hurried back to the Tombs, remarking to Mr. Weeks that he did not want to miss his exercise.

RECORDER GETS A TELEGRAM.

What, for a moment, promised to create a sensation happened at about 3 o'clock, while Bustanoby was on the stand. Recorder Goff suddenly stopped the proceedings and called the attorneys on both sides up to the bench.

"I have just received a telegram bearing on this case," he said, "and if counsel will step up here I will show it to them."

A wave of excitement went through the room, and the officers promptly rapped for order. The lawyers looked at one another in amaze, and suddenly all was so still that the faint whispering between the Court and the lawyers could be distinguished. They talked for about five minutes and looked more amused than worried as they took their respective places.

The Court and the lawyers refused to talk about the matter, but it was learned that the telegram was from Mr. Rogers, the divorced husband of Florence Rogers, Mrs. Adams's daughter, and that in it he asked the Recorder to be allowed to go on the stand and contradict certain testimony given by Cornish.

Policeman John H. Palmer, who was attached to the West One Hundredth Street Station on Dec. 28, 1898, was the first witness called to the stand after court convened. He said he went to the flat after the death of Mrs. Adams, and that Dr. Hitchcock handed him the bottle holder, the bottle, and the address on the poison package. He later gave them to Dr. Weston.

On cross-examination he said he did not search for a tumbler when he got to the flat. He asked Mr. Hovey what had become of it, and the latter said he did not know. Mrs. Rogers told him later that the District Attorney was her friend, and she refused to give any information, saying that she was acting under advice of counsel.

Detective Sergeant Herlihy, the next witness, told of tracing the silver holder to the store of Hartdegen & Co., in Newark. He also told how he came into possession of some of the letters to patent medicine firms signed "Cornish" and "Barnet." He said he had examined the blue-tinted letter paper and had found out that it was made by the Whiting Company. He found that the firm sold it only to three houses in Newark, three in Manhattan, and one in Brooklyn.

MR. YOCUM'S TESTIMONY.

John H. Yocum then took the stand. He said he was chemist in the employ of the United States Leather Company, and had been with them for seven years. He said he had known Cornish since 1896, and had lived at one time with him in Mrs. Adams's flat. That was when they lived on Park Avenue.

"On the day of Mrs. Adams's death, did Cornish call on you at your office?" asked Mr. Osborne.

"He did. It was some time in the afternoon, as I noticed that he looked ill. He told me about the death of Mrs. Adams, and he looked so ill that I suggested we have a drink. He took whisky and milk, but was unable to keep it on his stomach.

"I finally gave him the key to my room at the club and told him to go there and lie down. I saw him again that night, and two doctors were with him. He wanted to go to the flat, but I would not let him, and went up there myself."

"Do you know much about cyanide of mercury?"

"As a chemist I do."

"When was your attention first called to it particularly?"

"When I read the report of Dr. Witthaus that Mrs. Adams had died from it."

"Have you ever made any of it?"

"I have."

"Frequently?"

"Yes."

"How is it made?"

"Well, there are various ways. I first made it in my laboratory of Prussian blue and yellow oxide of mercury. This was in the presence of Detective McCafferty. You mix the two together and then drain off the precipitate. This crystallizes and contains the mercuric cyanide."

"And there you are," said Mr. Osborne, spreading his hands and grinning at the jury.

"And there you are," repeated the witness.

"Is it easy to make?"

"One of the easiest things I ever tried."

Mr. Yocum then explained that he had obtained the same result with a combination of sulphate of mercury (Queen's yellow) and Prussian blue. The method of mixing, he said, was quite as simple.

MR. WEEKS CROSS-EXAMINES.

"What is Prussian blue?" asked Mr. Weeks on cross-examination.

"It is a cyanide of iron."

"Where did you get it?"

"From Elmer & Amend."

"Do you call that a dry color?"

"Yes."

"Were you able to buy it yourself from that firm?"

"I was."

"What did you use in combination with prussian blue?"

"The yellow oxide of mercury."

"Is that a dry color, too?"

"I am not a color chemist," said the witness, "but I should say that it was."

"Where did you get the oxide?"

"I have had it in my laboratory for several years."

"What did you use the next time?"

"The sulphate of mercury, also known as Queen's yellow."

"Do you call that a dry color?"

"I believe the authorities so designate it."

"Did you make any other tests except those you have stated?"

"I did."

"And did you succeed in reducing the mercuric cyanide?"

"I did not succeed."

"Did you make any tests with the crystals you obtained to find out what they were?"

"Not at first."

"What did you do with them?"

"I gave them to Detective McCafferty."

"Then how are you able to say that what you gave him were crystals of cyanide of mercury?"

"Because I made some more in the same way, and those I tested."

"What tests did you make?"

"The sulphuric acid test. From this I got the smell of hydrocyanic acid, that element being released."

"What kind of crystals did you get?"

"Eight-sided crystals. They were without color."

Mr. Weeks asked the witness if he recognized the authority of Bloxam as a chemist, and when the witness said that the work was a standard one Mr. Weeks read that the crystals of mercuric cyanide were four-sided.

"At the Coroner's inquest you said that Cornish was excited and rattled to death. Is that true?"

"It is. He was very nervous and ill."

OSBORNE ANGERS THE RECORDER.

On redirect examination Mr. Osborne brought out that any chemist could go to a dealer and buy mercuric cyanide without question. He then tried to prove by the witness that the bromo-seltzer received by Cornish was not in a bromo-seltzer bottle, but really in a bottle such as cyanide of mercury is usually put up in.

There was a vigorous objection from Mr. Weeks on this line, and, in spite of the ruling by the Recorder against him, Mr. Osborne went right on as if the Court had not ruled at all. There was a long wrangle and the Recorder angrily said that the examination had gone far enough, and Mr. Yocum was allowed to go.

Henry C. Lockwood, a clerk in the General Post Office, was called to the stand and shown the poison package address. He said that the package had been mailed on the Broadway side of the General Post Office, and was fourth-class matter. The five stamps on it, he said, would carry twenty ounces, or a pound and a quarter. One of the jurors called the witness's attention to his statement about fourth-class matter, and Mr. Lockwood said he had made a mistake, and that on that class of mail an ounce, and not two ounces, was carried for 1 cent.

"Then, the package weighed about ten ounces, instead of twenty, is that right?"

"That is right," said the witness. He then told where, in his opinion, the letters asking for remedies had been mailed. Most of them, he said, had been mailed in the General Post Office.

Miss Elsie Gray, a young woman in the employ of the Kutnow Company, told about the finding of the request letter to the firm for a sample of the powder. She said the samples were sent out in tin boxes not sealed, and then detailed how she and the detectives, having a photographic copy of the poison address, had searched through about 100,000 letters until they finally discovered one which looked like that writing. She recognized one of the letters signed "H. Cornish" as the one she had unearthed.

STRUGGLES WITH A WOMAN.

Miss Agnes Evans was then called to the stand, and Mr. Osborne struggled with her for over an hour before he finally got from her the admissions he wanted. Miss Evans was formerly in the employ of Dr. Burns, who made and sold a remedy from an office on Columbus Avenue. An admitted letter of Molineux asking for this remedy and inclosing 25 cents, is in evidence.

Miss Evans said she remembered receiving the letter and entering it in a book. She said she knew little about Dr. Burns's business, as she had been his wife's companion rather than one of his employes. She at first refused to state what the remedy was for, and then said she could not remember.

George Salmon, an athletic instructor in the Cutler School and a friend of Cornish, was called to the stand. He said Cornish on Dec 24 showed him a bottle of bromo-seltzer and a silver holder which, he said, had come to him through the mails as a Christmas present. He identified the articles in evidence. Mr. Weeks asked him if Cornish had ever shown him any other Christmas present received by him, and the witness said he had not.

Henry H. Wotherspoon, Jr., testified to about the same state of facts, except that, had his suggestion been taken, there might have been a number of lives lost. He got as far as saying that when Cornish showed him the bottle and holder he suggested that the crowd there—King, Finneran, Salmon, Cornish, and himself—make a loving cup of the drug in the holder and take a drink all around. When he reached that point in his testimony he was reminded that he could only say what was done, and not what was said.

Alvin A. Harpster then took the stand. He said he knew Cornish had been at one time in the employ of the Knickerbocker Athletic Club.

"Did you ever have a talk with Molineux about Cornish?" Mr. Osborne asked.

"I never did," was the reply.

"Did you ever hear the defendant talk about Cornish?"

"No."

"Do you know of any friction that existed?"

"All I know about that is from hearsay."

"Do you remember testifying before the Coroner's jury," Mr. Weeks asked, on cross-examination, "that on Nov. 22 you met a friend on a street car and told him that if he was ever looking for a good salesman and collector not to forget you?"

"I believe that's right," said Harpster.

"Who was that friend?"

"I knew him as 'Gus' Morgan."

BUSTANOBY ON THE STAND.

Andre Bustanoby, a pale, dark little man, with a pointed beard, and who spoke with a decided foreign accent, then took the stand. He said he was Superintendent of the Knickerbocker Athletic Club. He said he knew the defendant well, and had often seen his writing.

"You got to know his writing very well, did you not?" asked Mr. Osborne.

"Yes," answered the witness.

"What did you do on Dec. 28?"

"I compared a fac simile of the poison address with letters I had of Mr. Molineux's."

"Did any one suggest that course to you?"

"No."

"What did you do then?"

"I showed the writings to Mr. Adams."

"Were you and the defendant always on good terms?"

"Yes."

The various letters signed "Barnet" and "Cornish," asking for remedies, were then handed to the witness, who was asked if he knew whose handwriting they were in.

"In Mr. Molineux's handwriting," said the witness.

"I show you the address on the poison package," said Mr. Osborne. "Whose writing is that?"

"Mr. Molineux's, disguised," was the ready answer.

"Do you know of any trouble between Cornish and Molineux?"

"Not of my own knowledge."

"Were there not charges brought by Molineux against Cornish?"

"I did not know what they were. I only heard of them."

"Did you and the defendant ever talk about Cornish?"

"Yes. He once told me that Cornish had interfered in certain gymnasium and amateur circus matters when he should not have done so."

"Did you ever speak about Harpster with the defendant?"

"No."

Mr. Weeks declined to cross-examine, and Detective Carey took the stand. His testimony was practically a duplicate of that given by Detective Herlihy, and brought out nothing new. Capt. McClusky was then called to the stand, and he had reached a point where he corroborated the statements made by his officers when court adjourned until this morning.

LOVING CUP FOR VICAR BROWN.

The Congregations of St. John's and St. Luke's Chapels Join in Honoring Him.

The Rev. Philip A. H. Brown was the recipient last evening of a silver loving cup presented to him by the congregations of St. John's and St. Luke's Chapels, Trinity Parish, in recognition of the twenty-fifth anniversary of his vicarate. The presentation was made in St. John's Chapel, Varick Street, by the Rev. Dr. Morgan Dix, rector of Trinity. He said in the course of his address:

"This gift is intended as a memorial of the affection and love which the congregations here and at St. Luke's bear to their Vicar. You think of Mr. Brown as your Vicar, but I always think of him as the last of the deacons. When I lived at the old Trinity Hospital I used to employ a deacon, who resided with me in the rectory. Walter M. Noyes was the first of them. He was followed by others, and on Oct. 7, 1871, Philip A. H. Brown came. In 1872 it was decided that the rector of Trinity Parish should live up town, and I was enabled to take 'the last of the deacons' with me. Then he was called to Cooperstown, and after two years there was recalled to this parish.

"I knew before Mr. Brown came to us that he had been one of that brave band of men who, acting according to the dictates of their own consciences, served the Confederacy. I esteemed him the more highly because of his gallant and brilliant services in that capacity. After he was called here a lady, one of those kind women who are always finding out things, came to me and told me that I did not know all that there was to be known about Mr. Brown's career. Then she told me that he had been in the Confederate Army. I told her that I knew it, and esteemed him the more highly for it, and she went away a much astounded woman."

Dr. Dix then presented the loving cup to Mr. Brown. The latter made a brief speech of acknowledgement, thanking the rector and the congregations.

The loving cup is a handsome piece of work. It has on one side a picture of St. John's Chapel and on the other St. Luke's. The inscription is as follows: "Presented to the Rev. Philip Auld Harrison Brown, M. A., Vicar of St. John's and St. Luke's Chapels, Trinity Parish, New York City, on the completion of twenty-five years of faithful and devoted service in St. John's Chapel as priest and pastor, by his grateful parishioners and friends. 1875–1900."

A reception in the school house adjoining the chapel followed, at which many of the New York clergy and prominent laymen were present.

SANTOS COFFEE LANDED.

Part of J. W. Taylor's Cargo in Brooklyn—Vote to Admit the Rest Lost.

Three barges containing 20,000 bags of the cargo of Santos coffee of the steamship J. W. Taylor, which was held up by the Board of Health, was landed at the foot of Jay Street, Brooklyn, yesterday. The landing place is at one of the storehouses of the Arbuckle Coffee Company.

Elaborate preparations, it is said, have been made for roasting the coffee. It is to be dumped from the sacks into specially constructed crates and then hoisted up into one of the buildings to be roasted. The coffee, it is said, will be subjected to about 300 degrees of heat, and the sacks and crates are to be burned.

At a meeting of the Board of Health a vote to admit the five barges containing the remainder of the coffee from the J. W. Taylor was lost. President Murphy and Commissioner York voted against it. Had Commissioner Cosby been present the vote would have carried.

THIRD VISIT FROM BURGLARS.

Station Agent Told He May Be Carried Off Next Time.

CAMDEN, N. J., Jan. 3.—Thieves entered the railroad station at Kirkwood on the West Jersey and Seashore Railroad early this morning. The big safe was blown open and $25 stolen.

The burglars left a note addressed to Agent Edge, extending holiday compliments, regretting that they were forced to disarrange his office, and promising to come back in a few days and take away the pieces. They also cautioned the agent to take better care for his own security or they would carry him away.

This is the third time the place has been entered within a year.

MUST PRODUCE THE WILL.

Lawyer Has Been Holding It as Security for Payment of Services.

NEWARK, N. J., Jan. 3.—Vice Chancellor Reed at Trenton yesterday filed an opinion in relation to a contention of a Newark lawyer, which is interesting as establishing a precedent. Mrs. Elizabeth M. Bracher, a resident of New York, desires to probate the will of her husband, but Franklin M. Olds has been holding it as security for the payment of a variety of services.

"I will observe," says the Court, "that it would be a curious condition of affairs if an attorney could practically defeat the probate of a will by its retention until a bill against the testator is paid, when there can be no one to pay the bill on behalf of the estate until the will was proved, and there can be no one with whom the amount due can be litigated. Such judicial sentiment as has been expressed upon this subject is against the right to withhold a will from probate upon the ground that its possessor has a lien for professional services."

Sports Ice-Bound in a River.

CHATTANOOGA, Tenn., Jan. 3.—The steamer Oliver King is ice-bound in the Tennessee River near the mouth of Little River, and is in a dangerous position. On board the boat are twenty-five sports from Knoxville, Loudon, Kingston, and Chattanooga, who were on their way into Little River to have a big cocking main. The supplies have been exhausted, and a party left for Loudon to-day to get them relief. The boat is in the centre of a big ice gorge.

New York Preparatory School.

The officers of the New York Preparatory School yesterday sent a notice to all the officers of professional schools in New York stating that the question raised by the Regents at their last meeting was purely a technical one, and affects only the method of carrying on the finances of the school. It does not in any way affect scholarships or methods of teaching. The old methods will be continued, and a new term will begin Jan 29. Students may matriculate at any time.

His Loving Wife, "Nit."

NEWARK, N. J. Jan. 3.—Vice Chancellor Emory to-day heard evidence in an action for divorce brought by Mrs. Salina A. Charlton against John Charlton. Desertion is alleged. Mrs. Charlton formerly lived in this city; she now lives in Atlantic City. One of the exhibits used in evidence was a letter written by the petitioner to her husband and signed "Your Loving Wife." The letter, the witness declares, was returned to her by Charlton with the word "nit" appended to her signature.

New Fire Engine Houses.

Four new fire engine and hook and ladder houses are to be erected by the city from plans submitted to the Department of Buildings yesterday by Architects Horgan & Slattery. The aggregate cost of the buildings is estimated at $200,000. Two of them, to be erected at 217 and 219 West Seventy-seventh Street, will provide quarters for engines and hook and ladder trucks. A hook and ladder house will be put up on a fifty-foot frontage at 113 and 115 West Thirty-third Street, and a new two-story engine house will occupy the northwest corner of Prospect Avenue and One Hundred and Fifty-second Street.

Trolley Workmen Sue for $70,000.

MAMARONECK, N. Y., Jan. 3.—The Village Trustees have got to face a number of lawsuits in the Supreme Court as a consequence of the arrests on New Year's Day of men employed in equipping the trolley line for the Union Railway Company. Seven of the employes of BeHows & Merritt, contractors, who were among those arrested, have retained a lawyer to bring suit for $10,000 each against the Village Trustees for false imprisonment, and it is said others will follow their example.

CONSOLIDATED GAS DEAL

Secures Control of William C. Whitney's Power Company.

TO CHEAPEN PRICE OF LIGHT

President Gawtry Says the Gas War Situation Is Not Affected by the Consolidation.

Confirmation of a deal, by which the Consolidated Gas Company of New York, with its National City Bank and Standard Oil interest, will acquire a dominant interest in the New York Gas and Electric Light, Heat and Power Company, now officially known as the Power Company, was had yesterday from the officers of the Consolidated Gas Company. Harrison E. Gawtry, President of the Consolidated Gas Company, said the deal had been consummated after negotiations of relatively short duration.

"We have united with William C. Whitney's electric light concern," he said. "It is practically a merging of the two companies into one under the control of the Directorate of the Consolidated Gas Company. This will result in benefit to the people. By the consolidation we hope to effect certain economies, which will enable us to cheapen the price of light. All these large combinations of capital are lowering the cost of products to the consumer. Combination is the only way in which this desiderum can be brought about. No individual or small business concern could accomplish it."

Mr. Gawtry declared that there is no foundation for reports that negotiations are impending for the acquisition of the electric plants in Brooklyn. "We have nothing to do with lighting interests in any boroughs outside of Manhattan and the Bronx. Neither has there been any change in the situation as far as the other gas companies are concerned. Our relations are precisely the same as they were two months ago, and I see no present prospect of a change."

Neither Mr. Gawtry nor any other officer of the Consolidated Company would give any information about the terms and conditions of the transaction.

President Anthony N. Brady of the Power Company declined to see any one in regard to the deal. None of the other officers would talk, and Henry D. Macdona, William C. Whitney's personal representative, also declined to say anything in the absence of Mr. Whitney at his Long Island residence. No statement on the subject could be had, either from the Messrs. Rockefeller or their representatives. James Stillman, President of the National City Bank, was equally reticent.

A Director of the Consolidated who is in a position to know the inner details of any arrangement, said: "The whole thing is a little premature. The deal has nothing to do with Metropolitan Street Railway affairs. Nor has it anything to do with the gas situation. It is not a consolidation, but a bringing nearer together of Consolidated and Power Company interests. We believe that we shall work in harmony to the best interests of the stockholders and the public. We shall introduce economies which will result in benefit to those who use electric light. The transactions will be a harmony of interests between the United Electric Light and Power Company, which the Consolidated controls, and the Edison Electric Illuminating Company of New York, which was acquired by the Power Company a year ago. Details of the arrangement will be made public shortly."

Russell Sage, President of the Standard Gas Light Company, said: "I know nothing of the deal between Consolidated and the Power Company except what I read in the newspapers. It does not affect the Standard or the 'gas war.' We have never meddled with electric lighting."

Frank S. Hastings, a Director of the New Amsterdam Gas Company and its gas expert, said that the deal would have no effect on his company, as it had no bearing on the gas war.

Both the Consolidated Gas Company and the Power Company are corporations with vast scope and large capitalization. The Consolidated, which controls the Mutual, a Vanderbilt company, was launched in 1884 as a consolidation of the Manhattan, Metropolitan, Municipal, Knickerbocker, and Harlem Gas Companies. The capitalization is $39,078,000 and the funded debt $2,105,000. The company has 854 miles of mains in this city and supplies 14,500 public lamps and 270,000 meters. At the start the company paid 6 per cent. in dividends. The rate was in 1899 raised to 8 per cent. The 8 per cent. rate was resumed in June last, and last month it was reduced to 1 per cent. quarterly. Among the Trustees of the company are Thomas K. Lees, Morris Taylor Pyne, William Rockefeller, Augustus Schermerhorn, E. R. Holden, and Hugh D. Auchincloss.

The New York Gas and Electric Light, Heat and Power Company was incorporated in this State in October, 1898. Its authorized capital stock is $36,000,000 and funded debt also $36,000,000. The power company owns or controls the following companies: Mount Morris Electric Light Company, North River Electric Light and Power Company, Block Lighting and Power Company, Manhattan Lighting Company, Consolidated Telegraph and Electrical Subway Company, Manhattan Electric Light Company, Harlem Lighting Company, the Edison Electric Illuminating Company of New York, the New York Light, Heat and Power Company, and the Yonkers Electric Light and Power Company. Of the Subway Company the Power Company owns nearly all the capital stock.

The entire capital stock of the Edison Electric Illuminating Company of New York was purchased last January by the Power Company. The stock amounted to $9,200,000 and for it was given $21,000,000 in Power Company 4 per cent. bonds. The Power Company on Dec. 27 last had listed on the Stock Exchange $11,500,000 first mortgage collateral trust 5 per cent. gold coupon bonds of 1948 and $20,191,000 purchase money mortgage collateral trust 4 per cent. gold coupon bonds of 1949. The purchase money bonds are to finance the Edison Company deal. In the application for listing the Power Company put tables of earnings and expenses of eight of the constituent companies for ten months of 1899 showing the net earnings to be $1,864,927.16.

The Directors of the Power Company are Anthony N. Brady, Thomas E. Murray, F. S. Pearson, Thomas J. Regan, Daniel H. Shea, Nicholas F. Brady, and Henry J. Hemmens. At the time of the organization of the Power Company the interests promoting it were announced as William C. Whitney, A. N. Brady, Thomas F. Ryan, P. A. B. Widener, Thomas Dolan, and W. L. Elkins, and it was commonly spoken of as a Whitney corporation. When the Metropolitan Street Railway Company changed its motive power to electricity its officers denied that the conduits built along its lines were intended for electric light wires, claiming that the Metropolitan needed all for its traction service.

The rise and fall of Consolidated Gas issues yesterday on trading of less than 3,000 shares were easily the features of the stock market. From 191, the closing price of the previous day, the quotation steadily advanced until it lacked only 1 point of the 200 mark. Then just as suddenly came the decline, the stock falling to 193, later rallying a half point, where it closed with a net gain for the day of 2½ points.

Power Company bonds closed yesterday at 91 for fours and 106½ for fives. Fives closed on Tuesday at 104¾.

Pauper's Grave for a Soldier.

NEWARK, N. J., Jan. 3.—Clad in the uniform of a Sergeant of the United States Volunteers, the body of Walter Henderson, a young colored man, lies in Holle's morgue in a pine coffin awaiting interment in a pauper's grave. Henderson was one of the immunes who volunteered to go to the front when the war with Spain was declared. He is supposed to have at some time served in the regulars, as he was familiar with drill when he joined the immunes. Because of his knowledge of military tactics he was promptly made a Sergeant. He went to Fort Thomas, Ky., and contracted sickness, which finally developed into heart disease, from which he died friendless, in a furnished room in West Kinney Street.

Mr. Haffen on Ash-Can Sprinkling.

Deputy Commissioner Gibson of the Department of Street Cleaning offered at the meeting of the Board of Public Improvements yesterday a resolution requiring householders to sprinkle water over ashes deposited in ash cans, to prevent the raising of dust when the contents are dumped into the removal carts. "The idea of sprinkling ashes with water is ridiculous," President Haffen of the Bronx declared. "My family has tried that. The water froze, and when the ash cart came along it took the driver some minutes to empty the can, and he didn't get it empty then until he had split the can and ruined it." Nothing was done with the resolution.

WANT CHEAPER CAB RATES.

Public Jehus Think 50 Per Cent. Reduction Will Help Them and Hurt Stable Proprietors.

If the New York cabmen, who, as a body, are now rent and torn by internal dissension, carry out the arrangements now in contemplation by a large element of this gentry, the long-discussed question of exorbitant fares may be settled before the Winter is over. A large faction of purveyors of two and four-wheeled extravagance has caused the framing of a bill which may be brought before the present session of the Legislature making the uniform rate of cab fare in the Borough of Manhattan twenty-five cents a mile or each fraction thereof, or fifty cents an hour where a vehicle is employed on that basis. The rate allowed by law at present is 50 cents a mile and $1.00 an hour.

The cabmen believe that, were a law passed making the charges less they could still manage to eke out an existence. They even declare that by the passage of such a bill they will be able to earn more than at present, owing to the "special license nuisance," as they term it, which they say has almost driven them off upper Broadway and other likely sections of the city.

Public cabmen, it would seem, are more or less restricted in their movements, and are not allowed by law to obstruct the street at any point and are debarred from standing in front of the prominent hotels, clubs, &c., whence promising fares are likely to issue. Nearly every one of these places, the cabmen assert, is controlled by the big cab owners, who hold special licenses from the city and pay a large annuity to the proprietors for privileges. It is charged that the owners of the Waldorf-Astoria permit pays $14,000 a year. The cost is $2,000 at Rector's, the same amount at Shanley's, and proportionate charges are made at other resorts, some of them coming as high as $8,000. The public cabmen can find balm only in having the legal rate of fare cut in half so the owners will not make sufficient to pay such enormous prices for privileges.

It is further claimed that these big livery stables, not satisfied with exclusive privileges about the hotels and clubs, are applying for permits for stated corners between Thirty-fourth and Forty-fifth Streets, and that if this thing keeps up the ordinary Jehu will have to keep driving all the time as there will be no places left where he can stand his horse. A special license is granted up n the payment of $25 a year for each vehicle above the usual vehicle tax, which carries the privilege of standing at any point on the street with the permission of the owner of the property facing it. Ordinary cab licenses compel the vehicle to stand only in certain designated cab stands.

It could not be learned yesterday that the bill for the reduction of rates had been put into the hands of any legislator, but it was stated that the Cabmen's Union would hold a meeting at its headquarters at Thirty-second Street and Lexington Avenue within a few days, when the matter would be brought up for definite action.

The big cab owners assert that this is but an idle threat on the part of the independent Jehus, who, even if they had sufficient influence to secure the passage of such a bill, would be "cutting off their noses to spite their faces."

William H. Sealch, proprietor of the Opera Stables and holding the cab privileges for the Waldorf-Astoria and other hotels and resorts, said no livery stable could stand a reduction of 50 per cent. in its cab rates. "You may rest assured," he said, "cabs will never run in this city at 25 cents a mile, for it cannot be done except at a loss. The Pennsylvania Railroad Company loses $30,000 a year in its cheap cab service. It is the same with the New York Central."

BROOKLYN CLUB PAYS ITS FINE.

Mr. Ebbets Says This Is Done for the Sake of Harmony.

The club owners of the National League and American Association of Baseball Clubs do not regard seriously the talk of a baseball war as a result of the American League becoming antagonistic to the National League. At least it does not appear so. The Brooklyn and Baltimore Clubs have been reported as favorable to a new league, but this is denied by President C. H. Ebbets of the Brooklyn Club.

The Brooklyn Club yesterday forwarded to N. E. Young, President of the League, its check for $500, the amount of the fine imposed because Brooklyn signed Shortstop Wrigley after the latter had been signed by the New York Club. At the time the fine was imposed the Brooklyn Club rebelled against paying the fine and even hinted at carrying its case to the courts.

"We decided to pay this fine," said Mr. Ebbets yesterday, "because of the adverse criticisms made. Some people went so far as to say that the club wanted to go back on its agreement with the League by not accepting a ruling as final. We pay the fine in a sportsmanlike spirit and for the sake of harmony, as it was said that we would block the deal leading to an eight-club circuit unless the $500 fine was remitted.

"The owners of the Brooklyn and Baltimore clubs believe that an eight-club circuit will benefit the game, and are ready to meet the Circuit Committee and consider any fair business proposition regarding the future of the Baltimore club. By paying the $500 fine we have placed ourselves on record as being in harmony with the National League."

John T. Brush of Cincinnati, Chairman of the Circuit Committee, will meet the representatives of the Brooklyn-Baltimore combination to-day. It is expected that the conference will lead to some definite understanding regarding the circuit for this season.

Yale Hockey Team Wins at Pittsburg.

PITTSBURG, Jan. 3.—Duquesne Garden was well filled to-night by lovers of hockey to witness the initial game of the series the Yale team is to play this week against all comers. The game to-night was between Yale and the Bankers of this city. It was fast and well played, resulting in the score of 2 to 1 in Yale's favor.

ANSWERS TO CORRESPONDENTS.

BET.—Gen. Sir Redvers Henry Buller entered the army in 1858. He served in China in 1860; in the Red River expedition of 1870; in the Ashanti war of 1874; the Kaffir war of 1878; the Zulu war of 1878-9. To attempt to give even a list of the campaigns in which Lord Roberts has been engaged would be impossible in a limited space. He entered the army, or, rather, the service of the East India Company, in 1851. His first active service was during the Indian Mutiny, when he performed many deeds of valor, and in which he was engaged from the outbreak to its finish. He took part in the Abyssinian expedition of 1867-8; the Lushai expedition of 1871-2; he commanded the Kabul field force at the capture of the Afghan capital, and was commander of the Kabul-Kandahar field force in the historic march to the latter city; he commanded the army in Burmah during the troublous times which followed, and has been Commander in Chief of the army in Madras, the army in India, and the British forces in Ireland. Gen. Buller has had more actual experience of campaigns in Africa, but neither of the two Generals has had any experience at all in fighting the Boers. Lord Roberts was assigned to command the British forces after the battle of Majuba Hill, but when he arrived at Cape Town a peace had been patched up.

W. H. FOX, Mannsville, N. Y.—A complete answer was not given to the question several days ago asking what was the influence on the recent tight money of the action of the New York banks in charging for the collection of out-of-town checks. Secretary of the Treasury Gage estimated that the falling off in deposits in New York banks due to this charge has, since it went into operation, amounted to between $10,000,000 and $20,000,000. This, however, is regarded in many quarters as a very low estimate. Officers of one group of steel and iron companies alone say that in their own cases they have found it advisable to keep their checking deposits elsewhere, principally in Chicago and Pittsburg, and that the loss to New York in deposits from them has been at least $15,000,000. Other industrial corporations are understood to have taken similar action, though it is quite impossible to obtain any accurate figures. The President of one of the National banks in the city says that in his opinion the loss to the banks has been considerably greater than estimated by Secretary Gage, and that that loss was undoubtedly a strong contributing factor in the tight money situation—the available lending money being of course reduced to the extent of the decline in deposits. It is added, however, that this loss would not have been so severely felt had there not been such an enormous drain from the interior for business purposes and an increasing demand in New York because of excessive speculation. It is pointed out now by bankers that out-of-town banks, in adopting the New York policy of collecting charges, must bring about a reaction, and that there will be no advantage to be gained by checking against accounts elsewhere.

M. D.—There is no accredited representative of the Transvaal Government in this country. Gen. James R. O'Beirne of 32 Broadway was appointed representative of the Transvaal in this country, but he was not recognized by the United States Government. The representative of the Orange Free State is Charles D. Pierce, Consul General, at 138 Liberty Street.

TO MANAGE BROOKLYN ELEVATED.

W. T. Goundie Appointed General Superintendent of the Line.

President Clinton L. Rossiter of the Brooklyn Rapid Transit Company yesterday announced the appointment of W. T. Goundie as General Superintendent of the elevated lines controlled by the company, and also of the bridge division. Mr. Goundie has been for a number of years the general manager of the Kings County Elevated Railroad, which is now a part of the Rapid Transit system. He is to direct the movement of trains and is to have entire charge of all depots, station agents, and of all the men employed in the operation or handling of trains and cars on the elevated lines.

The appointment of Eugene Chamberlain as Superintendent of Equipment was also announced by Mr. Rossiter yesterday. Mr. Chamberlain has been in charge of the company's repair shops at Second Avenue and Fifty-second Street.

Massachusetts Torrens Law Upheld.

BOSTON, Jan. 3.—The Torrens Land act, the validity of which was questioned, was declared to be Constitutional by the Supreme Judicial Court to-day in a test case brought by William B. Tyler, against the Judges of the Court of Registration. The court was divided on the question, however. Chief Justice Holmes wrote the majority opinion and there was a dissenting opinion concurred in by Judges Loring and Lathrop.

Mrs. Edmund Taylor Dead.

The flags were at half mast yesterday over the American Steamship Line offices and dock, in consequence of the death of Mrs. Taylor, wife of Edmund Taylor, the senior partner of Richardson, Spense & Co., managing agents in Europe of the American Line.

All Cars Transfer to Bloomingdales 3d Ave., 59th & 60th Sts

Women's Muslin Underwear, Men's Shirts, Collars, Cuffs, &c., Table Linens, Housekeeping Dry Goods, &c., &c., lower than ever, in the face of the fact that both mills and factories have advanced prices sharply. Our preparations for this great annual event antedated the "ascension," and our purchases were made at the lowest ebb of the price tide. Favoring circumstances not only enable us to undersell all competition, but actually permit us to quote lower prices than ever before. The big sale has only commenced, and the giant assortments are unbroken.

Another Suit & Skirt Sacrifice After Stock Taking.

To move them quickly, we offer the choice of 200 or more Ladies' High-Class Suits at 8.75

They are such as you would expect to cost $15 to $20. They are made of Venetians, Serges, Cheviots, Homespuns and Covert Cloths, in black, navy, brown, and dark tan; both fly-front and double-breasted box coats; some have velvet collars lined with taffeta silks or all-silk serge; SKIRTS are saddle back, percaline lined, velvet bound, strictly high-class custom finished and up-to-date in every detail. Never before, at this season of the year, in our recollection, has such an opportunity been presented to buy suits of this class at 8.75

Your choice of $35 to $45 Suits, the finest it is possible to make for those figures, at 19.75

WANAMAKER'S WANAMAKER'S WANAMAKER'S WANAMAKER'S WANAMAKER'S

This is the Day's Program

The Half-year Carpet Sale starts. And that is always an important event. Savings run from 20 to 60 per cent. —and we reckon on the prices you know, not on the higher ones that may be.

Hurt Books go on sale—a good many thousand volumes, one or two of almost everything. And the worst hurts are not as bad as you'll give a book in one reading.

Kitchen Utensils of enameled ware—half price. This isn't buncombe, but an explainable fact. Details follow.

We show beautiful new Cotton Dresses—advance guard of next summer's styles; we show the "1900" styles of heavy skirts—you'll like their differing style.

There is a swing to the business that lands it farther and farther into the camp of your good will. There is a wonderful difference between a bargain-store's scramble and the orderly selling of dependable goods at prices below their worth. It is always comfortable at the Wanamaker Store. And prices are least, quality considered—which means that Wanamaker's is the cheapest store in New York. Don't harbor a doubt about that. If you think differently, will you not kindly report a special example to us?

Thirteen Hundred and Sixty-one pairs of Men's $3.50 and $4 Russet Shoes at $1.75 a pair. The last of them. Fifth floor.

Half-Year Carpet Sale

STARTS THIS MORNING

January and July we clean house—the carpet store house—of all odd rolls, part rolls, remnants, and if by chance a whole big lot has proven a slow seller, that goes, too.

Prices Are Reduced 20 to 60 Per Cent.

As a rule—shorter the piece, the shorter the price we put on it, though whole rolls are marked at prices below present costs to us—some are far below.

To get the best out of such a sale, you should bring the measurements of several rooms. For instance—a charming carpet for the sitting-room might be found in the lot—part of a roll. If you knew pretty nearly what yards you needed, you could decide, and get it. And the present sitting-room carpet could be put on a bedroom. Do you catch the idea? Or, if you know the size of all your bedrooms, you can often change carpets around.

But there are carpets for all sorts of rooms—probably ranging in price from 40c for the 55c Tapestry Brussels to $1.50 for the $2 Axminsters. We're talking of full rolls, from which you can buy what you please—except that we will not let you leave us with a bad-length remnant, for we do sell remnants at a deplorable loss, and lots of them are included in this sale. There are Ingrain Carpets for as little as 30c a yard.

Forty-eight Thousand Yards

Axminster Carpets, 72 patterns, that have been $1 to $2 are 80c to $1.50—and they'll be higher than the highest price when we go to market again.
Velvet Carpets, 21 patterns, have been 90c to $1.35, are 75c to $1.
Body Brussels Carpets, 31 patterns, have been $1 to $1.35, are 85c to $1.

Tapestry Carpets, 54 patterns, several grades, have been 55c to 85c, are 40c to 60c.
Ingrain Carpets, 56 patterns, have been 40c to 80c, are 30c to 60.
Full rolls of all the sorts we've told of.
And the Remnants are too cheap to need a word in the papers.

Third floor.

An Important Sale of Women's Wraps

We have some very fine values to tell you of to-day—to sell you, if you can find it convenient to get here in time. There'll be a good attendance—not a scramble—and the lots may end with the day.

Some of the garments we have just reduced; some we bought from our usual suppliers at a loss (to wind up their lines); some we reduced several days ago—but those lots are large and still hold out.

There are a good many $20 Jackets at $10. And the cheapest in the $10 group was $13.50 till last night.
There are stylish Jackets at $6—values $8.50 to $10.
And at $4—values up to $7.50.
There are handsome Ulsters at $50 and $75. We sold the early lots at $72 to $100.
And Golf Capes at $7.50, $8.50, $10 and $12.75—fine values. Do you know there are capes being sold under this name that don't deserve to be? A golf cape must be made from a shawl or from double-faced cloth. Best to be sure.

Some Exquisite Fans

A friend of this store was in Canton, China, recently and ran across a queer little shop that we had never found. The inmates were making fans. Sticks are hand-carved from sandal wood; the fan part is of paper or of silk or in some cases of the sandal wood. The embroidering is exquisite on some of the fans. Others have tiny figures each hand-dressed in silk and with head of ivory. We're talking of the twelve fans he brought us. Only three others are in this country, so far as our informant could find it out. $4.75 to $10.

The Japanese Decorative Fans are in great demand—the figures on many of them stand out like the chorus in "Wang." These finest are 25c. We've others at 5c and 10c.

Exquisitely-gotten-up Fans for opera goers—these from Paris. $3 to $15—that's one group. Another group, $45 to $80. Every other right sort, from 75c.

Broadway.

Handkerchiefs We shall not have such good news to tell often—for handkerchiefs are getting dearer.

All linen—every one of them—
MEN'S, HEMSTITCHED
$1.35 a dozen for $2 quality.
$2.50 a dozen for $3 quality.
WOMEN'S, HEMSTITCHED
$1.35 a dozen for $2 quality.
$2 a dozen for $3 quality.

Mufflers are a fourth to a third cheaper.

Broadway.

Decorated Lamp Globes 10 inch, 11 inch, 12 inch globes, rich with pansies, azaleas, lilies, chrysanthemums, daintily painted on. There are some that predominate in pink—we call 'em pink globes, despite the other colors present. There are yellow ones and blue and green and brown. Been $1.50 to $3.50. All are marked at one dollar

We Start Selling the Hurt Books To-day

Everybody who knows the Wanamaker Book Store knows how free it is. You can handle the books and thumb them to your heart's content. During December thousands of volumes get hurt—possibly a dog-eared page, a slightly smudged picture or a scratched back. It's our loss—for the books that Christmas folks buy must be delivered to them fresh and perfect.

To-day, choose from the hurt ones. How much off? Well, a penny of hurt means at least a dime of discount.

We sell mistakes, too—if for any reason we've ten or a hundred too many of a title, we put the books in this hurt-book section.

There's hurt everything, from the newest novel to the dear old standbys in holiday dress, but we dare not print much of a list—there are so few of any one title that we might disappoint you.

SOME SETS OF BOOKS
Dickens's Works, 15 vols., $2.60. Good edition, $3.75. Fine edition, $5.25.
Thackeray's Works, 10 vols., $1.90. Good edition, $2.35. Fine edition, $4.15.
Eliot's Works, 6 vols., $1.10. Fine edition, $2.10.

Linens It's a pleasant sound at times—"higher prices!" It bodes of prosperity and the good times everybody wants, but the sound is so continual now as to weary one. "The Banks of the Wabash" sounded good enough at first.

Linens are higher—going higher yet. Here are some lots we'll let go at the old prices and some we bought as bargains, months ago, for this January selling—

Bleached Huckaback Towels, hemstitched ends—the famous "Old Bleach," now $5.40 a doz. instead of $7.20. 45c a piece.
Bleached Huckaback Towels at 8c each and 12½c.
Bleached Damask Towels, hemstitched or with knotted fringe. $3 kind at $2.25 a doz. 19c each.
Bleached Bath Towels (cotton), 12½c.
Twilled Crash, 16 in. wide, at 8c a yard. Wider at 12½c and 15c.
Glass Toweling, 18 in., 10c; 20 in. at 12½c.
Bleached Huckaback Toweling, 18 in. wide, 15c a yd.

Fourth avenue.

Men's Shirts Day Shirts; Night Shirts. Here is the sort of snags we are striking—a manufacturer whom we've kept almost constantly busy gave us an option on a final $8,000 worth of shirts. It would have expired Saturday night. During the day we went for the shirts—and got them. His positive net loss was $760. Do you expect that we'll buy other lots so cheap? Not a bit of it—neither will you.

Will you get a share of these?

Unlaundered Shirts, all neck sizes from 14 to 18; made of Utica muslin; three-ply linen bosom, 45c.
Some shirts at 35c—3 for $1—and they have real linen bosoms as well.
Night Shirts—liberal in size, which means most comfort for you and longer wear for the shirt. 35c and 50c.

Men's Goods—Ninth street side.

More Laces At a Third New laces a third under to-day's value. Keeping in line with the big Sale movement. Imitation Torchon patterns to-day—imitations that are really flattery. They came from Nottingham; all widths, selected as well as we know how.

EDGINGS
¾ in. wide, 3c yd.; 30c a doz. yds.
1 in. wide, 3c, 4c yd.; 28c, 45c doz. yds.
1¾ in. wide, 4c, 5c, 6c yd.; 45c, 55c, 65c doz. yds.
2 in. wide, 6c yd.; 65c doz. yds.
3¼ in. wide, 8c, 9c yd.; 85c, $1 doz. yds.

INSERTIONS TO MATCH
From 4c a yard, 48c a dozen yards, to 5c a yard, 65c a dozen yards.

Office Furniture

What do we know about it? Probably most—through the experience of twenty years. Very careful people in many cities have come to depend on Wanamaker furnishings—and they are sure they save money by it. The best, or various near approaches—as you may elect to buy. We won't sell trash.

Roll-Top Desks, $14 to $150.
The $14 desks have single pedestal; those at $17, and over, have double pedestal as a rule.
Office Chairs, revolving, $5.25 to $60.

Fourth and Fifth floors.

Of course, filing cases and all desk outfittings; carpets, as well. And shades, and screens, and fire-place furnishings, if you would be very complete.

PLAGUE STRIKES MANILA

Health Officers Discover the Disease in the City.

TWO DEATHS HAVE OCCURRED

War Department Is Taking Active Measures to Preserve a Rigid Quarantine in the Islands.

MANILA, Jan. 3.—The health officers have found a native with all the symptoms of bubonic plague, in a house in the walled city, where two suspicious deaths have occurred. The patient has been isolated and every precaution has been taken to prevent a spread of the disease.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 3.—Surgeon General Wyman has no confirmation of the report that three suspected cases of bubonic plague have been discovered within the walled city of Manila, but no attempt is made to conceal the gravity of the situation should the report prove true. Still, it is said, a few sporadic cases need not necessarily result in an epidemic in the islands. Surgeon General Wyman says the disease no longer creates the dread it once did because it has been demonstrated that it can be handled by modern scientific work. It has been stamped out of Alexandria, Egypt, Kobbe, Japan, and Vienna, Austria.

The methods of fighting the disease are the same as used against smallpox—isolation, disinfection, and sanitation. The greatest danger is due to its possible introduction into new localities through ambulant, or walking, cases, which defy the surveillance of the authorities.

One feature of the disease which is gratifying to the authorities, in view of the possible outbreak of an epidemic in the Philippines, is the fact that its history shows that it does not attack Europeans as readily as natives.

The War Department is taking steps to prevent the introduction of the plague in the Philippines, and Secretary Root to-day called into consultation Surgeon General Wyman to discuss the establishment of a quarantine system for the islands. It was decided that the War Department should adopt toward the Philippines a policy like that it pursued toward Cuba in the matter of the protection of health, namely, confine the maintenance of a quarantine system to the Marine Hospital Service.

It happens, fortunately, that the Marine Hospital Service has already two quarantine plants in the Philippines, while two of its surgeons are now on their way to Manila, so that little delay will be encountered in beginning to draw a rigid quarantine line in the islands.

FRESH OUTBREAK IN HONOLULU.

Plague Reappears After an Interval of Thirteen Days.

CHICAGO, Jan. 3.—A dispatch from Honolulu, Dec. 26, via San Francisco, Jan. 3, says:

"After an interval of thirteen days, in which no cases were discovered, bubonic plague has broken out again. The announcement was made last Christmas afternoon that there had been three new cases of bubonic plague, death occurring in each case. The first was that of Miss Ethel Johnson, who had been sick for six days. She died Saturday afternoon, Dec. 23, and an autopsy was held, after which her body was cremated.

"Though the autopsy and bacteriological investigation are said to show beyond doubt that Miss Johnson died of the plague, the announcement of the fact was not made until Christmas Day. When she first became ill it was said she had the plague, and she was kept under observation by physicians of the Board of Health. Then it was announced that she did not have the plague.

"Two other deaths occurred from plague Christmas Day. Both were Chinese. One was Chong Mon Dow, aged twenty-four years. He died at Pawaa, in the eastern part of the city. He had been attended by a Chinese physician. The certificate of death was irregular in form, and this led to an investigation which resulted in the discovery of the true cause of his death. The other case was that of Ah Fong, aged twenty-seven. He was sick in Chinatown during the time that Chinatown was under quarantine, but the nature of his ailment escaped discovery at the time.

"The bodies in all these cases have been cremated. The fact that bodies of plague victims are being cremated has added another difficulty in the way of the Board of Health, as all natives, and Chinese especially, now conceal their sick, fearing that the bodies will be burned.

"Inter-Island traffic will not be entirely interrupted, though strict rules regarding it will be enforced. Only approved freight will be allowed to be shipped, and only first-class passengers will be allowed to take passage, and then only after a strict medical examination. No Asiatics nor Oriental freight will be allowed to be taken. All mail will be fumigated."

WASHINGTON, Jan. 3.—The report received by both the State Department and by Surgeon General Wyman from Honolulu confirms the dispatches as to the existence of the plague. Surgeon General Wyman does not feel apprehensive as to the possibility of the infection of San Francisco from Honolulu.

New Plague District in Brazil.

RIO JANEIRO, Jan. 3.—The bubonic plague has broken out in the city and neighborhood of Sao Paulo.

TWO NAVAL OFFICERS DEAD.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 3.—The Navy Department has been advised by a cable message from Admiral Watson of the death of Commander James W. Carlin, on board the Culgoa, from an attack of peritonitis. He was on his way to the Naval Hospital at Yokohama for treatment when he died, Dec. 30 last. The message also reports the death of Capt. C. L. A. Ingate of the Marine Corps on Dec. 24, at Guam, where he was stationed. His death followed a surgical operation.

James W. Carlin was born in 1848, and was graduated from the Naval Academy in 1868. He passed through all of the grades and had served on all of the stations. In 1899 he was the executive officer of the Vandalia in the memorable hurricane of March in that year at Apia, Samoa, and after the death of Capt. Schoonmaker he was in command of the ship. He was in command of the supply ship Culgoa from the time of her purchase by Admiral Dewey in March, 1898. The vessel has since made a number of trips to Australia, and it was while returning from one of these with supplies for the fleet in Philippine waters that Commander Carlin died.

Capt. Ingate had but recently gone to Manila. He served through the late war with Spain, and was afterward stationed on the receiving ship Vermont in the New York Navy Yard. Born in Alabama, he became a cadet at the Naval Academy in 1884, and entered the Marine Corps as a Second Lieutenant in 1890. He reached the grade of Captain last year.

MADE INSANE BY WAR.

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 3.—The following soldiers, declared to be insane, have been sent to Washington from the Presidio Military Reservation:

Sergt. Thomas F. Collins, Company G, Sixth Infantry; Sergt. Owen H. Wissman, Hospital Corps; Privates Thomas F. Barry, Hospital Corps; Anton Barber, Company E, Fourth Infantry; Michael Gallagher, Company C, Twenty-third Infantry; George M. Barton, Troop C, Fourth Cavalry; Walter A. O'Neill, Battery F, Sixth Artillery; Louis Ford, Company L, Fourth Infantry; Emerick Mulner, Company B, Sixth Infantry; David E. Young, Company A, Seventeenth Infantry; Frank Thayer, Company I, Seventeenth Infantry; George W. Decker, Company E, Eighteenth Infantry; Joseph Hoffman, Company E, Twenty-second Infantry; George J. Nixon, Company I, Twelfth Infantry.

Nearly all of these men lost their minds as a result of campaigning in the Philippines.

MOVEMENTS OF TRANSPORTS.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 3.—Gen. Otis sent a cable message to the War Department to-day as follows:

Transports arrived—Indiana, Ohio, Fortieth Infantry, Col. Godwin; Duke of Fife and St. Paul, Thirty-eighth Infantry, Col. Anderson; Dec. 27, no casualties. Dalny, Vostock, and Columbia, Forty-second Infantry, Col. Thompson, Dec. 31; Private Curt E. Hall, L, Forty-second Infantry, died en route, Dec. 20, acute meningitis. Meade, Forty-third Infantry, Col. Murray, Dec. 31. Sherman and Warren, Forty-ninth Infantry, Col. Beck, Jan. 2, no casualties. Transports sailed—Pekin, Dec. 29; Benmohr and Missouri, Dec. 31; Senator, Jan. 2.

The Marietta Arrives at Manila.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 3.—The Navy Department has been informed that the Marietta has arrived at Manila. The Brooklyn, New Orleans, Nashville, and Newark have all reached the main fleet, and the Marietta is the last of these additional ships sent to reinforce Admiral Watson, to arrive at the Asiatic station.

HEARD ABOUT TOWN.

Henry P. Hubbard, the advertising agent, was reminiscent when he saw the report of the completion of the transfer of the Boston and Albany Railroad to the New York Central people. "But for a little interference of mine many years ago, when I lived in New Haven, I suppose that transfer would have included what is now the Northampton division of the New York, New Haven and Hartford Railroad," said he. "It came about in this way. I was at the time connected with the New Haven Palladium, and the late E. M. Reed was the Vice President and General Manager of the New Haven system. In the morning's mail was a copy of the Springfield (Mass.) Republican, and as I was running over it I saw an interview with Chester W. Chapin, then at the head of the Boston and Albany system, in which it was stated that he had practically made arrangements for the purchase of the 'Canal road,' as the Northampton branch was then generally called. Being fairly well familiar with the policy of the New Haven road at the time, I cut the article out and sent it down to Vice President Reed, with the suggestion that perhaps Mr. Chapin had been talking a bit too soon, and that there was a chance to checkmate him. Northampton stock was then worth about 50 cents on the dollar, and the majority of the stock was held by Joseph E. Sheffield, who had built the road, and who was the founder of the Sheffield Scientific School at Yale. Mr. Reed took my hint, rushed up to Mr. Sheffield's house, and, after beating about the bush, asked Mr. Sheffield if he wanted to sell the stock in his road and at what price he would sell. Mr. Reed was a bit astonished when Mr. Sheffield wanted par not only for his own interests in the stock but for that of all of his friends, and for that which he had given to the New Haven Hospital, to the Sheffield school, and to some other charities. Before he left Mr. Reed had, however, secured an option on the whole lot of stock for about a week. Then he verified the story that the Boston and Albany people were after the control of the road, and before his option had expired had found friends to go into the deal. They took all the stock, and that is how it happened that the Northampton road is now a part of the New Haven system instead of the Boston and Albany. It may also account in some measure for the fight in which the present Chester W. Chapin is now engaged for the freight business through Long Island Sound by running his New Haven Line boats to Providence in opposition to the New Haven Railroad's Fall River and Providence lines of steamers."

While New York's Aquarium was not officially represented at the meeting of the American Society of Naturalists at Yale College last week, it was represented in an unofficial and very interesting way, and one that opened the eyes of the scientists to the value of our very interesting museum at Battery Park, about which our own people know all too little as a rule. Prof. A. E. Verrill, the Yale zoologist, delivered a lecture before the members of the various scientific bodies on the natural history of the Bermudas, using to illustrate his remarks a lot of lantern pictures that excited general comment, as they were so much better than ordinary pictures of the class, and with the colors of the fishes depicted with exceptional brilliancy and truthfulness. It developed, when inquiries were made as to the source from which these pictures came, that they were mostly taken in the Aquarium, and were colored from life in the tanks here by the professor's son, A. H. Verrill, who has supplemented what he saw in the Bermudas by studies in the Aquarium. The slides included pictures of the moray, the angel, trumpet, devil, and other strange fishes, and several of the sea anemones that may be seen in the tanks at the old Castle Garden. These same pictures, by the way, were recently shown in the Lowell Institute course at Boston.

Lemons of the new crop have come into the market, and the first auction sale of the imported fruit was held yesterday, the offerings coming from the Mediterranean district. Within a week there will probably be a plentiful supply of the new fruit.

"I'm down here preparing for New England's annual spree," was the rather flippant fashion in which a member of the military staff of Gov. Lounsbury of Connecticut put it at the Holland House yesterday when he referred to the coming ball of the Old Guard. "You people down here may think something of your Patriarchs' ball and your Assemblies, your Charity Ball, and your French Ball, but up in New England we know of but one great ball in New York, and that is the annual of the Old Guard. It gives our fellows a chance to air their uniforms, and from Portland, Me., down to the New York State limits every military man in the six New England States knows the date of that event, and they come to it if they can get an invitation. We fish for those invitations harder than the late Gov. Hubbard ever fished for shad with a fly, and we catch them oftener, I am free to confess. I am down here to engage quarters for the Governor and his staff. I hear that the Governors of Rhode Island, Massachusetts, and New Hampshire are also to be here with their military staffs to give tone and color to the event, though the Old Guard may not thank me for putting it that way. But at all events there will be an exodus of military uniforms from New England in the last week of January, and there is a report current that the wearers of those uniforms expect to have what might be called 'a hot old time.'"

"And speaking about that same kind of time," remarked one of the office staff as he fished for the olive in his cocktail; "it may not be amiss to remark that if you want any lessons as to how best to have that sort of a time you might stop over and attend the dinner of the Hotel Men's Association at Delmonico's next week. 'Lon' Foster, who knows a few things about how the Old Guard manages to entertain its friends, will be there, and there are liable to be a few rather interesting remarks when 'Tom' Reed and Simeon Ford get their wits to working after they have tried their teeth on the feed that Delmonico will prepare. Your Old Guard will be all right, but let me give you a tip. The very liveliest of its members are among the Hotel Men's Association members, and it is at our annual dinner that they get their inspiration. So if you country people want a thoroughly good time you had better come to the fountain head. The Old Guard men in our association may be a trifle tired by the time the Old Guard ball comes round."

Canadians resident in New York have been following the operations in the Transvaal with unusual interest since the soldiers from that province reached the scene of action. Yesterday they were jubilant over the fact that the Toronto boys had not only had a chance to get into a skirmish, but had showed themselves good soldiers and had come out successful in their first fight. That was the reason for the exuberance of a business man, born in Canada, but who has lived in New York for many years, when he met one of his English friends at his down-town dining club yesterday. "Hollos, there, old chappie!" was his effusive greeting to the Britisher as he extended his hand, "things have begun to come our way at last. Did you read of the victory at Dover Farm yesterday? Remember what I told you as to what would happen when the 'Canucks' got at the Boers? England didn't win a fight till the 'Canucks' got into harness, and the first time our boys got at the Dutchmen they licked 'em good. I know about half that Toronto crowd personally, and my word for it, old man, it isn't the first meal the 'Canucks' will make of those 'frankfurters.' Britain will now have to acknowledge what all the rest of the world knows, that we Canadians are great people and there's no getting away from it."

"If you knew as much about the lily of the valley as I do you would not put that stem in your mouth," politely remarked the florist to one of his customers as he placed a spray of the fragrant and graceful blossoms between his teeth.

"It's not a very elegant habit, I confess," responded the customer a bit testily, "but it's an old one, and I can't readily break myself of it."

"Pardon me, but it is not the habit of which I was speaking, but of the flower itself. The lily is a dangerous flower to chew, differing from most of those one buys at the stores, for while this one stem may do you no harm, it is a fact that the lily is poisonous to man and beast alike, and as very few people know it, I always like to let my customers know the fact. Then they can dine on them if they like."

THE LEGISLATURE MEETS

Organizes and Hears the Governor's Message, Then Adjourns.

ASSEMBLY RULES AMENDED

Debate Limited to Fifteen Minutes for Each Member, Unless Extended by a Two-thirds Vote.

ALBANY, Jan. 3.—The Legislature convened to-day about noon, but little business was transacted other than the formal election of officers, and after listening to the Governor's message both houses adjourned until Wednesday.

The opening of the session of 1900 was marked by nothing out of the commonplace. The members of the two branches gathered slowly, and the hotel corridors were much more lively than the legislative halls up to 11:30 o'clock. Chairman B. B. Odell, George W. Aldridge, Congressman Emerson, and other leaders were at the Hotel Ten Eyck, and there were frequent conferences evidently over the minor appointments in the Assembly. Col. Michael J. Dady and Walter B. Atterbury were present to guide the new Kings County men.

At the Capitol the chambers had been adorned with flags, while flowers were in profusion. In the Senate a magnificent floral piece in immortelles arched the Lieutenant Governor's desk, the word "Excelsior" being in red, white, and blue, with American flags on either side, while on the desk was a bunch of flowers with the initials "T. L. W." in roses. It was the gift of the Kings County delegation. On Senator Ellsworth's desk was a beautiful basket of American Beauty roses from the leader of the minority, Thomas F. Grady, while Senators Feeter, Brackett, Grady, and Plunkitt each had huge baskets.

In the Assembly, Speaker Nixon's desk was graced with a beautiful basket of flowers, while at least twenty members also had flowers. On each member's desk was a copy of the proposed new rules.

PROCEEDINGS IN THE SENATE.

It was 12 o'clock when the Senate was called to order by Lieut. Gov. Woodruff from behind the bank of flowers upon his desk, and prayer was offered by Bishop Doane.

Lieut. Gov. Woodruff made no speech, merely extending his greeting in the following words:

"Senators: In again calling to order the Senate of 1899-1900 on this the first day of the last legislative session of the century I extend to you my felicitations that every member of this Senate has been vouchsafed a return to his place, and a resumption of the duties, which I trust may be pleasant, and performed in that spirit of uniform good will which I know from past experience as President of this body is so sure to be productive of great good to the people whose earnest and able representatives you have shown yourselves to be. What is the further pleasure of the Senate?"

The formal election of officers occupied but a few minutes, the organization of the Senate remaining the same as last year, except as to a few minor clerkships.

A great number of familiar bills, which had failed of passage at the previous session, were introduced, and then the Senate took a recess to await the receipt of the Governor's message.

After the reading of the message a concurrent resolution for adjournment until 8:30 o'clock next Wednesday night was received and passed.

IN THE ASSEMBLY.

The Assembly was called to order by Clerk Archie E. Baxter shortly after the noon hour. There were but few absentees. After the roll call the House proceeded to ballot for officers, with the following result: Speaker, S. Fred Nixon of Chautauqua; Clerk, A. E. Baxter of Chemung; Sergeant at Arms, F. W. Johnston of Erie; Principal Doorkeeper, Thomas F. Murphy of New York; First Assistant Doorkeeper, Charles R. Houghtaling of Albany; Second Assistant Doorkeeper, Roswell P. Warren of Washington; Stenographer, H. C. Lammert of Kings. Out of a total of 149 votes cast, Speaker Nixon received 92 and Dr. J. Franklin Barnes of Schuyler, the minority leader, 57.

Prolonged and hearty applause greeted Speaker Nixon when he assumed the chair. His remarks were brief. He said in part:

"I desire to take advantage of this first public opportunity afforded me of thanking the members of the House for their expressions of sympathy during my recent bereavement.

"To the majority I shall endeavor by my actions to prove worthy of the trust reposed in me, and when the parting day arrives I trust I will retire bearing the good will and respect of the minority."

The Chair appointed Majority Leader Allds and Minority Leader Barnes a committee to wait on the Governor and inform him that the House had organized for business.

A committee from the Senate, comprising Senators Rampsberger and Armstrong, waited on the House and announced that the Senate was ready for business. Assemblymen Kelsey and Kelly of Albany were selected as a committee to inform the Senate that the House had organized for business.

The Governor's annual message was received and read by Clerk Baxter, consuming about three-quarters of an hour.

Mr. Allds proposed a resolution that the rules of last year, as rearranged, be adopted as the rules to govern the Assembly for 1900. Mr. Green of New York moved to amend by adding thereto a new rule, to be known as "Rule No. 9A," to read: "No Senate bill shall be considered by the House unless the new matter in the printed bill shall be underscored and all matter to be eliminated by amendment to existing law must be printed in its proper place in the bill, inclosed in black-faced brackets."

Mr. Allds opposed the amendment and moved that it be referred to the Committee on Rules. He moved the adoption of the rules as rearranged.

Mr. Lewis of Monroe thought it would be advisable to postpone action until next week, as copies of the rules had only been placed on the members' desks prior to the session and they had not had time as yet to look them over.

Mr. Hyman of New York moved to strike out Section 42 of the rules which limits individual speeches to fifteen minutes on any bill unless the time is extended by a two-thirds vote of the members.

Both amendments were lost and the rules as rearranged were adopted by a vote of 87 yeas to 33 nays.

Drawing of seats was the next business, after which an adjournment was taken until Wednesday, Jan. 10 at 8:30 o'clock.

Contest in Fifteenth District.

ALBANY, Jan. 3.—During the drawing of seats in the Assembly this afternoon, Speaker Nixon announced a contest in the Fifteenth Assembly District by Thomas J. McManus. William E. Smith, Democrat, is the sitting member.

BLACKWELL'S ISLAND BRIDGE.

Bill Introduced in the Assembly Provides for a Commission to be Appointed by the Governor.

ALBANY, Jan. 3.—Assemblyman Wissel of Queens introduced a Bridge bill to-day for New York City in the House. It provides for the appointment by the Governor of a commission consisting of three citizens of the City of New York, together with the President of the Borough of Manhattan and the person now occupying the office of President of the Borough of Queens, for the purpose of constructing, as agents of the State, a permanent cantilever bridge over the East River. Such bridge is to be adapted for the use of street surface, elevated road cars, trucks, carriages, bicycles, and foot passengers, to be constructed across the East River from Manhattan Borough to the Borough of Queens over Blackwell's Island.

The cost of constructing such bridge is to be borne by the city, and in order to meet the same the Controller is directed to sell and issue upon requisition by such Commissioners corporate stock of the city in the amount required. The bridge, when completed, is to be a public highway, and the expense of maintaining and repairing it shall be paid for by the railroad companies using the bridge. Within a year after the completion of the bridge the commission is to file its report with the Controller of the city.

PURE FOOD INVESTIGATION.

New Bill Provides for One by Commissioner of Agriculture.

ALBANY, Jan. 3.—A bill introduced today by Senator Ambler provides that the Commissioner of Agriculture shall investigate and examine the food and food products that are manufactured, sold, or exposed for sale in the State of New York, and for that purpose he may appoint such agent or agents and employ such chemist or chemists or other experts as he may deem necessary.

The Commissioner of Agriculture shall report to the Legislature on or before Jan. 15, 1901, the result of the examinations made, with recommendations as to such legislation as he may deem necessary to correct any evils existing relative to food or food products.

The sum of $10,000 is appropriated for the purposes of the act.

FOREIGN INSURANCE COMPANY TAX.

Measure Introduced to Collect 2 Per Cent. for Volunteer Firemen.

ALBANY, Jan. 3.—Assemblyman Metcalf of Queens introduced a bill in the House to-day fixing the tax on the receipts of foreign insurance companies doing business in the boroughs of Richmond and Queens at $2 on every $100 until the establishment of a paid Fire Department in said boroughs.

The money thus derived is to be paid to the Treasurers of the volunteer fire department in said boroughs, who shall retain 90 per cent. of it for the benefit of their respective departments or companies, the remaining 10 per cent. to be paid over to the Treasurer of the Volunteer Firemen's Organization at Hudson.

After the establishment of a paid department the moneys thus received shall be paid to the Fire Commissioner until Jan. 17, 1917.

PENALTY IN DAMAGE SUITS.

A Bill to Increase Judgment 50 Per Cent. in Cases Transferred.

ALBANY, Jan. 3.—To relieve the New York City Courts and to prevent abuses by continuing actions for years, Assemblyman Green will introduce a bill adding a penalty to a judgment if a case is taken from the District Court to the City Court.

Mr. Green says that in more than a majority of the cases brought for damages in the District Courts the defendant, usually a corporation, gets a change to the City Court, and because of the pressure of business there, a delay of two years.

In the District Court the cases could be disposed of in two weeks, and the change to the City Court is sometimes made for no other purpose than to tire out the plaintiff. His method of stopping the evil is to add a penalty of 50 per cent. if the case is taken to the City Court.

A NEW BRIDGE COMMISSION.

Bill Provides for a New Structure and a Tunnel.

ALBANY, Jan. 3.—Assemblyman Edward Brennan will next week introduce a bill creating a bridge commission for New York City. The commission is to be named in the bill, but Mr. Brennan says he has not yet selected the names.

The commission will have the power to build a new bridge somewhere between the present bridge and the one now building. It will also have power to locate and build a tunnel from southern New York to South Brooklyn, and either tunnel or a bridge to Queens County as may be desired.

PAY FOR SCHOOL TEACHERS.

Resolution to Coerce Board of Estimate and Apportionment.

ALBANY, Jan. 3.—Assemblyman P. F. Trainor introduced the following to-day:

The Board of Estimate and Apportionment of the City of New York is hereby directed to convene within ten days after the passage of this act and place at the disposal of the Board of Education of the said City of New York, in addition to all amounts heretofore appropriated for that purpose, such an amount as the said Board of Education shall certify to be necessary to pay to teachers employed in the public schools of the said City of New York all arrears of salaries now due, and also such an amount as shall be certified by said Board of Education as necessary to enable said Board of Education to pay to all teachers employed during the current school year their salaries at least as often as the end of each calendar month.

Senator Havens introduced a bill compelling the issue of revenue bonds by the New York Board of Estimate and Apportionment for the purpose of paying the school teachers of the Borough of Richmond the sum said to be due them—$50,192.

Bill to Fix Minimum Damages.

ALBANY, Jan. 3.—Assemblyman Joseph I. Green of New York will introduce a bill to correct an evil in the awarding of damages for personal injuries. According to Mr. Green, when damages are awarded, the upper court with great frequency reduces the jury's verdict, on the ground of excessiveness. He intends to frame a bill which will provide the minimum sum to be awarded, first, for loss of life; second, for loss of an arm or leg, and, third, for serious or permanent injuries. The minimum being fixed, will assure the victim at least that sum.

Supervision of Pawnbrokers.

ALBANY, Jan. 3.—Senator Wagner today introduced a bill which applies to all counties of the State except Monroe and Westchester, and which places pawnbrokers under the general supervision of the State Superintendent of Banks. The bill also changes the rates as follows: On loans of more than $50, $3; $25, $2; less than $25, $1.50.

A New Bronx County.

ALBANY, Jan. 3.— Senator Mitchell today introduced a bill to create a new county to be known as the County of Bronx, out of the territory now included in the Borough of the Bronx in New York City. It is not intended, however, to separate the borough from the City of New York, but simply to give it a new county Government, the same as Kings and the other counties included within the city.

Water Power for Watervliet.

ALBANY, Jan. 3.—Assemblyman Kelly of Albany will introduce a bill, authorizing the State Superintendent of Public Works to make a contract with the United States Government to furnish superfluous water from the Erie Canal for the operation of the United States Gun Foundry at Watervliet.

Miscellaneous Senate Bills.

ALBANY, Jan. 3.—These bills have been introduced in the Senate:

Senator Ellsworth—Appropriating $27,500 for the contingent expenses of the Legislature.

Senator Brackett—Allowing the Board of Claims to hear the claim of Wynkoop, Hallenbeck, Crawford & Co., formerly State printers, for extra work done during 1897 and 1898.

Senator Higgins—Appropriating $20,000, unexpended balance, for the expenses of Gov. Roosevelt's Canal Investigating Committee.

Senator Humphreys—Amending the general corporation law to prohibit the use of the word "trust" for any other corporation than those organized under the banking or insurance law.

Senator Humphreys—Amending the banking law to provide that every bank shall hold an annual meeting for the election of Directors on the second Tuesday in January, but such annual meeting, for proper reasons and by a majority vote of those present, may be adjourned for a period of not more than ten days.

Senator Wagner—Prohibiting the use of slot machines or other mechanical contrivances with moving pictures of nude or partly nude female figures.

Senator Plunkitt—Providing for the protection of what is known as West Side Court, on Fifty-fourth Street, New York City. It provides that the two lots east of the court shall be purchased and added to the court. This is so as to prevent the Metropolitan Railway Company from building a power house on the lots, and shutting off light and air from the court.

Senator Wagner—Providing for the removal of electrical wires or conductors, and placing them under ground in New York City. The bill, however, does not affect any elevated railroad operated by electric power.

In the Assembly.

The following bills were introduced to-day in the Assembly:

Mr. Cook—Extending the time in which the Buffalo, Gardenville and Ebenezer Railway shall put its road into operation.

Mr. Ellis—Providing that highway commutation moneys in the Counties of Rensselaer, Chemung, Onondaga, Columbia, Oswego, Chautauqua, Madison, Wayne, Erie, Franklin, Sullivan, Tioga, Saratoga, Broome, Orange, Ontario, and Genesee shall be paid on or before June 1.

Fire in Woman's League Room.

Some gas exploded yesterday afternoon in the rooms of the Woman's Professional League, 1,509 Broadway, and caused a small fire and momentary excitement. The damage is less than $100. The building belongs to John Jacob Astor.

BROOKLYN PRISON CONDEMNED

Commission Finds Woman's Department of Raymond Street Jail in a Most Disgraceful Condition.

ALBANY, Jan. 3.—The State Prison Commission to-day adopted a report condemning the woman's prison at the Raymond Street Jail, Brooklyn. The commission also adopted a resolution ordering that the authorities of New York City be notified and directed to take action to remedy the conditions, otherwise the State Commission threatens to secure an indictment of those responsible for the conditions in the jail.

The report on which this action was taken was the result of an investigation by Commissioners Stewart and Loyd. Among other things the report says:

"The woman's prison was found to be in a most disgraceful condition. When inspected Dec. 14, it contained 102 women. The prison is sixty-six years old, and does not contain separate cells. The women are housed in large sleeping apartments, some of which contain eight or nine beds. The beds are placed so closely together that there is no room to pass between them. This state of affairs should not be allowed to exist in any civilized community. As the women confined are generally drunkards, and as there is no privacy for a respectable woman, this commission should take a strong position with the authorities of the Borough of Brooklyn, and should insist that this shocking condition shall be terminated speedily. Nineteen of the 102 women were awaiting trial, and should they be acquitted on trial, it could be said that innocent women have been housed for weeks by the Borough of Brooklyn, in the above described disgusting surroundings. The population of the prison is constantly shifting; sometimes as many as 3,000 per month are received."

The commission recommends the erection of a new prison that would cost about $250,000.

TO SIT IN APPELLATE DIVISION.

Gov. Roosevelt Names Three Justices to Fill Vacancies.

ALBANY, Jan. 3.—Gov. Roosevelt to-day designated three Supreme Court Justices to sit on Appellate Division benches to fill vacancies. He designated Justice Michael Herschberg of Newburg to sit in the Second Department to fill the vacancy caused by the appointment of Justice Cullen to the Court of Appeals bench for a temporary period. He also designated Justice Frank Hiscock of Syracuse and Justice F. C. Loughlin of Buffalo to sit in the Fourth Department. There is still a vacancy on the Third Division bench caused by the elevation of Justice Landox to the Court of Appeals. Gov. Roosevelt is not ready to make this designation.

The Governor to-day appointed John B. M. Stevens of Rochester as special County Judge of Monroe County, to fill a vacancy. This appointment was requested by G. W. Aldridge, Senator Parsens, Mayor Carnahan, and County Judge Sutherland of Monroe County.

An Office for Dr. Mary Walker.

ALBANY, Jan. 3.—Dr. Mary Walker of Buffalo has been appointed physician at the State Custodial Asylum at Newark. She succeeds Dr. M. Alice Broell, who has been relieved by the Board of Managers of the institution by a vote of 5 to 4 on charges made by the Superintendent of the institution.

SEARCHLIGHT FIRE ENGINE HERE

Constructed According to Chief Croker's Suggestions.

The searchlight fire engine constructed at Elmira for use by the local Fire Department has arrived in this city. The searchlight feature of the engine, which is something new in fire-fighting appliances, was the idea of Fire Chief Croker, and the entire engine was constructed according to his suggestions.

The engine had its first test last night. The test took place in Mercer Street, between Houston and Prince, immediately in front of the quarters of Hook and Ladder Company No. 20. It lasted over an hour and was as thorough as possible without the actual presences of a fire.

The engine was made to belch forth a heavy volume of smoke and the light rays were thrown through this and focused far up the street and then made to illuminate a room on the top floor of the twelve-story building just across the street from the hook and ladder company. Chief Croker, who was much pleased with the test, said the engine will be placed in service at once, "and if it proves as satisfactory as I think it will, others will be built and stationed in various parts of the city. This one will be placed with Engine Company No. 20. It will answer all second alarms south of Fourteenth Street, and be subject to special orders to any part of the city."

Directly connected with the engine is a marine type multipolar generator, supplying sixty-five amperes of current at a pressure of eighty volts. On each side of the driver's seat is placed an eighteen-degree projector, and the seat folds over so that the projectors can swing through a complete circle. The lamps are self-regulating, consume thirty-five amperes of current each, and give an arc of 6,000 candle power. The engine weighs 6,500 pounds, and is drawn by two horses.

MR. GARDINER'S INJURIES.

Break in His Rib Serious—Will Be Long Confined.

District Attorney Asa Bird Gardiner, who has been confined to his home, at Garden City, L. I., since the Thursday before Christmas, when he received injuries in a fall from a chair in his office, is still a long way from recovery. Yesterday the plaster cast which had been placed over his broken rib was removed and an examination was made. It was expected that it would be unnecessary to replace the cast, but it was found that the break in the rib was nearer the spinal column than was at first believed.

It was found also that the intercostal tissues were so badly bruised that the Colonel would be unable to leave his house for some time to come.

FATHER MALONE'S WILL.

Rumored that One Dated Dec. 6 Will Be Offered for Probate.

There was a report in the parish of the Church of Sts. Peter and Paul, Brooklyn, yesterday that there was a later will of Father Malone's in existance than the one executed by ex-Judge George L. Fox on Nov. 6. When Mr. Fox was asked about it he said it would not surprise him to hear of a new will offered for probate.

The date claimed for the second will is Dec. 6. Sylvester Malone, Father Malone's nephew, declined to discuss the matter, and said when the proper time came he would speak about the will or of anything connected with it.

Rainy Day Club Election.

The Rainy Day Club held its annual meeting yesterday and elected the following officers: President—Mrs. A. M. Palmer; Vice Presidents—Mrs. S. R. Krom, Mrs. Alice Maddock, Mrs. Harry Wallerstein, Mme. K. Von Klenner; Treasurer—Mrs. Arnold Schramm; Auditor—Dr. Aloise I. Church; Recording Secretary—Mrs. Brice Collard; Corresponding Secretary—Mrs. Paul Colell; Executive Committee—Mrs. George B. Wallis, Chairman, Mrs. Howard McNutt, Mrs. Frank Keith Taylor, Mrs. Gifford, Mrs. C. S. Jenkins. The club has $500 in the Treasury.

Burglar Married in Jail.

Ernest McIntyre, alias Edwards, who is held at the Hudson County Jail, in Jersey City, having been convicted of burglary, was married in the jail parlor yesterday to Mrs. Mary Smith a widow, whose home is in Newark. McIntyre belonged to the so-called "Jack Sheppard" gang, who operated extensively in Jersey City, Hoboken, and Newark, cleaning out the entire stock of several clothing stores.

FIVE ARE ILL FROM GAS.

Mother and Her Children and Their Grandmother Overcome—An Accident, the Father Thinks.

Overcome by gas escaping from a detached gas stove tube, five persons had a narrow escape from death yesterday afternoon in a flat on the first floor of the house at 340 East One Hundred and Twenty-first Street. They were Mary Guttentag, twenty-five years old; her children, Dora Guttentag, three years old; Pearl Guttentag, two years old; Ruth Guttentag, five months old, and her mother, Mrs. Nora Dreman, sixty-five years old.

All were unconscious when found by Mrs. Morris, the janitress. They were removed to the Harlem Hospital, where late last night their condition was said to be precarious. Whether it was an accident or an attempt at suicide is not positively known.

Mrs. Morris happened to go into the hall, where she smelled gas, and soon traced it to the Guttentag flat. She called loudly for help and a woman neighbor went to her. The women, wrapped their aprons about their heads and dashing in they threw up the windows.

They found Mrs. Dreman, the grandmother, sitting in a rocker, her head fallen on her breast and apparently dead. The mother, Mrs. Guttentag, sat nearby on an ordinary chair in a similar position, and also motionless. The baby, Ruth, lay unconscious in her baby carriage. Pearl lay on a pillow on the kitchen table, while Dora was found insensible in the small hallway leading from the kitchen to the dining room.

Policeman Bentley of the East One Hundred and Twenty-sixth Street Station sent an ambulance call and the five victims were sent to the hospital.

The gas jet in the dining room was found open and the tube attached to a small gas heater in the same room was detached. The fact that both were open led to the suspicion of an attempted suicide.

The father of the family, Julius Guttentag, a real estate dealer, reached home fifteen minutes after his family had been taken away. He derided the idea of suicide and declared his wife had everything she needed and that their family relations were of the pleasantest sort. The neighbors bear this out in part, saying they never knew the family to quarrel, except for an occasional little spat.

NEW MECHANICS' INSTITUTE.

General Society of Tradesmen Celebrates Its 114th Annual Meeting —Opening and Reception.

The General Society of Mechanics and Tradesmen of the City of New York celebrated its one hundred and fourteenth annual meeting last night by the formal opening and dedication of the society's new building, 20 West Forty-fourth Street, known as Mechanics' Institute. The principal function of the evening was a reception between the hours of 9 and 11 o'clock, during which hours the members and their guests viewed the school and library departments in full operation and inspected the building from top to bottom. The reception was attended by several hundred persons. It was preceded by the annual business meeting.

The formal opening of the new institute marks an important epoch in the growth of the society, which was instituted on Nov. 17, 1785, at Walter Heyer's tavern, in King (now Pine) Street, near Broadway. There were twenty-two persons present, and a "general committee of mechanics" was formed. Their object was the care of "worthy artisans in sickness and distress, and the promotion and encouragement of the mechanic interest in this city." In 1788 friendly relations were established with a kindred body then existing under the name of the "Manufacturing Society," which eventually was merged into the mechanics' organization, whose name was changed to its present title. It was incorporated March 14, 1792.

The society continued to meet in Heyer's tavern until 1803.

The present building was purchased from the officials of Columbia University, and is by far the best-equipped home the society has ever occupied. It is five stories high, with an imposing façade of stone and brick. The library department occupies the entire lower floor and its gallery. There is a large reading room in front and the library proper extends the entire depth of the plot. It is lighted by an immense skylight and an elaborate arrangement of electric lamps.

The second floor contains a large entrance hall, an assembly room, and the executive offices and members' apartments. At the right of the entrance hall is placed in the wall the cornerstone of the original mechanics' hall. The three upper floors are used as laboratories, recitation rooms, and studios for the classes in modeling, cabinet decoration, architectural free hand, and mechanical drawing, and as accommodations for the stenographic and typewriting classes.

The various courses of instruction in all departments of the institute are open to all applicants whose names are favorably presented to the Board of Managers. Admission to the advanced classes will be granted to all who pass satisfactory examinations. The classes will meet three times each week, and a staff of competent instructors has been engaged.

UNION CLUB'S PURCHASE.

Contracts for Sale of the New Site to be Signed To-day.

Contracts will be signed to-day for the purchase by the Union Club of the northeast corner of Fifth Avenue and Fifty-first Street, 75 by 100, with two adjoining lots on the street, 50 by 100.5. The price is $700,000.

An officer of the Union Club said yesterday that the question as to who will be the architect of the new clubhouse had not yet been considered and that reports to the effect that several well-known firms had been asked to enter a competition were premature. A meeting of the Board of Governors of the club will be held next Wednesday evening, at which this matter will probably come up for consideration.

New Water Mains for Brooklyn.

The Board of Public Improvements yesterday adopted a, resolution authorizing the laying of water mains in the southern and southwestern sections of Brooklyn, at an expense of $1,055,000. The communities affected are Vanderveer Park, Coney Island, and Bergen Beach. Deputy Controller Levey objected to the resolution.

Chief Clerk Smythe Resigns.

James M. Smythe, chief clerk in the Department of Highways in the Borough of Queens, has resigned to accept a position with a large publishing house in Manhattan. He acted as secretary to Deputy Commissioner John P. Madden.

Italian Laborer Whirled to Death.

HACKENSACK, N. J., Jan. 3.—Angelo Falvate, an Italian laborer employed in the paper mill at Bogota went to a piece of shafting this morning to run on a belt. The shaft was making 160 revolutions a minute. He was caught by the belt, and in a second was drawn up and whirled round and round on the shaft. At each revolution his body was thrown against the ceiling. He was instantly killed.

FOR REFORMS IN THE BRONX.

Taxpayers' Alliance Wants Rapid Transit Right Away—City "Wasting Money on Bridges."

The Taxpayers' Alliance of the Borough of the Bronx wants rapid transit. It wants it right away and lots of it. Such was the decision unanimously reached last night when delegates from the thirty associations making up the alliance met in Alliance Hall to discuss means and measures for the improvement of the Bronx.

The President, Col. James A. Goulden, who occupied the chair, said he understood the Railroad Commissioners will soon give their ruling as to whether the Manhattan Railway will be compelled to build the extensions to its lines into the Bronx asked for by the alliance.

Chairman W. W. Niles, Jr., of the Rapid Transit Committee said some action must be taken to compel the building of the rapid transit tunnels, as there appears to be a disposition on the part of the city officials to delay the matter and "waste money on bridges." He said the thousands of people living in the Bronx will not be put off. They want rapid transit, and, moreover, they want it in all directions to the city line.

He said it is not fair to ask the residents of the Bronx to pay for rapid transit and then stop the lines short, giving them only partial benefits. He said it will not suffice to run the tunnel line to Bedford Park and West Farms. It must be taken to Woodlawn, to Riverdale, and to the very outside of the city line. Westchester and City Island also should have relief.

The New York, New Haven and Hartford Railroad, he said, ought to be compelled to run frequent trains at a five-cent fare to the city limits, while the New York Central Railroad ought to be compelled to run a similar five-cent frequent service between the Grand Central Station and Yonkers.

Another committee reported that the action of the Board of Estimate and Apportionment in cutting the Bronx Park appropriation from $60,000 to $40,000 will prove a severe blow at the new Zoological Garden, and hard work will have to be done to increase the society caring for the Zoo by several hundred members if its efficiency is to be maintained.

President Maher of the Union Railway wrote to the alliance that he is building transfer stations, making the Webster and Westchester Avenue extensions, and other reforms asked for by that body. Only delay in the delivery of the requisite materials, he wrote, prevents the rapid completion of the work.

The committee on tax assessments reported that some reform should be effected in the matter of the payment for private lands condemned for public purposes. Now this expense is assessed largely on abutting properties. The committee thought this should be reduced.

ABRAHAM T. BUCKHOUT KILLED.

Millionaire Lumber Merchant's Body Found Lying on the Track Near the Tremont Station.

Abraham T. Buckhout, sixty-nine years old, one of the best-known men in Tremont and reputed to be worth a million dollars, was found dead last night with his skull crushed in on the north-bound track of the New York and Harlem Railroad near the Tremont Station. The body was discovered by a passenger on a down-town train. The train was stopped and the body carried to the station and later to Mr. Buckhout's home, Tremont Avenue and One Hundred and Seventy-sixth Street.

Mr. Buckhout had been to his office at 405 East Thirtieth Street, where he was in the lumber business with his son, Frank C. Buckhout. It is believed he was on his way home, and in stepping out on the platform before the train got to the station fell off and was killed.

The dead man's brother, James Buckhout, is Principal of the West Farms School. Mr. Buckhout recently sold the old homestead, known as Buckhout Park, to the city for $150,000, and it is now Echo Park.

Mr. Buckhout is survived by a widow and four children, Frank C., William H., James, and Mrs. A. M. Cornell. Mrs. Cornell's husband is the organist of the Tremont Methodist Episcopal Church.

NEW YORK HISTORICAL SOCIETY.

Annual Meeting and Election—Building Fund Contributions.

At the annual meeting of the New York Historical Society, held Tuesday night in the society's building, at 175 Second Avenue, the following officers were elected for the ensuing year: President—John A. King; First Vice President—J. Pierpont Morgan; Second Vice President—John S. Kennedy; Foreign Corresponding Secretary—the Rev. Dr. Eugene A. Hoffman; Domestic Corresponding Secretary—Edward F. De Lancey; Recording Secretary—Dr. Sydney H. Carney, Jr.; Treasurer—Robert Schell; Librarian—Robert H. Kelby. All the officers, with the exception of Dr. Carney, were re-elected.

The society, according to reports read last night, has 1,103 members, of which number 70 are honorary, 574 life, and 359 annual members. It was announced by President King that the Building Fund of the society now amounts to $16,043.54, which is the total, with interest, of the following contributions made during the last six months: John A. King, $5,000; Charlotte A. Mount, $5,000; Susan Mount, $5,000, and Phebe Anna Thorne, $1,000. The society owns a plot of land on Central Park West, between Seventy-sixth and Seventy-seventh Streets. President King, in an address, urged the members to interest their friends in the matter of a new building for the society.

WILL RESIGN CONDITIONALLY.

Tennessee's Treasurer Must Have a Voice in Choosing His Successor.

E. B. Craig, now serving his fourth term as State Treasurer and Insurance Commissioner of Tennessee, and who was in the city the past week, left for Nashville last night. Some weeks ago Mr. Craig accepted the position of Treasurer of the Virginia Coal, Coke and Iron Company, with headquarters at Bristol, Tenn. Thereupon he decided to place his resignation as State Treasurer in the hands of Gov. McMillin, provided a voice is given him in the selection of his successor.

Mr. Craig has no particular individual in view, but he is determined that he must be a competent and clean man, who will run the office on business principles. Not having received satisfactory assurances on that score, Mr. Craig has withheld his resignation, and it is quite probable, unless his wishes are regarded, that he will hold the office until the end of his term.

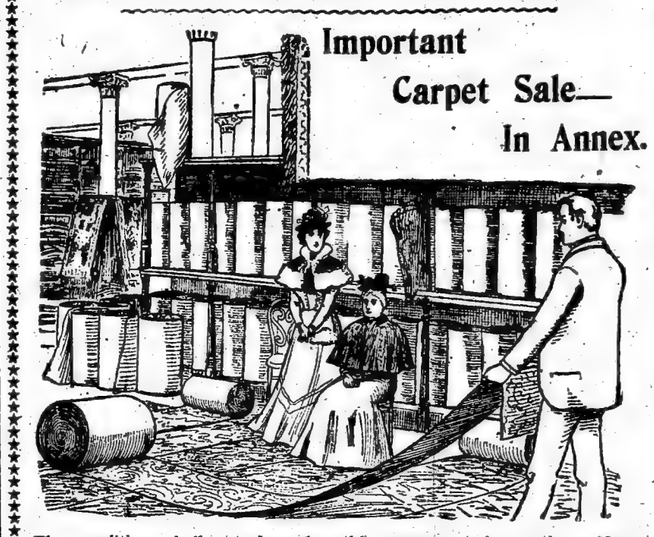
Under his administration State bonds have increased from 68 to 98, and he has been able to borrow money in New York at less than 3 per cent. on State Treasurer's notes. It is intimated that Treasurer Craig's stand may have an important bearing on the coming contest for the United States Senatorship between Judge Snodgrass and Congressman Carmack.

The Attractions of Our Stores Are Their Low Prices.

Macy's

R. H. Macy and Co.

Both Sides of 14th St. (Running from 13th to 15th St.), Sixth Ave.



The condition of the stock makes this movement imperative. Heavy business during the past weeks has left many broken lines, short lengths, single rolls and the like. Of some patterns you'll find a hundred yards and of others just enough to cover a small room.

This sale and these sweeping reductions are necessary to keep the department from becoming clogged and congested with small balances. The cut prices will clear them out quickly and make a way for Spring purchases. Our original rates were the very lowest in town—frequently a third less than elsewhere. That gives you a clue to the savings made possible by the present scale.

Muslin Underwear

January Undermuslin Sales are universal. That's why offerings must possess distinctive merit in order to win public appreciation. We urge you to consider the two controlling points—Qualities and Prices. Our hard work of months would count for nothing unless we were absolutely right concerning both features.

We've made keen and disinterested comparisons. Have you? That's the final test. The result was invariably and largely in our favor.

There is character in our Muslin Underwear—character and strength in the materials, trimmings and sewing. Sizes are not stingy or skimpy. You'll find every garment full and liberal—made and finished just like homework. And they are delightfully new and fresh—so clean, so crisp. That's a decisive charm. Thousands and thousands of pieces, but not a single yellow crease—nothing wrinkled, mussed or smirched. White, white, everything white and not a fleck of soil.

Muslin and Cambric Chemises, 29c. to $5.99.

$3.49 Blankets at $2.49.

A lot of Blankets—eleven-quarter size—our regular price for such qualities is $3.49. Would cost you $4.00 or $4.25 elsewhere. But these are slightly damaged—you will have to search for the flaws. The blemishes are so trifling as to be almost undiscoverable. But they seemed big enough to the manufacturer's eyes. That's why we are selling them at $2.49.

California Mills Blankets.

Ten-quarter Blankets—$1.84, $2.97, $3.25, $3.59.
Eleven-quarter Blankets—$2.19, $2.49, $3.29, $4.99.
Twelve-quarter Blankets—$3.89, $4.38, $7.19, $8.44.

Quite a large assortment of Blankets just a little soiled by having been used in store displays and decorations. With the bloom of newness gone—all profits and part of cost follow. Your choice at greatly reduced prices.

Continuation of the Embroidery Sale.

Not a meagre lot rounded up just for the sake of advertising. We don't secure themes and texts in that way. The original quantity was 75,000 yards. That's the present volume, less the amount sold on yesterday.

GOV. ROOSEVELT'S ANNUAL MESSAGE

Says the Canal Charges Cannot Be Prosecuted.

TAX LAWS NEED CHANGES

Equitable Restrictions Are Required for Trusts.

OPPOSES HORTON ACT

Relations of Capital and Labor, Tenement Houses, and State Ownership of Public Utilities Are Also Discussed.

State of New York,
Executive Chamber,
Albany, Jan. 3, 1900.

To the Legislature of the State of New York:

It is a very genuine pleasure to congratulate the Legislature upon the substantial sum of achievement in legislation and administration of the past year. Laws of the utmost usefulness to the community have been enacted, and there has been a steady betterment throughout the year in the methods and results of the administration of the government.

CANALS.

The first matter which had to be dealt with on the incoming of the new administration was the question of the canals. New York State led the Union in the development of canal navigation. Of recent years the change in the methods of transportation, by immensely increasing the railroad competition with the canal, has greatly altered the conditions of successful administration of the latter. There were really two questions to be solved in reference to the canals. The first was as to their administration; the second as to the general canal policy of the State in the future. A very slight examination showed that as regards the latter there were not sufficient data to warrant the formulation of an intelligent policy. A commission appointed by my predecessor to examine into the conditions which make for the commercial supremacy of the State was still sitting. This commission was continued. The subject with which it dealt was of so vast and of such vital importance that it has not yet been able to complete its labors; and it was evident it would not have time to consider the canal problem in the way that was desirable. Accordingly I appointed a committee consisting of Gen. Francis V. Greene of New York, Mr. Frank S. Witherbee of Port Henry, Major Symons of the United States Army, Mr. John P. Scatcherd of Buffalo, and ex-Mayor George E. Green of Binghamton, to examine the whole canal question. Their report will be ready in about a fortnight, and will be submitted to the Legislature with a special message, probably submitting at the same time the report of the Commerce Commission. I wish to call attention to the fact that the gentlemen serving on these two bodies are business men whose lives are filled with exacting duties; yet they have given, unpaid, months of their valuable time and their best thought and effort to the solution of these problems. Such disinterested expert service is of incalculable value to the State and makes it greatly the debtor to the men rendering the service. The conduct of these two commissions, and of the Commission on the Educational Bill emphasizes one of the most pleasing features of our public life, viz.: the readiness with which able and high-minded private citizens will do special public work when they are convinced of its necessity from the public standpoint.

There remained the question of the proper administration of the canals. Very grave accusations had been made against the former canal management; accusations which varied from charges of mere inefficiency and bad judgment, to charges of wholesale personal corruption, criminal in its character.

SUMMARY OF WHAT WAS DONE.

Such being the conditions, there were two things to be done; first, to secure by the employment of the best counsel an investigation which would be final and complete, and determine whether it were possible to proceed criminally against any contractor or public employee; and, second, if there had been no criminal misconduct, but if there had been failure to manage the canals so as to secure the best results for the State, then to provide a thorough and radical change in the management. These were the only two lines on which action could be taken. On both of them action was taken. On the one hand, the investigation was so conducted as to leave no room for any further question as to criminal proceedings; and, on the other hand, the reformation in the methods of management has been so complete as to leave nothing to be done save to continue and perfect the new system.

DETAILED STATEMENT.

As a result of the reports made to my predecessor in office by the commission appointed by him to make an investigation concerning the work of improving and enlarging the canals under the acts of 1895 and 1896, commonly known as the "Nine-million Dollar Acts," the accusation against the then existing canal management had been resolved into two categories.

In the first place it was asserted that there had been on the part of the outgoing State Engineer and Surveyor and of the former Superintendent of Public Works, malfeasance and misfeasance in office which called for the criminal prosecution of themselves, of their subordinates, and of certain contractors. This was a legal question, the if guilty, their punishment could come only through the courts, inasmuch as they were out of office. The ordinary machinery of the law was set in motion by the Attorney General with the purpose of securing the punishment of any delinquent. In almost any other case, in view of the zeal with which the Attorney General was carrying on these prosecutions, I should not have deemed it necessary to take any extraordinary action. But the charges were so grave and had been given such widespread publicity that I felt warranted in asking the assistance of the Legislature to enable me to take steps that would guarantee beyond all possibility of doubt the prosecution and punishment of any criminal who could be discovered by rigorous and searching investigation.

Accordingly I appointed Mr. Austen G. Fox and Mr. Wallace MacFarlane of New York, well known members of the bar, of opposite political faith to the accused, and the latter United States District Attorney in New York under President Cleveland, to assist the Attorney General in the institution and prosecution of such criminal proceedings as should be warranted by the testimony taken by the investigating commission and the reports made thereupon to my predecessor. The Legislature appropriated $20,000 to pay the expenses of the investigation. After working for several months counsel reported to me that, in their opinion, on the evidence obtainable by them, criminal prosecutions were inadvisable and impracticable. In the absence of evidence of fraudulent collusion between the State officers and the contractors, counsel concluded that the numerous instances of apparently unjustifiable favoritism to contractors and of improvident agreements reported by the commission could not be said to be of a criminal character, though they did subject the State to a large pecuniary loss, and apparently showed grave delinquency on the part of those charged with the execution of the work. The delinquency shown justified public indignation, but it did not afford ground for criminal prosecution.

The special counsel stated at length their reasons for their conclusions, and the report is herewith transmitted to you.

There is probably no lawyer of high standing in the State who after studying the report of counsel in this case and the testimony taken by the investigating commission would disagree with them as to the impracticability of a successful prosecution. Under such circumstances the one remedy was a thorough change in the methods and management. This change has been made.

RESULTS.

The new Superintendent has managed the canals with the care and skill which would be expected in a private business enterprise. It is unnecessary to say that the highest standard of integrity has been demanded. There has been no toleration whatever of inefficiency and no retention of any man who filled a needless position or who filled unworthily a necessary position. The season of 1899 was one of unusual activity on the canals; but the good effect of the new Superintendent's administration was made strikingly evident when, at the close of the fiscal year on Oct. 1, the accounts were made up. For the last eight months of the fiscal year ending Oct. 1, 1899, although more business was done, the canals were run at a cost of about $450,000, as against about $590,000 for the same eight months of the preceding year, a net saving of nearly $140,000, or about 25 per cent. No work has been entered upon or permitted for any cause whatsoever save the needs of the canals. No man has been appointed save when it appeared that there was actual need of his services, and that he could ably and honestly perform the duties of the place sought. No man who did his duty well has been jeopardized in his position, and no man known to have failed in his duty has been retained. In short, the canals have been managed with an eye single to the public good.

THE CANAL BOARD.

Under Chapter 544, Laws of 1899, providing for the termination of certain of the outstanding contracts aggregating upward of $4,000,000, contractors representing contracts aggregating upward of $2,350,000 made application to the Canal Board for their termination. Before "finding and determining what amounts were properly due," a committee of the Canal Board, consisting of the Controller, the Attorney General, the State Engineer, and the Superintendent of Public Works, was appointed to examine and report upon the status of the contracts for the termination of which application had been made. The conditions surrounding every contract were carefully examined. Reference was made to the report of the Canal Investigating Commission, to the report of the engineers to the commission, and to the original testimony upon which the report of the investigating commission was based; also to the reports of Messrs. Fox and MacFarlane and Mr. Shove. The contracts, specifications, and agreements for extra work were carefully scrutinized and all the attending circumstances were considered as they actually existed.

TAXATION.

The whole problem of taxation is now, as it has been at almost all times and in almost all places, one of extreme difficulty. It has become more and more evident in recent years that existing methods of taxation, which worked well enough in a simpler state of society, are not adequate to secure justice when applied to the conditions of our complex and highly specialized modern industrial development. At present the real estate owner is certainly bearing an excessive proportion of the tax burden. Men who have made a special study of the theory of taxation and men who have had long experience in its practical application are alike in conflict among themselves as to the best general system. Absolute equality, absolute justice in matters of taxation will probably never be realized; but we can approximate it much more closely than at present. The last Legislature most wisely appointed a committee to consider the feasibility of a thorough and far-reaching change in our tax laws; and there is good reason to believe that their forthcoming report will present a scheme which will receive the support of substantially all classes of taxpayers, and which will be of such a character as to commend itself to the most careful consideration of your body upon broad lines.

FAIRNESS IS NEEDED.

The law must not only be correct in the abstract; it must work well in the concrete. Experience shows that certain classes or symbols of property which in theory ought to be taxed cannot under the present practice be reached. Some kinds of taxes are so fertile in tempting to perjury and sharp dealing that they amount to taxes on honesty—the last quality on which we should impose a needless burden. Moreover, where the conditions and complexity of life vary widely as between different communities, the desirability and possibility of certain taxes may seem or be so different that it is hard to devise a common system that will work. If possible the State tax should be levied on classes of property and in a manner which will render it collectible with entire fairness in all sections of the community, as for instance the corporation or collateral inheritance tax is now collected. So far as possible we should divorce the State and municipal taxes, so as to render unnecessary the annual equalization of values between the several counties which has proved so fertile a source of friction between the city and the country.

There is a constant influx into New York State of capital oftimes previously incorporated under the laws of other States, and an increasing number of men of means from other parts of the country, non-residents of New York, come into this State to sojourn and to conduct and be at the head of various business enterprises which are drawn to New York as the financial centre of the whole country. This calls for legislation which shall provide, in a broad and fair spirit, for taxing foreign capital in this State, whether in corporate or individual form, exactly as we tax domestic capital doing business along the same lines.

I call your attention to the fact that the great burden of taxation is local, not State. In the large cities the heavy local charges are mainly due to the action of the local authorities themselves. For this the local authorities are of course responsible. Sometimes taxation is added to by legislative enactment.

FAILURE OF TAX LAWS.

On certain points the failure of the tax laws has become so evident that it is possible to provide more or less complete remedies without waiting for a general scheme of reorganization. Again and again in recent years this has been recognized, and through legislative enactment certain species of property which had escaped taxation have been made to pay their proper share of the public burdens. The collateral inheritance tax offers a case in point. The corporation tax offers another. In all these matters of taxation, however, it is necessary to proceed with extreme caution; the path never being so simple and clear as the advocates of any particular measure invariably believe. Every wealthy corporation that perpetrates or is allowed to perpetrate a wrong helps to produce or inflame a condition of angry excitement against all corporations which in its turn may in the end harm alike the honest and the dishonest agents of public service and thereby do far-reaching damage to the whole body politic. Much of the outcry against wealth, against the men who acquire wealth, and against the means by which it is acquired, is blind, unreasonable, and unjust; but in too many cases it has a basis in real abuses; and we must remember that every act of misconduct which affords any justification for this clamor is not only bad because of the wrong done, but also because the justification thus given inevitably strengthens movements which are in reality profoundly anti-social and anti-civic. Our laws should be so drawn as to protect and encourage corporations which do their honest duty by the public; and to discriminate sharply against those organized in a spirit of mere greed, or for improper speculative purposes.

There is plenty of misconduct, plenty of selfish disregard of the rights of others, and especially of the weak. There is also plenty of honorable and disinterested effort to prevent such misconduct or to minimize its effects. Any rational attempt to prevent or counteract the evils, by legislation or otherwise, is deserving of hearty support; but it cannot be too deeply impressed upon us that such attempts can result in permanent good only in proportion as they are made in a sane and wholesome spirit, as far removed as possible from whatever is hysterical or revolutionary. It is infinitely better when needed social and civic changes can be brought about as the result of natural and healthy growth than when they come with the violent dislocation and widespread wreck and damage inevitably attendant upon any movement which is revolutionary in its nature.

THE FRANCHISE TAX.

At the same time a change should never be shirked on the ground of its being radical, when the abuse has become flagrant and no other remedy appears possible. This was the case with the taxation of local franchises in this State. For years most of these franchises escaped paying their proper share of the public burdens. The last Legislature placed on the statute book a law requiring them to be treated as real estate for the purposes of taxation, the tax to be assessed and collected by the State Assessors for the benefit of the localities concerned. This marks an immense stride in advance. The course at first serious difficulties are sure to arise in enforcing it. The means for carrying it into effect are very inadequate. There may be delay before we get from it the substantial additions to the revenue which will finally accrue, and there may be disappointment to the enthusiasts who are so apt to hope too much from such legislation. But it will undoubtedly add largely to the public revenues as soon as it is fairly in operation, and the amount thus added will increase steadily year by year. The principle which this law establishes has come to stay. There will doubtless have to be additional legislation from time to time to perfect the system as its shortcomings are made evident in actual practice. But the corporations owning valuable public franchises must pay their full and proper share of the public burdens.

INTENT OF THE LAW.

The franchise tax law is framed with the intent of securing exact and equal justice, no more and no less. It is not in any way intended as a means for persecuting or oppressing corporations. It is not intended to cut down legitimate dividends; still less to cut down wages or to prevent a just return for the farsighted business skill of some captain of industry who has been able to establish a public service greatly to the advantage of the localities concerned, where before his time men of less business capacity had failed. But it is intended that property which derives its value from the grant of a privilege by the public, shall be taxed proportionately to the value of the privilege granted. In enforcing this law, much tact, patience, resolution, and judgment will be needed. All these qualities the State Board of Tax Commissioners have thus far shown. Their salaries are altogether inadequate, for the new law has immensely increased not only their responsibilities, but their work. They should be given not only the needed increase for themselves, but also an appropriation for an additional number of clerks and experts.

During the year 1899 not a single corporation has received at the hands of the State of New York one privilege of any kind, sort, or description, by law or otherwise, to which it was not entitled, and which was not in the public interest; nor has corporate influence availed against any measure which was in the public interest. At certain times, and in certain places, corporations have undoubtedly exerted a corrupting influence in political life; but in this State for this year it is absolutely true, as shown by the history of every measure that has come before the Legislature from the franchise tax down, that no corporate influence has been able to prevail against the interests of the public.

THE STATE AND PUBLIC UTILITIES.

It has become more and more evident of late years that the State will have to act in its collective capacity as regards certain subjects which we have been accustomed to treat as matters affecting the private citizen only, and that furthermore it must exercise an increasing and more rigorous control over other matters which it is not desirable that it should directly manage. It is neither possible nor desirable to lay down a general hard and fast rule as to what this control should be in all cases. There is no possible reason in pure logic why a city, for instance, should supply its inhabitants with water and allow private companies to supply them with gas any more than there is why the General Government should take charge of the delivery of letters but not of telegrams. On the other hand, pure logic has a very restricted application to actual social and civic life, and there is no possible reason for changing from one system to the other simply because the change would make our political system in theory more symmetrical. Obviously it is undesirable that the Government should do anything that private individuals could do with better results to the community. Everything that tends to deaden individual initiative is to be avoided, and unless in a given case there is some very evident gain which will flow from State or municipal ownership, it should not be adopted. On the other hand, when private ownership entails grave abuses and where the work is of a kind that can be performed with efficiency by the State or municipality acting in its collective capacity no theory or tradition should interfere with our making the change. There is grave danger in attempting to establish invariable rules; indeed it may be that each case will have to be determined upon its own merits. In one instance a private corporation may be able to do the work best. In another the State or city may do it best. In yet a third it may be to the advantage of everybody to give free scope to the power of some individual captain of industry.

On one point there must be no step backward. There is a consensus of opinion that New York must own its own water supply. Any legislation permitting private ownership should be annulled.

MODERN INDUSTRIAL CONDITIONS.

Nothing needs closer attention, nothing deserves to be treated with more courage, caution, and sanity than the relations of the State to corporate wealth, and indeed to vast individual wealth. For almost every gain there is a penalty, and the great strides in the industrial upbuilding of the country, which have on the whole been attended with marked benefit, have also been attended by no little evil. Great fortunes are usually made under very complex conditions, both of effort and of surrounding, and the mere fact of the complexity makes it difficult to deal with the new conditions thus created. The contrast offered in a highly specialized industrial community between the very rich and the very poor is exceedingly distressing, and while under normal conditions the acquirement of wealth by an individual is necessarily of great incidental benefit to the community as a whole, yet this is by no means always the case. In the great cities there is plainly in evidence much wealth contrasted with much poverty and some of the wealth has been acquired or is used in a manner for which there is no moral justification.

A profound political and social thinker has recently written: "Wealth which is expended in multiplying and elaborating real comforts, or even in pleasures which produce enjoyment at all proportionate to their cost will never excite serious indignation. It is the colossal waste of the means of human happiness in the most selfish and most vulgar forms of social advertisement and competition that gives a force to passions which menace the whole future of our civilization." But in continuance this writer points out that the only effectual check lies in the law of public opinion. Any attempt to interfere by statute in moral questions of this kind by fettering the freedom of individual action would be injurious to a degree far greater than is the evil aimed at. Probably the large majority of the fortunes that now exist in this country have been amassed, not by injuring mankind, but as an incident to the conferring of great benefits on the community—whatever, in the conscious purpose of those amassing them may have been. The occasional wrongs committed or injuries endured are on the whole far outweighed by the mass of good which has resulted. The true questions to be asked are: Has any given individual been injured by the acquisition of wealth by any man? Were the rights of that individual, if they have been violated, sufficiently protected by law? If so, these rights and all similar rights ought to be guaranteed by additional legislation. The point to be aimed at is the protection of the individual against wrong, not the attempt to limit and hamper the acquisition and output of wealth.

It is almost equally dangerous either to blink evils and refuse to acknowledge their existence or to strike at them in a spirit of ignorant revenge, thereby doing far more harm than is remedied. The need can be met only by careful study of conditions, and by action which, while taken boldly and without hesitation, is neither heedless nor reckless. It is well to remember on the one hand that the adoption of what is reasonable in the demands of reformers is the surest way to prevent the adoption of what is unreasonable; and on the other hand that many of the worst and most dangerous laws which have been put upon statute books have been put there by zealous reformers with excellent intentions.

TRUSTS.

This problem has a hundred phases. The relation of the capitalist and the wage-worker makes one; the proper attitude of the State towards extreme proverty another; the proper attitude of the State towards the questions of the ownership and running of so-called "public utilities," a third. But among all these phases, the one which at this time has the greatest prominence is the question of what are commonly termed "trusts," meaning by the name those vast combinations of capital, usually flourishing by virtue of some monopolistic element, which have become so startlingly common a feature in the industrial revolution which has progressed so rapidly during recent years.

Every new feature of this industrial revolution produces hardship because in its later stages it has been literally a revolution instead of an evolution. The new inventions and discoveries and the new methods of taking advantage of the business facilities afforded by the extraordinary development of our material civilization have caused the changes to proceed with such marvelous rapidity, that at each stage some body of workers finds itself unable to accommodate itself to the new conditions with sufficient speed to escape hardship. In the end the accommodation of the class takes place; at times too late for the well being of many individuals. The change which would be unaccompanied by hardship if it came slowly, may be fraught with severe suffering if it comes too fast, even when it is in the end beneficial. Occasionally, moreover, the change is positively deleterious, and very often, even when it is on the whole beneficial, it has features which are the reverse. In some cases, while recognizing the evil, it is impossible with our present knowledge to discover any remedy. In others, a remedy can be applied, but as yet only at a cost that would make it worse than the trouble itself. In yet others it is possible, by acting with wisdom, coolness and fearlessness, to apply a remedy, which will wholly or in great part remove the evil while leaving the good behind. We do not wish to discourage enterprise. We do not desire to destroy corporations; we do desire to put them fully at the service of the State and the people.

CAUTION IS NECESSARY.

The machinery of modern business is so vast and complicated that great caution must be exercised in introducing radical changes for fear the unforeseen effects may take the shape of widespread disaster. Moreover, much that is complained about is not really the abuse so much as the inevitable development of our modern industrial life. We have moved far away from the old simple days when each community transacted almost all its work for itself and relied upon outsiders for but a fraction of the necessaries, and for not a very large portion even of the luxuries, of life. Very many of the anti-trust laws which have made their appearance on the statute books of recent years have been almost or absolutely ineffective because they have blinked the all-important fact that much of what they thought to do away with was incidental to modern industrial conditions, and could not be eliminated unless we were willing to turn back the wheels of modern progress by also eliminating the forces which had brought about these industrial conditions. Not only trusts, but the immense importance of machinery, the congestion of city life, the capacity to make large fortunes by speculative enterprises, and many other features of modern existence could be thoroughly changed by doing away with steam and electricity; but the most ardent denouncer of trusts would hesitate to advocate so drastic a remedy. What remains for us to do, as practical men, is to look the conditions squarely in the face and not to permit the emotional side of the question, which has its proper place, to blind us to the fact that there are other sides. We must set about finding out what the real abuses are, with their causes, and to what extent remedies can be applied.

That abuses exist, and that they are of a very grave character, it is worse than idle to deny. Just so long as in the business world unscrupulous cunning is allowed the free rein which, thanks to the growth of humanity during the past centuries, we now deny to unscrupulous physical force, then just so long there will be a field for the best effort of every honest social and civic reformer who is capable of feeling an impulse of generous indignation and who is far-sighted enough to appreciate where the real danger to the country lies. The effects are bad enough when the unscrupulous individual works by himself. They are much worse when he works in conjunction with his fellows through a giant corporation or trust. Law is largely crystallized custom, largely a mass of remedies which have been slowly evolved to meet the wrongs with which humanity has become thoroughly familiar. In a simple society only simple forms of wrong can be committed. There is neither the ability nor the opportunity to inflict others. A primitive people provides for the punishment of theft, assault, and murder, because the conditions of the existing society allow the development of thieves and murderers and the commission of deeds of violence; but it does not provide for the punishment of forgery because there is nothing to forge, and therefore, no forgers. The gradual growth of humanitarian sentiment, often unconscious or but semi-conscious, combined with other causes, step by step emancipated the serf from bodily subjection to his over-lord; he was then protected in his freedom by statute; but when he became a factory hand the conditions were new and there were no laws which prevented the use of unguarded machinery in the factories, or the abuses of child labor, forced upon the conscientious employers by the unscrupulous until legislation put them on an equality. When new evils appear there is always at first difficulty in finding the proper remedy; and as the evils grow more complex, the remedies become increasingly difficult of application. There is no use whatever in seeking to apply a remedy blindly; yet this is just what has been done in reference to trusts.

INEFFECTIVE LEGISLATION.

Much of the legislation not only proposed but enacted against trusts is not one whit more intelligent than the mediaeval bull against the comet, and has not been one particle more effective. Yet there can and must be courageous and effective remedial legislation.

To say that the present system, of haphazard license and lack of supervision and regulation, is the best possible, is absurd. The men who endeavor to prevent the remedying of real abuses not only show callous disregard for the suffering of others, but also weaken those who are anxious to prevent the adoption of indiscriminate would-be remedies which would subvert our whole industrial fabric. The chicanery and the dishonest, even though not technically illegal, methods through which some great fortunes have been made, are scandals to our civilization. The man who by swindling or wrongdoing acquires great wealth for himself at the expense of his fellow, stands as low morally as any predatory mediaeval nobleman and is a more dangerous member of society. Any law, and any method of construing the law which will enable the community to punish him, either by taking away his wealth or by imprisonment, should be welcomed. Of course, such laws are even more needed in dealing with great corporations or trusts than with individuals. They are needed quite as much for the sake of honest corporations as for the sake of the public. The corporation that manages its affairs honestly has a right to demand protection against the dishonest corporation. We do not wish to put any burden on honest corporations. Neither do we wish to put an unnecessary burden of responsibility on enterprising men for acts which are immaterial; they should be relieved from such burdens, but held to a rigid financial accountability for acts that mislead the upright investor or stockholder, or defraud the public.

The first essential is knowledge of the facts, publicity. Much can be done at once by amendment of the corporation laws so as to provide for such publicity as will not work injustice as between business rivals.

ALLEGED TRUST ABUSES.

The chief abuses alleged to arise from trusts are probably the following: Misrepresentation or concealment regarding material facts connected with the organization of an enterprise; the evils connected with unscrupulous promotion; overcapitalization; unfair competition resulting in the crushing out of competitors who themselves do not act improperly; raising of prices above fair competitive rates; the wielding of increased power over the wage-earners. Of course, none of these abuses may exist in a particular trust, but in many trusts, as well as in many corporations not ordinarily called trusts, one or more of them are evident. Some of these evils could be partially remedied by a modification of our corporation laws; here we can safely go along the lines of the more conservative New England States, and probably not a little further. Such laws will themselves provide the needed publicity, and the needed circumstantiality of statement. We should know authoritatively whether stock represents actual value of plants, or whether it represents brands or good-will; or if not, what it does represent, if anything. It is desirable to know how much was actually bought, how much was issued free; and to whom; and, if possible, for what reason. In the first place, this would be invaluable in preventing harm being done as among the stockholders, for many of the grossest wrongs that are perpetrated are those of promoters and organizers at the expense of the general public who are invited to take shares in business organizations. In the next place, this would enable us to see just what the public have a right to expect in the way of service and taxation. There is no reason whatever for refusing to tax a corporation because by its own acts it has created a burden of charges under which it staggers. The extravagant man who builds a needlessly large house nevertheless pays taxes on the house; and the corporation which has to pay great sums of interest owing to juggling transactions in the issue of stocks and bonds has just as little right to consideration. But very great hardship may result to innocent purchasers; and publicity by lessening the possibility of this would also serve the purpose of the State.

Where a trust become a monopoly the State has an immediate right to interfere. Care should be taken not to stifle enterprise or disclose any facts of a business that are essentially private; but the State for the protection of the public should exercise the right to inspect, to examine thoroughly all the workings of great corporations just as is now done with banks; and wherever the interests of the public demand it it should publish the results of its examination. Then, if there are inordinate profits, competition or public sentiment will give the public the benefit in lowered prices; and if not, the power of taxation remains. It is therefore evident that publicity is the one sure and adequate remedy which we can now invoke. There may be other remedies, but what these others are we can only find out by publicity, as the result of investigation. The first requisite is knowledge, full and complete.

LABOR.

I call the attention of the Legislature to the reports of the State Board of Mediation and Arbitration, of the Commissioner of Labor Statistics, and of the State Factory Inspector. During the past year very valuable labor measures have been enacted into laws, and they are well enforced. I am happy to say that in speaking of labor legislation I can talk mainly of performance—not of promise. Additional legislation will undoubtedly from time to time become necessary; but many vitally needed laws have already been put upon the statute books. As experience shows their defects these will be remedied. A stringent eight-hour labor law has been enacted. This is working well as a whole.

In nothing do we need to exercise cooler judgment than in labor legislation. Such legislation is absolutely necessary, alike from the humanitarian and the industrial standpoints; and it is as much our duty to protect the weaker wage workers from oppression as to protect helpless investors from fraud. But we must beware above all things of that injudicious and ill-considered benevolence which usually in the long run defeats its own ends. To discourage industry and thrift ultimately amounts to putting a premium on poverty and shiftlessness. It is neither of benefit to the individual nor to society needlessly to handicap superior ability and energy, and to reduce their possessor to the level of work and gain suited for his less able and energetic rivals.

There have been a large number of strikes for increase of wages during the past year. The fact that these strikes were not against a reduction, but for an increase, is due to the prosperous condition of the country and State generally. The services of the present excellent Board of Mediation and Arbitration have been in almost constant demand, and they have been gratifyingly successful. The number of controversies amicably adjusted directly and indirectly through its influence has been greater than that during any year since its creation. The work of mediation—that is, of settling the dispute before it has reached an acute stage—is even more important and successful than that of arbitration proper, after the strike is once on. This being so, it would be well to enact legislation which would compel parties to labor disputes to notify the board of impending trouble, or of strikes and lockouts.

The experiment of publishing a quarterly bulletin by the Bureau of Labor Statistics has worked excellently and the bulletin should be continued and improved. I suggest that it would be well to define by statute the questions that may legally be asked of manufacturers by this bureau. Abuses have occurred in connection with the employment offices in the larger cities, which are now allowed to violate the law with impunity, the power of punishment lying with the local authorities. It would be well to require the keeper of any employment office to procure a license from the State, as in Minnesota and other States. This license should be granted on the payment of a substantial fee, and the business would thus be restricted to responsible parties and kept under the control of the State administration.

RECENT LEGISLATION.

The measures suggested in my message of last year and carried into effect by legislation, increasing the number of factory inspectors, and requiring a license for all shops and rooms where garments are made for general employers, have already greatly increased the efficiency of the Factory Inspector's Department, and enlarged its service to the public. Too little time has elapsed since the sweatshop law went into effect, in September, to give a full report of its benefits. As illustrating its efficiency in interfering with sweatshops I may mention that so far under its provisions 4,942 licenses have been granted and 918 refused. These 918 cases represent the sweatshops which would now have been in operation save for this law and for the way it has been enforced.

I shall not ask for any increase of the number of salaried inspectors this year, but I recommend that the power be given to the Governor and to the Factory Inspector to name, whenever necessary, unsalaried inspectors to undertake special investigation or aid the department at special times. Such assistance would increase the efficiency of the work of the department without imposing added burdens upon the State.

I urge that the Legislature give particular attention to the need of reform in the laws governing the tenement houses. The Tenement House Commission of 1894 declared that, in its opinion, the tenement house laws needed to be revised as often as once in five years, and I am confident that the improvements in building materials and construction of tenements, and the advance in sanitary legislation all demand further modification of existing laws. Probably the best course to follow would be to appoint a commission to present a revised code of tenement house laws.

Owing to defects in the drug clerks' bill presented last year, I was unable to sign it. I am, however, in hearty sympathy with the objects sought in the bill. I trust that a satisfactory bill may be presented this year, and shall be glad to give such a bill my approval.

The liability of employers to their employes is now recognized in the laws of most of the great industrial communities of the world. While employers ought not to be burdened to such an extent as to endanger ordinary business transactions; yet the State should, so far as possible, protect those employes engaged in dangerous occupations and should see that every reasonable provision is taken to guard their rights.

NATIONAL GUARD AND NAVAL MILITIA.

I call attention to the report of the Adjutant General on the National Guard and Naval Militia of the State. The new code has worked great improvement. In some matters of organization, notably in reference to the detail of line officers to serve for a time in staff positions, the organization of the National Guard of New York is ahead of the organization of the United States Army.

The Spanish war had resulted in great disorganization of the Guard and an immense amount of work had to be done to re-establish it upon an efficient basis. This has been done and the Guard has never been more efficient than at present. It is to be hoped that in a comparatively short time the National Government will be in a position to arm the Guard with the rifle used in the regular army.

During the past year the Guard has been called upon to furnish New York's quota of officers for service in the volunteer regiments of the army. All of the officers thus recommended were men who had served in the Spanish war. In making the recommendations the Colonels of the fifteen volunteer regiments sent into the service by New York were directed to submit the nominations of the three best men in each of their regiments for the volunteer appointments, the recommendations being based upon youth, character, fitness, intelligence, and demonstrated ability to command. In addition recommendations were sought from other officers who had special knowledge of the personnel of the New York volunteers, and the records of the various candidates were critically examined. The report sent to the Secretary of War was based solely upon the records of the officers, no attention being paid any other considerations when service save those of military fitness. Most of those thus recommended were appointed by the President. The rank and file of the Guard had within the year sent hundreds of men into the regular and volunteer army gathered for service in the Philippines.

During the Summer of 1899 the first steps have been taken to give the State troops practical work in the field. Regiments were sent to the State Camp at Peekskill and from that point were given marches in the neighborhood of several days' duration with field equipment only. The State Camp at Peekskill, when originally constructed, represented a great advance, for work in the camp was much better than work in the armory. It no longer stands as it did, for it is of special advantage only to armory trained troops; but it can still be made of much use. Probably it could best be used for the annual instruction of all of the officers and non-commissioned officers, but it might be a hardship to impose such extra duty on men most of whom are actually engaged in earning their own living. At any rate, the regiments should receive practical instructions by actual marching, cooking, camping, sanitation, outpost duties, and field exercises over rough country. Soldiers must be able to take care of themselves under the conditions of a campaign, and this they cannot learn unless they cook their own food, pitch their own tents, and perform for themselves all the other duties incident to their profession. The mortality in the Spanish war shows how infinitely less dangerous to the lives of the soldiers are the bullets of the enemy than diseases caused by bad sanitation and failure to understand how to cook, and live in the open.

RIFLE RANGES NEEDED.

Furthermore, it is very much to be wished that means could be taken to provide the most ample facilities for rifle practice. The United States must depend upon its citizen soldiery in the event of a great war. If the men already know how to march, to take cover, to live in the open, and to shoot, and always provided that they understand the absolutely vital importance of discipline and obedience to orders, then the technical training can be mastered with comparative ease by volunteers as intelligent, as brave, and as self-reliant as those who make up American armies. It would be a good thing if there were a rifle range in every village of this State as there is in Switzerland. Moreover, it should be remembered that target practice proper is but the alphabet of the soldier's marksmanship. He should also practice assiduously under conditions as nearly as possible like those of actual warfare; "terrainschiessen," as it is called in the German Army, is indispensable to effectiveness. In any event, every company of the National Guard should receive all possible encouragement in rifle practice. In a battle the only bullets that count are those that hit.

The Naval Militia make a particularly valuable branch of the service. They deserve the highest praise for the way they do their difficult work. The drill that the Naval Militia receives is most practical in character. It is greatly to be desired that the Second Naval Battalion should have an armory.

Every opportunity should be given to, and should be sought by, the officers and men of the National Guard and Naval Militia, seriously to study and master both the theory and practice of their temporary profession. One of the officers of the Guard is going abroad with the special purpose of studying the relation of the regulars, volunteers, and militia in England; special studies of this kind have great value. In addition we should know the methods of administration and of field practice which mark the most efficient modern armies.

FISHERIES, FOREST, AND GAME COMMISSION.

Under this commission great progress has been made through the fish hatcheries in the propagation of valuable food and sporting fish. The laws for the protection of deer have resulted in their increase. Nevertheless, as railroads tend to encroach on the wilderness, the temptation to illegal hunting becomes greater, and the danger of forest fires increases. There is need of great improvement both in our laws and in their administration. The Game Wardens have been too few in number. More should be provided. None save fit men must be appointed; and their retention in office must depend purely upon the zeal, ability and efficiency with which they perform their duties. The Game Wardens in the forests must be woodsmen; and they should have no outside business. In short, there should be a thorough reorganization of the work of the commission. A careful study of the resources and condition of the forests on State land must be made. It is certainly not too much to expect that the State forests should be managed as efficiently as the forests on private lands in the same neighborhoods, and the measure of difference in efficiency of management must be the measure of condemnation or praise of the way the public forests have been managed.

The subject of forest preservation is of the utmost importance to the State. The Adirondacks and Catskills should be great parks kept in perpetuity for the benefit and enjoyment of our people. Much has been done of late years toward their preservation, but very much remains to be done. The provisions of law in reference to sawmills and wood pulp mills are defective, and should be changed so as to prohibit dumping dye-stuff, sawdust or tan bark in any amount whatsoever into the streams. Reservoirs should be made; but not where they will tend to destroy large sections of the forest, and only after a careful and scientific study of the water resources of the region. The people of the forest regions are themselves growing more and more to realize the necessity of preserving both the trees and the game. A live deer in the woods will attract to the neighborhood ten times the money that could be obtained for the deer's dead carcass. Timber theft on the State lands is, of course, a grave offense against the whole public.

Hardy outdoor sports, like hunting, are in themselves of no small value to the National character, and should be encouraged in every way. Men who go into the wilderness, indeed men who take part in any field sports with horse or rifle, receive a benefit which can hardly be given by even the most vigorous athletic games.

RAINFALL AND FORESTS.

There is a further, and more immediate and practical, end in view. A primeval forest is a great sponge which absorbs and distills the rain water, and when it is destroyed the result is apt to be an alternation of flood and drought. Forest fires ultimately make the land a desert, and are a detriment to all that portion of the State tributary to the streams through the woods where they occur. Every effort should be made to minimize their destructive influence. We need to have our system of forestry gradually developed and conducted along scientific principles. When this has been done it will be possible to allow marketable lumber to be cut everywhere without damage to the forests—indeed, with positive advantage to them; but until lumbering is thus conducted, on strictly scientific principles no less than upon principles of the strictest honesty toward the State, we cannot afford to suffer it at all in the State forests. Unrestrained greed means the ruin of the great woods and the drying up of the sources of the rivers.

Ultimately the administration of the State lands must be so centralized as to enable us definitely to place responsibility in respect to everything concerning them, and to demand the high degree of trained intelligence in their use.

The State should not permit within its limits factories to make bird skins or bird feathers into articles of ornament or wearing apparel. Ordinary birds, and especially song birds, should be rigidly protected. Game birds should never be shot to a greater extent than will offset the natural rate of increase. All Spring shooting should be prohibited and efforts made by correspondence with the neighboring States to secure its prohibition within their borders. Care should be taken not to encourage the use of cold storage or other market systems which are a benefit to no one but the wealthy epicure who can afford to pay a heavy price for luxuries. These systems tend to the destruction of the game; which would bear most severely upon the very men whose rapacity has been appealed to in order to secure its extermination.

The open season for the different species of game and fish should be made uniform throughout the entire State, save that it should be shorter on Long Island for certain species which are not plentiful, and which are pursued by a greater number of people than in other game portions of the State.

BUILDING AND LOAN ASSOCIATIONS.

Ample occasion exists for some modification of the statutes relating to the corporations popularly known as building and loan associations. A law which authorizes the formation of associations vested with extraordinary powers and possessing special exemptions, because they are designed to encourage thrift and to enable workingmen to provide homes for their families, urgently needs revision when under it there occur such instances of extravagance and mismanagement, if not of actual fraud, as have recently been brought to the public attention. If there can be degrees in fidelity, the highest should prevail in the discharge of those trusts in which the interests at stake are those of the poorer and more helpless members of society. Reckless real estate speculations, arbitrary amendment of by-laws without the consent of shareholders, whereby the contracts between associations and their members are changed, and excessive expense accounts for salaries, luxurious offices, &c., not to charge practices which in some cases can be reconciled with no purpose except dishonesty, are among the abuses disclosed during the year by the work of the Banking Department. With this state of facts established, argument is not required to place upon the Legislature the imperative obligation to revise the law governing these associations so as to make commission of wrongs by their management less easy, and to lodge with the Superintendent of Banks adequate power to deal promptly and effectively with associations whose Directors may attempt to transcend the bounds of safety and honesty.

An evil of growing proportions is the incorporation of stock companies with titles suggestive of powers to which their certificates make no claim, and which they cannot possess under the general corporation law. Allied to it is the assumption of names similarly objectionable by partnerships or individuals operating as private bankers, and also the establishment of offices in this State by foreign corporations, whose names indicate them to be moneyed corporations. The employment of such titles is certainly misleading, and it is readily condeivable that it might prove mischievous. It is plain that it should not be permitted to any person or firm or to any company having but an insignificant capital and organized to do merely an agency business, or to any foreign corporation maintaining an office in New York for the transaction of non-prohibited business, to have a name which conveys the idea that it is a banking institution, and the general corporation act should be amended to inhibit it. The matter is discussed more fully in the annual report of the Superintendent of Banks, to which I ask the attention of the Legislature, with such action as will prevent a continuation of the evil.

HORTON BOXING LAW.

I call the attention of the Legislature to the so-called Horton boxing law now on the statute books, and recommend its repeal. If this law merely fulfilled the expectations of its original advocates, and if it were executed as it was executed during the first year it was enacted, there would be no need of this recommendation. Rough, vigorous pastimes are excellent things for the Nation, for they promote manliness, being good in their effects not merely upon the body, but upon the character, which is far more important than the body. It is an admirable thing for any boy or young man whose work is of a sedentary character to take part in vigorous play, so long as it is not carried to excess, or allowed to interfere with his work. Every exercise that tends to develop bodily vigor, daring, endurance, resolution, and self-command should be encouraged. Boxing is a fine sport; but this affords no justification of prize fighting, any more than the fact that a cross-country run or a ride on a wheel is healthy justifies such a demoralizing exhibition as a six-days race. When any sport is carried on primarily for money—that is, as a business—it is in danger of losing much that is valuable, and of acquiring some exceedingly undesirable characteristics. In the case of prize fighting, not only do all the objections which apply to the abuse of other professional sports apply in aggravated form, but in addition the exhibition has a very demoralizing and brutalizing effect. There is no need to argue these points. They are expressly admitted in the Horton law itself. Moreover, the evils are greatly aggravated by the fact that the fight is for a money prize, and is the occasion for unlimited gambling and betting. As the law is construed by the Police Department of New York at present, it permits prize fights pure and simple. If as is alleged the police are technically justified in so construing the law, it only renders it the more necessary that the law should be repealed. However proper it may have been in its intent and as originally construed and administered, the gross abuses in its present administration make its existence on the statute books of the Empire State an offense against decency.

Athletic sports are excellent when treated as what they should be, that is as healthy pastimes; they become harmful if indulged in to excess, and if their importance in relation to the serious work of life is misestimated; and still more harmful when twisted into adjuncts of brutality or gambling.

AMENDMENT TO THE VAGRANCY LAW.

Crime against a woman is peculiarly abhorrent, not only because she is weaker, but because she has no direct voice in the Government. There should be no sentimentality about excusing a female criminal who is as guilty as a male criminal; but an even severer punishment should be meted out to those who commit crimes of brutal violence against women and children than to those who commits them against men. In the same way, it is greatly to be desired that our laws should be changed so as to provide for the punishment of men who profit by the commission of immoral acts by women. At present the wretched women are punished and the men who make their living by their infamy may go free. Such a condition of affairs is intolerable in the eyes of every right thinking person. This kind of immoral conduct is punished under the vagrancy law, which should be amended as it has recently been amended in England, so as to do away with such unjust discrimination. In connection with this matter I call your attention to the desirability of completing the work of the New Bedford Reformatory, which is specially designed for dealing with girls and women who have fallen, but whom there is a chance to redeem.

THE COMPLETION OF THE REVISION OF THE STATUTES BY THE LEGISLATURE.

A commission to revise the statutes with a view of condensing, combining, and harmonizing the subjects of general legislation was created in 1889. Several general laws which were originally proposed have become rendered unnecessary by the reason of the changes of the Constitution of 1894, and several additional subjects of general legislation have been suggested. The revision of the Code of Civil Procedure was not originally contemplated, but has now become a part of the work of the commission. A large number of the bills advocated by the commission have become laws and some have been submitted but have not passed. During the Winter it is intended that bills will be presented amending the general laws by incorporating them into various general statutes passed since those laws were enacted for the double purpose of bringing the plan of revision down to date and codifying under proper heads various independent statutes which ought properly be incorporated in an existing general law. It has been the custom heretofore to refer these bills either to the Committee on Judiciary or the Committee on Codes, but it is doubtful whether, if the numerous other bills which come from individual members are referred to these committees, careful attention can be given to the bills of the Statutory Revision Commission as their importance warrants.

I beg leave to respectfully suggest the appointment of a special committee in each House, or a special joint committee, to take charge of these revision bills. Due attention to the various measures which the Statutory Revision Commission has prepared will greatly facilitate the work of closing up the commission, which ought to be done during the present year. I recommend that steps be taken to close the commission during the year.

DEPARTMENT OF THE CONTROLLER.

The office of the Controller shows a balance on hand in the Treasury on the first day of October, 1898, of $2,973,891.45. The receipts from all sources during the fiscal year ended Sept. 30, 1899, were $25,837,150.19, making a total receipt, with the balance of last year, of $29,810,941.37. The payments for all purposes during the fiscal year were $25,837,254.19, leaving a balance in the Treasury of $4,565,814.74. The tax rate for the fiscal year ended Oct. 1, 1899, was 2.49 mills. The present valuation of the the State is $5,076,296,824. The amount received for corporation and organization taxes was $2,741,-818.05. The amount in 1898 was $2,457,-276.65, showing an increase during the fiscal year of $284,041. The amount received for tax on inheritance during the fiscal year was $2,191,612.24, being an increase over the last fiscal year of $197,462. The amount received from the Excise Department was $4,231,278.55, an increase of $15,417.63 over the last preceding year.

Attention is called to the increasing payments from transfer tax receipts by reason of special legislative enactments providing for the pay of assistants to Surrogates and District Attorneys, in addition to the fees allowed by the act itself to County Treasurers and the Controller of the City of New York for receiving this tax and remitting it to the State Treasury. The counties of Erie, Kings, Monroe, New York, Oneida, Onondaga, Queens, Suffolk, Ulster, and Westchester have now these extra assistants at an aggregate cost for salaries and expenses each year of $36,040 payable from this tax. While admitting that this law has increased the labors of Surrogates somewhat, it has not increased them to the extent of generally requiring assistants. I do not believe that any special provision should be made for additional help except in counties which have paid to the State for the past five years an average transfer tax of at least $50,000.

I recommend the repeal of all the acts giving District Attorneys transfer tax assistants, for the reason that the assistants do little or nothing to earn the compensation therein allowed, and that their employment is therefore a useless expenditure of public money.

The transfer tax act provides that County Treasurers and the Controller of the City of New York shall receive a fee of 5 per cent. on the first $50,000 collected; 3 per cent. on the second $50,000, and 1 per cent. upon all additional sums each year for receiving this tax and remitting it quarterly to the State Treasury. Their only duty, in addition to this, consists in issuing duplicate receipts to the executors for the payment of this tax, and making a quarterly report to the State Controller, and the payment of appraisers' fees and other legal disbursements. All the County Treasurers retain this fee or commission for their own use and benefit, except in the County of Monroe, where it is turned into the County Treasury. As a rule these officers take little or no interest in the enforcement of the law, and do practically nothing to warrant their receiving this large special compensation. In Erie County the fees formerly were paid into the County Treasury, but the statute was amended recently restoring them to the Treasurer. During the last fiscal year the amount of fees thus paid to County Treasurers and the Controller of New York City aggregated $67,425.06. Of this amount the Controller of New York City received $15,975.88.

I believe that these fees should either go to the county, or that the aggregate amount allowed any official should be limited to a reasonable sum. At least $100,000 should be saved to the State annually by properly curtailing the expenditures payable from this tax.

SECRETARY OF STATE.

Originally and in the early history of the State, corporations were created by special acts of the Legislature. They were limited as to time, and as terms of existence would expire, legislative action was necessary to continue their existence.

General statutes were afterward enacted providing for the formation of corporations without resort to the Legislature.

Notwithstanding these general laws, the Legislature has continued to create corporations by special act, granting powers not given by the general laws.

Section 6 of general corporation laws prohibits the filing and recording in any office for the purpose of effecting incorporations of a certificate of incorporation of a proposed corporation having the same name as an existing domestic corporation, or a name so nearly resembling it as to be calculated to deceive.

By Section 2,411, Code of Civil Procedure, a petition to a court for the change of the corporate name of a domestic corporation must have annexed thereto a certificate of the Secretary of State that the name proposed is not the name of any other domestic corporation or a name which the Secretary of State deems so nearly resembling it as to be calculated to deceive.

To enable the Secretary of State to comply with the above provisions, the names of all domestic corporations should be on file in his office, alphabetically arranged, just as the names of all corporations are, which are incorporated under the general statutes.

In all cases where a corporation is created by special act a clause should be contained in the act requiring the filing and recording in the Secretary of State's office of a certified copy of such special act. The effect of this would be to bring the names of all domestic corporations, except banking and insurance corporations, upon our general index.

The Secretary of State has paid to the State Treasurer during the past fiscal year for the benefit of the State $557,460.25, and the number of new corporations, companies increasing their capital stock, and amount of increased capital have shown a large gain over preceding years.

ATTORNEY GENERAL.

I call your particular attention to the report of the Attorney General which will be handed you in a few days and the excellent showing it makes for that office. I cordially concur in what he will say as to the advisability of having all laws take effect at some definite time, say the 1st of September, so as to give opportunity to every one to know that they are on the statute books. Of course exceptions will be made in cases where emergencies exist.

SUPERINTENDENT OF PRISONS.

The Superintendent calls attention to the excellent working of the principle of indeterminate sentence for maximum and minimum limits fixed by the court, the prison parole board being allowed to parole under supervision any prisoner at any time after the expiration of the minimum term. He recommends that all prisoners sentenced for a first offense for felony, save of course murder and arson, be sentenced to in determinate terms. There should be a separate prison for the confinement and execution of condemned prisoners.

STATE COMMISSION OF PRISONS.

Under the present laws none of the products of our own prisons are put upon the open market to compete with the products of free labor, but the products of convicts of other States and countries are brought into this State and add in competition with the products of our free labor. As under the decisions of the courts the State is powerless to prevent this, it is to be wished that there could be National legislation on the subject. The present system is furnishing reasonable employment to our own convicts, and the heads of State institutions must see that there is full compliance with the laws requiring them to purchase from the prisons goods used by their departments and made in the prisons.

A very gratifying feature of the present prison laws of this State is the rapid diminution in the population of the prisons, the penitentiary population having shrunk from 4,600 in 1895 to but little over 2,200 in 1899.

STATE ENGINEER AND SURVEYOR.

The work of the State Engineer and Surveyor has been executed with signal ability and fidelity during the past year.

There has been considerable duplication of work by the National and State Governments in surveys. It certainly does not seem worth while that the State should have two separate departments doing surveying work. The Legislature last year declined to appropriate anything further for the State Land Survey, but did not abolish it. This creates a most undesirable state of affairs. It seems to me obvious that one department should do all the work, and I therefore recommend that the State Land Survey be put under the State Engineer and Surveyor, either as a separate bureau or otherwise, and that the work be done in his office, in which all the records of the State Land Survey should be placed.

PUBLIC INSTRUCTION.

Under the Regents the institutions for higher education have continued to progress as in the past.

The Superintendent of Public Instruction reports the public schools of the State in a prosperous condition. They have been liberally maintained, and results have been satisfactory. Public interest in education is steadily increasing. The total expenditures for public schools during the year, directly or indirectly, by the Department of Public Instruction, exceeded $20,000,000. What the State has done and is still doing along many lines to encourage professional training of teachers is bearing good fruit in the increasing number of professionally trained teachers in our schools, and in the development of a higher professional spirit. The Superintendent will recommend the establishment of a pedagogical department in Cornell University, and will call attention to certain equities which exist in the relations between the State and this institution in connection with State scholarships. A reasonable appropriation will be asked to carry the proposed plan into execution.

It has for a long time been the well-nigh unanimous opinion of all those conversant with the history and practical working of the educational system of this State that the laws in reference to the official oversight and superintendence of education by the State Government ought to be revised and unified for the sake of greater general efficiency, economy and entire harmony wherever there may be confusion and friction resulting from the needless overlapping of jurisdictions. That so vast a development as that which has come about in the work of instructing the children of this State should have been possible under the existing system is of itself a testimony to the wise and substantial way in which our predecessors laid the foundations of our educational organization.

The University of the State of New York, with its Board of Regents, is an institution peculiar to this Commonwealth and one now venerable with its 116 years of history. Its exercise of authority over higher education has been of very great public service, and its methods and standards have exercised a wide influence for good upon those of other States. These facts have led to the adoption by the people of an amendment to the Constitution of the State whereby the University itself and its organization under a board of not less than nine Regents has been provided and safeguarded in the organic law.

GOOD WORK DONE.

The Department of Public Instruction, on the other hand, concerned chiefly with the supervision of all the free common schools of the State supported by public taxation, has grown to a vast importance, for the number of children of school age in the State has largely increased, and nine-tenths of them attend no other institution than the public school. The work done in both departments has been, in the main, excellent and needful to be done; they are amply worthy of the confidence and continued support of the people. But that their work could be done better if the two systems were unified is a proposition hardly open to question. The problem has been not whether unification were desirable, but by what means this end was to be attained.

From the point of view of the public interests, it is neither desirable nor practicable merely, to extend the jurisdiction of either department over the other. The university convocation at its annual meeting in July, 1899, requested the Governor to appoint a commission for the purpose of recommending a practicable plan of unification, and in accordance with this suggestion the following commisson was appointed: Frederick T. Hollis, Daniel H. McMillan, Judge Joseph Daly, William Kernan, Robert F. Wilkinson, and the Secretary of the Board of Regents and the Assistant Superintendent of Public Instruction. All were men of the highest standing, of trained capacity, and specially interested in the whole subject. I cannot too heartily thank them for their invaluable and wholly disinterested labor for the public welfare.

The commission, after careful consideration, has arrived at suggestions embodied in a report suggesting statutory changes, which, if adopted by the Legislature, will give effect to the system which they recommend. What they propose is the creation of a Department of Education, including both the University and the Department of Public Instruction, of which a single officer, known as the Chancellor of the University, shall be the responsible executive and administrative head. The University is, of course, continued, and has its oversight extended to cover the entire field of education, so that its real authority and opportunity for public service will be much increased.

The plan proposed is simple, effective and wholly free from political or partisan considerations. It deserves the cordial support of all friends of public education, and this means of every patriotic citizen of the State.

It is impossible to exaggerate the importance of the interests involved or the importance of considering them solely from the point of view of the general welfare of the State.

DEPARTMENT OF EXCISE.

The Excise Department has apparently been most carefully and judicially managed, and the work of that department commends itself to the Legislature.

The net balance for the fiscal year in this department is $12,582,248.72, of which $4,231,278.55 goes to the State, the balance being distributed among the cities and towns of the State. The expense of this department during the fiscal year was $274,862.10, and at the end of the fiscal year there was a balance in hand over and above expense of $91,723.92, showing that the most careful expenditure in the department has been the rule. There has been a decrease of between five and six thousand licensed places in the State, and each succeeding year shows a slight decrease in the number in force at the end of the fiscal year. The so-called slot machine gambling nuisance has greatly decreased, and has been driven from places where liquor is sold.

STATE COMMISSION IN LUNACY.

In this department progressive improvement shows that the State care system was wisely founded and must remain the permanent policy of the State. The care of the insane has bettered and the cost has lessened. The accommodations have been increased and improved, and the annual increment of permanent cases, the ultimate cost to the State of each of which is computed at $5,000, has been diminished. While the reduction of cost of maintenance the past year from the per capita of $185.20 in 1898 to $178.42, in the face of a general advance in prices, and contrasted with $216 before the State Care act, is satisfactory, it is of far more importance that the annual increase of patients in hospitals is steadily decreasing; in 1899 it was 529, in 1898 it was 634, in 1897 it was 733. These figures allow but one conclusion—better care of the insane. That conclusion is supported by the fact that 1,009 patients have been discharged fully recovered, and 921 others have sufficiently improved to allow their return to their homes.

STATE CHARITY INSTITUTIONS.

Great interests are involved in the administration of the State charitable institutions. During the past year a long stride forward has been taken in elevating the standard of supervision on the part of boards of managers. Wherever possible these boards of managers are now selected without reference to local demands or preferences and without reference to their politics. While there should be one or two representatives of the locality, the bulk should be men and women coming from other parts of the State, who realize that the institution is of State and not merely local consequence.

I call your attention to the desirability of repealing Chapter 374 of the Laws of 1896, which permits courts to send female felons of mature age to "houses of refuge" for a period of less than one year. This is contrary alike to the purpose with which these institutions were founded, and to Chaper 632 of the Laws of 1899, which provides for a sentence of three years, with power of prior discharge by the Board of Managers. Houses of refuge are not proper places for felons of mature age, and, moreover, the managers of these houses should, like the Trustees of the Elmira Reformatory, be given the privilege of transferring to the prison authorities, under proper conditions, inmates who are found to derive no benefit from the discipline employed.

COMMISSIONERS OF THE LAND OFFICE.

I call your attention to the desirability of allowing the Commissioners of the Land Office to grant leases with power of renewal for riparian lands. At present it is more than questionable whether such leases are valid, and unless the leases can be issued in this form, they are often useless. Where improvements of great value are made it seems probable that the land should be granted in fee, but where improvements are not made the State should certainly retain the fee.

CIVIL SERVICE COMMISSION.

A very great advance was made last year by the action of the Legislature in putting upon the books the present bill to secure recognition of merit in appointments to the civil service. Under this law the great bulk of the classified offices are taken out of the domain of politics. There is need of an increased appropriation for the Civil Service Commisson. Their salaries should at least be made equal to those of other Commissioners.

The civil service rules framed under the provisions of Chapter 370, Laws of 1899, were promulgated on June 8 last. While the laws and rules have been in operation for a period too brief to demonstrate their benefits to their fullest extent or to detect their defects, enough has been shown to prove their efficiency in carrying out the constitutional provisions. Examinations for all positions subject to them have been held in at least thirty cities so as to accommodate applicants in every part of the State. The increased attendance at these examinations indicates an appreciation of the relief from the double examinations under the previous law, which were costly and onerous to all, without any advantage to the public interest. The provisions of law requiring pay rolls to be certified by the State or Municipal Commissions respectively have worked well, both in securing strict compliance with the law and in obtaining accurate rosters of those in service. The same may be said of the larger powers of supervision of the work of municipal commissions given to the State Commission, securing uniformity in methods and procedure and the application of the merit system in all the cities of the State, a result never before reached. The State Commission should have larger means at its disposal for frequent inspection of the city service and concurrent advice and instruction to such inexperienced officials as may need it.

RAILROAD COMMISSION.

Important progress has been made in the elimination of grade crossings, the commission exercising its powers with tact and judgment. I recommend that the Legislature provide for the continuance of this work. Of recent years the Legislature has given the board proper power, and in consequence it has been enabled to do excellent work.

HEALTH OFFICER AND QUARANTINE.

The Health Officer of the Port of New York and the Quarantine Commissioners find their work sadly handicapped for lack of funds. This branch of public service has in the past few years, by reason of the improved methods of sanitation, been of the greatest public benefit, but sufficient funds have not heretofore been placed at their disposal to acquire the best results. The Port of New York is one which cannot be too carefully guarded, and the very scientific methods now used by those who have charge of this important branch of the State Government require additional and increased appropriations. I trust this matter will receive your early and careful attention.

SELF-SUPPORTING OFFICES.

The offices of Secretary of State, Railroad Commission, Banking, and Insurance Departments are all self-supporting—more than paying their own expenses.

DEPARTMENT OF AGRICULTURE.

The work of this department has steadily increased until it is now double what it was six years ago, while there has been but little increase in the appropriation. To some extent the work of this department is duplicated or clashes with that of the State Board of Health. The Assembly Committee appointed to consider the subject of tuberculosis in cattle will deal with this matter, at least in part, in their report to the Legislature.

I call your attention to the special necessity of taking all possible steps to prevent the adulteration of food.

During the year 1899 the property of the State Agricutural Society at Syracuse, where the annual State Fair is held, was transferred to the State, and I recommend that the State now take under its own control the management of the State Fair.

The excellent educational work done by the Farmers' Institute deserves your cordial support; it has had a real and marked effect in bettering the condition of the farming communities where it has been most developed.

STATE ARCHITECT.

Nowhere has the increased efficiency in the State service been more marked than in the office of the State Architct. This office has carried on the work of preparing plans and specifications for the various new buildings and repairs and alterations to existing buildings for which appropriations have been made by the Legislature. With a few unimportant exceptions, all this work is now under contract, notwithstanding the great increase in price of building materials during the current year and since the appropriations were made. It is recommended that the State Architect be given an additional appropriation to increase the engineering force of his office so as to enable him to ascertain if it be practicable to secure greater economy in various directions, such as in the mechanical methods of using coal in State institutions, to inquire into the general subject of water supply and sewerage of the various State institutions, and to formulate practical suggestions for the amelioration of existing defects, and to pay the salaries of Building Inspectors now paid out of the appropriations for buildings.

NEW YORK CITY CHARTER.

I recommend that the Governor be empowered to appoint a commission to deal with the question of remodeling the New York charter in order to remedy the defects made evident by its workings during the last two years.

POLITICAL ASSESSMENTS AND THE JUDICIARY.

I further recommend that legislation be passed at once prohibiting the payment by any candidate for judicial office, directly or indirectly, of assessments or contributions to political parties for campaign expenses.

GOOD ROADS.

The movement to better the roads of the State should not be allowed to lag; it should be so directed as to be in the especial interest of the tiller of the soil.

PUBLIC PRINTING.

It may well be considered by you whether by the passage of an act establishing a State printing bureau, equipped with every modern device, the cost to the State of its printing might not be reduced. This item has become a large one in the State expenditure, and a trial of State ownership, if found to be economical, I would advise.

THE PALISADES.

The State should sedulously preserve for its people the natural beauties within its limits. Great good has been done by the Niagara Falls Reservation, and its interests should be advanced in every way. I call the attention of the Legislature to the report of the Palisades Commission, which has my hearty approval. The Palisades should be preserved. They form one of the most striking and beautiful features of nature in the entire country, and their marring and ruin should be a source not merely of regret, but of shame, to our people. New Jersey is in reality less interested in their preservation than we are, although they are in her territory, for their beauty can best be observed from ours.

There are two miles of the Palisades in the State of New York and ten in the State of New Jersey. No further riparian rights along their base should be granted, and I suggest that a commission to represent the State of New York be appointed and that the Governor be empowered to request of the State of New Jersey to appoint a similar commission to serve with ours and endeavor to provide for joint action by the two States to secure the permanence of this splendid natural monument.

PAN-AMERICAN EXPOSITION.

I particularly desire to call the attention of the Legislature to the Pan-American Exposition. This exposition will be a source of the utmost pride to the whole State, and all our citizens should feel an active concern in making it a greater success than anything of its kind ever held on this continent—second only to the great National expositions.

My attention has been called to the desirability of having at this exposition a department of social economy. Interesting and important as it is to exhibit the natural resources of the Americas and the products of their industries, it is no less important to present the life of the people themselves and to show their social institutions.

The industrial and social revolution, consequent upon the introduction of steam and electricity, has produced a new civilization, with many new problems yet unsolved, and new conditions to which we have only imperfectly adjusted ourselves. By providing for a department of social economy at the Pan-American Exposition much light may be thrown on these problems, and not a little may be done for the amelioration of social and industrial conditions.

The scope of this department should be broad enough to include, for the several countries and peoples, a comprehensive presentation of their industrial, agricultural, commercial, economic, social, and philanthropic conditions.

These subjects would be graphically represented by maps, charts, and photographs, which would constitute an important and attractive exhibit. Such a presentation of conditions in Cuba, Puerto Rico, Hawaii, and the Philippines would be of special interest. These subjects might be further illustrated by a series of congresses, in which experts would discuss topics of popular interest and of practical value.

The beginning of a new century would seem to be a peculiarly fitting time to gather up the results of investigation and experience in the preceding century by which to help the peoples of North and South America up to a higher plane, physical, mental, and moral.

I am heartily in favor of the creation of such a department of the exposition, and recommend that a sufficient appropriation be made by the Legislature to establish and successfully conduct it.

I commend the exposition to your special attention, and hope you will aid it in every way.

SUPERINTENDENT OF PUBLIC BUILDINGS.

I call special attention to the efficiency and economy in the management of the Department of Public Buildings during the past year. The service has been much improved and notwithstanding the fact that the building has been thoroughly renovated throughout and several of the departments enlarged, the cost of management has been very much decreased. No useless employes have been retained, while those who have been continued have been made clearly to understand that the standard of efficiency was the only one which was required in the fulfillment of their duties.

OVERLEGISLATION.

Bills are continually passed providing for extraordinary repairs on the canals, for the erection of bridges and the like. It seems to me that there should be a blanket appropriation for all these repairs, and that the allotment of the money for the different places should be left to the direction of the Superintendent of Public Works. I believe that this will result in a considerable saving to the State.

I again call the attention of the Legislature to the undesirability of cumbering our statute books with a mass of needless legislation. Of course, any legislation that is slipped through so as to evade public notice is noxious, but aside from this the mere fact of having on the statute books a large number of laws which, though not harmful, are of no particular benefit, is also undesirable. It is greatly to be desired that some plan for limiting private legislation should be adopted; a bill with this purpose was introduced last year.

I also again call the attention of the Legislature to the need of economy. There are many objects excellent in themselves upon which the State could with advantage spend money, were it not for the steady tendency to increase expense beyond the limit that can be afforded by the taxpayers.

THEODORE ROOSEVELT.

SOUTH AFRICAN QUESTION

Inconsistency of Some Boer Sympathizers in America.

United States and Transvaal Methods—Fashions in Professional Patriotism as Viewed by "a Citizen."

To the Editor of The New York Times:

In printing seventeen columns of letters in Sunday's issue on this unhappy but apparently unavoidable appeal to arms, you performed a notable public service. Viewed as to its immediate results, you have gratified a legitimate desire on the part of those who wrote by anticipating the wants and interpreting the sentiments of those who read and are still reading these letters. Among the latter are many interested partisans who have not hitherto been regular subscribers, but who must now be favorably impressed by the fairness with which this—shall we say—people's forum has been conducted. Your liberality in the matter of space is equaled only by the wide scope allowed to all shades of opinion, prepossession, and prejudice. Admitting, as we must, the influence of prejudice in all such discussions, you certainly have adopted the readiest, if not the only, effectual means of dispelling it from minds eager for the truth or open to correction. There are, unfortunately, many people—readers of THE TIMES not excepted—who do not appear to belong to either category. These, however, must be treated as a residuum, beyond the pale of argument if not entirely past praying for. Common decency would seem to have been the only test of what might be permitted to pass through the printing press; even that limit must have been stretched in admitting the malevolent though happily impotent expletives of one John Mechan. The good people of Brewster's would do well to see that this person is quarantined, or otherwise placed under proper restraint.

I have read all of these letters once, many of them more than once, while some are preserved for future reference. In common, I doubt not, with a multitude of others, this spontaneous expression and interchange of ideas on an all-absorbing topic has afforded the keenest satisfaction, but in my case, at least, it has been of two kinds—positive and negative. Positive, because, reasoning from the best available evidence, I find myself in substantial agreement with those who favor the British side of the argument. Negative, because of the almost total absence of facts on which to base an opposite contention. The pro-Boer tactics might be summed up in the well-worn formula: "No case; throw dirt on the opposing lawyer." Mr. Shearman's unanswered statement is a model of brevity and precision. It has gone straight to the mark, making converts on one hand, and causing unmistakeable discomfiture on the other. Condensed to the uttermost, the facts are marshaled in logical continuity and with a degree of lucidity that renders his presentation of the case up to date a veritable multum in parvo. One of his letters to THE TIMES received the very unusual, yet well-deserved compliment of being reprinted on the following day, and with full acknowledgment, by The Tribune. Such indorsement from a powerful contemporary is an omen of more than ordinary significance. On the other hand, whether as regards statements of fact or a recital of extenuating circumstances, an extremely poor case has been made out, alike by England's avowed enemies and Paul Krüger's woundbe apologists. Such assertions as are not manifestly false are either puerile, inconsequential, or wholly irrelevant. Indeed, what has been said, professedly on behalf of the Boers, goes far to prove the validity of the British contention.

The pro-Boers are made up chiefly of three elements in the community, each of them clearly defined, but drawn together for the time-being on the principle that "necessity makes strange bedfellows." In other relations of life they have little in common, and on some of the most vital issues that govern the actions of mankind they are as far apart as the poles. The precipitate action of the Holland Society in October was quite intelligible, and in some sense praiseworthy; yet it was opposed in its initial stage by many influential members; and, I am assured, is now regretted by the majority of those whose family trees took root in New Amsterdam. A race war, even in words, is not a thing that good members of society would encourage, and the Van Wyck school of politicians who could not resist the temptation to turn the South African imbroglio to profitable account, by importing the worst phases of it into the affairs of a cosmopolian population, have ere this found themselves between the horns of an interesting dilemma. After all has been said, our estimable Dutch stock bears but a small proportion to our equally estimable Anglo-Saxon ancestors. Conservative, exclusive, and unprogressive as they undoubtedly were, they had to yield after an ineffectual struggle against fate, as represented by the onward movement of neighboring colonists. To-day the descendants of the Patroons have cause to unite with those of the Puritans in thankfulness that it was so. That pointed and timely reminder from ex-Judge Howland must have startled some of the assembled guests at the recent New England Society's dinner. "The forty-one families who came in the Mayflower and the thousands of English Puritans who came in the next decade are not entitled to all the credit for the development of the country, for there were others of their kin in Virginia. Unlike the Boers of the Transvaal, they gave later comers a show." Yes, indeed, and the same process of expansion, absorption, and assimilation has gone on up to this hour. They have not yet pulled in the latchstring nor kicked away the ladder.

Mr. Robert B. Roosevelt, failing in a well-intentioned effort to save his society from a false position, now champions the British cause with much ability. True, he charges them with "predatory" instincts, but in that he includes his own country and its present Administration, both of which, I doubt not, he is prepared to uphold against all comers. My worthy neighbor, Mr. Van Pelt, with mingled feelings of sympathy and regret for the backward if not benighted condition of his race in South Africa, may well stand aghast on reading Mr. Shearman's weighty indictment. What makes this all the more galling is the fact that the powerful searchlight of public criticism is directed upon them from this enlightened continent, in which his own ancestors were probably contemporary settlers with those of the people who still persist in acting the unenviable rôle of "dog in the manger." Public writers, travelers, and missionaries, from Livingston to the latest refugee, irrespective of race, hold the Dutch settlers responsible for the slow and hitherto unpromising march of civilization in South Africa. The Dark Continent stands now about where we did in the seventeenth century, and in the present struggle history is but repeating itself.

The German element, of more recent importation, is hostile to Great Britain because of some vague notions on the subjects of trade rivalry and colonial extension. This has been intensified of late by the concentrated tone of the German press, which, in turn, is largely due to certain events in Manila Bay and elsewhere, when a British naval officer showed his willingness to teach their Admiral "sea manners" should he interfere with the programme of our friend Dewey. Their love for the Boers, however, is not very ardent, nor is it for their old-time neighbors in Holland or their kinsmen in America, for that matter. One writer, rejoicing in the name of Kleinschmidt, appeals to Poultney Bigelow on behalf of the Boers. Well, here are three pregnant paragraphs that have appeared in The Times from the pen of Mr. Bigelow. They will stand reprinting:

> The Boer war I regard as a political necessity, and the mass of Englishmen support Mr. Chamberlain from a vague but very well-grounded instinct that in this struggle it is not a few square miles of high feldt that are at stake, but the future of the English race.
>
> Rightly or wrongly, the Englishman feels at this moment that he is spending his blood and money not in merely fighting a few thousand apostolic cowboys, but in making it clear to the Continental powers of Europe that South Africa is reserved for Anglo-Saxons, and that those who have undertaken to meddle in the affairs of that part of the world have miscalculated the capacity of the mother country to reach out for the protection of her interests.
>
> England has learned from us the value of something in the shape of a Monroe doctrine. The Boers don't like it to-day, but they will be the most loyal supporters of this measure when this war shall have ended with mutual respect—when Boers shall have discovered that under the British flag they will enjoy a larger measure of civil liberty than was ever accorded them by Paul Krueger.
> Lastly, there is a portion of our fellow-citizens, of Irish birth or extraction, who, coming here as outlanders, were admitted to all the richts and privileges of native Americans after a residence of five years. In many cases the preparatory sojourn was much shorter than the probationers or their sponsors would care to admit. I can remember the time when a properly affiliated "broth of a boy" seeking admission to the police force of this city could have almost guessed the precinct at which to report for duty before leaving Ireland. Some who did not reach that standard were allowed to "run wid de machine," to graduate as bartenders, or to seek such other employment as they were best qualified to perform. But the demand for "statesmen" of assorted sizes has created many vacancies in the ranks of those formerly willing to work, which are now being filled by natives of less favored nations. Will any reader hazard a conjecture as to what would have happened in this country had the Irish element been treated with a fraction of the injustice and oppression perpetrated with Boerish premeditation on the people who created Johannesburg? Yet it is this same Irish element that professes a new-fangled love and admiration for the Boers, with nothing but contempt and derision for the Outlanders. Great Britain, however, has put her hand to the plow on behalf of the unenfranchised whites of South Africa, irrespective of race, creed, or previous condition of servitude. She will not falter in the completion of her task, notwithstanding the promised invasion of Canada.

This latest fashion in professional patriotism may appeal to the pockets of Irish servant girls, but male participants will not find it the best way to become heroes in the estimation of the American people. The Mahdi, and later the Khalifa, were once in high favor among the more blatant of Ireland's representatives. But now that the last of these can no longer be invoked as an ally, the affection that was lavished on them is being used in the form of crocodile tears for "Oom Paul and his people." Another form of patriotism was indulged in a few days ago by the visiting Lord Mayor of Dublin, who told us that only a small fraction of the fusiliers were Irish. The same paper that reported his remarks contained an interview with the Catholic Chaplain of the captured regiment, from which it might be inferred that the spiritual wants of that fraction, whatever its size, were duly attended to. How different the patriotism displayed by the most famous of living Irishmen on the eve of his departure for the scene of hostilities, who pledged his word, on behalf of his fellow-countrymen of whatever rank in her Majesty's service. He himself went forth, though mourning the loss of an only son, to fight for the future of the whole English-speaking people. It was Conan Doyle who proposed "The Re-United States," and your recent editorials have done much toward the fulfillment of his prophecy. Current events have done and are doing more to help than the Irish malcontents can to hinder "a consummation devoutly to be wished."

PROTECTING HER OWN PEOPLE.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Your advocacy of the English cause in South Africa seems to have excited some of your readers, who have burst forth in letters of protest. Having before them in imagination the picture of a great power crushing the liberty of sturdy sons of the old Netherlanders who gathered round William the Silent, they cannot understand how you can sympathize with the liberty crusher. But what would your correspondents have to say if the case were reversed? Suppose our Government found occasion to discuss with that of Mexico the propriety of the treatment to which our citizens in that country were subjected, and were apparently approaching an amicable agreement.

Suppose, thereupon, Mexico were suddenly to surprise us and the world by issuing a manifesto, directing us to send no more troops to Texas, and to follow this up in three days by crossing our border and laying siege to San Antonio and to Austin. What would we then think of the Englishman who should express warm sympathy with the Mexicans, and whine about liberty and right and the oppression of weaker nations? And yet is not this just the case in South Africa? Who is responsible for this very indifferent success. Thus far, at least, England has done nothing but strive to defend her own undisputed possessions, with very indifferent success. Thus far, at least, not a foot of Boer territory has been touched by hostile forces. These hordes from the north are attacking English colonies, and they have not even tried, by proclamation or otherwise, to justify to the world this terrible war that they have initiated, and the sorrow and suffering which they have brought into hundreds of English homes.

But we will be told that if they had not begun the war England would have begun it. Well, then it would be time for the Boer to ask for sympathy. But it is most unlikely that England would have forced matters to an extreme. Public opinion would not have supported such a course. At any rate, when you ask sympathy you must stand on the facts as they are, not as they might have been.

To us who see in passing events the inevitable destruction of a selfish, slave-holding, tyrannical oligarchy, masking as a republic, and a great advance of the cause of civilization, the action of the Boers in plunging forward into war seems to have been directly overruled for the advancement of the race. If your correspondents cannot see all that, let them at least recognize the fact that Great Britain thus far is simply protecting her own people from an unwarrantable invasion.

A VICTORY FOR CIVILIZATION.

That is really a remarkable diplomatic achievement which the State Department modestly records. It announces that in answer to our application for equal privileges of trade in any possessions, spheres of influences, or claims that may be gained or made by European powers in China, all the powers concerned have returned favorable answers except Italy, Italy's concern is comparatively slight, but her consent also is expected.

We do not know how Mr. HAY has managed this. We seemed to be giving away our whole case when we refused to take any part in the British effort for the open door in China, and when our State Department actually "gave out" the amazing and palpable untruth that our commercial interests were not involved in the struggle between Russia and England in Peking. Of course, we were bound to give to all others what we had given Spain in the Philippines by our treaty of peace. In any case the potential trade of the Philippines is a mere trifle compared with the potential trade of China. So that it seemed that we had no "quid pro quo" to offer.

As for Russia, the commerce of Manchuria by sea is not likely to concern her as a carrier, but only as an owner. It is only if sea-borne commerce should threaten to oust her land-borne products from the "hinterland" that any Russian interests would seem to be threatened. As for Great Britain and Japan, they were already fully committed to the principle of the open door. It was only the interference of Germany, France, and Russia that prevented Japan from applying it to China at the close of her victorious war. And as for France and Germany, it seems that they have been converted to the British theory of colonization, against that which they have held and acted upon hitherto, and have determined to take a leaf out of the book of the most successful colonizing power the world has ever known. According to this principle, the owner, partitioner, or claimant of a piece of foreign territory merely puts himself to the trouble and expense of policing it, and for his reward takes such a share of the proceeds of its trade as he can get in free competition. This is a doctrine which the German Government can afford to accept, and has come near to showing its readiness for accepting. But that France will accept it, even after her four centuries of failure of making the other theory pay, is a real surprise. It may be that she expects "compensations elsewhere," say in commercial treaties. This, of course, the Administration cannot grant. It may have promised to use its good offices toward getting it granted.

In any case, it is a signal public service that Mr. HAY has performed. Handicapped as he was, he has won a diplomatic victory, and has succeeded in repairing the huge blunder of his predecessor, which seemed irreparable. He deserves the congratulations and thanks of his countrymen.

LETTING WELL ENOUGH ALONE.

Happy is the nation that has no annals, and happier still the State that needs no new laws. That is substantially the present condition of the State of New York, if we may judge from the message of Gov. THEODORE ROOSEVELT. He is a man of notably positive opinions, yet his message is almost barren of positive recommendations. In part this is due to the limitations of the man, and not to those of the subjects he treats. With all his sterling qualities of mind and heart Gov. ROOSEVELT lacks the ability to think out a social or economic problem to a clearly reasoned and definite conclusion. The tax problem always baffles him. We cannot believe that he enjoys his struggles with it at all. Indeed, a great part of his work of planning remedial legislation must be a very great bore to the Governor. Action suits him better than thinking about action, especially as much of his thinking is upon subjects for which he has little training or natural aptitude; and even if he is so fortunate as to reach a conclusion he must await the slow and quite uncertain assent of the Legislature before he can enjoy the pleasure of seeing his ideas enacted into law.

There are two concerns of the people of this State as to which it would be well were there some CLINTON, some SEYMOUR or TILDEN in the Executive Chair to apply to them the powers of a masterful and creative mind. We mean the canals and the tax laws. Up to comparatively recent times, and until the business of the State became so vast and complex, it was the custom of our Governors to study at first hand the needs of the community and advise the Legislature how they should be met. Nowadays this work is mostly farmed out to commissions. There is one commission at work upon the canals and another upon the tax laws. Still another commission is inquiring into conditions affecting the commerce of the State, and the Governor asks for authority to appoint one to consider amendments to the New York charter. Upon these subjects, therefore, he has no definite recommendations to make, and although he devotes twenty pages of his message to the canals, taxation, public ownership of "utilities," the trusts, and modern industrial conditions, we find therein no observation that is both new and valuable. Many of the ideas are sound. They have long been so considered by the students of those subjects. But the Governor does not illuminate these problems with any new light or contribute to current discussion any original guiding principle that will arrest public attention or aid the legislator in his task

Gov. ROOSEVELT's rooted belief in the doctrine that it is a good thing for a man to know how to take care of himself saves him from the calamity of concurrence in the beliefs of the new school of economics which teaches us that the city or the State ought to do everything. In discussing the municipal ownership of "public utilities," he says that it is obviously "undesirable that the Government should do anything that private individuals could do with better results to the community," and that "everything that tends to deaden individual initiative is to be avoided." In any industrial community those are foundation principles, and they destroy a great part of the argument for municipal ownership. Again, in treating of modern industrial conditions, the Governor says:

> Probably the large majority of the fortunes that now exist in this country have been amassed, not by injuring mankind, but as an incident to the conferring of great benefits on the community—whatever the conscious purpose of those amassing them may have been. The occasional wrongs committed or injuries endured are on the whole far outweighed by the mass of good which has resulted. The true questions to be asked are: Has any given individual been injured by the acquisition of wealth by any man? Were the rights of that individual, if they have been violated, insufficiently protected by law? If so, these rights, and all similar rights, ought to be guaranteed by additional legislation. The point to be aimed at is the protection of the individual against wrong, not the attempt to limit and hamper the acquisition and output of wealth. It is almost equally dangerous either to blink evils and refuse to acknowledge their existence or to strike at them in a spirit of ignorant revenge, thereby doing far more harm than is remedied.

That is an antidote for demagogy, well compounded and put up in a compact package. It ought to be freely applied to all Socialists and to persons who ignorantly abet them in their crusade against what they call culpable wealth.

All decent citizens will applaud the Governor's recommendation that the Horton law, relating to prizefights, be repealed. If this law were honestly enforced it would prevent prizefights, as it was intended to do. But when a New York Chief of Police, sitting beside the pugilistic ring, declares that two brutes who are mauling each other like bears and delivering "knock-out" blows are merely "sparring for points," and that therefore the law has not been violated, it becomes evident that the Penal Code affords a better protection to the morals and good name of the community than this statute. It is high time that something were done. The country is asking why prizefighting is allowed in New York although it has been suppressed in pretty much every other part of the Union.

The Governor's love of wild nature inspires him to treat the subject of the Forest Preserve with intelligence and specific suggestions. There he is quite at home. He deeply deplores the reckless and destructive spirit in which the once noble wilderness of the Adirondacks has been treated, and suggests that the administration of the State Lands must be so centralized that responsibility for abuses can be at once placed, and that the forests that belong to the public should be treated at least as intelligently as the private preserves. They are not now so treated.

Gov. ROOSEVELT's study of the affairs of the people he serves appears to convince him that they are in very good condition. He warns the Legislature against needless legislation. Indeed, the message he sends to the lawmakers is a strong argument for biennial sessions. Of himself he has no advice to give that calls for immediate action. The negative character of the message, coming from so positive a man, indicates a lack of burning public questions at Albany. Still, when his commissions report the Governor will have affairs of weight and moment to ponder. We think the public may confidently expect from the Canal Commission a definite plan of treatment and statement of policy that will save the canals and solve the problems that neglect, narrowness, ignorance, and corruption have raised. We wish we could be as hopeful of the report of the commission that is considering the tax laws. That problem is more complex, and we do not feel sure that it has been intrusted to minds as competent for the task. We hope the Governor's commendation of the report of the committee appointed to devise ways for the unification of the educational system is not to be understood as an approval of all parts of that report. He is mistaken if he thinks that every patriotic citizen of the State will give his "cordial support" to a plan that, if adopted without change, would put the entire educational system of the State into politics by giving to the Governor the power to appoint the executive head of the system.

SUPERINTENDENT KILBURN ON TRUST COMPANIES.

The Superintendent of the Banking Department. MR. KILBURN, whose report has been published this week, gives small comfort to those who are looking forward to any legislation this Winter restraining the field of operations of the trust companies.

He devotes a considerable portion of his report to the companies, and gives some striking figures as to their increase in number and resources. During the year eight new companies have been organized and five more were in the course of organization at the close of the year. The capital and paid-in surplus of these thirteen companies approximate $22,000,000, while the fifty-two companies reporting on July 1 had resources aggregating $722,000,000, or $195,000,000 more than the forty-nine companies reporting at the beginning of the year. This shows resources for the trust companies nearly twice as great as those of the State banks and within twenty-five per cent. of those of the savings banks.

To those who think that in this remarkable expansion the field of the banks has been unduly trenched upon, the Superintendent offers the consoling reflection that if the trust companies had not grown the banks would have done so, which is probably true, but not entirely pertinent. To the suggestion that there has been in this growth of the trust companies a certain appreciable percentage of risky enterprises, the Superintendent replies, if we understand his argument, that there is no danger to depositors as long as the deposits are small, and that when they become large it only requires "prudent and sagacious management" to assure "safety and prosperity." The case of the Produce Exchange Trust Company he does not think is in point, because the embarrassments of this company were entirely the consequence of "imprudence and even of rashness in making loans, nearly $5,000,000 having been tied up in unavailable loans and upon collateral upon which it could not readily realize."

This, we confess, does not seem to us quite conclusive. Trust companies were organized under the law giving them certain privileges with the intention and expectation that they would be, as unquestionably the great body of them are, peculiarly trustworthy. If, as in the case alluded to, a company proves peculiarly untrustworthy, it is plain that the requirements of the law have not accomplished their purpose. We are not sure that the law should be changed and we have seen no definite proposition from any authoritative source to that effect, but clearly it is not in the interest of the public generally that such cases shall be frequent or even that they shall be possible. We have great confidence in the restraining and regulating influence exerted by the business community through its organized representative body, the Clearing House, an influence very clearly shown and wisely exercised in the amended rules of the past season. Certainly those rules are not based on the imperturbable optimism manifested by the Superintendent of the Banking Department.

GEN. MERCIER AGAIN.

According to a cable dispatch from Paris published on Sunday, reports are persistent in the Nationalist press that the Government has decided to prosecute Gen. MERCIER, who was Minister of War at the time of the arrest and the first conviction of DREYFUS; it is even added that this action will be announced by the Premier, M. WALDECK-ROUSSEAU, when the Chamber reassembles. In the light of recent events such a step on the part of the Government seems, at first sight, most unlikely.

The trial of the cases against M. ZOLA and Lieut. Col. PICQUART, and the suit of Mme. HENRY, the widow of the forger, against M. JOSEPH REINACH, who charged that her husband was the accomplice of ESTERHAZY, have been indefinitely postponed. The question of general amnesty closing the prosecution of all persons directly or indirectly connected with the cause célèbre has for some time been under consideration by the Amnesty Committee of the Senate. The ultimate passage of a general amnesty act has generally been regarded as a foregone conclusion, in spite of the protests of ZOLA, PICQUART, Mme. HENRY, and even of DREYFUS himself, all of whom hope to vindicate themselves, in their several causes, according to due process of law. Moreover, the very origin of the reports of the supposed action against MERCIER tends to discredit them. The ex-Minister of War is now a candidate for Senatorial honors, and the publication of the fact that he, "the defender of the honor of the army," was about to suffer for his "patriotism" would easily increase the contemptible prestige of this criminal demagogue of the General Staff. Again, and still at first sight, it would seem that the Government could hardly afford to make such a radical move on the eve of the exposition, when the utmost tranquillity is desired throughout France. There is no question that the prosecution of Gen. MERCIER would be intensely unpopular. But suppose that the idea of prosecution is actually entertained by the French Government, what does it mean?

It is not a question of nipping in the bud MERCIER's political career. The intelligent people of France to-day express simply contempt or pity for the man who sacrificed for his vanity the liberty, honor, and almost the life of a worthy officer of artillery. MERCIER, a Senator, could hardly be regarded as a menacing danger to anything. The prosecution of the man can only mean that the Government has waived its desire to administer general amnesty, and that it is so well fortified with evidence against MERCIER that it considers his almost immediate conviction inevitable, carrying with it absolute legal proof, which the dullest French brain would not hesitate to accept, of the innocence of the man who has twice been convicted on charges of treason.

Nor is the supposition ridiculous that the Government wishes to anticipate any action that DREYFUS may take to bring his case again before the Cour de Cassation. The publication in fac simile of the documents enumerated in the bordereau would certainly constitute the "fait nouveau" necessary to prepare the case for the Supreme Court of Justice. Suppose that through the personal interest that the German Kaiser is known to have in the case, it should be given to DREYFUS to produce this "fait nouveau"—this legal and irrefutable evidence of complete innocence? Then the position of the French Government would become most embarrassing. It would become as untenable as that assumed should it prosecute MERCIER without the certainty of his conviction and the legal rehabilitation of DREYFUS as the results.

TRAFFIC IN FIFTH AVENUE.

The support of President GUGGENHEIMER for any worthy cause can be looked for with a high degree of confidence. We are glad that he has taken up the proposal to restrict the traffic on Fifth Avenue so as to make the Park more easily accessible than it has heretofore been to the only vehicles which are allowed to enter it at all.

This is the point of the whole matter. Fifth Avenue is the only avenue to the Park from the south which is available to or used by the carriages which carry the daily or frequent visitors to the Park itself. The owners of "trotting rigs" make some use of Eighth Avenue, in spite of the car tracks which incumber the surface of that as they do of every other avenue, Fifth only excepted. But only a small proportion of carriages take that route. The majority take the avenue, which has been kept free from car tracks on purpose to be used as a place for parades. We have once or twice a year a civic or military parade which employs and monopolizes the avenue. But we have every day a parade of equipages which is very well worth seeing. This fully employs and during the hours of its passage ought to be allowed to monopolize the avenue. There are enough of pleasure vehicles using it for this legitimate purpose to bring the procession down to a slow pace, even if there were no other vehicles allowed upon it. If we allow business wagons and trucks to lumber along it at their convenience, in order to gratify their drivers with a sight of the procession, the congestion becomes, as it has long since become, intolerable and dangerous.

There is absolutely no more reason why these vehicles should be allowed to interfere with the procession on its way to or from the Park than why they should be allowed to join it in the Park itself. Such an interference would destroy all the pleasure of driving in the Park as well as of watching the driving, which gives pleasure to a much larger number than those who occupy the carriages. It was long ago ascertained that the owners of the wagons and trucks driven in the avenue would readily acquiesce in the exclusion. It is for the pleasure of the drivers alone that they are permitted to occupy the avenue. That is to say, the pleasure of a certain number of persons who are driving on business is to be permitted to destroy the pleasure of ten times as many persons who are driving for pleasure. And this is the notion some demagogues entertain of "democracy."

Mr. GUGGENHEIMER's resolution, introduced into the Council, embodies the "irreducible minimum" of the consideration that ought to be given to the pleasure drivers, and to those who watch them, on the one avenue where there is any pretense of giving them any consideration at all. If its author succeeds in getting it enacted he will have earned the gratitude of his fellow-citizens.

TOPICS OF THE TIMES.

—Our own and only—the "only," in this case, somewhat dulls the stinger of the "own"—our own and only LEMUEL ELY QUIGG drifted over to Boston the other day, and while there of course he yielded to temptation and made a speech. Here his remarks would have been regarded as mildly amusing, but in Boston, which knows Mr. QUIGG well enough to resent his criticism and not well enough to ignore it, his presumably kind and certainly successful effort to let the city see itself as he saw it created a large amount of angry excitement. This emotion finds its most vehement, and, therefore, funniest, expression in The Boston Herald. That paper, after speaking familiarly of Mr. QUIGG as "the puppet of Boss PLATT in New York," continues as follows: "When he undertakes to arraign the City of Boston as being chiefly responsible for the insurrection of the Philippine Islanders, it is in order for those whom he thus calumniates to throw the accusation back at the fresh young man who makes it. We have no apologies to offer for the anti-imperialists, with whose views we are not in sympathy, but we have some very earnest convictions as to the staleness and thinness of such utterances as this, as well as of the impudence of him who made it." The Herald's conclusion is "that QUIGG should be kept in his own kennel"—a conclusion, it seems to us, much more satisfying to temper than to reason; for puppets are not kept in kennels, and it harmonizes ill with Boston's reputation for elegance and accuracy of speech when one of its newspapers heaps up epithets as carelessly as this.

—There is much gossip circulating in Washington about Gen. JOSEPH WHEELER's Philippine experiences, and in some quarters it is openly stated that the veteran's position in Manila has been highly unpleasant. The trouble is said to be due to a belief in army circles that the General is now a good deal more of a politician than a soldier, and, though there is nowhere any doubt of his courage and competency, his refusal to abandon his seat in Congress is taken as proof that he entered upon the pursuit of new military glories with the expectation of expediting their attainment by the aid of influences not commanded by the ordinary officer. Whether these surmises are well founded or not, it seems to be a fact that Gen. WHEELER has been carefully kept at a distance from the scene of active operations, and that if any efforts have been made to find something for him to do, they have been curiously unsuccessful. The General has consequently had a large amount of leisure time on his hands, and it is said that he has employed it in writing innumerable letters to his political and other friends at home. He has even, according to report, addressed several communications directly to the President, complaining of the treatment he has received, asking advice as to the course he ought to pursue, and severely criticising the conduct of the campaign against the rebels. In another this last would be a serious infraction of discipline, but the President is said to be unwilling to hold Gen. WHEELER to the same responsibility that would be imposed on anybody else, and the only token of Executive displeasure has been a silent ignoring of the appeals thus irregularly presented. The situation is a somewhat embarrassing one for all concerned, and one of its most unfortunate features is the fact that those readiest to discuss it are least well informed as to its exact details.

—In the report made to the Spanish Government by Capt. CONCAS, who was Chief of Staff on Admiral CERVERA's flagship, there is one passage that deserves attentive consideration. Such few people as are still mystified by the inability of Spain to offer a stouter resistance than she did in her late war with the United States will find in it the explanation they seek, while the Captain's words will interest others because they sum up in so striking and characteristic a way the situation as it existed in Spain when the war broke out. It seems that before hostilities began, Admiral CERVERA made a vehement appeal to Madrid for more ships and the formation of a definite plan of campaign, declaring that without the one and the other the defeat of Spain would be complete and swift. The reply was: "In moments of international crisis nothing definite can be formulated." Did realized incompetency and helplessness ever have expression in a phrase of more delicate balance or more stately words? What the Ministers meant, of course, was that they didn't know what to do and were blindly trusting to blinder luck, but their fatal Latin facility in the use of a magnificent language saved them from a confession so humiliating, and possibly enough the author of the dispatch to Admiral CERVERA found no little comfort in the obvious success with which he had given elegance of form to most miserable substance. One can imagine him reading his production over and over before he sent it, and congratulating himself on its literary perfection. Capt. CONCAS, a rude and sailorly person, only says, "For this reason absolutely nothing was done. No thought was taken of what was to be done in case of war." The form of that, now, might easily be improved, but it does very well, nevertheless.

—Dozens of eminent New Yorkers have now explained to us with great elaborateness that they are personally in nowise to blame for the delay in paying to the public school teachers their well-earned and not-too-generous salaries, but they have all been careful to leave us in the dark, or at least in a deep twilight, as to just where the responsibility really does lie. Even the Controller, who can speak plainly enough when he chooses, does no more than criticise a system and to mention certain boards as slothful and incompetent. He refrains from giving individual names, and he is far from expressing all the indignation he must feel at the cruel wrong from which for months and months past a class deserving and receiving universal respect has been suffering in almost silent helplessness. Inquiry among the teachers will reveal to him or to anybody else that this delay in paying salaries is something worse than regrettable, and has produced results more serious than inconvenience. In more cases than a few the consequences have been distinctly tragical, and in not many have they failed to involve humiliations which it is no exaggeration to call agonizing. It is not enough to talk about a political tangle, an unfortunate conflict of authority, and the difficulty of forcing unpaid officers to energetic action. There is absolute criminality somewhere, even if it is only the criminality of carelessness and ignorance, and men, not boards or systems, are to blame for it. Who devised the boards and the systems? Who profits, politically or financially, by their perpetuation? Who is putting obstacles in the way of better methods? Who, with the power and the ability to enforce reforms immediate and effective, are contenting themselves with useless words of sympathy for the poor teachers? Let's have some names.

A street car struck Giuseppe Marate, a sailor, in Philadelphia, Christmas Day, knocked him down, and dislocated his shoulder. He was put into a wagon and hurried off toward the Pennsylvania Hospital. The wagon jumped over a rut in the pavement and the jar reset the shoulder. When he got to the hospital the surgeons found the shoulder all right, bandaged it, and sent him back to his vessel.

IN BEHALF OF QUEENS BOROUGH.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Editorials and correspondence essaying to voice public opinion invite discussion and comment; therefore kindly permit a few words from a Long Island resident of the City of New York in regard to the proposed tunnels and bridges.

Comparisons are constantly being presented between this city and London. Mr. Coler mentions the London tunnels—two completed, while a third, also started a decade ago, is not quite finished. He, however, does not say one word about the existing baker's dozen of London bridges, free not only to pedestrians, but to all kinds of vehicles. Contrast this with our own city.

While we have one bridge between the Boroughs of Manhattan and Brooklyn, there does not exist a proper thoroughfare between Queens and Manhattan. The Thirty-fourth Street ferry, it appears, is the private property of the Long Island Railroad Company. If so disposed, might it not take off all but one of its ferryboats, leaving one, perhaps, to meet corporation requirements?

The congested condition of transit over this antique crossing is getting to be a menacing and serious matter to all concerned on both sides of the river. Is it to be expected that any change will be effected while each citizen going to and fro must pay six cents per diem? and we may compute that half a million passengers represent thirty thousand dollars in a single day. Neither does it accord with human nature to suppose that the company will approve of a free bridge for the people that might affect the harvesting that has been steadily increasing for the past forty years.

We believe, however, that, even with bridges and tunnels, the ferry would still pay, as do the always-crowded surface railroads, although they desperately fought the elevated at its inception. The Borough of Queens is paying 3.27, the highest city rate of taxation. Is this tax to be exacted without fair representation in the form of absolutely essential municipal requirements? The tone of some editorials and correspondence is sufficiently exasperating to arouse citizens of Queens Borough and many likewise in Manhattan, each to shoulder a shovel and to proceed to fill in the East River, in order to prove that Queens has a place in the city.

Glance for an instant at the bridges, viaducts, aqueducts, speedways, public buildings, and schools in the direction of Westchester; we even hear that there are parties in that section who would willingly go out of their way, taking time and trouble, to oppose the rival development of the Borough of Queens, with its Newtown, Flushing, Jamaica, and the Rockaways, making a most attractive quarter of the metropolis, being situated between the health-giving Sound and the sea.

True, our new but unfinished schools look just now very like picturesque ruins. Built to teach the young idea how to shoot, but hardly with the expectation of being taken too literally in the shooting of sticks and stones with Creedmoor-like accuracy through the unguarded windows. This seems almost pardonable recreation from confinement in the positively unsanitary and overcrowded quarters occupied by the scholars compelled to await the action of the Board of Education, or an inevitable eviction by order of the Board of Health.

Equal municipal condition is all that is asked, but first of all our citizens demand a proper and free thoroughfare to a residential section, where every city lot affords not only a building site, but, if so desired, a garden plot free from boulders. Gen. Grant in his time selected Newtown as the finest spot on the continent for the then proposed Centennial International Exposition, and the extraordinary advantages from a United States Governmental, military, and municipal point of view of a bridge between Manhattan Island and Long Island, with Blackwell's Island as a natural pier, never has and never can be questioned. The Long Island Railroad has promised it for years; was it but an "ignis fatuus" that now, when it can be an actual fixed fact, it changes the subject to a tunnel?

The ostensible subterfuge enacted through a charter, which has resulted only in side-tracking this enterprise, along with the annual edition of the springtime fairy story of an ocean ferry between Montauk Point and Liverpool, can no longer delude our citizens, who, having reached the limits of human endurance, expect a safe and proper free thoroughfare to bridge over the East River between the Boroughs of Queens and Mannattan.

THE DANISH WEST INDIES.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

It is reported that Denmark is ready and willing to sell her islands in the West Indies to this Republic for $3,000,000. If this report is true and the people of those islands desire political union with the United States, by all means purchase them without any unnecessary delay. To quote Prof. Goldwin Smith, their purchase will be "another step in the direction of the complete emancipation of this hemisphere and all of its destinies from European domain, dominion, and control."

The total foreign trade of these islands exceeds $2,500,000 annually. The value of our exports to them (population 35,000) for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1899, was more than $20 per capita, while for the same year the value of our exports to the Philippine Islands was 4 cents per capita. The trade of one Danish West Indian was worth as much as that of 500 Filipinos.

By admitting the products of these islands into this market free from customs duties we shall greatly add to the prosperity of those who dwell there. When we have annexed them with the free consent of their inhabitants Great Britain will be the only European monarchy with possessions in North America.

The expulsion of Spain from this hemisphere cost many millions of dollars and thousands of human lives. Nevertheless it was well worth the sacrifice. If we can secure the peaceful withdrawal of Denmark for $3,000,000 it will be a wise and beneficent investment. The time may be near at hand when their possession may be of the first importance. Spain is not the last power that we may be compelled to expel from this hemisphere. The final outcome of the contest in South Africa and the Philippines may result in greater changes than seemed possible to the most clear and far sighted one year ago. Let the Danish Islands be secured without the shedding of blood.

SOLDIERS AND SAILORS' MONUMENT.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

As it is shown through a protest of the Society of Landscape Architects that the site fixed for the Soldiers and Sailors' Monument is impracticable, it seems not less than a duty the Monument Commissioners owe to the public to pause and consider.

Misfortune has attended the efforts of this commission from the first in its efforts to suit a design to a site and a site to a design. One mishap or another has shifted the place six times, and the conditions seem worse now than ever before.

The present site at Eighty-sixth Street and Riverside Drive is thought by the landscape experts a good one for a monument made to fit it, but not for the approved design which was made for another place. The manifold changes of plan and attending delays have doubtless been trying and exasperating to all concerned, and at this time must be more so than ever before because everything seemed to promise a near completion of the Monument Commission's work. The Municipal Art Commission, whose function it was to pass upon the fitness of design and site, has approved the fitting of a design to a site which has been shown by the most competent authorities quite impracticable. I have no doubt that under these circumstances the Mayor, who is ex-officio a member of both the Monument and Municipal Art Commissions, will see his way clear to call for a readjustment of the whole matter, and I should think both commissions would be pleased to have him take such action. It would save the Monument Commission from making of the end of its work a perpetual evidence of the neglectfulness or incompetency of the Municipal Art Commission, rather than a proper monument, and $250,000 is too much to pay for such an object lesson.

REVERSAL OF APPEALED CASES.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Your remarks in your issue of to-day in relation to the proportion of reversals to affirmances in the decisions of the Appellate Division of the Supreme Court in the First Department seem to be founded on the assumption that an appeal is taken in every case which is tried.

Any criticism of the trial courts based upon the number of reversals upon appeal in comparison with the affirmances is unfair, for it leaves out of consideration the thousands of cases in which the decision of the trial court is accepted as final and no appeal is taken. The only fair method of comparison is to place the affirmances and the unappealed cases against the reversals. Such a comparison would make it appear that the proportion of cases in which the trial court was wrong is remarkably small. When it is remembered that the object of an appeal is to obtain a reversal; that no appeal is taken unless the appellant's attorney, after a careful examination of the law, comes to the conclusion that error has been committed, and that if a reversal is not obtained he has advised his client badly, a percentage of fifty out of all the appeals taken will not seem a large proportion of reversals.

INTRODUCTION OF NEEDLE GUN.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

If you will permit me to follow up the communication from Mr. Edw. W Stitt, who points out a misstatement in The Nineteenth Century article, I might mention another slight error, and should be glad if you would correct the same.

You say in that article that the celebrated "needle gun" was used for the first time in actual warfare against the Austrians in the "seven-day war" of 1866.

The Prussians used their "Zündnadel"—needle gun—in 1863-64, when, assisted by the Austrians, (I suppose it must have been to give them moral courage,) they wrested the Duchies of Holstein and Slesvig—now called by the hyphenated name, "Schleswig-Holstein"—from Denmark.

When this fine piece of work had been accomplished (and let me say right here that it took the combined forces of the two great powers several times "seven times seven days") and the Danish soldiers returned home, I well remember one of my father's men who had "been along" telling me and the other tow-headed youngsters about that remarkable Prussian gun. Peder Jepsen—that was the man's name—told the story somewhat like this: The Austrians were not so bad; those we caught were really very decent men, but small, and their guns were no better than ours; but the d—d Prussians; they had guns entirely different to ours, and they could shoot much further and about six times as fast as the best of us. They did not use any ramrod nor bite off their cartridges; all they did was to bring the gun to their hip, give it a "twack," and off she went. If we had had such guns, the devil take me, (this, I am sorry to say, is a very popular Danish oath,) we would have chased the d—d Prussians where they came from. So far said Peder Jepsen.

As a good American citizen, I suppose I ought to look upon 1863 and 1864 as past history. Well, let this stand. It is past. But, Mr. Editor, I can't help but think with the friend of my youth, the veteran Peder Jepsen, that if our soldiers—the Danes—had had the "needle guns" and the Prussians the guns our soldiers had to do their fighting with—but what is the use speculating on what might have been? But I will say this, I don't think the now famous Von Diederichs would have been heard of in connection with our little affair at Manila. FREDERIK PAULSEN.

THE WIMAN SETTLEMENT.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

By an item appearing in last Friday's paper you have inadvertently done me an injustice so serious that I am sure you will seek to mitigate it by inserting this letter. The article referred to a report of my assignee by which it was made to appear that a final "settlement" with my creditors was sought for at "a little over half a cent on the dollar" of my liabilities.

Not only is no settlement on such a basis proposed, but the facts as they exist contradict such an absurdity. This is because of the indebtedness in a list published, amounting to $550,000, there has already been liquidated, secured, or adjusted, a sum no less than $320,000, which is at the rate of over 60 cents on the dollar, instead of "a little over half a cent on the dollar," as your report states.

The report took no account whatever of the collateral in the hands of creditors at the time of making their advances, on which realizations with individual efforts in directions other than through the assignee, have achieved the result of this respectable dividend. This leaves out of the question the holdings of real estate on Staten Island, an acreage larger than that of any other holder within ten miles of the New York City Hall, and which yet remains to be realized upon by the trustee.

In view of these facts, and specially in view of the adverse circumstances which, as the public knows, I have encountered and happily survived, it is hardly fair to give currency in your columns to the impression that my estate pays less than a cent on the dollar, when, as a matter of fact, it shows a dividend to a large number of creditors much above the average.

THE ASTRONOMICAL ARTICLES.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

"The Heavens," the monthly astronomical notes which the readers of THE TIMES have for so long enjoyed, are more interesting in to-day's issue than I remember them ever to have been. Though those articles do not rank as poems, this is, in its mere statement of facts, suggestive enough to be an inspiration to the poet, to the building of many a lofty rhyme. Nor does the professor lack for eloquence as he describes the gorgeous clouds of the morning, the "clear skies trembling with golden and crimson hues, and the glittering pageants of sunset;" of when he relates the marvels of that journey of the solar system toward the frontiers of Hercules. To turn to such a column from politics and wars and statecraft and social restlessness is a wholesome and purifying process.

But, if the professor will forgive a criticism, in the sentence commencing "Jupiter now rises," and at the words "cause him," the reader receives a check. Should not the writer have said, "Cause one to open one's eyes before daylight?" As for "him," he has been up three hours before sunrise. Here is, I think, a lapsus calami.

While Sirius and the stars in the hunter's belt seems winking to each other as they listen to the bells that ring down the curtain on one act and up on another of the human comedy, I wish the genial astronomer many happy months and years.

For the Moody Schools.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The announcement in this morning's TIMES, that an effort is being made to raise funds for the endowment of the schools established by Mr. Moody at Mount Hermon and Northfield, ought to appeal to and meet a hearty response from the Christian people of America. Just as soon as Mr. Moody's death became known in New York, one of the Sunday schools of a City Mission church on the east side decided to do without their Christmas presents and send $10 to start an endowment fund for those two schools. If every evangelical church and Sunday school in the United States will only follow the example of this Sunday school in the poorest section of New York City, and send something, it will not be long till the entire sum needed is realized. THE FARMER'S LOT.

B. B. Smith in Minneapolis Journal.

The farmer is a happy man—or should be, don't you know,
He doesn't have a thing to do but plow and reap and sow,
He sleeps till 4 o'clock each morn, then goes about his tasks
Gets three square meals each working day, and that is all he asks.

He hires a man to do his work, when he can raise the price,
Feeds him on pork and johnnycake, potatoes, mush, and rice;
When Autumn gilds the towering hills, he comes to town and votes,
And settles up his Winter's bills by issuing his notes.

He always has one suit of clothes, and often he has two,
For footwear he prefers a boot, and never wears a shoe;
And when the Summer comes he sheds his duds to 'scape the heat,
And doesn't have to don his coat when he sits down to eat.

He keeps a wagon and a span with which to drive to town;
His wife was never known to be without a gingham gown;
His children, too, are fat and stout—they're not brought up on cake,
And never cry all night because their little stomachs ache.

He needs no money in his purse, his credit's always good;
He takes the weekly paper and he pays for it in wood.
The merchants furnish him dry goods, and groceries as well,
Because they know some day he'll have some pork or wheat to sell.

Ah, happy is the man who dwells upon the farm, apart
From noisy cities, crowded towns, and commerce's busy mart.
Serene he lives nor gives one thought to hoarding piles of pelf,
My dearest hope is that some day I'll have a farm myself

ROYALIST TRIALS ENDED

Deroulede, Guerin, and Buffet Are Convicted by French Senate.

SEVENTY-TWO ARE ACQUITTED

Court Finds "Extenuating Circumstances" in Cases of Condemned Men—Trial Is Called a Farce.

PARIS, Jan. 3.—The conspiracy trial before the Senate, sitting as the High Court, came to an end to-day, except for the sentences in the case of those convicted. Out of the seventy-five alleged conspirators who were thrown into prison five months ago and who have been since released in batches owing to want of evidence, only MM. Déroulède, Guerin, and Buffet have been found guilty, and these three are accorded "extenuating circumstances," which reduces their punishment to detention in a fortress or banishment.

It is understood that the sentences will vary between five and ten years' detention. President Loubet may extend pardons in accordance with the Berenger law in favor of first offenders.

Strong precautionary measures were taken to-day in the vicinity of the Senate house, but there was no sign of disorder anywhere when the judgments were rendered.

All the Nationalist organs describe the result of the trial as a fiasco for the Government, after the flourish of trumpets with which it announced the discovery of a great plot against the republic.

They insist that the whole indictment fizzled out, and that the acquittal of M. Buffet's Royalist fellow-prisoners disposes of the charge of a Royalist conspiracy. Moreover, they declare that the evidence proved that M. Déroulède has always been a political enemy of M. Buffet.

The Journal Des Debats says this evening:

"The light thrown by the testimony has shown that the charges against the Royalists are perfectly empty. The acquittal of M. Buffet's co-prisoners has destroyed the charge."

After dwelling upon the dismissal of batch after batch of prisoners, the paper concludes in the following sarcastic strain:

"It is upon the remaining three or four that the Government can alone rely in order to give France a retrospective shadow and to conjure up a vision of outrage, revolution, and catastrophe from which vigilance of the Government has spared her."

The High Court will pronounce sentences to-morrow. M. Guerin is held guilty of conspiracy and of insults and outrages at the expense of the police but he is acquitted of the charge of a premeditated attempt to kill.

The trial has cost 800,000f. in addition to the expenses of detention. It is asserted this evening that M. Déroulède, Buffet, and Guerin will be condemned to pay costs.

ROYAL YACHT DISASTER.

The New Victoria and Albert, the Largest in the World, Lists at the Pembroke Dock.

LONDON, Dec. 3.—An attempt made to undock the new royal yacht at Pembroke this morning proved disastrous. Immediately after she floated the yacht listed thirty degrees to port and her starboard bilge keel became jammed. The strain was so great that shores sixteen inches square, used in an attempt to prop her, were doubled up and snapped like matchwood. The position of the yacht, as this dispatch is sent, is critical.

The full extent of the damage cannot yet be ascertained, but it is understood that the coal bunkers and bulkheads are twisted, the engines strained, and the bottom plates bulged inward.

An immense gang of workmen are employed in the work of shoring the vessel, so as to prevent her capsizing, and 800 tons of iron ballast have been taken out. It is hoped that the yacht may be gotten out to-morrow.

Queen Victoria's new yacht, the Victoria and Albert, the largest in the world, was successfully launched May 9 last, being christened by the Duchess of York. It was laid down at Pembroke Dockyard toward the end of 1897. The vessel is constructed of steel and the interior is divided into a large number of water-tight compartments. In addition to these structural arrangements further security is provided and freedom from serious fouling of the bottom is obtained by sheathing over the steel hull with teak planking, outside which copper sheathing is fastened.

The design for the new yacht was prepared by Sir William White, Director of Naval Construction, the matters of speed and accommodation having been arranged in accordance with her Majesty's wishes.

The length of the vessel between perpendiculars is 290 feet, length over all 339 feet, breadth 50 feet, mean draught of water under normal conditions of loading 18 feet, displacement 4,700 tons, maximum indicated horse power 11,000. The yacht is to be propelled by twin screws, driven by two inverted vertical cylinder engines, each engine having four cylinders, and being placed in a separate water-tight compartment. Steam is provided by eighteen water-tube boilers.

The present royal yacht Victoria and Albert was built at Pembroke Dockyard and was launched Jan. 16, 1855. She is constructed of wood, with three thicknesses of planking, so as to secure the requisite strength with lightness. Her length between perpendiculars is 300 feet, length over all 338 feet, breadth 40 feet, 3 inches. At the time of her construction she was justly regarded as a vessel of exceptional proportions and very high speed. She is propelled by paddle-wheels, and on her earlier trials, attained a speed of about 16½ knots for a short run on the measured mile, with 8,600 indicated horse power.

The new vessel was actually commenced Oct. 25 1897, though her keel was not laid until Dec. 12. The total cost of the vessel is estimated at about £360,000.

A LIBERAL LEADER DIES.

LONDON, Jan. 3.—Francis Schnadhorst, who from 1885 to 1892 was the chief organizer and adviser of the Liberal Party, died to-day in his sixtieth year.

Mr. Schnadhorst, who was born in Birmingham in 1840 and educated in King Edward's School in that city, was chosen Secretary of the Birmingham Liberal Association in 1873. Four years later he became Secretary of the famous National Liberal Federation, which he assisted in forming and which was largely responsible for the Liberal victories of 1880 and 1885. In 1887 he received the sum of 10,000 guineas and an address from the Liberal Party in recognition of his services. Mr. Schnadhorst retired from active political work in 1893.

Demands Money from Santo Domingo.

SANTO DOMINGO, Jan. 3.—The French Consul here is pressing the Boismare-Caccavelli claim of 280,000f., payment of which is overdue. He threatens to embargo the Government revenues. According to rumors, the Improvement Company has failed to comply with its contract with the Government regarding the payment of the claim. As the local lawyers refused to attend to the matter, the Supreme Court has named a lawyer to act for the French Consul.

Died in Alderman Welling's Saloon.

An unknown man, about thirty-five years old, died suddenly in the saloon of Alderman Joseph E. Welling, at 128 West Houston Street, last evening. The man entered the saloon during the afternoon and sat near a table. He had several drinks, and then went to sleep. When the bartender tried to wake him last night he found that the man was dead. A card of the Stephen Merritt Burial Company was found in a coat pocket, but a representative of that concern failed to identify the man, and his body was removed to the Morgue.

SIX HUNDRED RUSSIANS KILLED.

Tuesday's Earthquakes in the Tiflis District Were the Cause.

ST. PETERSBURG, Jan. 3.—The latest reports from Achalkalek, in the Government of Tiflis, show that 600 lives were lost during the earthquakes which visited that district on Monday.

Dispatches sent from St. Petersburg Tuesday stated that earthquakes had destroyed ten villages in the Tiflis district, but made no reference to loss of life.

AUSTRIA HAS DEFENSIVE PLANS.

Government Will Spend £20,000,000 in Increasing Army and Navy.

BUDAPEST, Jan. 3.—The Pesti-Hirlap says that the Austro-Hungarian Government contemplates spending £20,000,000 immediately for increasing the army and navy in consequence of the grave European situation.

The Government, according to the same authority, will also propose to the Austrian and Hungarian Parliaments an increase of the annual grant for defensive purposes.

TWENTY-TWO SAILORS DROWN.

Go Down with the British Steamer Borghese Off Cape Finisterre.

LONDON, Jan. 4.—A dispatch from Bristol announces that the British steamer Borghese of Glasgow foundered off Cape Finisterre last Friday during a hurricane. Twenty-two of the crew were drowned. The survivors, nine in number, have just arrived at Bristol.

The Borghese, which was owned by W. H. Raeburn of Glasgow, was last reported as arriving at Malta, Dec. 18, from Ergasteria. She was built at Sunderland in 1870, and was of 1,331 tons burden.

FRANCE AND THE FISHERIES.

Is Willing to Sell Her Rights If Great Britain Makes an Offer.

PARIS, Jan. 3.—The opinion has been expressed in official circles that the modus vivendi between Great Britain and France regarding Newfoundland will be extended for another year.

There seems to be no disposition upon the part of France to take advantage of Great Britain's uncomfortable situation in the Transvaal to force an unfair settlement of a matter not regarded as vital. France is in the position of being willing to sell her fishing rights, but she considers it proper for Great Britain to make the first proposition. Thus the matter stands in abeyance.

MR. CHOATE OPENS A LIBRARY.

The Ambassador Speaks of the Importance of Education.

LONDON, Jan. 3.—Joseph H. Choate, the United States Ambassador, and Mrs. Choate, accompanied by the Bishop of London, the Right Rev Mandell Creighton, and Lord George Hamilton, the Secretary of State for India, opened the Free Library at Acton, given by John Passmore Edwards, a well-known publisher and founder of many libraries and institutions, this afternoon. Mr. Choate, during the course of his remarks, referred to the importance of universal education, which the forefathers in America made the cornerstone of their whole political and social structure.

He added that in the United States free schools and public libraries went hand in hand, and though the people of England and the United States differed in many things they certainly agreed on the importance of education, "which formed a perpetual bond of sympathy between all who read English books and speak the English tongue."

During Mr. Choate's address an infant chanced to cry out, and the Ambassador turned to the Bishop of London and said:

"No one knows better than your Lordship that out of the mouths of babes and sucklings cometh forth wisdom." The audience laughed heartily.

The Bishop and Lord George Hamilton followed, briefly expressing their thanks for Mr. Choate's address. Lord Hamilton said he desired the consummation of Carlyle's idea that Great Britain and the United States should become one nation. This result, in his opinion, would not be accomplished through diplomatic negotiations, but by the two nations combining to promote the cause of freedom and humanity throughout the world.

London papers, commenting upon Mr. Choate's speech, admit that education in the common schools of England is not so far forward as in the United States. Several journals characterize the circulating school library idea as novel and interesting.

DINNER TO J. I. RAYMOND.

President of A. A. Vantine & Co. the Guest of His Employes.

A testimonial dinner was given to James I. Raymond, President of A. A. Vantine & Co., this city, by his managers and representatives, at the Hotel Manhattan last evening. The affair was in honor of Mr. Raymond's fiftieth birthday and to commemorate his twenty-five years' interest with A. A. Vantine & Co.

The chief feature of the evening was the presentation of a set of engrossed resolutions to Mr. Raymond by the presiding officer on behalf of the Vantine managers and representatives present. Mr. Raymond made a short speech of acceptance in a happy vein, and the diners responded to a number of toasts.

The following were present: H. G. Hocke, A. Herstein, T. S. Holbrook, A. B. Kutscher, F. C. Seitz, W. Briggs, H. G. Warner, Frank McCauley, A. E. Woodruff, L. W. Freeman, D. L. Solomon, J. D. Hurlbutt, M. Liebman, E. L. Dunne, J. H. Holman, P. H. Piaget, W. Lorenzer, I. E. Raymond, F. B. Smith, N. M. Friedman, W. L. Crow.

Arthur Ferraris's Commission.

The Hungarian portrait painter, Arthur Ferraris, at present in this city, has just been notified by the Chamber of Commerce of Hamburg that the Emperor of Germany has designated him to paint the life-size picture of himself, which the Chamber of Commerce will present to the Hamburg-American Line for the saloon of the new twin-screw express steamer Deutschland, about to be launched. Mr. Ferraris arrived here about six weeks ago, having been commissioned by the wife of the French Ambassador in Vienna, the Marquis de Reversaux, to paint her mother, Mrs. Storey of Washington. During his stay here he has taken a studio at Kurtz's gallery, in Twenty-third Street, and has painted several well-known New Yorkers, among them Mrs. John A. Stewart and Miss Passavant. His latest portrait is that of Mrs. Emil L. Boas, wife of the General Manager of the Hamburg-American Line. This painting, one of the best examples of Mr. Ferraris's art, is at present on exhibition at the Schaus Art Gallery, at Fifth Avenue and Twenty-sixth Street. Among the many celebrities whom Mr. Ferraris has painted in Europe are the German Emperor, whose portrait he has painted five times, and the Austrian Emperor, whom he painted twice.

Father McLoughlin to Lecture.

The Rev. Thomas P. McLoughlin, pastor of the Church of the Transfiguration of Mott Street, will deliver a musical lecture on the melodies and songs of Ireland at Chickering Hall next Thursday evening, for the benefit of the Irish National Cathedral at Armagh. A quartet and chorus will illustrate the lecture.

Brazilian Naval Affairs.

RIO JANEIRO, Jan. 3.—Admiral Wandenkolk has been named Chief of Staff of the Navy, in place of Admiral Barreto, who has resigned. Other changes have been made. The ironclad Riachuelo, the cruiser Barroso, and the torpedo boats Tamovo and Tamandare are getting ready to accompany President Campos Salles to the Argentine Republic in March.

Germany's Trade With America.

BERLIN, Jan. 3.—The annual report of the Bremen Chamber of Commerce comments upon the growth of trade with the United States, expressing the opinion that this will be still greater in consequence of currency reform. It strongly favors the proposed canal between the Rhine and the Elbe.

Brazil Increases Import Tax.

RIO JANEIRO, Jan. 3.—The Government has resolved to impose an additional tax of 10 per cent. on imports from Austria and Portugal, and 30 per cent. on imports from France and Italy, to take effect March 1. Several of the foreign Ministers have protested against the differential duties.

German Editor Sent to Prison.

BERLIN, Jan. 3.—Sigmar Mohring, editor of the comic paper Ulk, has been sentenced to six months' imprisonment for insulting the Catholic Church in a poem entitled "The Cowardly Act of Rennes."

WHAT IS DOING IN SOCIETY.

The weakening cold wave made it more attractive outdoors yesterday than it has been for some ten days past, and the avenue was quite gay at late morning and early afternoon with people driving and walking. As there was little going on, many women stopped on their way from the few "at homes" of the day to take afternoon tea at the Waldorf, Sherry's, and Delmonico's. The evening brought the best Wednesday night audience the Metropolitan has yet seen this season, as there was a universal desire to hear "Aida" with the new cast. The Wednesday cotillion was danced last evening at Delmonico's. Mr. Manierre and Miss Welling were married at Calvary Church at noon, and Mrs. Pratt's afternoon dancing class held its fifth meeting at Sherry's. The St. Paul School Alumni met at the Medico-Legal Society Building, in West Forty-third Street, in the evening, and there were two or three luncheons and one coming-out reception. This was the record of the day—not a very long one for midweek in the first week of the new year.

To-day will bring the second meeting of the Thursday Evening Club at the residence of Mrs. William H. Draper, 271 Madison Avenue, and the second meeting of the Bachelors' and Spinsters' dances at Delmonico's. Mrs. Richard S. Dana will give a dinner at her residence, 1,045 Fifth Avenue, this evening, and Mr. and Mrs. Robert Ralston Crosby of 105 East Thirtieth Street will give a card party in honor of Miss Sylvie Dalton.

The second Wednesday Cotillion took place last evening at Delmonico's. The guests began to arrive at 9 P. M., and were received by the patronesses, Mrs. Algernon S. Sullivan, Mrs. Oliver Livingston Jones, and Mrs. John Burling Lawrence. The cotillion was started in the large ballroom about 9:30 P. M. It was led by Mr. Thomas Coleston Kinney of Virginia, dancing with Miss Louise Livingston Jones of this city. Supper was served at the conclusion of the cotillion in the smaller ballroom. Among the dancers were Miss Heloise Beeckman, Miss Jeanne B. Duncan, Miss Eva Douglas Weir, Miss Van Rostrand, Miss Marie Vernon Brown, Mrs. George Gordon Battle, Miss Jeanne Brown, Miss Lucy Carter Byrd, Miss Pauline M. Cary, Miss Caskin, Miss Florence Flower of New Orleans, Miss Marie Douglass, Miss Carolyn Eidlitz, Mrs. Oga Z. Gossler, Mrs. Robert R. Lee Lewis, Miss Estelle Hartshorn, Miss E. Hartshorn, Miss Ruth Hoe, Mrs. James S. Hill, Miss Matilda Janeway, Miss Louise Jackson, Miss Elizabeth F. Johnson, Miss Mabel Carrington King, Miss Mary Newbold Lawrence, Miss Edith Root, Miss Alberta Sturgis, Miss Helene Trenholm, Miss Edith B. Tilghman, Miss Anne Tracy Turner, Miss Adelina Tower, Miss Florence Ward, Miss Mary Wagstaff, and Messrs. George H. Sullivan, Heth Lorton, James L. Johnson, Harry C. Adams, and Arthur Gouverneur Morris.

The wedding of Mr. Richard Trimble and Miss Cora Randolph, daughter of Mr. Edmund C. Randolph, and a sister of Mrs Francis Egerton Webb, will be celebrated at Christ Episcopal Church, Riverdale-on-the-Hudson, the last week in this month. Mr. James A. G. Beales and Miss Margaret Towle will be married at the residence of the bride's mother in this city on Feb. 14, and the wedding of Mr. Eugene Lentilhon and Miss Florence Bergh-Brown will take place at the Church of the Heavenly Rest in this city on Shrove Tuesday, Feb. 27.

The engagements are announced of Mr. James M. Brown, son of Mr. Waldron Post Brown, and a nephew of Mrs. Henry Barclay, his mother having been Miss Wright of Baltimore, and Miss Emily Cooper of Shrewsbury, N. J., and of Mr. Thomas Wilson, Lloyd, a brother of Robert Mac Alister Lloyd, with Miss Jeanette Belknap, and Miss Elizabeth W. Jewett, daughter of the late Rev. Dr. Edward Jewett. The engagement has been announced in Washington of Mr. W. Woodville Rockhill of that city and Miss Edith Howell Perkins, daughter of Mr. J. D. Perkins of Litchfield, Conn.

The Kaiser Wilhelm der Grosse, which sails for Southampton, Cherbourg, and Bremen to-day, has booked among other passengers Baron Charles Alliotti, Secretary of the Italian Embassy at Washington; Mr. and Mrs. Ward Clement, Mrs. P. E. Dodge, Mr. and Mrs. Francis E. Drake, A. Butler Duncan, William Guggenheim, Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin Guggenheim, (Miss Florette Seligman,) Miss Hope G. Lawrence, Senhor Mauvel de Olivira Lima, Secretary of the Brazilian Legation at Washington, and Senhora M. de O. Lima; Dennis McCarthy of Syracuse, Chevalier de Wousters d'Oplinter of Belgium, Mr. and Mrs. Samuel J. Seligman and James Seligman, G. W. Sheldon, Capt. W. H. Wheeler, and W. De Lancey Ward of Paris and New York, a brother of Mrs. Luther Kountze. La Normandie, sailing to-day for Havre, has booked among other passengers J. T. Wolf and Miss J. Whitney.

The continued cold has at last brought skating, and the Central Park lakes were crowded yesterday. Society journeyed to Van Cortlandt Park, or to Tuxedo, Westchester, and Hempstead for its skating, and there were many merry parties, which left town for these places yesterday morning. Miss Alta Rockefeller has had the side yard of her father's house, in West Fifty-fourth Street, made into a skating pond. The pond extends through the side yard and in the rear, and occupies 10,000 square feet of land.

Mrs. Theron G. Strong of 29 East Sixty-fifth Street will give a small dance for her niece, Miss Helen Cornelia Merrill, a débutante of this season, on Friday evening. On the same evening Mrs. Ashbel P. Fitch of 16 East Eightieth Street will give a large dance for young people. To-night Mrs. William T. Schley gives a dance for very young people at her residence, 25 West Fifty-second Street, and Dr. L. Duncan Butler and Mrs. Butler of 4 East Thirty-seventh Street also give a dance this evening. On Saturday Mrs. Bayard Dominick of 22 West Fifty-first Street will give a card party for her young nephews, the Messrs. Bend:ct. Her guests are to be of the very young set.

The coming-out receptions are not yet over. Mrs. Joseph T. Low of 57 West Fifty-second Street gave a coming-out tea yesterday, and will give a second on Jan. 10 for her daughter, Miss Laura Low. At yesterday's affair Miss Low and several of this season's débutantes assisted. Mrs. Herman Ellis of 50 West Fifty-sixth Street will give to-day a tea for her daughter, Miss Ellis.

Although it doubtless seems to the débutantes and the average society devotee that this first week of the new year is exceptionally gay, and although under the changed conditions of New York society it certainly brings many more small affairs, limited to a few guests, than the average Winter season of the past decade, it is not a gay week as compared with its predecessor of last year. A year ago to-day Miss Callender and Miss De Forest gave the first of two large and notable musicales at their apartment, and a year ago Friday Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt, Sr., gave one of the largest and most beautiful balls that has ever taken place in New York. Mrs. George Crocker gave a large musicale and reception at the Astoria to introduce her second daughter, Miss Emma Rutherford, on Jan. 5, 1899; the first Philadelphia Assembly was danced on the evening of Jan. 6, 1899, and on the same evening in this city there took place Miss Delafield's Delmonico ball for her niece, Miss Mary Delafield, and across the avenue, at Sherry's, the subscription cotillion organized by Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt, Jr., Mrs. Orme Wilson, Mrs. Francis K. Pendleton, Mrs. W. Starr Miller, and Mrs. Ogden Mills. Mrs. Pierre Lorillard, Sr., gave a reception which marked her reentrée to New York society at her Washington Square residence on the afternoon of Jan. 4, and on the same evening Mr. William K. Vanderbilt, Sr., gave a supper dance at his Fifth Avenue residence for his son, Mr. W. K. Vanderbilt, Jr., and Miss Virginia Fair, whose engagement had then just been announced. Those writers on social topics and others who persist in calling the present season "the gayest known in New York for years" may peruse this glance at the retrospect with profit to themselves and their readers and hearers.

Philadelphia is interested in a reported engagement between one of its wealthiest widows and a German baron. The names are not given, but it is quite evident who is meant. The widow is said to be one of large means within the limit of that age which Balzac so fascinatingly portrays in "A Woman of Thirty." "Among her friends," says a Philadelphia authority, "it has always been a sort of mystery why she has remained so long a widow. She is handsome and brilliant, and has a fine house, in which she dispenses generous hospitality to those whom she fancies. It is a beautiful place, filled with a superb collection of paintings, which was begun by her late husband, and has been yearly added to by herself, for she, too, is a judge of pictures, whose acumen has been complimented by the Parisian dealers and dilettanti. Only this year she brought over with her a magnificent Greuze, which has been vastly admired by Philadelphia collectors. It is said that she was offered $40,000 by one collector for this canvas. The man in the case is a German baron, having $30,000 a year, and vast and prolific coal mines. He belongs to one of the oldest families in Germany, and is to come to Philadelphia within the month. His arrival will be the excuse for several splendid social affairs in his honor. The wedding will take place in Venice, at the palazzo of a certain Princess who is an intimate friend of the lady. The house in Philadelphia is on North Broad Street, and will be kept open a part of the year, as the future Baroness and her husband will be in the Quaker City a few months each season.

From late Indian letters, Lady Curzon, who had returned from an expedition with Lord Curzon through a part of India to Simla, had left that place and had reached Calcutta on the 18th. She and the Viceroy will hold an official Drawing Room the first week in January, and there will also be two levees. The Misses Leiter have announced their departure from Calcutta for the second week in January, after which they leave for the West, stopping, as has already been announced, at Cairo.

Mrs. Cornwallis West has taken charge of Miss Jean Langtry, the daughter of Mrs. Hugo de Bathe, who is shortly to be here on a theatrical tour. Mrs. Cornwallis West is to chaperone Miss Langtry in English society and to present her at Court at one of the Spring Drawing Rooms. Mrs. Cornwallis West and her protégée and Miss West are at the Cornwallis West place in Wales. Miss Langtry came up to London to bid her mother farewell.

The large holiday party at Chatsworth, the magnificent seat of the Duke and the Duchess of Devonshire, was given up at the last moment on account of the news of the condition of Lady Alice Montagu, the granddaughter of the Duchess, at Davos Platz. There was instead only a small family gathering.

A BALL FOR MISS PAUL.

Mr. and Mrs. Alexander Van Rensselaer Entertain at Philadelphia.

Special to The New York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, Jan. 3.—A ball given by Mr. and Mrs. Alexander Van Rensselaer in honor of their niece, Miss Ellen Drexel Paul, took place at Horticultural Hall here this evening. The grand stairway leading to the ballroom was profusely decorated with the choicest flowers, and the landing was banked with palm, azaleas, and American Beauty roses. Mr. and Mrs. Van Rensselaer received their guests at the head of the grand stairway, and were assisted in receiving by Mrs. John R. Drexel of New York, Mrs. George W. C. Drexel, Miss Ellen Drexel Paul, and Mrs. Van Rensselaer's daughter, Miss Minnie Fell.

The ballroom was arranged to resemble an Italian garden of the sixteenth century. In the niches were placed statues, and all around the hall were basins representing fountains filled with flowers. The stage of the hall was a terrace of flowers, with numberless electric lights shining through. Supper was served at 1 o'clock, and the cotillion began at 2 o'clock A. M. It was led by Robert Cassatt, to whom Miss Fell is engaged, and Sidney Keith. The favors were extremely handsome, Mrs. Van Rensselaer having been engaged in collecting them for some months. A large number of guests came from New York, also a number from Washington, including several members of the Diplomatic Corps.

A DAY'S WEDDINGS.

Manierre—Welling.

Charles Edward Manierre and Miss Elizabeth Hunt Welling, a daughter of the late Charles H. Welling, were married at noon yesterday in Calvary Church, Fourth Avenue and Twenty-first Street. The Rev. J. Lewis Parks, rector of the church, performed the ceremony. The bride, who entered on the arm of her brother, W. Brenton Welling, wore a gown of ivory white satin, and her veil was the one worn by her mother on her wedding day. The maid of honor was Miss Mary H. Welling, the bride's sister, who wore a gown of white and pink, trimmed with pink ribbons, and carried a bouquet of pink roses. There were no bridesmaids. Mr. Manierre's best man was Mr. George H. Sullivan, and the ushers were the Messrs. Howard E. White, Edward P. Casey, James R. Burnet, Francis E. Ward, William de F. Thomson, and Richard W. G. Welling, a brother of the bride. Mr. W. C. Macfarlane, organist of All Souls' Church, rendered selections from Wagner and the wedding march from "Tannhäuser." The wedding was followed by a small breakfast at the home of the bride, 46 Park Avenue, to which were invited only relatives and intimate friends.

Smith—Doughty.

Miss Alla Halsyone Doughty, daughter of Mrs. Alla Doughty of 250 West Fifty-seventh Street, was married yesterday afternoon to Chandler Smith of 71 Mount Hope Place, in St. George's Church, Stuyvesant Place. The Rev. Thomas R. Harris, Secretary of the Episcopal Diocese, performed the ceremony. The bridegroom is a broker and the grandson of Gen. Burbeck, who was at one time connected with the West Point Military Academy. The bride was dressed in a gown of peau de soie, with a full court train with flounces of duchesse lace. She carried a shower bouquet of lillies of the valley and orchids. The wedding was followed by a reception at the house of the bride's mother, which the immediate relatives of the bride and bridegroom attended.

Hurst—Maxwell.

Much surprise was caused in the clubs last evening by the news of the wedding at Grace Church chantry in the afternoon of Mr. Francis W. J. Hurst and Miss Alice Gilbert Maxwell. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Dr. Huntington. Mr. Hurst has been a well-known figure in the business and club worlds of New York for many years. He was for a long period agent of the old National Steamship Line in this city. He is perhaps better known as the Treasurer of the New York Yacht Club, which post he has held for many years. Mr. Hurst is an Englishman by birth. He has been a widower for some years, his wife having been Miss Jaffray, a daughter of the late E. S. Jaffray. His daughter, Miss Florence Jaffray, married Mr. J. Borden Harriman. Mr. Hurst is a member of the Union and Larchmont Yacht Clubs.

Patterson—Learned.

ALBANY, Jan. 3.—The marriage of Miss Grace Hallam Learned, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William L. Learned, to Brig. Gen. John Henry Patterson, United States Army, took place at the Learned residence, 928 State Street, at 6:30 o'clock this evening. The Rev. J. Walter Sylvester, pastor of the Second Presbyterian Church, performed the ceremony. The bride had no attendants. Gen. Patterson was dressed in the full uniform of his rank. The ushers were Learned Peltz and John T. Norton, Jr. The Governor and Mrs. Roosevelt, Justice and Mrs. Patterson of New York, and a number of military men were present.

Hart—O'Reilly.

Special to The New York Times.

ORANGE, N. J., Jan. 3.—Miss Mary O'Reilly, daughter of Frank C. O'Reilly, the wealthy contractor of this city, and James A. Hart of Staten Island were married this morning in St. John's Roman Catholic Church. The wedding was one of the largest ever solemnized in Orange. The bride was attended by her sister, Miss Helen O'Reilly, as maid of honor, and six bridesmaids. Thomas Braniff of Staten Island was best man. In honor of the event the bride's father provided dinners for the inmates of the Orange Orphan Home, St. Mary's Orphan Asylum of South Orange, and the Orange Creche.

DRAMATIC AND MUSICAL.

JACOB LITT'S NEW PLAN.

Has Made Arrangements to Form a Permanent Organization for Melodrama.

Jacob Litt, manager of the Broadway Theatre, has made arrangements to form an extensive organization to be known as the Broadway Stock Company, which will produce on a very elaborate scale melodramatic plays. It is Mr. Litt's present plan to retain this company at his theatre for a period of six months, after which the entire company and its productions will be transferred to his Chicago theatre, McVicker's, for the remaining part of the season, four or possibly five months.

The plan, Mr. Litt said, has been under consideration for a long time, and would have been in operation this season had it not been for the undoubted success the present play in this house, "Ben-Hur," has met with, and which will without doubt continue for at least one year. A contract has been entered into with Cecil Raleigh, the English playwright, to furnish one melo drama a year, and in conjunction with this arrangement an effort was made to bring about a deal with the management of the Drury Lane Theatre, in England, to produce their melo dramas in this country on the same plan that existed between the late Augustin Daly and the English people. But their effort to secure enormous royalties from Mr. Litt by advancing their figures from 15 to 35 per cent. caused the deal to fall through.

Joseph Kilgore has been engaged to play the leading roles in the productions, and other prominent actors and actresses are under consideration.

"AIDA" AT THE OPERA.

Mme. Eames Makes Her First Appearance in the Title Role.

Verdi lying dangerously ill, the work which the general public has elected to regard as his masterwork, "Aida," received its first performance at the Metropolitan Opera House last night. In spite of the theory held by many operatic managers that "Aida" is not a drawing work there was a very large and brilliant audience. Whether this was to be attributed wholly to the opera is of course to be doubted, for the cast was one which stimulated curiosity and seemed to promise an evening of many delights. But those who cannot sun their souls in the tropical glory of this music will find little to melt them in this work.

As presented last night the dusky heroine of Verdi's opera was an enchantment to the eye, if not to the dramatic sensibilities. Mme. Emma Eames made her first appearance in the rôle, and justified the love of Radames a dozen times over. She was garbed in the most artistic dresses which have been worn in the part, and in these it was not difficult to see the fine hand of her artist husband, Mr. Julian Story. She was a ravishingly beautiful picture, and fulfilled the spectacular requirements of the part to perfection. If she did not sing the music with all the dramatic power which it requires, this may have been due to her natural nervousness and uncertainty about the part. But one thing can be said of her singing now, and it is that she sang the music fluently and with an opulent loveliness of tone. It is to be expected that her impersonation will gain in freedom with repetition, though it is hardly likely that it will soon acquire a satisfying measure of dramatic style in its vocal portion. Yet even as it was, Mme. Eames may astonish us. Her work this season shows great sincerity and laudable ambition, and when we recall the Sieglinde she gave us last year, we may hope that her Aida will show large gains in authority later in the season.

The Radames last night was M. Alvarez, who at last had an opportunity to give full play to his robustious style. The opportunity did not, of course, come in "Celeste Aida," which he sang most uncertainly. In the scene of the consecration he was better, and in the Nile scene his vigorous declamatory work was a potent factor in arousing the enthusiasm which followed the fall of the curtain. It was the greatest display of enthusiasm made in the Opera House this season, and if M. Alvarez can be credited with a fair share in its production, let us hasten to please his friends. But, nevertheless, it is a pity that any public should bruise its palms in approval of singing so vicious in method and false in the pitch. If it be dramatic to sing blatant open tones with a big tremolo and a trille flat, then M. Alvarez has only one rival in dramatic singing.

Signor Scotti was a picturesque Amonasro. His acting and singing were according to the traditions, and were thoroughly good. Signor Scotti continues to justify the expectation here recorded after his first appearance that he would prove to be the "perfection of the conventional. He is not an innovator, and he displays no original force, but he is always, thus far, admirable. The other members of the cast last night were old friends. There is nothing new to be said in this last year of the nineteenth century with proper apologies to his Imperial Majesty of Germany) about the Amneris of Mme. Mantelli, the King of Mr. Pringle, or the Ramfis of the benignant M. Plançon. It may not be amiss, however, to call attention once more to the fact that Mme. Mantelli's Amneris is a pretty considerable figure, and she makes it rather difficult for any Aida to dominate while she is on the stage. The orchestra played well last night, and Signor Mancinelli conducted with skill. The pageantry showed an improvement over that of last year, the ballet was better, and there were six Egyptian trumpets vigorously blown.

Changes in Matinee Casts.

Changes in the casts were made at two of the matinee performances yesterday. At Wallack's Theatre Miss Helen Redmond was forced to give way to her understudy, Miss May Emmons, who sang the role of Constance in "The Amber." Miss Redmond is suffering from a severe sore throat, but will probably be able to make her appearance to-night. At the Fifth Avenue Theatre Miss Adele Ritchie retired from the cast for a brief rest, allowing Miss Clara Palmer to appear in the role of Beatrice Cenome in "Three Little Lambs." Miss Ritchie resumed her role at the evening performance.

Wax Figures in "Broadway to Tokio."

Arrangements have been made between H. B. Sire of the New York Theatre, and R. G. Hallowman, Manager of the Eden Musee, whereby a scene reproducing the main salon of the Musee in minute detail, is to be given in the new production, "Broadway to Tokio," which is to be presented for the first time Monday, Jan. 15. Each group of the wax exhibits will be shown in this scene, including the Columbus group, the group showing the advance of civilization, and the group of celebrities, President McKinley, Oom Paul, Pope Leo, William Jennings Bryan, and the Rulers of the World.

"Surprise of Love" Rehearsals.

Rehearsals of "The Surprise of Love," the comedy which is to follow Miss Annie Russell at the Lyceum Theatre on Jan. 22, were begun yesterday. The cast will include Miss Elsie De Wolfe, H. Reeves-Smith, Eric Hope, Sidney Herbert, Clayton White, Charles Bowser, Frank Lee Short, Charles McCartney, Miss Olive May, Miss Margaret Robinson, Miss Helen Keating, and Miss Ellen Gall.

"A Basso Porto" at the American.

"Fortunio's Song; or, The Magic Melody," an operetta by Offenbach, will be presented for the first time in English at the American Theatre on Jan. 22. It will be employed as a curtain raiser for Spinelli's lyric tragedy, "A Basso Porto," ("At the Lower Harbor,") which will be given for the first time in this city on the above date.

Minnie Seligman Wants a Divorce.

ST. LOUIS, Jan. 3.—Minnie Seligman Cutting, the well-known actress, to-day, through her attorney, ex-Gov. Johnston, filed suit in the Circuit Court for divorce from her husband, Robert Cutting. She alleges desertion. The couple were married July 28, 1892, at Monmouth Beach, N. J. They separated Oct. 18, 1898, and Mrs. Cutting alleges that her husband has since remained away from her.

DEATH LIST OF A DAY.

Mrs. Jane Verner Mitchel.

Mrs. Jane Verner Mitchel, widow of John Mitchel, the Irish patriot and Confederate leader, died on Sunday at her residence in Bedford Park. Her husband died in Ireland nearly a quarter of a century ago. Mrs. Mitchel was the daughter of Sir William Verner, an English baronet. John Mitchel was the son of a clergyman of County Derry. He was called to the bar after being graduated at Trinity College, Dublin, afterward becoming the chief writer for The Irish Nation. Early in 1848 he founded the United Irishman, and strongly advocated the absolute independence of Ireland. He was later arrested and banished. Subsequently he escaped to this country, and during the civil war edited The Richmond Enquirer.

TO AMEND CURRENCY BILL

Important Changes in the Senate Measure Proposed.

REISSUE OF REDEEMED NOTES

Plan Is Also Offered to Call in the Government 4s and 5s and to Replace Them with 2 Per Cent. Bonds.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 3.—Senator Aldrich gave notice in the Senate to-day that he would call the financial bill up at 2 o'clock to-morrow. The Republican members of the Finance Committee authorized Senator Aldrich to present amendments to the bill which he offered to-day. The most important relate to the greenbacks, and are as follows:

After the word "authority," on line 5, page 12, strike out remainder of section and insert "And the gold coin received from the sale of said bonds shall first be covered into the general fund of the Treasury and then exchanged, in the manner hereinbefore provided, for an equal amount of the notes redeemed and held for exchange, and the United States notes exchanged in accordance with the provisions of this section shall, when covered into the Treasury, be reissued as now provided by law, and the gold coin in the reserve fund, together with the redeemed notes held for use as provided in this section, shall at no time exceed the maximum sum of $150,000,000."

All of Section 6 is eliminated, and the following new section substituted:

Section 6. That the Secretary of the Treasury is hereby authorized to receive at the Treasury any of the outstanding bonds of the United States bearing interest at 5 per cent. per annum, payable Feb. 1, 1904, and any bonds of the United States bearing interest at the rate of 4 per cent. per annum, payable July 1, 1907, and any bonds of the United States bearing interest at 3 per cent. per annum, payable Aug. 1, 1908, and to issue in exchange therefor an equal amount of coupon or registered bonds of the United States in such form as he may prescribe, in denominations of $50 or any multiple thereof, bearing interest at the rate of 2 per cent. per annum, payable quarterly, such bonds to be payable at the pleasure of the United States after thirty years from the date of their issue, and said bonds to be payable, principal and interest, in gold coin of the present standard value, and to be exempt from the payment of all taxes or duties of the United States as well as from taxation in any form by or under State, municipal, or local authority; provided that such outstanding bonds may be received in exchange at a valuation not greater than their present worth to yield an income of 2½ per cent. per annum, and in consideration of the reduction of interest effected, the Secretary of the Treasury is authorized to pay to the holders of such outstanding bonds surrendered for exchange, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, a sum not greater than the difference between their present worth, computed as aforesaid, and their par value, and the payments to be made hereunder shall be held to be payments on account of the sinking fund created by Section 3694 of the Revised Statutes; and provided, further, that the 2 per cent. bonds to be issued under the provisions of this act shall be issued at not less than par, and they shall be numbered consecutively in the order of their issue, and when payment is made the last numbers issued shall be first paid, and this order shall be followed until all the bonds are paid; and whenever any of the outstanding bonds are called for payment, interest thereon shall cease three months after such call

Another amendment is to the second section of the bill, where it provides for maintaining the gold reserve.

The bill as reported made it the duty of the Secretary of the Treasury to maintain the gold reserve at $100,000,000 by the sale of bonds. The amendment provides that when the reserve falls below that amount it shall be his duty to restore it to the maximum of $150,000,000.

It is stated by members of the committee that the amendments are for the purpose of making more clear the intention of the bill and to leave no question as to the construction of the law when enacted.

CHANDLER FOR BIMETALLISM.

New Hampshire Senator Offers Amendment to the Currency Bill.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 3.—Senator Chandler of New Hampshire to-day offered an amendment to the Financial bill, adding two new sections, as follows:

"Section 9. That, in accordance with the act of Nov. 1, 1893, which repeals a part of the act of July 14, 1890, it is hereby reaffirmed and declared to be the existing policy of the United States to continue the use of both gold and silver as standard money, and to coin both gold and silver into money of equal intrinsic and exchangeable value; such equality to be secured through international agreement or by such safeguards of legislation as will insure the maintenance of the parity in value of the coins of the two metals and the equal power of every dollar at all times in the markets and in the payments of debts; and it is further declared that the efforts of the Government should be steadily directed to the establishment of such a safe system of bimetallism as will maintain at all times the equal power of every dollar coined or issued by the United States in the markets and in the payment of debts.

"Section 10. That the provisions of the act of March 3, 1897, authorizing the President to appoint Commissioners to any international conference called by the United States or any other country with a view to securing by international agreement a fixity of relative value between gold and silver as money by means of a common ratio between these metals, with free mintage at such ratio, be, and the same are hereby, re-enacted and continued in force."

CLASH OVER THE PHILIPPINES.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 3.—In the Senate to-day Mr. Pettigrew, (Silver, S. D.,) offered the following resolution:

Resolved, That the Secretary of War be and he is hereby directed to inform the Senate whether Gen. Torres, one of the officers of the Philippine army, came to Gen. Otis with a flag of truce on Feb. 5, 1899, the day after the fighting commenced between our forces and those of Aguinaldo, and stated to Gen. Otis that Aguinaldo declared that fighting had been begun accidentally and was not authorized by Aguinaldo, and that Aguinaldo wished to have it stopped, and that to bring about a conclusion of hostilities he proposed the establishment of a neutral zone between the two armies of a width that would be agreeable to Gen. Otis, so that during the peace negotiations there might be no further danger of conflict between the two armies, and whether Gen. Otis replied that fighting having once begun must go on to the grim end. Was Gen. Otis directed by the Secretary of War to make such answer? Did Gen. Otis telegraph the Secretary of War on Feb. 9, 1899, as follows: "Aguinaldo now applies for a cessation of hostilities and conference; have declined to answer"? And did Gen. Otis afterward reply that he was directed by the Secretary of War, and what answer, if any, did he or the Secretary of War make to the application to cease fighting?

Objection was made to immediate consideration of the resolution, and it went over until to-morrow. This disposition of the resolution apparently was distasteful to Mr. Hoar, (Rep., Mass.,) and a little later, when Mr. Aldrich, Chairman of the Finance Committee, gave notice that he would call up the financial bill to-morrow after the disposal of routine morning business, Mr. Hoar gave expression to his feelings. He objected to the notice given by Mr. Aldrich.

"If," said Mr. Hoar, "there is to be an absolute suppression of all requests for information concerning the war with the Filipinos, I shall object to the taking up of other matters during the morning hour when such resolutions are pending."

Hoar called attention to the fact that four Senators had risen upon the presentation of the Pettigrew resolution to object to consideration. This was done in the face of the fact that it was the uniform custom of the Senate to allow resolutions of inquiry to go through without obstruction. He wanted to know if this policy was to be continued.

The statement brought Messrs. Aldrich, Chandler, and Hawley to their feet. Mr. Aldrich disclaimed any intention of suppressing information concerning military matters and withdrew the notice to take up the financial bill "after the consideration of routine morning business," fixing the time definitely at 2 o'clock.

Messrs. Hawley and Chandler both explained that the suggestions concerning the Pettigrew resolution had only covered the point of postponement until to-morrow, which they asserted was not out of the ordinary.

WOULD FREE THE FILIPINOS.

Congressman McRae Offers a Resolution in the House.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 3.—Representative McRae of Arkansas to-day introduced the following joint resolution:

"Be it, Resolved, &c., That the United States hereby declare that their purpose in acquiring jurisdiction and control over the Philippine Islands was and is to secure to the inhabitants thereof, as soon as practicable after the suppression of the existing rebellion therein, a free, independent, stable government, republican in form, and that the United States guarantee to said inhabitants protection against all foreign invasion."

SENATORS BECOMING RESTIVE.

Belief Growing that the Administration Is Seeking to Suppress Information.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 3.—Senators opposed to the Administration are becoming extremely restive and suspicious under the clocklike monotony with which all their resolutions of inquiry are disposed of. They suspect that the suppression of all requests for information has been adopted as a part of the Administration policy, and that the various cases in which information has been denied are simply parts of a general plan by which the opposition is to have no chance to supply itself with ammunition. As long as resolutions asking for information about the Philippine war were the only ones disposed of in this way the anti-expansionists were able to accept Senator Chandler's explanation that if such resolutions were adopted the fact would be immediately "cabled to Manila" for the aid and comfort of Aguinaldo. But the suppression of resolutions asking that the Senate be informed on other topics has created suspicion, and there is likely to be a fight on the question if the anti-expansionists find their suspicions confirmed.

The first symptom of it was the irascible speech to-day by Senator Hoar, in which he declared that such a refusal of information had never been known before, that it was the custom of the Senate to let such resolutions go through, and that it seemed to be the purpose of the expansionists to "absolutely suppress" all information on the war.

Most of the resolutions of inquiry have been introduced by Senator Pettigrew, and it is due to the fact that the expansionist Senators regard Mr. Pettigrew as a nuisance that the suppression of his resolutions did not at first arouse suspicion. On Dec. 12 Mr. Pettigrew introduced a resolution asking that the Senate be informed whether the flag of the Philippine Republic had ever been recognized by any of our officers, whether Spanish prisoners had ever been delivered to the Filipinos, and whether a Philippine vessel accompanied the Concord and the Raleigh to Subig Bay. Some Spaniards had made these charges, alleging that Capt. Coghlan had promised that if they would surrender they would not be turned over to the Filipinos, and that this promise was broken. Senator Chandler objected to the consideration of the resolution.

The day before Senator Pettigrew had introduced a resolution asking the Secretary of War for information concerning the charges made against Gen. Merriam in connection with the labor troubles in Idaho. Senator Chandler had also objected to this. A few days later a resolution offered by Pettigrew, asking that the Secretary of War forward to the Senate the full report of the commission appointed to investigate the conduct of the Spanish war, slipped through. When this was discovered Senator Hawley moved to reconsider it. At this Pettigrew became restive, and insinuated that the move "was part of a studied policy to suppress information." The Republican leaders hastened to deny this. Senator Allison saying that he thought the resolution a proper one. It was finally passed, with an amendment placing the giving of the information in the President's discretion.

Meanwhile Pettigrew's Philippine resolution had come up and been tabled. To-day's developments only tended to increase the belief in the existence of a policy of suppression.

Bills Offered in the Senate.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 3.—Following are the more important bills introduced in the Senate to-day:

By Mr. Ross, (Rep., Vt.,) regulating appointments to civil offices in the outlying dependencies. It provides for appointments to such places regardless of political affiliations and without sectional favoritism, and for removal only upon written charges. No examination is required for appointment.

By Mr. Lodge, (Rep., Mass.,) authorizing an investigation of the economic relations of the United States with China and the Orient generally by a commission to be appointed by the President, who is to fix its number and also the compensation of its members.

By Mr. Butler, (Pop. N. C.,) Constitutional amendment authorizing an income tax.

New Measures in the House.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 3.—Among the bills and resolutions introduced in the House to-day were the following:

By Mr. Cooney, (Dem., Mo.)—Joint resolution for a Constitutional amendment providing that "no new State, the territory of which is not contiguous to the United States, shall be admitted by the Congress into the Union."

By Mr. Snodgrass, (Dem., Tenn.)—A Constitutional amendment authorizing an income tax.

By Mr. Shafroth, (Silver, Col.)—Joint resolution proposing the return to Mexico of the cannon, flags, and banners captured during the Mexican war, with appropriate expression of friendship and good will."

By Mr. Bromwell, (Rep., Ohio.)—Joint resolution proposing the following amendment to the Constitution: "Congress shall have power to define trusts and to regulate, control, or prohibit the same within any State, Territory, district, or any other place subject to its jurisdiction."

By Mr. Grosvenor, (Rep., Ohio.)—Relating to navigation, including bills extending the laws of commerce and navigation to Hawaii and to Puerto Rico; giving to Cuban vessels favorable treatment in American ports; establishing lights on steam pilot vessels, and requiring a log entry of collisions.

By Mr. Gaines, (Dem., Tenn.)—Reducing the duty on paper used in printing newspapers.

By Mr. Lewis, (Dem., Ga.)—To repeal the stamp tax.

By Mr. Bell, (Silver, Col.)—To provide for interest on Government deposits.

Presidential Nominations.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 3.—The President to-day sent the following nominations to the Senate:

United States Consuls—THOMAS T. PRENTIS of Massachusetts, at Rouen, France; GEORGE L. DARTE of Pennsylvania, at Martinique, transferred to Patras, Greece; ALONZO C. YATES of Virginia, at Patras, transferred to Martinique.

Appraiser of Merchandise, District of Portland and Falmouth, Me.—JAMES E. HEWEY.

Collector of Customs, District of York, Me.—EDWARD H. BANKS.

CONGRESSIONAL NOTES.

The Senate Committee on Foreign Relations yesterday presented a report upon Senator Hoar's resolution in regard to claims of citizens of the United States against Spain. The committee presents a schedule of claims amounting to over a million dollars, and adds: "It is impracticable to state even approximately the amount actually due on these claims or to allege in view of the state of records of the State Department of that date that there may not be others than those mentioned." As to the remedy of the claimants, the committee expresses the opinion that the only present remedy is by diplomatic negotiation.

The Secretary of the Interior has sent to Congress an estimate of $641,105 for the expenses, surveys, &c., of the Commission to the Five Civilized Tribes, known as the Dawes Commission.

In the Senate yesterday Mr. Sewell gave notice that he would ask the Senate to consider resolutions in honor of the memory of Vice President Hobart Jan. 10.

SAVANNAH CONTRACT FRAUDS.

Examination of B. D. Greene and the Gaynors Begun.

The examination of Benjamin D. Greene, Col. John F. Gaynor, William T. Gaynor, and Edward Gaynor, charged with attempting to defraud the United States Government in conjunction with Capt. O. M. Carter, United States Army, while the latter was stationed at Savannah, Ga., was begun yesterday before United States Commissioner Shields. The Government offered evidence for the purpose of identifying the contractors that they may be taken to Savannah and placed on trial and then rested its case. The defense will begin its side of the case to-morrow afternoon.

Capt. Cassius M. Gillette, United States Engineer Corps, who succeeded Capt. Carter was placed on the stand for the purpose of identifying the contractors as the same men associated with Capt. Carter at Savannah. He was cross-examined by Mr. Rose with a view to showing that the engineer officer had very little to do with the awarding of the contracts. United States District Attorney Burnett objected to Mr. Rose's lengthy cross-examination, but Mr. Rose showed that he intends to fight the examination inch by inch, just as though the contractors were on trial.

Just prior to the opening of the hearing the mysterious woman who had made charges against Col. John F. Gaynor appeared in the corridors of the building, and renewed her charges against him. Col. Gaynor, who was present to appear at the examination, said that he did not know the woman.

Appropriation for the Blind.

Superintendent Blair of the Outdoor Poor Department announced yesterday morning that he wishes the names of all the destitute blind of the Boroughs of Manhattan and the Bronx sent to him as soon as possible, so that he may make arrangements for the distribution of the $30,000 appropriated for such persons in May. Each of the destitute blind get $50 a year in gold from the city, and about 600 apply for the sum.

ARMY OFFICERS ARE PROMOTED

Bates and Wheaton Major Generals of Volunteers, and Young, Ludlow, and MacArthur Regular Brigadiers.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 3.—The President to-day sent to the Senate the following nominations of army officers for promotion:

Brig. Gen. J. C. Bates to be Major General of Volunteers; Brig. Gen. Lloyd Wheaton, to be Major General of Volunteers, by brevet.

To be Brigadier Generals—Col. S. B. M. Young, Lieut. Col. Arthur MacArthur, and Lieut. Col. William Ludlow.

Also a number of other appointments and promotions in the regular and volunteer army.

John Coalter Bates was born in Missouri in 1842, and after attending Washington University at St. Louis, entered the army in 1861 as a Lieutenant of the Eleventh Infantry. He was on the staff of Gen. Meade from Gettysburg to the close of the war. He was made a Captain in 1863 and brevetted Major and Lieutenant Colonel. He was promoted Major in 1882, Lieutenant Colonel in 1886, and Colonel in 1892, with command of the Second Infantry. For thirty years he was stationed west of the Mississippi River, chiefly in the Indian country. He was President of the board which devised the present drill and firing regulations, and of the boards which adopted the Krag-Jorgensen rifle. He was made a Brigadier General of Volunteers at the outbreak of the Spanish-American war, and promoted a Major General of Volunteers during the Santiago campaign.

Lloyd Wheaton was born in Michigan in 1838. He served in the civil war, rising from First Sergeant to Colonel of the Illinois Eighth Volunteer Infantry. He became Captain in the United States Thirty-fourth Infantry in 1866, and in 1869 was assigned to the Twentieth Infantry. He was promoted Major in 1891, and Lieutenant Colonel of the Twenty-second Infantry in 1895, being later transferred again to the Twentieth. He was made a Brigadier General of Volunteers in 1898. In the civil war he was wounded in the battle of Shiloh, and for meritorious services he received a number of brevets and a medal from Congress. In the Spanish-American war he commanded the First Brigade, First Division, of the Seventh Army Corps.

Samuel B. M. Young was born in Pennsylvania, and entered the Union Army as a private in Company K of the Twelfth Pennsylvania in April, 1861. He was successively Captain in the Fourth Pennsylvania Cavalry, Major, and Lieutenant Colonel, and Brevet Brigadier General for services in the final campaign against Lee. He entered the regular army as a Second Lieutenant in 1866, becoming a Captain in the same year. He was brevetted Major and Colonel in 1867, and promoted in regular course, becoming Colonel of the Third Cavalry in 1897. He was appointed Brigadier General of Volunteers in May and Major General in July, 1898.

Arthur MacArthur was born in Massachusetts, and served in the civil war with the Twenty-fourth Wisconsin Infantry, rising from the rank of First Lieutenant to that of Lieutenant Colonel and Brevet Colonel. He entered the regular army as a First Lieutenant of the Seventeenth Infantry in 1866, became Captain of the Thirty-sixth Infantry the same year, Major and Assistant Adjutant General in 1899, and Lieutenant Colonel in 1896. He was appointed a Brigadier General of Volunteers in 1898, and a Major General of Volunteers the same year.

William Ludlow was born at Islip, L. I., in 1843, and was graduated at West Point in 1864, being commissioned First Lieutenant of the Corps of Engineers. He was Chief Engineer of the Twentieth Army Corps under Gen. Hooker in the Atlanta campaign in 1864, and Chief Engineer of the left wing of Gen. Sherman's army in Savannah and the Carolinas campaign in 1864-5. He was Chief Engineer of the Department of Dakota in the Black Hills and Yellowstone expeditions, and later had charge of various works of fortifications and river and harbor improvements on the Atlantic coast. He was Chief Engineer of the Philadelphia Water Works by permission of Congress from 1883 to 1886, and was at different times engineer of various boards having charge of lighthouses and great lake improvements. From 1893 to 1896 he was United States Military Attaché at London, and in 1895 was President of the Nicaraguan Canal Commission.

Newspaper Man Gets a Commission.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 3.—The President to-day nominated Archibald W. Butt to be Assistant Quartermaster, with rank of Captain, in the volunteer army. Mr. Butt is the Washington correspondent of the Atlanta Journal, Nashville Banner, and Louisville Evening Post.

A BILL TO ADVANCE SCHLEY.

Senator McComas Will Ask that He Be Made Vice Admiral.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 3.—The friends of Rear Admiral Schley do not believe a report which circulated here to-day to the effect that the conference with the naval Captains yesterday has determined the President to promote Rear Admiral Sampson and to further humiliate Schley. They believe he intends to favor action which will lead to the promotion of Sampson, but do not believe that he will favor any further rebuke to Schley.

Senator McComas of Maryland, after talking with the President to-day, announced his intention of introducing two bills, one to create the grade of Vice Admiral in the interest of Schley, and the other providing for two Vice Admirals. Congress is to pass whichever bill it prefers.

PRESIDENT GIVES A DINNER.

Cabinet Officers and Their Wives the Guests of Honor.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 3.—The first of the formal dinners of the social season at the White House was given by President and Mrs. McKinley to-night, the members of the Cabinet and their wives being the guests of honor. Invited to meet them were members of the Senate and House, and a few other persons.

The East Room and other public portions of the house were appropriately decorated for the occasion. The Marine Band furnished the music. The list of guests was unusually large, covers being laid for over seventy persons.

TWO KILLED BY GAS.

Couple Dead in Their Room in a Second Avenue Tenement.

George Frank Gallagher, a special policeman, and Nellie Walsh, who have been living together, were found dead in their room on the third floor of the five-story tenement house 636 Second Avenue, last evening. They had been asphyxiated by gas.

Gallagher was fifty years old, and the woman thirty-two years old. The neighbors knew very little about the couple. Very frequently they had been heard to quarrel; the last time at 8 o'clock Tuesday night. The police do not believe they intended to commit suicide.

MORE INCREASES OF SALARIES.

Action by Dock Commissioners—A Clerk's Many Advances.

The Dock Commissioners yesterday announced that they had increased the salaries of a number of employes as follows:

John M. Phelan, chief clerk, $3,000 to $4,000; Charles J. Farley, assistant secretary, $3,000 to $3,600; Charles J. Collins, clerk, $2,500 to $3,000; Edward Gottschall, searcher, $2,000 to $2,500; George E. Weller, private secretary to the President, $1,500 to $1,800; Francis McMullin, private secretary to Commissioner Meyer, $1,500 to $1,800; Francis J. Ryan, stenographer, $1,500 to $1,800; J. G. Bassinger, assistant engineer, $1,500 to $1,800; William Lansing, Jr., computer, $1,500 to $1,800; J. J. Pemoff, topographical draughtsman, $1,200 to $1,500; Lucius C. Higgins, clerk, $900 to $1,500; R. T. Betts, draughtsman, $1,200 to $1,500; A. M. Goge, draughtsman, $1,200 to $1,500; J. P. Nordstrom, engineer, $1,200 to $1,400; W. C. Crosby, draughtsman, $900 to $1,200; Thomas C. Carroll, messenger, $900 to $1,000; John O'Brien, messenger, $900 to $1,000.

Charles J. Collins, the clerk who now gets $3,000, was receiving $900 as clerk in the department three years ago. On the advent of the new administration his salary was doubled, then raised to $2,500, and now to $3,000.

Pennsylvania Murderer Hanged.

SUNBURY, Penn., Jan. 3.—Edward Cressinger, aged nineteen years, was hanged here to-day for the murder of sixteen-year-old Daisy Smith, daughter of a farmer at Boyles Run, Lower Augusta Township. The crime was committed on Aug. 10, 1898, and was the result of jealousy.

BANKS AND THE TREASURY

Representative Sulzer Would Investigate Deposits.

CORRESPONDENCE CALLED FOR

Resolution Offered as to Agreements Covering Money Now in National City and Hanover National.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 3.—In the House to-day Representative Sulzer of New York offered a resolution calling upon Secretary Gage for all letters and agreements entered into between him and the National City and Hanover Banks of New York relative to the deposit of public funds in those institutions. The resolution will probably be reported back in an amended form to-morrow. It read as follows:

Resolved, That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he hereby is, directed to furnish the House of Representatives as soon as possible the following information:

1.—All letters, agreements, papers, or documents between the Treasury Department of the United States or any person connected therewith, and the National City Bank, and the Hanover National Bank of the City of New York, or any person acting for them or either of them, since the 4th day of March, 1897, relating to the depositing of public funds, bonds, or revenues in said bank or banks, or any other relations or business transactions now existing or heretofore had between the Government and the said banks or either of them.

2.—The amount of public money, bonds, or revenue deposited with said banks or either of them, by the Government, for what length of time and the reasons therefor, and whether said banks or either of them, have paid the Government any interest on said deposits, and if so, how much, and all other information concerning the same, or in any way relating thereto.

The Speaker immediately ruled that the resolution under the rules must go first to a committee and was not privileged.

"If the committee does not report it back within one week does it become privileged?" asked Mr. Sulzer.

"It does," responded the Speaker.

"I now ask unanimous consent for the consideration of the resolution," said Mr. Sulzer.

"The resolution should first be considered by a committee," said Mr. Payne, the floor leader of the majority. "I object."

The resolution was referred to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Chairman Payne and some of his associates of the committee had an informal talk after the adjournment of the House to-day relative to the Sulzer resolution. A meeting of the committee will be held to-morrow, and a pretty thorough understanding was arrived at to-day that at to-morrow's meeting the resolution would be considered and probably reported at once to the House. Some changes are likely to be made in the resolution, however, by the omission of the two banks specifically named, thus making the inquiry relate generally to all banks.

It is understood also that personal inferences are likely to be avoided in the amended resolutions. In the form thus reported back to the House it is expected that the resolution will pass without objection, and that any debate on the question involved will be deferred until the Secretary of the Treasury has an opportunity to comply with the request for information.

SENATE HAS A GAGE RESOLUTION.

Mr. Allen Offers One Similar to That of Mr. Sulzer.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 3.—In the Senate to-day Mr. Allen presented a resolution calling upon the Secretary of the Treasury for all letters passing between the Treasury Department and the National City Bank and the Hanover National Bank of New York, also agreements made between the Treasury Department and those banks concerning the deposit of funds, &c.

Mr. Aldrich objected to present consideration and the resolution went over until to-morrow.

NOTES OF INSURANCE INTERESTS.

The annual meeting of the New England Insurance Exchange will be held in Boston on Saturday.

John M. Thomas has been appointed State agent of the Phenix Insurance Company for Texas and Arkansas.

Charles T. Johnson has been appointed Louisville agent of the German Insurance Company of Freeport.

The Brokerage Committee of the New York Fire Insurance Exchange has revoked the brokerage certificate of R. R. Bauer.

The Insurance Field of Louisville, Ky., states that the successor to E. B. Craig, who resigned as State Treasurer and Commissioner of the Tennessee Insurance Department, to become Treasurer of the Virginia Coke, Coal, and Iron Company, will be elected by the State Legislature.

The insurance on Hegger's art gallery, at 288 Fifth Avenue, which was considerably damaged in the fire Tuesday night, was distributed as follows: Continental, $5,000; New York Underwriters', $5,000; Phenix of Brooklyn, $5,000; Caledonian, $2,500; Greenwich, $2,500. H. A. Landgraff & Co. will adjust the loss.

The Arbitration and Grievance Committee of the New York Fire Insurance Exchange issued a ruling yesterday to the effect that the payment by a member, directly or indirectly, of the fee required by the Exchange from a broker upon the issuance of a brokerage certificate will be considered a violation of the rules.

Fire Chief Croker, in a report to Fire Commissioner Scannell, states that there were 5,664 fires in the Boroughs of Manhattan and the Bronx during 1899, an increase of 964 fires over 1898. There were 172 second alarms, 77 third alarms, 13 fourth alarms, and 4 fifth alarms. In December there were 440 fires, the largest number in any one month.

The meeting of the New York Fire Insurance Exchange yesterday was adjourned until next Wednesday, because of the absence of a quorum. A member of the Exchange said after the meeting: "Rates in certain quarters are showing an improvement. The same forces, (practical, experienced local underwriters,) who have always been noted for advanced movements, are working quietly, demanding, and, in many cases, obtaining, increased rates. We do not want the Exchange to raise rates. We can do it in our own way, and it will be more lasting and effectual in the long run."

The Committee on Lighting and Heating of the National Board of Fire Underwriters has issued a circular to the members of the board in regard to the fire risk of gas main leakage under impervious street pavements. The circular is styled "a brief preliminary report for the consideration of fire underwriters throughout the United States," and it is requested "that all the exact information obtainable be promptly gathered from fire marshals and experts, and forwarded to the Executive Committee of this board for comparison and compilation." The report states that "the occurrence in New York during the past year of a number of fires and explosions which, studied in the light of the facts before this committee, may be assumed to be due to the leakage of gas mains under impervious pavements, warrants the belief that the attention of fire underwriters should everywhere be directed to this important subject, to the end that it may be investigated under all conditions and from widely separated points of view." The circular is signed by H. H. Hall, J. H. Washburn, James Nichols, R. Dale Benson, and H. F. Atwood of the committee and by H. K. Miller, general agent of the board.

GEN. LUCIANO MENDOZA ALIVE.

His Brother, Natividad, Was Killed at Tocuyito by His Chief of Staff.

The uncertainty which had existed as to the killing of Gen. Luciano Mendoza, Commander in Chief of the Venezuelan Army, was dispelled yesterday by the receipt of mail advices from Caracas which announced that the cable dispatches erred, as it was his brother, Gen. Natividad Mendoza, who was killed. The latter met his death at Tocuyito, after a battle with the insurgents, but at the hands of his Chief of Staff, Gen. Celestino Peraza. The shooting was the result of a quarrel, the cause of which cannot be ascertained. Gen. Natividad Mendoza received five bullets in his abdomen, and died soon after he was removed to Valencia. Gen. Peraza was also wounded.

Gen. Natividad Mendoza was considered one of the best of Venezuela's Generals in point of bravery and tact. He fought in many revolutions, and, although a reckless leader, had the reputation of never being defeated in battle.

NEWS OF THE RAILROADS.

WESTERN ROAD RECEIVERSHIPS

Omaha and Kansas City and Omaha and St. Louis Reorganization.

Max Pam, counsel for the receivers of the Omaha, Kansas City and Eastern Railroad Company, the Omaha and St. Louis Railroad Company, and the Kansas City and Northern Connecting Railroad Company, says, in an interview, that the appointment of receivers for the three railroad companies is the first step taken by the parties in interest to adjust and reorganize these properties so as to bring them under one system of ownership and control.

Mr. Pam says it is the purpose of all the parties to have these roads reorganized on such a basis as will make them financially secure and physically capable of earning interest on proper fixed charges and dividends on the stock issued. J. W. Gates and Mr. Pam will be in this city early next week to take up with E. H. Harriman and Jacob H. Schiff, who are interested in the reorganization, the formation of a reorganization committee, and the formulation of a plan to be submitted to all the security holders. Within a short time this can be accomplished and a plan submitted which will meet the approval of all parties in interest.

$6,000,000 MORTGAGE FORECLOSURE.

Suit Brought Against the Chicago and Grand Trunk Railway.

DETROIT, Mich., Jan. 3.—A bill was filed to-day in the United State Circuit Court here by the Mercantile Trust Company of New York, as Trustee, to foreclose the senior mortgage on the Chicago and Grand Trunk Railway Company for the principal of the bonded debt of the company, $6,000,000, which matured Jan. 1. E. W. Meddaugh and Henry B. Joy of this city have been appointed receivers of the road, which extends from Port Huron to Chicago. The first mortgage was made twenty years ago. A second mortgage, also for $6,000,000, was placed on the property two years later.

A scheme of liquidation and reorganization has been submitted by the company to the bondholders, and a majority of the bonds under each mortgage have been deposited with the Trustees appointed for that purpose. It is believed that the duration of the receivership will not extend beyond the necessary statutory period required for sale of property under mortgage foreclosure.

FOR BETTER MAIL SERVICE.

Merchants' Association Wants Business Men to Influence Congress to Increase the Facilities Here.

The Merchants' Association is sending to 150,000 merchants throughout the United States a circular letter setting forth the advantages to all commercial interests of the country to be obtained from increased postal facilities, more particularly the facilities of the office in this city, which is declared to be practically a clearing house for a large proportion of the mail of the United States.

The circular advocates the erection of the proposed new Post Office building in this city. The circular in part says that there is often a delay of from one to three hours in the morning delivery of letters containing orders for merchandise.

"The reason for these delays," continues the circular, "is that there has been practically no increase in the handling facilities of the New York Post Office, except for local mails, for many years, and while the inland mails of this city have increased more than 200 per cent. during the past nine years, no greater space has been provided for handling them."

The circular says: "A new Post Office, affording perfect facilities, would not be a burden upon the Nation, but would earn a handsome revenue upon the investment. With ample space all mails could be promptly handled and the quick delivery of local letters made certain."

Merchants are urged to influence Congressmen and Senators to support the bill now before Congress for a new Post Office building to be erected in this city.

MRS. PRUNIER SUES MRS. ASH.

Asks $75,000 for Alleged Alienation of Her Husband's Affections—Prunier Was W. C. Campbell's Nurse.

The domestic affairs of the late W. C. Campbell, millionaire wall-paper manufacturer, were again dragged into publicity yesterday in a $75,000 damage suit heard before Judge Shipman and jury in the United States Circuit Court.

When Mr. Campbell was in his last illness he was nursed by Frederick J. Prunier, a trained nurse from Burlington, Vt. Mrs. Lillian Ash, known as the manufacturer's common law wife, fell in love with the nurse, the latter's wife alleges, and after the death of Mr. Campbell the nurse accompanied Mrs. Ash to the Bermudas, where, Mrs. Prunier alleges, they lived for a time and later went to Washington, D. C. Mrs. Ash inherited a fortune from Mr. Campbell, and Mrs. Prunier asserts that her husband deserted her entirely for Mrs. Ash. He refused to leave Mrs. Ash, Mrs. Prunier says, and so the wife has brought suit, claiming $75,000 damages from Mrs. Ash for alienating the affections of her husband.

Prior to the time Mr. Prunier became a nurse he was a coachman, and his wife was a servant.

When Mr. Campbell died he gave his daughter only $75,000, and she contested the will. The Surrogate awarded Mrs. Ash 60 per cent. of Campbell's estate, and also appointed her residuary legatee of the business, the principal factory of which is at Fishkill Landing. Mr. Campbell lived, when in this city, at 340 West Fifty-eighth Street.

In this action Mrs. Ash is represented by A. H. Hummel, and Mrs. Prunier by J. C. Ross. The hearing will be continued to-day.

POISON AT HIS BEDSIDE.

Heyman Dies in Hospital After Removal from His Hotel.

Julius M. Heyman, at one time holder of a responsible position with the International Banking and Trust Company, was found in an unconscious condition yesterday morning in his apartments at the Lafayette Place Hotel, and shortly after removal to a hospital he died. On the table near the bed was a bottle labeled "Cyanide of potassium," and bearing the name of the drug firm of Elmer & Amend.

Heyman was discovered at 9 o'clock by a chambermaid while making her rounds. She immediately informed the clerk, who called a policeman from the Mercer Street Station. The unconscious man was removed to St. Vincent's Hospital, where, at 11:35 o'clock, he died without having regained consciousness. In his room was found an envelope marked, "Notify Sieg Tynberg, Jr., 52 William Street, Telephone No. 25 John." On the back of the envelope was written, "Mrs. H. S. Simms, 88 Lenox Avenue, my sister."

Mr. Tynberg was notified at once. He hurried to the hospital and was present when Heyman died. Mr. Tynberg said that he had no idea why he should have been selected to receive the dead man's last communication. He had known Heyman casually for some time, but had not seen him for the past three years. He said that Heyman was of excellent family and was very much liked by his friends. The dead man was thirty-five years old. His parents are not living. Mrs. Simms is his sister. She is not in the city at present and Mr. Tynberg does not know where she is.

Mr. Tynberg said that Heyman engaged in manufacturing patented air brakes, but the venture was not successful. Later he was connected with the International Banking and Trust Company, but resigned that position some time ago.

Mr. Heyman had lived at the Lafayette Place Hotel for over three years. The employes say that he seemed always cheerful and generally carried considerable money. It is thought, however, that financial disappointments influenced him to take his life.

At Elmer & Amend's wholesale drug store, at 205 Third Avenue, it was said that purchases of cyanide of potassium were made very frequently by silversmiths, photographers, lithographers, and by other persons using the drug in their business. None of the clerks recollected this particular sale.

The body was removed yesterday afternoon to the rooms of the Stephen Merritt Burial Association.

Consul Studer Dead at Sorrento.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 3.—The State Department has received notice of the death at Naples, where he had been ill for a long time, of A. C. Studer, United States Consul at Sorrento. Mr. Studer had been in the consular service for many years, once filling the post at Singapore. He was appointed Consul at Sorrento March 15, 1899.

DISTRESS IN PUERTO RICO

Bankers Clamor for the Right to Foreclose Mortgages.

ALL PLANTERS NEED MONEY

Expansion of the Coffee Industry Is the Leading Cause of Present Conditions.

SAN JUAN DE PUERTO RICO, Dec. 26.—Agriculture in Puerto Rico is in a languishing condition, and protective measures on the part of the Government are being called for by the people. The condition has been investigated by an expert, Lucas Amadeo, who has had an exhaustive report published in the columns of one of the local papers. Mr. Amadeo seems of the opinion that the chief causes of agricultural distress are due to the expansion of the coffee industry, as the coffee planters need large capital. This in many instances they do not possess, resulting in financial embarrassment. Coffee planters must wait three years after the plant is set before the berry is ready for harvest.

Secondly—On account of peculiar climatic conditions, and the fact that some land has been turned into coffee that was not properly adapted to that crop, small plantations in the interior have not yielded a sufficient crop to pay expenses.

Thirdly—The planters' credit has been gradually but steadily deteriorating from the failing crops, and as a result of the war.

Fourthly—The market value of coffee has depreciated. The people of the United States are not educated up to the fine quality of Puerto Rican coffee, which does not command a price in American markets equal to that offered by European buyers. The coffee plantations have not yet fully recovered from the effects of the cyclone of Aug. 8.

Although these arguments may not seem sufficient to take away the legal right of foreclosure of mortgages on properties on the island, yet, if some amicable arrangement, agreeable to both parties interested, could be made, it would go a great way toward lifting agriculture out of the mire.

It will be remembered that while the late Gen. Guy V. Henry was Governor of Puerto Rico, he decreed that all foreclosures of mortgages on the island should be suspended until Jan. 10, 1900. This was done to relieve the financial distress which followed as an immediate result of the war. The conditions mentioned apply to the sugar and tobacco as well as to the coffee plantations. A large percentage of the agricultural property on the island is heavily mortgaged, and were these mortgages to be foreclosed on and after Jan. 10, as proposed, a large proportion of our planters would be forced to surrender their property.

Nearly all mortgages are held by the bankers and merchants of San Juan and Ponce, who are quite naturally very desirous that they be foreclosed. With this end in view, they have recently drawn up a petition to Gov. Gen. Davis urging that the law be allowed to operate from the date of the expiration of the suspension. They contend that the suspension does not inure to the benefit of the mortgage debtors, and in some respects works a hardship on the lenders.

The capital of the island is impoverished. Natural resources are almost unlimited, but the island lacks the necessary means to finance many projects which would prove to be valuable investments and bring handsome returns. Planters lack money to handle crops.

The San Juan News in its edition of Dec. 24 commented editorially on the subject as follows: "It is strongly urged upon the Administration and our statesmen that an extension of time on the existing mortgages should be further granted. It is also urged that a loan of $20,000,000 must be made to the island to tide us over our misfortune.

"The latter would have to be authorized by Congress, and many months must necessarily be consumed in procuring it or the guaranty of the Government to enable it.

"The further extension of the prohibition of the foreclosure of mortgages at the best is a dangerous business for all concerned. It is against every principle of financial honesty and free governments, and directly in contravention to the Constitution and all laws for the guidance of civilized men. It discredits our people and lays the Government open to justified attacks. It is what ruins our credit, frightens capital from our doors, and violates even the treaty of peace.

"On the other hand, it is said, there is a syndicate already formed to snatch the soil from its owners, almost without consideration, made possible by the heartless foreclosures which will follow, when the Shylocks are let loose in all their rage, on Jan. 10. The incumbrances are drawing, or contract to draw, usurious and unjust rates of interest. But shall the admitted validity of a contract be called into question? Such an authorization by Congress would establish a precedent exceedingly odious.

"A guarantee of a loan to the island is a necessity. With Uncle Sam's strong autograph to our notes the interest would be less than anything ever dreamed of by the islanders. The natural productiveness of the soil, the waiting investors, and the improvements in facilities would turn out a profit that could easily take care of the interest. If the loan is refused the disgraceful alternative is inevitable. Which shall we choose when our sacred honor is in the balance?"

PLAN TO RULE PUERTO RICO.

Senator Foraker's Bill Would Make Natives Citizens and Give Them a Congressional Delegate.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 3.—Senator Foraker to-day introduced a bill providing a form of government for the island of Puerto Rico. The bill provides for the continuance of the laws and municipal ordinances now in force in the island until the Legislature provided for shall supplant them. The President is empowered to appoint a Governor and a Supreme Court, and also seven heads of departments, to have charge of the various interests of the Government, and also five native citizens who, together with the Governor and heads of departments, are to constitute the upper branch of the insular Legislature. A lower house of thirty-five members, to be elected by the citizens of the island, is also provided for, and all inhabitants of the island are made citizens of the United States. The citizens are also to elect a delegate to Congress, who is to have a seat, but no vote.

The island is to be divided into five districts for judicial and legislative purposes, and each district is to have a local court, to consist of such a number of Judges as the Legislature may provide for.

The Constitution and laws of the United States are extended to the island so far as the latter are really applicable.

The export duties are prohibited, and free trade is provided for between the island and the United States proper. Articles imported into Porto Rico from other countries than the United States are to pay the same duties as those imposed in the ports of this country. The money thus collected is to go into the island treasury, but money realized from the internal revenue collections is to be covered into the National Treasury of the United States.

A commission of five members, two of whom are to be natives, is provided for to revise the system of laws and of judicial procedure in the island. For the present no franchises are to be provided, except upon the approval both of the Governor of the island and the President of the United States.

Speaking of the bill, Senator Foraker said it did not create a Territory, nor undertake to give the island a territorial form of government in the ordinary understanding of that phrase, adding that it merely provided a simple form of government, which it was believed would answer the purpose until a more matured form could be devised. The Senator also said that the bill was intended only as a basis for action by the Committee on Puerto Rico.

GEN. WOOD FREES PRISONERS.

Orders Release of Forty in the Province of Santa Clara—More Will Be Liberated.

HAVANA, Jan. 3.—To-day Gen. Wood issued an important order giving freedom to forty men in the Province of Santa Clara. Some of them had been detained without trial; others were suffering excessive punishment. All had been released ten months before by an order issued by Gen. Bates, but they were immediately rearrested by orders from division headquarters on the ground that a department commander did not have the power to pardon.

After looking into the cases, Gen. Wood decided that the judgment of Gen. Bates regarding their release was wise, and, consequently to-day's order setting them at liberty was promulgated.

Reports from other departments are daily expected, and it is believed that before the end of the month a large number will be released, especially in the Province of Havana. The cases of those who have been held for a long time in detention without trial will be the first to be investigated.

LAWTON FUND EXCEEDS $50,000.
